

6.22.10.

Library of the Theological Seminary
PRINCETON, N. J.

Division.....BS195

Section.....2 K37

v.3

The Student's Old Testament

---

THE SERMONS,
EPISTLES AND APOCALYPSSES OF ISRAEL'S PROPHETS

THE STUDENT'S OLD TESTAMENT

LOGICALLY AND CHRONOLOGICALLY
ARRANGED AND TRANSLATED

BY

CHARLES FOSTER KENT, PH.D.

WOOLSEY PROFESSOR OF BIBLICAL LITERATURE IN YALE UNIVERSITY

ARRANGEMENT OF VOLUMES

I. Narratives of the Beginnings of Hebrew History. (Now Ready.)

Introduction. The Beginnings of Human History. Traditional Ancestors of the Hebrews. Deliverance of the Hebrews from Egypt. Life of the Hebrews in the Wilderness and East of the Jordan. Conquest and Settlement of Canaan.

II. Historical and Biographical Narratives. (Now Ready.)

Introduction. The United Monarchy. History of Northern Israel. History of Judah. Re-establishment of the Jewish Community in Palestine. The Maccabean Struggle. Life of the Jews of the Dispersion.

III. Sermons, Epistles and Apocalypses of Israel's Prophets. (Now Ready.)

Introduction. The Prophets of the Assyrian Period. Prophets of Judah's Decline. Prophets of the Babylonian Exile. Prophets of the Persian Period. Prophets of the Greek and Maccabean Periods.

IV. Israel's Laws and Legal Precedents. (Now Ready.)

Introduction. Constitutional Laws. Criminal Laws. Private Laws. Humanitarian Laws. Religious Laws. Ceremonial Laws.

V. Songs, Psalms, and Prayers

Introduction. Folk and National Songs. Songs of Love and Marriage. Songs of Lamentation. Imprecatory Psalms. Historical Psalms. Royal and Messianic Psalms. Psalms of Thanksgiving. Psalms of Praise and Adoration. Reflective Psalms. Penitential Psalms. Psalms of Worship. Prayers.

VI. Proverbs and Didactic Poems

Introduction. Practical and Ethical Observations and Precepts. Religious Proverbs. Gnostic Essays. Numerical Enigmas. Discussions of the Problem of Evil. Discussions regarding the Value of Life and its Wise Enjoyment. Poems describing Wisdom.

B.C.

EGYPT

JUDAH

HEBREW AND CONTEMPORARY CHRONOLOGY FROM THE D

ISRAEL

DAMASCUS

ASSYRIA

DISINTEGRATION OF THE HEBREW EMPIRE TO THE BABYLONIAN EXILE

The Student's Old Testament

THE SERMONS,
EPISTLES AND APOCALYPSSES OF ISRAEL'S PROPHETS

FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD TO THE END OF THE MACCABEAN STRUGGLE

BY

CHARLES FOSTER KENT, PH.D.

Woolsey Professor of Biblical Literature in Yale University

WITH MAPS AND CHRONOLOGICAL CHARTS

NEW YORK

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

1910

Copyright, 1910, by CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

---

Published March, 1910

PREFACE

THE prophets stand at the head of the different groups of teachers whose work and teachings are recorded in the Old Testament. Through their open minds and deep personal experiences came the eternal truths that are the foundations of Israel's faith. A clear understanding of their aims and methods and messages is the key that unlocks the mysteries of the older Scriptures. They also were the forerunners who prepared the way for the advent and work of the great Prophet-Teacher of Nazareth. Their spirit and principles are still a perennial source of inspiration and helpfulness to a growing group of men and women who are to-day grappling with the great political, civic, and social problems whose right solution is essential to the strength and efficiency of our modern civilization. For twenty or twenty-five centuries, therefore, the prophets have been a potent force in the life and thought of mankind; and their influence is to-day waxing rather than waning.

To understand these sturdy heroes of the faith it is essential to study them in their chronological order and in the light of the historical conditions amidst which each labored. The present volume aims to make this study possible and practicable. The voluminous additions of later editors and scribes have been relegated to a secondary place in order that the original teachings of each prophet may stand forth in clear relief. An effort has also been made to indicate, by the form in which they are printed, the highly poetic content and structure of the individual prophecies.

Modern biblical scholarship has made vast and valuable contributions, not only to the interpretation, but also to the recovery of the original text of the prophetic writings. The many repetitions and inconsistencies in the traditional Hebrew text and the wide variations between the different versions of the prophetic books reveal the necessity of a sane and careful reconstruction. At the same time it is equally important to guard against doubtful conjecture and the tendency to impose upon the prophets the canons employed in determining modern literary unity and form.

My debt to the scholars who have worked in different departments of this vast field is too great to be acknowledged in minute detail. Chief among those who have contributed to the rediscovery of the original book of Isaiah are Duhm, Cheyne, Marti, and Torrey. Every student of Jeremiah owes much to the epoch-making work of Duhm and Cornill. Toy's translation of Ezekiel is a masterpiece of careful scholarship and clear English. In the field of the minor prophets the commentaries of Nowack, Marti, and Harper are of conspicuous value. The list of the other pioneers to whom I am indebted is indicated either in the appendix or in the foot-notes. I owe a more personal debt to my colleague, Professor C. C. Torrey, for his suggestive notes on Isaiah 40–50 and the book of Daniel, and to Miss Ruth D. Sherrill who has corrected the final proofs of the second half of this volume.

PREFACE

No department of the Old Testament presents more open and difficult problems, both literary and textual, than Hebrew prophecy. Where uncertainty exists, the fact has been frankly stated and the more probable or plausible conclusion has been presented. In a vast number of cases the traditional reading or interpretation has been followed rather than the attractive but far from established conjectures suggested by modern biblical scholarship. The conclusions embodied in the present volume are the results, not only of years of personal research, but of work with many graduate students in my Hebrew and biblical seminars whose frank and sane suggestions and criticisms have been a constant source of inspiration.

MADEIRA ISLANDS,
January, 1910.

C. F. K.

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

	PAGE
I. THE EVOLUTION OF THE PROPHET.....	3
II. THE PROPHETS IN ISRAEL'S EARLY HISTORY.....	8
III. THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD.....	13
IV. THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE.....	20
V. THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION.....	24
VI. THE PROPHETS OF LATER JUDAISM.....	31
VII. THE HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS	39
VIII. THE LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES..	49

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

I. THE SERMONS OF AMOS.	Original	Secondary<sup>1</sup>
		PAGE
§ 1. The Superscription and Text of the Book.....		Am. 1 <sup>1, 2</sup> ..... 63
§ 2. The Judgment about to Overtake Israel's Guilty Neighbors.....	Am. 1 <sup>3-8, 13-15</sup> , 2 <sup>1, 2c, a, b, d, 3</sup>	1 <sup>9-12</sup> , 2 <sup>4, 5</sup> ..... 64
§ 3. The Judgment Awaiting Thrice Guilty Israel.....	2 <sup>6-16</sup>	..... 66
§ 4. The Basis of the Prophet's Arraignment of Israel.....	3 <sup>1-8</sup>	..... 68
§ 5. The Guilt and Doom of Samaria.....	3 <sup>9-4<sup>3</sup></sup>	..... 68
§ 6. Israel's Failure to Understand Jehovah's Judgments.....	4 <sup>4-7a, c, d, 8b, 9-</sup> 12.	4 <sup>7b, 8a, 13</sup> ..... 70
§ 7. Certain Destruction Awaiting Israel Unless She Seeks Jehovah.....	5 <sup>1-6</sup>	5 <sup>8a-e, 9, 8f</sup> ..... 71

<sup>1</sup> Minor additions of a word or short clause are not indicated in this Table of Contents.

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 8. A Solemn Warning to the Corrupt Judges.....	Am. 5<sup>7</sup>, 10-17 .....		72
§ 9. Captivity Awaiting Corrupt Israel.....	5<sup>18-21</sup>, 22b, c, 23-27, 6<sup>1</sup>, 3-7, 8b, a, c-e, 11b, c, 12-14 .....	Am. 5<sup>22a</sup>, 6<sup>2</sup>, 9-11a .....	73
§ 10. Symbolic Picture of the Impending Judgment.....	7<sup>1-ac</sup>, 2-9 .....	7<sup>1d</sup> .....	76
§ 11. Amaziah's Accusation and Amos's Reply.....		7<sup>10-17</sup> .....	77
§ 12. The Symbolic Picture of Israel's Approaching End.....	8<sup>1, 2, 4, 5, 6c, 7-9, 3, 10, 11b-d, 12-14</sup> .....	8<sup>6a, b, 11a</sup> .....	78
§ 13. The Portrayal of the Final Destruction of the Nation.....	9<sup>1-4, 7, 8a, b</sup> .....	9<sup>5, 6, 8c</sup> .....	80
 II. THE SERMONS OF HOSEA.
§ 14. The Superscription to Hosea's Sermons.....		Hos. 1<sup>1</sup> .....	81
§ 15. The Harlotry of Hosea's Wife and Her Punishment.....	Hos. 1<sup>2b, 3-6, 8, 9, 2<sup>2b</sup>, c, 4, 5a, b, 3<sup>1-4</sup></sup>	1<sup>7, 3<sup>5</sup></sup>	82
§ 16. Israel's Harlotry and Punishment.....	2<sup>2a, d, e, 3, 5c-e, 6, 10, 12, 11, 13-17, 18e-23</sup> .....		84
§ 17. Later Predictions of Israel's Ultimate Restoration.....		2<sup>18a, d, 1<sup>10-2<sup>1</sup></sup></sup> .....	87
§ 18. Jehovah's Charge against Israel.....	4<sup>1-14, 16-19</sup> .....	4<sup>15</sup> .....	87
§ 19. The Guilt of Priests and Princes.....	5<sup>1-14</sup> .....		89
§ 20. The Fatal Lack of True Repentance and Reform..	5<sup>15</sup>, 6<sup>1-10, 11b, 7<sup>1-7</sup></sup> .....	6<sup>11a</sup> .....	91
§ 21. Evidences of the Nation's Degeneracy and Approaching Dissolution....	7<sup>8-15, 8<sup>1a, b, 2, 3</sup></sup> .....	8<sup>1c, d</sup> .....	93

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 22. Jehovah's Repudiation of Israel's Rulers and Idols	Hos. 8<sup>4, 5b, c, a,</sup> <small>6-13a-e</small> .. . . .	Hos. 8<sup>13f, 14</sup> .. . . .	94
§ 23. The Horrors of the Coming Exile.....	9<sup>1-9</sup> .. . . .	.....	95
§ 24. Israel's Corrupt Religious Practices and the Inevitable Judgment.....	9<sup>10, 11, 16b, 12-</sup> <small>16a, 17b, 10<sup>1-3,</sup></small> <small>5-8</small>	9<sup>17a, 10<sup>4</sup></sup> .. . . .	97
§ 25. Whatsoever a Nation Soweth, that Shall It Also Reap.....	10<sup>9-11, 13-15</sup> .. . . .	10<sup>12</sup> .. . . .	99
§ 26. Jehovah's Fatherly Love and Care for His Faithless People.....	11<sup>1-9</sup> .. . . .	11<sup>10, 11</sup> .. . . .	100
§ 27. Israel's Faithlessness from the First.....	11<sup>12a, b</sup> , 12<sup>1-3a,</sup> <small>7-10, 13, 14, 11</small>	11<sup>12, c, d</sup> , 12<sup>3b</sup> , <small>101</small>
§ 28. Jehovah's Final and Complete Destruction of the Guilty Nation.....	13 .. . . .	.....	103
§ 29. Later Words of Exhortation and Promise....	14<sup>1-8 (?)</sup> .. . . .	14<sup>9</sup> .. . . .	105
 III. EARLIER PROPHECIES OF ISAIAH THE SON OF AMOZ.
§ 30. Isaiah's Call and Commission.....	Is. 6<sup>1-13</sup> .. . . .	.....	107
§ 31. Jehovah's Vineyard and Its Evil Fruits.....	5<sup>1-14, 17-24</sup> .. . . .	Is. 5<sup>15, 16, 25a-d</sup> .. . . .	109
§ 32. The Revelation that Isaiah the Son of Amoz Saw concerning Judah and Israel.....	2<sup>6-8, 10</sup> - 3<sup>9</sup> , 12-17 , <small>24-4<sup>1</sup></small>	2<sup>9</sup> , 3<sup>10, 11, 18-23</sup> .. . . .	111
§ 33. Jehovah's Successive Judgments upon Lawless Israel.....	9<sup>8-21</sup> , 10<sup>1-4</sup> , 5<sup>26-</sup> <small>29, 25e, f</small>	.....	115
 IV. ISAIAH'S COUNSELS IN THE CRISIS OF 735 B.C.
§ 34. The Approaching Overthrow of Damascus and Israel.....	17<sup>1-6, 9-14</sup> .. . . .	17<sup>7, 8</sup> .. . . .	118

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 35. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz in the Crisis of 735 B.C. ....	Is. 7 <sup>7-25</sup> . . . . .	Is. 7 <sup>1-6</sup> . . . . .	120
§ 36. The Certainty of the Conquest of Damascus and Samaria by Assyria. ....	8 <sup>1-3</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	122
§ 37. Judah's Fate because She Lost Faith in Jehovah. ....	8 <sup>5-22</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	123
§ 38. The Imminent Fall of Samaria. ....	28 <sup>1-4</sup> . . . . .	28 <sup>5, 6</sup> . . . . .	125
 V. ISAIAH'S SERMONS BETWEEN 711 AND 701 B.C.
§ 39. The Coming Captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia. ....	. . . . .	20 <sup>1-6</sup> . . . . .	126
§ 40. The Embassy of Mero-dach-baladan. ....	. . . . .	39 . . . . .	126
§ 41. Warnings to the Rulers of Jerusalem. ....	28 <sup>7-22</sup> . . . . .	28 <sup>23-29</sup> . . . . .	129
§ 42. Jehovah's Purpose for His Guilty City and People	29 <sup>1-4, 5d, 6, 9-14</sup> . . . . .	29 <sup>5a, c, 7, 8</sup> . . . . .	129
§ 43. The Folly of Making an Alliance with Egypt. ....	29 <sup>15</sup> , 30 <sup>1-17</sup> . . . . .	29 <sup>16</sup> . . . . .	131
§ 44. The Inevitable Consequences of an Alliance with Egypt. ....	31 <sup>1-4</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	133
§ 45. Warning to the Self-confident Women of Jerusalem. ....	32 <sup>9-14</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	133
§ 46. Jerusalem's Deep-seated Guilt. ....	22 <sup>1-14</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	134
§ 47. Infidelity and Punishment of Judah and Jerusalem. ....	1 <sup>2-26</sup> . . . . .	1 <sup>1, 27-31</sup> . . . . .	135
§ 48. The Denunciation of Shebna and the Promises to Eliakim. ....	22 <sup>15, 16c, d, a, b, 17-23</sup> . . . . .	. . . . .	138
 VI. THE SERMONS OF MICAH.
§ 49. The Superscription to Micah's Sermons. ....	. . . . .	Mi. 1 <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	139

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	<small>PAGE</small>
§ 50. Jehovah's Judgment upon Guilty Samaria and Judah.....	Mi. 1<sup>2-16</sup> .....		139
§ 51. The Oppression of the Poor.....	2<sup>1-4</sup>, 6, 11, 8-10 .....	Mi. 2<sup>5</sup> .....	142
§ 52. The Crimes of Judah's Civil and Spiritual Leaders.....	3<sup>1-12</sup> .....		143
§ 53. Israel's False Conceptions of Jehovah's Character and Demands.....	6<sup>1-8</sup> .....		145
§ 54. Guilt and Punishment of Jerusalem.....	6<sup>9-16</sup> .....		146
§ 55. The Utter Degeneracy of the People.....	7<sup>1-6</sup> .....		147
 VII. ISAIAH'S LATER PROPHETIC ACTIVITY.
§ 56. Jehovah's Overthrow of Proud Assyria.....	Is. 10<sup>5-11</sup>, 13b-15, 27-34 .....	Is. 10<sup>12</sup>, 13a .....	148
§ 57. Later Echoes of Jehovah's Judgment upon Assyria.....		14<sup>24-27</sup>, 10<sup>16-19</sup>, 24-26 .....	150
§ 58. Sennacherib's Demand and Isaiah's Prophetic Counsel.....		36<sup>2-22</sup>, 37<sup>1-9a</sup>, 37, 38 (37<sup>9b-36</sup>) .....	152
 VIII. THE PROPHECY OF NAHUM.
§ 59. Jehovah's Just Rule.....		Nah. 1<sup>2a, b, 3c, d, 4-8, 9, 3b, 2c, d, 10, 12, 13, 15, 2<sup>2</sup></sup> .....	155
§ 60. The Oracle Concerning Nineveh.....	Nah. 1<sup>11, 14</sup>, 2<sup>1</sup>, 3-13, 3<sup>1-10</sup> .....	1<sup>1</sup> .....	157

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

I. ZEPHANIAH'S REFORM SERMONS.	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 61. Superscription .....	.....	Zeph. 1 <sup>1</sup> .....	165
§ 62. Jehovah's Day of Judgment upon Judah.....	Zeph. 1 <sup>7</sup> , 2-6, 8-10, 12-18 .....	.....	165
§ 63. Jehovah's Imminent Judgment upon the Nations.....	2 <sup>1-6</sup> , 7b, 12-15 .....	2 <sup>7a, c</sup> .....	167
§ 64. Jerusalem's Deep-seated Corruption.....	3 <sup>1-7</sup> .....	.....	169
II. THE EARLIER SERMONS OF JEREMIAH.
§ 65. The Superscription to Jeremiah's Sermons.....	.....	.....
§ 66. Jeremiah's Call.....	Jer. 1 <sup>4-19</sup> .....	Jer. 1 <sup>1-3</sup> .....	169
§ 67. Appeal to the Nation to Turn from Its Heathenism and Faithfully Serve Jehovah.....	2 <sup>2-15b</sup> , 15d-37, 3 <sup>1-</sup> 5, 19-25, 4 <sup>1-4</sup> .....	.....	170
§ 68. The Judgment Approaching from the North.	2 <sup>5-8</sup> , 11b, 12a, 13, 15-18, 14, 19 -5 <sup>13a</sup> , 14a, 13b, 14b-19, 21-6 <sup>30</sup> .....	2 <sup>15c</sup> , 3 <sup>12a</sup> .....	172
§ 69. Later Traditions Regarding Jeremiah's Part in the Deuteronomic Reformation .....	4 <sup>9-11a</sup> , 12b, 5 <sup>20</sup> .....	4 <sup>9-11a</sup> , 12b, 5 <sup>20</sup> .....	177
§ 70. Call to the Scattered Remnants of Northern Israel.....	.....	11 <sup>1-8</sup> .....	186
§ 71. Pardon and Restoration of the Northern Israelites.....	3 <sup>6-13</sup> .....	3 <sup>14-18</sup> .....	186
III. JEREMIAH'S ACTIVITY DURING THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM.
§ 72. Lament Over the Fate of Jehoahaz.....	31 <sup>2-6</sup> , 15b-24, 27- 30 .....	31 <sup>7-15a</sup> , 25, 26 .....	188
	22 <sup>10-12</sup> .....	.....	191

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 73. The Plot Against Jeremiah.....	Jer. 11 <sup>15, 16,</sup> 18 -12 <sup>6</sup> .....	Jer. 11 <sup>9-14, 17,</sup> 12 <sup>3</sup> .....	191
§ 74. The Lesson from the Potter.....	18 <sup>1-20</sup> .....	18 <sup>21-23</sup> .....	194
§ 75. Jeremiah's Temple Discourse.....	7 <sup>1-8</sup> .....	.....	195
§ 76. Later Traditions Regarding the Temple Discourse.....	.....	26 <sup>1-19</sup> .....	198
§ 77. Fate of Uriah.....	.....	26 <sup>20-24</sup> .....	199
§ 78. The Fate Awaiting Guilty Judah.....	8 <sup>4-9, 13</sup> -9 <sup>1</sup> .....	8 <sup>10-12</sup> .....	200
§ 79. The Inevitable Result of Moral Corruption.....	9 <sup>2-22</sup> , 10 <sup>17-24</sup> .....	10 <sup>25</sup> .....	201
§ 80. The Corrupt, Rejected Nation.....	.....	13 <sup>1-14</sup> .....	204
§ 81. Judah's Guilt too Great for Intercession.....	14 <sup>2-15</sup> <sup>9</sup> .....	14 <sup>1</sup> .....	205
§ 82. The Prophet's Dialogue with Jehovah.....	15 <sup>10-12, 15-21</sup> .....	15 <sup>13, 14</sup> .....	208
§ 83. The Fate Awaiting the People of Judah.....	16 <sup>1-9, 16-17, 21</sup> .....	16 <sup>10-15, 18-20</sup> .....	209
§ 84. Judah's Deep-seated Sin.....	17 <sup>1-4, 14-18</sup> .....	17 <sup>5-13, 19-27</sup> .....	211
§ 85. The Overwhelming Judgment upon Judah.....	19 <sup>1-4, 10, 11, 14,</sup> 15	19 <sup>5-9, 12, 13</sup> .....	213
§ 86. Jeremiah's Public Imprisonment.....	20 <sup>1-6</sup> .....	.....	214
§ 87. Jeremiah's Complaint.....	20 <sup>7-12, 14-18</sup> .....	20 <sup>13</sup> .....	214
§ 88. The First and Second Collections of Jeremiah's Sermons.....	.....	36.....	215
§ 89. Exultation Over Necho's Defeat at Carchemish.....	46 <sup>3-12</sup> .....	46 <sup>1, 2</sup> .....	217
§ 90. The Conquest of Judah by Nebuchadrezzar.....	25 <sup>1-3, 7-11, 15-24</sup> .....	25 <sup>4, 6</sup> .....	219
IV. THE SERMONS OF HABAKKUK.
§ 91. The Justice of Jehovah's Rule.....	Hab. 1 <sup>2-4, 12a,</sup> <sup>13, 2<sup>1-4</sup></sup>	Hab. 1 <sup>1</sup> .....	221

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 92. Significance of the Advent of the Chaldeans . . . . .	Hab. 1<sup>5-11, 12b, 14-17, 2<sup>5-17</sup></sup>	Hab. 2<sup>18-20</sup>	223
V. JEREMIAH'S SERMONS IN CONNECTION WITH THE FIRST CAPTIVITY.
§ 93. The Guilt and Fate of Jehoiakim . . . . .	Jer. 22<sup>13-23</sup>		226
§ 94. Jehovah's Lament over His Sinful People . . . . .	12<sup>7-12</sup>		227
§ 95. The Fallen Nation . . . . .	13<sup>15-17, 20-27</sup>		228
§ 96. Lesson from the Rechabites . . . . .	35<sup>2-19</sup>	Jer. 35<sup>1</sup>	228
§ 97. Fate of Jehoiachin and the Queen-Mother . . . . .	13<sup>18, 19</sup>, 22<sup>24-30</sup>		229
§ 98. Character of the Exiles and of Those Left in Judah . . . . .	24		230
§ 99. Jeremiah's Letter to the Babylonian Exiles . . . . .	29<sup>4-32</sup>	29<sup>1-3</sup>	231
§ 100. Jeremiah's Advice and Warning to Zedekiah . . . . .	22<sup>6, 7</sup>, 23<sup>1, 2</sup>	22<sup>1-5, 8, 9</sup>	232
§ 101. Crimes of the False Prophets . . . . .	23<sup>9-18, 21-29</sup>	23<sup>19, 20, 30-40</sup>	233
§ 102. The Babylonian Yoke upon the Necks of the Nations . . . . .	27<sup>2-16, 18-20</sup>	27<sup>1, 17, 21, 22</sup>	236
§ 103. Hananiah's Opposition . . . . .	28		237
VI. EZEKIEL'S SERMONS BEFORE THE FINAL DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM.
§ 104. Ezekiel's Vision . . . . .	Ezek. 1		238
§ 105. The Prophet's Commission . . . . .	2<sup>1-3<sup>11</sup></sup>		241
§ 106. Ezekiel's Appointment as a Watchman . . . . .	3<sup>12-21</sup>		242
§ 107. The Prophet's Period of Silence . . . . .	3<sup>22-27</sup>		243
§ 108. The Symbolic Representative of the Fate Awaiting Jerusalem . . . . .	4<sup>1-5<sup>17</sup></sup>		243

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 109. The Judgment upon Guilty Judah.....	Ezek. 6 .....		246
§ 110. Jerusalem's Guilt and Punishment.....	8 <sup>1</sup> -11 <sup>12</sup> .....		247
§ 111. Promise of Restora- tion to the Faithful Exiles.	11 <sup>13-25</sup> .....		250
§ 112. Jehovah's Past Deal- ings with His People.....	20 <sup>1-44</sup> .....		251
§ 113. The Certain Exile of King and People.....	12 <sup>1-20</sup> .....		254
§ 114. Condemnation of False Prophets.....	12 <sup>21</sup> -13 <sup>23</sup> .....		255
§ 115. Judah Sinful Beyond All Pardon.....	14 .....		257
§ 116. Jerusalem the Worth- less Vine.....	15 .....		258
§ 117. Jerusalem's Shameful Moral Record.....	16 .....		259
§ 118. Zedekiah's Breach of Faith.....	17 .....		262
§ 119. The Methods of Di- vine Judgment.....	18 .....		264
§ 120. Jehovah's Vengeance upon Judah and Ammon..	20 <sup>45</sup> -21 <sup>32</sup> .....		266
§ 121. The Nation's Doom..	7 <sup>1-4</sup> 7-27 .....	7 <sup>5-6</sup> .....	268
§ 122. The Charge against Jerusalem.....	22 .....		270
§ 123. Faithless Samaria and Jerusalem.....	23 .....		271
§ 124. Reception of the News that Jerusalem was Be- sieged.....	24 .....		274
 VII. JEREMIAH'S WORK IN CONNEC- TION WITH THE FALL OF JERUSA- LEM.
§ 125. Jeremiah's Reply to Zedekiah's Inquiry.....	Jer. 21 <sup>13, 14</sup> .....	Jer. 21 <sup>1-10</sup> .....	276
§ 126. The Promise to Zede- kiah.....	.....	34 <sup>1a (b), c-7</sup> .....	277
§ 127. Denunciation of the Perfidy of the People.....	.....	34 <sup>8-22</sup> .....	278

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
§ 128. The Declaration that Nebuchadrezzar Would Surely Return.....		Jer. 37 <sup>1-10</sup> .....	279
§ 129. Jeremiah's Confinement during the Final Siege.....		37 <sup>11-21</sup> , 38, 39 15-18 .....	279
§ 130. The Symbolic Prediction of a National Restoration.....		32.....	282
§ 131. Version of Jeremiah's Prediction.....		33.....	284
§ 132. Jeremiah's Vision of the Future.....	Jer. 31 <sup>31-34</sup> ....	31 <sup>35-40</sup> .....	285
§ 133. Jeremiah's Liberation		39 <sup>1-7, 11-14</sup> , 40 1-6 .....	286
§ 134. Jeremiah's Advice to the Remnant in Judah.....		40 <sup>7, 8a</sup> , 41 <sup>1-3</sup> , 42 <sup>1-43<sup>7</sup></sup> .....	287
§ 135. The Message to Baruch.....	45 <sup>2-5</sup> .....	45 <sup>1</sup> .....	290

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE

	Original	Secondary	PAGE
I. JEREMIAH'S SERMONS TO THE EXILES IN EGYPT.
§ 136. Nebuchadrezzar's Conquest of Egypt.....		Jer. 43 <sup>8-13</sup> .....	293
§ 137. Apostasy and Punishment of the Jews.....		44.....	294
II. EZEKIEL'S MESSAGES OF ENCOURAGEMENT TO HIS SCATTERED COUNTRYMEN.		Original
§ 138. The Overthrow and Restoration of Egypt.....		Ezek. 29.....	297
§ 139. The Judgment against Israel's Malignant Foes.....
§ 140. Nebuchadrezzar's Conquest of Egypt		25 <sup>1-26<sup>14</sup></sup> , 28 <sup>20-</sup> 26 .....	298
§ 141. The New Epoch of Ezekiel's Work...		29 <sup>17-21</sup> .....	301
§ 142. Lament over Judah's Rulers.....		33.....	302
		19.....	304

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

	Original<sup>1</sup>	PAGE
§ 143. Israel's Traitorous Rulers and the Future Restoration.....	Ezek. 34 . . . . .	305
§ 144. Edom's Desolation.....	35 . . . . .	307
§ 145. Restoration of the Land of Judah.....	36 . . . . .	308
§ 146. The Resurrection of the Nation.....	37 . . . . .	310
§ 147. Jehovah's Ultimate Victory over the Hostile Heathen Powers.....	38, 39 . . . . .	312
 III. SONGS OVER BABYLON'S APPROACHING DOWN-FALL.
§ 148. Prediction of Babylon's Fall.....	Is. 13 . . . . .	316
§ 149. Song of Exultation over Babylon's Fall.....	14 <sup>1-21</sup> . . . . .	318

THE PROPHETS OF THE PERSIAN PERIOD

	Original	PAGE
I. THE ADDRESSES OF HAGGAI TO THE TEMPLE BUILDERS.
§ 150. The Call to Rebuild the Temple.....	Hag. 1 <sup>1-15a</sup> . . . . .	323
§ 151. The Future Glory of the New Temple	1 <sup>15b-2<sup>9</sup></sup> . . . . .	324
§ 152. Jehovah's Former Displeasures and the New Promise of Blessing.....	2 <sup>10-19</sup> (18b) . . . . .	325
§ 153. Overthrow of the Heathen and the Exaltation of Zerubbabel.....	2 <sup>20-23</sup> . . . . .	325
 II. ZECHARIAH'S SERMONS AND VISIONS.
§ 154. The Lesson from the Past.....	Zech. 1 <sup>1-6</sup> . . . . .	326
§ 155. Jehovah's Jealous Love for Zion.....	1 <sup>7-17</sup> . . . . .	327
§ 156. Destruction of the Heathen Powers..	1 <sup>18-21</sup> . . . . .	327
§ 157. Promise that Jerusalem Shall be Gloriously Restored.....	2 . . . . .	328
§ 158. Purification of the Priesthood and Nation.....	3 . . . . .	329
§ 159. The Supporters of the Temple Service	4 <sup>(12)</sup> . . . . .	330
§ 160. The Flying Roll.....	5 <sup>1-4</sup> . . . . .	331
§ 161. The Woman in an Ephah.....	5 <sup>5-11</sup> . . . . .	331
§ 162. The War-chariots of Jehovah.....	6 <sup>1-8</sup> . . . . .	332

<sup>1</sup> Throughout the remainder of this Table of Contents the few secondary passages are indicated by means of parentheses.

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

---

	Original
	PAGE
§ 163. Preparations for the Crowning of Zerubbabel.....	Zech. 6 <sup>9-15</sup> .....
§ 164. Jehovah's Real Demands.....	7.....
§ 165. Promise that the Scattered Exiles Will Return and Jehovah's Rule be Widely Acknowledged.....	8.....
III. THE DESTINY OF THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.
§ 166 Proclamation of the Speedy Restoration of Jehovah's People.....	Is. 40 <sup>1-11</sup> .....
§ 167. Restoration Certain because of Jehovah's Character.....	40 <sup>12-31</sup> .....
§ 168. Proofs and Assurance of Jehovah's Power and Purpose to Deliver His People.	41.....
§ 169. Contrast between Jehovah's Ideal and Real Servant Israel.....	42 <sup>1-43<sup>7</sup></sup> .....
§ 170. Israel Jehovah's Witness before the Heathen.....	43 <sup>8-44<sup>5</sup></sup> .....
§ 171. Jehovah's Incomparable Superiority to the Heathen Gods.....	44 <sup>6-23</sup> .....
§ 172. Jehovah's Promises to His Servant Israel.....	44 <sup>24-45<sup>25</sup></sup> .....
§ 173. Contrast between the Heathen Gods and Israel's God.....	46.....
§ 174. Triumph Song over Babylon's Downfall.....	47.....
§ 175. Recapitulation of the Preceding Arguments.....	48.....
§ 176. Establishment of Jehovah's Kingdom and the Restoration of His People.....	49 <sup>1-50<sup>3</sup></sup> .....
§ 177. The Confidence of Jehovah's True Servant.....	50 <sup>4-11</sup> .....
§ 178. Encouragement for the Faithful in Israel.....	51 <sup>1-16</sup> .....
§ 179. Message of Encouragement to Zion the Holy City.....	51 <sup>17-52<sup>12</sup></sup> .....
§ 180. The Significance of the Suffering of Jehovah's Servant.....	52 <sup>13-53<sup>12</sup></sup> .....
§ 181. Jerusalem's Coming Joy and Glory..	54.....
§ 182. General Invitation to Share in Jehovah's Coming Blessings.....	55.....
§ 183. The Glories of Restored Jerusalem..	60.....
§ 184. Jehovah's Promise of Salvation to Zion.....	61, 62.....

---

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

IV. MESSAGES OF DENUNCIATION, EXHORTATION, AND PROMISE TO THE JUDEAN COMMUNITY.	Original PAGE
§ 185. Rights of Proselytes and Eunuchs in Jehovah's Temple.....	Zech. 56 <sup>1-8</sup> . . . . . 381
§ 186. Condemnation of the Greedy, Selfish Rulers and the Heathen Practices of the Jewish Community.....	56 <sup>9-57<sup>13</sup></sup> . . . . . 382
§ 187. Jehovah's Promise of Help to the Faithful.....	57 <sup>14-21</sup> . . . . . 384
§ 188. False and True Worship.....	58 <sup>1-12 (13, 14)</sup> . . . . . 385
§ 189. Crimes of the Judean Community.....	59 <sup>1-19 (20)</sup> . . . . . 387
§ 190. The Day of Jehovah's Vengeance.....	63 <sup>1-6</sup> . . . . . 389
§ 191. Prayer to Jehovah to Deliver His People as of Old.....	63 <sup>7-64<sup>9 (10-12)</sup></sup> . . . . . 390
§ 192. Contrasted Fate of the Wicked and Faithful in the Community.....	65 <sup>1-66<sup>22 (23, 24)</sup></sup> . . . . . 393
V. THE PROPHECY OF OBADIAH.
§ 193. Obadiah's Vision Concerning Edom.	Ob. 1-5 (6), 7 (8, 9), 10-21 . . . . . 399
VI. THE BOOK OF MALACHI.
§ 194. Jehovah's Love for Jacob.....	Mal. 1 <sup>1-5</sup> . . . . . 402
§ 195. Infidelity and Ingratitude of the Priests.....	1 <sup>6-2<sup>9</sup></sup> . . . . . 403
§ 196. Condemnation of Divorce.....	2 <sup>10 (11, 12), 13-16</sup> . . . . . 405
§ 197. Jehovah's Coming Judgment.....	2 <sup>17-3<sup>6</sup></sup> . . . . . 405
§ 198. Penalty for Withholding the Tithe.....	3 <sup>7-12</sup> . . . . . 406
§ 199. Future Reward of the Godless and Faithful.....	3 <sup>13-4<sup>3 (4-6)</sup></sup> . . . . . 407
VII. JOEL'S PROPHECY CONCERNING THE COMING DAY OF JEHOVAH.
§ 200. The Locust Plague and the Coming Day of Jehovah.....	Joel 1 <sup>2-2<sup>17 (1)</sup></sup> . . . . . 409
§ 201. The Prosperity, Spiritual Blessings, and Vindication Awaiting Jehovah's People.....	2 <sup>18-3<sup>21</sup></sup> . . . . . 413

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

THE PROPHETS OF THE GREEK AND MACCABEAN PERIOD

I. THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK OF JONAH.	Original	PAGE
§ 202. The Story of Jonah.....	Jonah 1 <sup>1</sup> -2 <sup>1</sup> (2- 9), 10-4 <sup>11</sup> .....	419
II. THE POPULAR STORIES ABOUT DANIEL AND HIS FELLOW-EXILES.
§ 203. Rewards of Loyalty to the Ceremonial Law.....	Dan. 1.....	423
§ 204. Daniel's Interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's Dream.....	2.....	425
§ 205. Deliverance of Daniel's Faithful Friends.....	3.....	428
§ 206. Nebuchadnezzar's Edict concerning His Remarkable Experiences.....	4.....	430
§ 207. Belshazzar's Punishment.....	5.....	433
§ 208. Daniel's Deliverance from the Lion's Den.....	6.....	435
III. VISIONS OF THE OVERTHROW OF ANTIOCHUS AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
§ 209. The Four Heathen Nations and the Kingdom of God.....	7.....	437
§ 210. The Victories of Alexander and the Wicked Rule of Antiochus.....	8.....	440
§ 211. Meaning of Jeremiah's Seventy Years	9.....	442
§ 212. Meaning and Goal of Human History	10-12.....	445
IV. THE OVERTHROW OF THE HEATHEN AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF JEHOVAH'S KINGDOM.
§ 213. The Conquest of Israel's Foes.....	Zech. 9.....	453
§ 214. Victory and Restoration for Jehovah's Betrayed but Loyal People.....	10.....	456
§ 215. Fate of Judah's Traitorous Rulers and the Ultimate Deliverance.....	11 <sup>1-5</sup> (6), 7-17, 13 <sup>7-9</sup> .....	458
§ 216. Jerusalem's Deliverance from Heathen Attack.....	12 <sup>(1)</sup> , 2-13 <sup>6</sup> ..	460
§ 217. The Judgment upon the Heathen and the Exaltation of Jehovah.....	14 <sup>1-12</sup> (13, 14), 15-21 .....	463

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

MESSIANIC AND ESCHATOLOGICAL PROPHECIES

I. THE MESSIANIC KING AND KINGDOM.

§ 218. The Promised Glories of Davidic Rule
 § 219. Promises to the House of David.....
 § 220. The Faithful Shepherd.....
 § 221. Union of Judah and Israel under a Davidic Ruler.....
 § 222. The Restoration of the Hebrew State.....
 § 223. The Davidic Prince.....
 § 224. The Second David.....
 § 225. The Prince of Peace.....
 § 226. The Ideal Ruler.....
 § 227. Zerubbabel, Jehovah's Signet-Ring.....
 § 228. The Attempted Crowning of Zerubbabel.....

	Original	PAGE
Num. 24<sup>5-9, 17-</sup>
<sup>19</sup> .....	467
II Sam. 7<sup>10-16</sup>	468
Ezek. 34<sup>11-16,</sup>
<sup>23-31</sup> .....	469
37<sup>21-28</sup>	470
Jer. 30<sup>5b-31<sup>1</sup></sup>
( <sup>30<sup>1-5a</sup></sup> ).....	470
23 <sup>3-8</sup> .....	472
Mi. 5<sup>2 (3), 4</sup>	473
Is. 9<sup>(1), 2-7</sup>	473
11 <sup>1-10</sup> .....	474
Hag. 2<sup>20-23</sup>	476
Zech. 3<sup>6-10, 6<sup>9-</sup></sup>
<sup>15a</sup> .....	476

II. THE DIVINE WARRIOR, JUDGE, AND KING, AND THE GLORIES OF HIS RULE.

§ 229. Zechariah's Predictions Regarding Israel's Future.....
 § 230. Jehovah Leading Back His Scattered People.....
 § 231. The Glories of the Restoration.....
 § 232. The Glorious Restoration of Jehovah's People.....
 § 233. The Returning Exiles' Song of Thanksgiving.....
 § 234. Pictures of Israel's Ultimate Deliverance and Glory.....
 § 235. Zion's Ultimate Vindication and Exaltation.....
 § 236. The Future Vindication and Exaltation of Jerusalem.....
 § 237. The Glorious Destiny of Redeemed Zion.....

Zech. 8<sup>3, 7, 8,</sup>
<sup>12, 13, 22</sup> .....	477
Mi. 2<sup>12, 13</sup>	478
Am. 9<sup>9-15</sup>	478
Is. 11<sup>11-16</sup>	479
12	480
Mi. 4<sup>8-5<sup>1, 5-15</sup></sup>	481
7<sup>7-20</sup>	483
Zeph. 3<sup>8, 11-20</sup>
<sup>(9, 10)</sup> .....	484
Is. 4<sup>2-6</sup>	486

CONTENTS AND CLASSIFICATION

---

	Original
§ 238. The Peace and World-wide Renown of Zion.....	PAGE Mi. 4 <sup>1-4 (5)</sup> , 6, 7 [ Is. 2 <sup>1-4</sup> ]..... 486
§ 239. The Glories of Israel's Future Re- generation.....	Is. 29 <sup>17-24</sup> , 30 18-26..... 487 32 <sup>1-8</sup> , 15-20..... 489
§ 240. The Ideal State of the Future.....	30 <sup>27-33</sup> ..... 490
§ 241. Jehovah's Judgment upon Israel's Foes.....	33..... 491
§ 242. The Deliverance and Future Blessed- ness of Zion.....	34..... 494
§ 243. Jehovah's Judgment upon the Na- tions.....	35..... 496
§ 244. The Golden Age when Jehovah Shall Have Restored His People.....	24, 25 <sup>6-12</sup> , 1-5..... 497
§ 245. Jehovah's Universal Judgment.....	26, 27 <sup>1-5</sup> , 7, 9-13 (6, 8)..... 501
§ 246. Jehovah's Care for His People.....

---

APPENDIX

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY AND DETAILED REFERENCES .....	507
---	-----

CHRONOLOGICAL CHARTS AND MAPS

HEBREW AND CONTEMPORARY CHRONOLOGY FROM THE DIVISION OF THE HEBREW EMPIRE TO THE BABYLONIAN EXILE.....Frontispiece
ISRAEL AND JUDAH AFTER THE DIVISION OF THE HEBREW EMPIRE	Opposite page 61
THE ASSYRIAN EMPIRE.....	Opposite page 107
JEWISH AND CONTEMPORARY CHRONOLOGY FROM 597 TO 165 B.C.	Opposite page 291
THE JEWISH COMMUNITY IN PALESTINE DURING THE PERSIAN AND GREEK PERIODS.....	Opposite page 321
THE JERUSALEM OF NEHEMIAH.....	Opposite page 409

INDEX OF BIBLICAL PASSAGES

Numbers		Isaiah		Jeremiah
CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE
24<sup>5-9, 17-19</sup>	467, 468	32<sup>1-8</sup>	489, 490	23<sup>1, 2</sup>	233
		32<sup>9-14</sup>	133	23<sup>3-8</sup>	472, 473
II Samuel		32<sup>15-20</sup>	490	23<sup>9-40</sup>	233-236
7<sup>10-16</sup>	468	33	491-493	24	230, 231
		34, 35	494-497	25<sup>1-24</sup>	219, 220
		36, 37	152-155	26	198, 199
Isaiah		39	126, 127	27	236, 237
		40-55	336-374	28	237, 238
1	135-137	56-57	381-384	29	231, 232
2<sup>1</sup>	111	58-59	385-389	30<sup>1-31<sup>1</sup></sup>	470-472
2<sup>2-5</sup>	486	60-62	375-380	31<sup>2-6</sup>	188
2<sup>6-4<sup>1</sup></sup>	111-115	63-66	389-398	31<sup>7-15a</sup>	189
4<sup>2-6</sup>	486			31<sup>15b-26</sup>	189, 190
5<sup>1-25d</sup>	109-111			31<sup>27-30</sup>	190
5<sup>25e-30</sup>	117	Jeremiah		31<sup>31-40</sup>	285, 286
6	107, 108			32, 33	282-285
7, 8	120-124	1<sup>1-3<sup>5</sup></sup>	169-176	34	277-279
9<sup>1-7</sup>	473, 474	3<sup>6-18</sup>	186-188	35	228, 229
9<sup>8-10<sup>4</sup></sup>	115	3<sup>19-6<sup>30</sup></sup>	176-185	36	215-217
10<sup>5-15</sup>	148, 149	7<sup>1-8<sup>3</sup></sup>	195-198	37, 38	279-281
10<sup>16-26</sup>	151	8<sup>4-9<sup>22</sup></sup>	200-203	39<sup>1-7</sup>	286, 287
10<sup>27-34</sup>	149, 150	10<sup>17-25</sup>	203, 204	39<sup>11-14</sup>	287
11<sup>1-10</sup>	474, 475	11<sup>1-8</sup>	186	39<sup>15-18</sup>	282
11<sup>11-12<sup>6</sup></sup>	479, 480	11<sup>9-12<sup>6</sup></sup>	191-193	40<sup>1-8a</sup>	287
13<sup>1-14<sup>23</sup></sup>	316-319	12<sup>7-12</sup>	227	41<sup>1-3</sup>	288
14<sup>24-27</sup>	150, 151	13<sup>1-14</sup>	204, 205	42<sup>1-43<sup>7</sup></sup>	288, 289
17<sup>1-14</sup>	118, 119	13<sup>15-17</sup>	228	43<sup>8-13</sup>	293, 294
20	126	13<sup>18, 19</sup>	229	44	294-296
22<sup>1-14</sup>	134, 135	13<sup>20-27</sup>	228	45	290
22<sup>15-23</sup>	138, 139	14-17	205-212	46<sup>1-12</sup>	217, 218
24-27	497-503	18<sup>1-23</sup>	194, 195
28<sup>1-6</sup>	125	19, 20	213-215	Ezekiel
28<sup>7-29<sup>16</sup></sup>	127-131	21	276, 277
29<sup>17-24</sup>	487, 488	22<sup>1-9</sup>	232, 233	1-6	238-246
30<sup>1-17</sup>	131, 132	22<sup>10-12</sup>	191	7	268, 269
30<sup>18-26</sup>	488, 489	22<sup>13, 14</sup>	226	8-11	247-251
30<sup>27-33</sup>	490, 491	22<sup>15-23</sup>	226, 227	12-18	254-265
31<sup>1-4</sup>	133	22<sup>24-30</sup>	230	19	304, 395

INDEX OF BIBLICAL PASSAGES

Ezekiel		Obadiah		Zephaniah
CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE
20<sup>1-44</sup> . . . . .	251-254	1 . . . . .	399-401	3<sup>8-20</sup> . . . . .	484, 485
20<sup>45-21<sup>32</sup></sup> . . . . .	266-268
22-24 . . . . .	270-276
25<sup>1-26<sup>14</sup></sup> . . . . .	298-301
28<sup>20-26</sup> . . . . .	301	Jonah		Haggai
29<sup>1-16</sup> . . . . .	297, 298	1-4 . . . . .	419-422	1, 2 . . . . .	323-326, 476
29<sup>17-21</sup> . . . . .	301
33 . . . . .	302, 303	Micah		Zechariah
34-39 . . . . .	305-315	1<sup>1-2<sup>11</sup></sup> . . . . .	139-142	1-8 . . . . .	326-336, 476, 477
34<sup>11-16, 23-31</sup> . . . . .	469	2<sup>12, 13</sup> . . . . .	478	9-14 . . . . .	453-464
37<sup>21-28</sup> . . . . .	470	3 . . . . .	143, 144
		4<sup>1-7</sup> . . . . .	486, 487
		4<sup>8-5<sup>1</sup></sup> . . . . .	481, 482	Malachi
		5<sup>2-4</sup> . . . . .	473	1-3 . . . . .	402-408
1-12 . . . . .	423-452	5<sup>5-15</sup> . . . . .	482, 483
		6<sup>1-7<sup>6</sup></sup> . . . . .	145-147	Habakkuk
		7<sup>7-20</sup> . . . . .	483, 484	1<sup>1-4</sup> . . . . .	221
				1<sup>5-17</sup> . . . . .	223, 224
Hosea				2<sup>1-4</sup> . . . . .	222
1-14 . . . . .	81-106	Nahum		2<sup>5-20</sup> . . . . .	224, 225
		1<sup>1-3<sup>20</sup></sup> . . . . .	155-161
				Joel
Amos		Zephaniah		1-3 . . . . .	409-416
1<sup>1-9<sup>8</sup></sup> . . . . .	63-80
9<sup>9-15</sup> . . . . .	478-479	1<sup>1-3<sup>7</sup></sup> . . . . .	165-169

EXPLANATION OF TYPOGRAPHICAL SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS

Text in roman type.

Supplemental and editorial additions to an older section in smaller type.

Superscriptions in small capitals.

Poetical passages are distinguished by smaller type and broken lines.

Explanatory clauses, found in the original, in ( ).

English equivalents of the more significant Hebrew proper names in [ ].

Words implied by the context or supplied to restore the original narratives, where these have been abridged in the process of editorial fusion, in italics.

Foot-notes, presenting the reasons for the analysis and classification of the material, significant alternate readings, and explanatory material, in small roman type.

Interpretative side-headings, giving a condensed summary of the accompanying text, on the margins in small roman type.

Chapter numbers in arabic figures. Verse numbers in small figures placed above the line. Successive portions of a verse indicated by <sup>a</sup>, <sup>b</sup>, or <sup>c</sup>, placed after the verse number. Thus, Genesis II. 4 (second part of the verse) to IV. 6 (first half) inclusive is written 2<sup>4b</sup>-4<sup>6a</sup>.

Complete stories or literary units (with their parallels, if any) are numbered with arabic numerals successively throughout the entire volume and are referred to as sections. Thus, § 2 refers to § 2, The Primitive Story of Man's Creation and Fall, pp. 53-56.

General Abbreviations

AmRV = American Revised Version (1901).

AV = Authorized Version (1611).

Apocr. = Apocrypha or apocryphal.

Aram. = Aramaic.

Assyr. = Assyrian.

Baby. = Babylonian.

cf. = compare.

e. g. = for example.

f. = and following.

Gk. = Greek B (Vatican) text of the O.T.

Gk.A = Alexandrian Gk. text of the O.T.

Gk. S = Sinaitic Gk. text of the O.T.

Heb. = Hebrew.

i. e. = that is.

Jos. = Josephus.

Lat. = Latin (Vulgata) text of Jerome.

Lit. = literally.

Luc. = Lucian's Recension of the Greek O.T.

N.T. = New Testament.

Old L. = Old Latin Version of the O.T.

Origen = Reading found in Origen's Hexapla.

O.T. = Old Testament.

Pent. = Pentateuch.

RV = Revised Version (1885).

Sam. = Samaritan Version of the Pent.

Sem. = Semitic.

Syr. = Syriac Version of the O.T.

Targ. = Targum.

Vs. = verse.

Abbreviations for the Old Testament and Apocryphal Books

Gen. = Genesis.

Ex. = Exodus.

Lev. = Leviticus.

Num. = Numbers.

Dt. = Deuteronomy.

Josh. = Joshua.

Judg. = Judges.

Sam. = Samuel.

Kgs. = Kings.

Chr. = Chronicles.

Neh. = Nehemiah.

Esth. = Esther.

Ps. = Psalms.

Pr. = Proverbs.

Ecc. = Ecclesiastes.

Sg. of Sgs. = Song of Songs.

Is. = Isaiah.

Jer. = Jeremiah.

Lam. = Lamentations.

Ezek. = Ezekiel.

Dan. = Daniel.

Hos. = Hosea.

Am. = Amos.

Ob. = Obadiah.

Jonah = Jonah.

Mic. = Micah.

Nah. = Nahum.

Hab. = Habakkuk.

Zeph. = Zephaniah.

Hag. = Haggai.

Zech. = Zechariah.

Mal. = Malachi.

Esdr. = Esdras.

Wisd. Sol. = Wisdom of Solomon.

B. Sir. = Ben Sira or Ecclesiasticus.

Bar. = Baruch.

Sg. of Three = Song of the Three Children.

Sus. = Susanna.

Pryr. of Man. = Prayer of Manasses.

Mac. = Maccabees.

Enoch = Book of Enoch.

Ps. of Sol. = Psalms of Solomon.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

I

THE EVOLUTION OF THE PROPHET

THE true prophet rises above his age and race like a towering mountain peak piercing heaven itself and enveloped in the eternal mystery of divine revelation. He rests, however, squarely on earth, for common human experiences and needs are the basis of his work and teaching. In the light of comparative history and religion it is now possible to study his forerunners and to trace the different stages in his gradual evolution. The belief in the existence of supernatural beings who determine the destinies of man, and the desire to ascertain their will, were two of the earliest and most powerful motives in human history. According to the belief of primitive man, failure to act in accord with the divine will meant inevitable disaster. In the absence of modern scientific knowledge, every step of his life was beset by the haunting fear that some unexpected judgment might suddenly be meted out by an offended Deity. Ignorance was therefore fatal. On the other hand, to know and to do the will of the gods was the only sure way to success and happiness. With true intuition early man also firmly believed that the supreme power or powers in the universe were ready and able to reveal themselves to him. Hence the ancient world was ever seeking with passionate zeal for means and for men through whom the divine will could be definitely determined. This strong and universal craving is the psychological basis of true prophecy, as well as of all the kindred institutions that preceded it.

In the earlier days, when man worshipped many spirits of earth and air and water, or later, when he conceived of the gods as superhuman beings, he believed in various external methods of revelation. Many natural phenomena and especially the variable and more remarkable forms were interpreted as the inarticulate voice of the spirits or gods. Thus the changing phases of the stars and clouds and the flight of birds were all noted with closest attention because they seemed to be messages from that realm above where popular belief fixed the abode of the immortals. Where totemistic cults survived, the actions of certain animals were supposed to have a divine import. The appearance of the entrails, and especially of the livers of beasts presented in sacrifice to the gods, was almost universally regarded as an index of the divine will. The belief that certain sacred trees at times gave audible expression to messages from the Deity was held even by the early Hebrews, as is illustrated by the story of the burning bush in Exodus and the psychological basis of prophecy

The

External means of ascertaining
the divine
will

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

references to the famous diviner's oak near Shechem. Often a direct appeal was made to the Deity by means of the sacred arrows, by lot, or through some other form of ordeal. The diviner's cup also figures frequently, as in the Joseph stories. Ancestor-worship and the mystery of sleep and death gave rise to the belief that the spirits of the dead sometimes returned to disclose the secrets of the gods, as is well illustrated in the story of Saul's visit to the medium of Endor (I Sam. 28).

Nearly all these earlier and cruder popular methods of ascertaining the will of the beings who ruled the destinies of man required skilled interpreters to make clear the meaning of the obscure signs. Hence there arose a great host of augurs, soothsayers, astrologers, wizards, diviners, and necromancers; some knaves and some doubtless faithful to their light. They and the priests, who usually interpreted the omens and took charge of the sacred lot and oracles, were the earliest forerunners of the prophets. They were thus regarded by the author of Deuteronomy 18, who states that Moses and his prophetic successors were commissioned to take the place of these representatives of the older cults.

As men's conceptions of the gods became more exalted and spiritual, belief in direct revelation through the human mind began to prevail. The mystery of dreams profoundly impressed even the savage. These strange mental pictures were almost universally regarded as messages of the spirits or gods to man. The interpreter of dreams was therefore looked upon as a spokesman of the Deity. Especially among the early Semites, as among the modern Arabs, all abnormal psychic states were regarded as evidence of divine possession. As with the whirling and howling dervishes to-day, artificial means were often used to induce a half-insane condition that the Deity might speak through the mind thus freed from the control of the individual will. Men or women who were subject to these attacks of ecstasy have always been venerated in the East. Similar phenomena are still common in the revival services of certain Christian sects, and especially among the negroes of America. In ancient Greece the Pythian priestess, under the influence of poisonous gases that exhaled from the earth, was thrown into an ecstatic state. Her frenzied, incoherent utterances were interpreted by the prophetae (προφήτης), the one who spoke in behalf of the god. This title, transferred into English, has become the common and appropriate designation of the noblest interpreters and heralds of God's will to men.

The religious history of the different nations of antiquity clearly demonstrates that the great prophets did not arise except amidst certain favorable conditions. The ancient Babylonians, with their intense political, social, and commercial life, had little time for contemplation and visions. Their religion also became, at a comparatively early period, formal and ceremonial. Law, not the spirit, ruled. The result was that they apparently had no great prophets. Hammurabi and his ancient code represent in many ways the high-water mark of Babylonian religion. Dreams were regarded as significant; but otherwise the crude, primitive, external methods of determining the will of the gods through their diviners, augurs, and astrologers, the priestly inspectors of the sacrificial offerings, and the interpreters of the earliest forerunners

The
of the prophets

Revelations through
the minds of men

The
prophetic element in ancient Babylonia

THE EVOLUTION OF THE PROPHET

flights of birds, of the movements of the stars, and of other signs, continued to hold undisputed sway.

Nearly the same conditions obtained among the Egyptians. The priests interpreted the oracles. Only the Pharaoh himself was supposed to consult the gods. Popular interest was also fixed on the life beyond death rather than in the present and immediate future. There are, however, several striking exceptions to this prevailing low level of mechanical formalism. From the period of the remarkable twelfth dynasty (2000-1788 B.C.) comes a prediction delivered in the presence of a king by a prophet named Ipuwer. It first tells of the coming overthrow of existing political and social conditions by foreign foes, and then proclaims the advent of a benign king who would deliver his land and people. Of him men would say, *He is the shepherd of all the people; there is no evil in his heart. If his flocks go astray he will spend the day to search for them. The thought of men shall be afame; would that he might achieve their rescue! . . . Verily he shall smite evil when he raises his arm against it.** Similar Sibylline prophecies appeared at times in Egypt's later history, but there is no evidence that they made any deep impression upon that ancient life and religion. More effective, although ephemeral, was the truly prophetic reformation instituted by Amenhotep IV. The fact that its influence passed away so quickly and completely only proves that the dominant forces in Egypt's religion were ceremonial rather than ethical and spiritual.

The sources of information regarding the religion of the ancient Canaanites are still exceedingly meagre. The references in the Old Testament to the religious practices of the peoples which the Hebrews found in the land indicate that the various external methods of ascertaining the will of the gods were in vogue in Palestine. The moral degeneracy, the wealth and luxury, and the prominence of sacrifice and ritual prevented the development of a spiritual religion among the Canaanites and Phoenicians. Hence there is no evidence or probability that any great prophets ever arose among them. The narrative of a certain Wenamon, sent to the court of Zakar-Baal, king of Byblos about 1100 B.C., in the years following the decline of Egyptian supremacy in Palestine, contains the earliest reference to Syrian prophecy. As the Egyptian emissary was being contemptuously sent away, one of the noble youths in attendance upon the king was seized with a divine frenzy, and in prophetic ecstasy demanded that Wenamon be summoned, honorably treated, and dismissed.† To this same class, doubtless, belonged the so-called prophets of Baal, who, in the famous contest between Jehovah and Baal on Mount Carmel, are represented as dancing about the altar, cutting themselves with swords and lances until they had worked themselves up into a delirium of frenzy (I Kgs. 18<sup>26-29</sup>). Their character and rôle appears to be very similar to that of the modern dervish.

The prophetic motif may also be traced among the early Aryan races. Zoroaster, the prophet of Iran, was the founder of a distinctly ethical and spiritual religion. The most complete, although not the closest parallels to

In Egypt

Among the Canaanites and Phoenicians

In ancient Persia and Greece

* Breasted, History of Egypt, 204-5.
† Breasted, History of Egypt, 513.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

prophecy in early Israel are found in ancient Greece. External methods of divination, such as speaking trees and omens, survived; but, side by side with these, the more spiritual forms of revelation were highly developed. Reference has already been made to the oracles in which the frenzied priestess and the prophetes figured. The Bacchantes corresponded to the dervishes of oriental religions. Dreams were regarded as messages of the gods. Both prophets and prophetesses were familiar characters in early Greek life. Corresponding to the great prophets of Israel's history were the immortal Greek poets and philosophers, whose writings dealt, as did those of the Hebrew statesmen and theologians, not only with vital questions of the day, but with the eternal problems of religion and ethics. The literary form and theology of the two groups of teachers were very different, but their aim, spirit, and fundamental messages were in the ultimate analysis very similar.

The direct forerunners of the Hebrew prophets are to be found, however, not among the ancient Babylonians or Canaanites, but, as might be anticipated, among the Arabian ancestors and neighbors of the Israelites. The peculiar life of the desert favored the development of the prophet. Its monotony and the long marches and watching by night fostered contemplation. The constant sense of mystery and danger tended to develop a strong belief in supernatural powers and an eager longing for assurances of their favor and protection. The susceptibility of the Arab to mental excitement and the prevailing belief that all abnormal psychic states were due to the influence of spirits or gods created an atmosphere favorable to prophecy. The keen religious intuitions, the fanatical zeal, and the highly developed poetic instincts of the dwellers in or near the wilderness furnished the soil from which sprang prophets like Moses, Balaam, Elijah, Amos, and Mohammed.

Kâhins, like the corresponding Hebrew priests (kohēn), was originally the minister of the sanctuary and guardian of the oracle. Often there was found, however, among the Arabs a kâhin who was believed to be possessed of a demon or spirit. When seeing visions he usually covered his head, and hence is often styled the man with the veil. These ancient kâhins were consulted on a great variety of subjects in which there was doubt in the public mind. Sometimes it was to determine the outcome of a battle; often they were called upon to decide the innocence or guilt of one charged with a crime, such as adultery; and sometimes they even encouraged conspiritors to attack a ruler.* For their services they usually received a gift from those who consulted them.

Their oracular utterances were given in poetic form, and consisted of from four to six short, rhyming sentences bound together into a paragraph or period. Their expressions were often obscure and admitted of a double interpretation. Like the Hebrew prophets, they spoke not in their own name, but directly in the first person as the herald of the god. The names of many famous kâhins, both male and female, who lived in the period preceding the advent of Mohammed, have been preserved and their influence upon their age and race was often far-reaching. Although Mohammed did not grant

The
desert
the home
of prophecy

Kâhins
among
the early Arabs

Form of their messages

* Cf. Wellhausen, Reste Arabischen Heidenthums, 136.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE PROPHET

that he was a mere kâhin, he was, in fact, the noblest representative of that order. A few others appeared later, but the work of the great prophet of Islam, and the Koran, which recorded the laws and commands that he promulgated, rendered the ancient kâhin unnecessary. As in later Judaism, the written law and the legal scribe in time took the place of the prophetic oracle and the divine herald.

The most significant figures, therefore, in that ancient Semitic life that lies back of the beginnings of Hebrew history were the kâhins or seers, who were believed to possess divine knowledge, revealed to them not through objective, mechanical means or another's frenzied utterances, but directly from the Deity. They were often men of wide experience, keen insight, and probably genuine spiritual intuitions. In the long line of interpreters of divine truth they rank next to the great prophets. The difference between the self-deceived or deceiving diviners, augurs, astrologers, and necromancers of the primitive cults and the true prophets of Israel is as great as that between darkness and light; and yet the same innate, universal human needs, the same beliefs, and the same God, eager to reveal his truth to men, called forth each. They represent, together with the kâhins or seers, the successive rounds in the ladder which, as in Jacob's dream, reached from earth to heaven.

The immediate predecessors of the prophets

II

THE PROPHETS IN ISRAEL'S EARLY HISTORY

The three early designations of the prophets

In connection with the account of Saul's first meeting with Samuel is found the statement: He who is now called a prophet was previously called a rō'ēh (commonly translated a seer). This passage is usually interpreted as evidence that the functions of the ancient prophet were practically identical with those of the rō'ēh, and that the difference was simply one of popular terminology. It is significant, however, that in the early sections of the books of Samuel three distinct terms are used to describe Israel's early religious guides. Samuel is designated as the rō'ēh, Gad is the royal hōzēh, and Nathan is the nābī or prophet. The care with which these terms are used suggests that originally there was a clear distinction between them.

Character and functions of the rō'ēh

A recent writer has called attention to the fact that Samuel's distinctive title, rō'ēh, is possibly equivalent to the Babylonian bārū, a title of the divining priest.* His duty was, originally, to inspect the entrails and especially the liver of the sacrificial victim, and, in accordance with a definitely worked-out system, to answer, on the basis of what he saw, the questions which were put to him. It is significant that the older as well as the later biblical traditions connect Samuel closely with the sanctuaries and the sacrifices of ancient Israel. According to the oldest tradition in I Samuel 9, the people of Ramah were waiting for Samuel to come before they could begin their sacrificial meal. It is also evident from the statement of Saul's servant (I Sam. 9<sup>8</sup>) that, like the divining priests of Babylonia, Samuel enjoyed the reputation of being able to settle questions not only of public but also of private interest, and that for this service he usually received some gift. Illustrations of Samuel's divining power are also found in the first part of the tenth chapter of I Samuel. The term rō'ēh comes from the Hebrew word meaning to see, or to look, and if it originally described the priestly diviner, who answered questions put to him by looking upon the sacrificial victims or by other objective signs, which the ancients regarded as revelations from the Deity, the reason is clear why it early fell into disuse among the Hebrews.

Of the hōzēh or seer

The Hebrew word hōzēh comes from the verb meaning to gaze. In the Arabic it is used only of seeing a vision. The ancient kāhin was also frequently designated by a title derived from the same root as the Hebrew word hōzēh. In light of these facts and of its usage elsewhere in the Old Testament, it would seem clear that the word is best translated into English by the word seer or gazer. It survived in later Hebrew literature as a practical synonym of the word nābī (prophet). Possibly in ancient times the hōzēh or seer received his divine message through objective means, as, for example, the flight of birds or the movements of the stars, but in later days he is conceived of as the man with a vision, the one who receives his message either through a dream or trance or his inner consciousness. In the days of David, Gad is described as the king's ḥōz̄î or seer, while Nathan is called a nābî or prophet. It is also significant that both of these men figure in public rather than private life, and are the recognized authoritative advisers of the king.

* Jastrow, Jour. of Bib. Lit., XXVIII, 42-56.

THE PROPHETS IN ISRAEL'S EARLY HISTORY

Unfortunately the derivation of the word nābî or prophet is uncertain. In its later Hebrew usage it is practically equivalent to speaker or proclaimer. The original word from which it was derived was probably connected either with the Hebrew word meaning to bubble forth, or with the Assyrian word nabû, to tear away, lead forcibly, and hence to be carried away by divine frenzy. In either case the word recalls the ecstatic, frenzied method in which the primitive prophets received and proclaimed their message.

In its later Hebrew usage, however, this early implication of frenzied utterance had entirely disappeared; for the great prophets, like Isaiah and Jeremiah, speak calmly and logically, although with deep feeling and earnestness. In an important passage in Numbers 12<sup>6-8</sup>, in connection with the description of Moses, is found a clear statement of the Hebrew belief regarding the method by which the true prophet received his message:

If there be a prophet among you,
In a vision do I make myself known to him,
In a dream do I speak to him.
Not so with my servant Moses;
In all my house he is faithful.
Mouth to mouth do I speak with him,
Plainly and not in enigmas.

The priestly author of Exodus 7<sup>1</sup> has also clearly illustrated the later Hebrew conception of the word prophet, for when Moses declared to Jehovah that he was not skilled in speaking, he received the answer: See, I have made thee as a god to Pharaoh, and Aaron, thy brother, shall be thy prophet. The prophet, therefore, was simply the speaker for God to men, the one who proclaimed and interpreted the divine will in the light of the needs and conditions of his age.

The other designations of the prophets, men of God, servants of Jehovah, messengers of Jehovah, and watchmen, but confirm the same fundamental conception of the functions of the prophets. Having seen clearly, they felt a divine compulsion to speak faithfully and truly; they were men both of insight and of action. They were not without interest in the future, for in the future they hoped to see the full realization of those noble ideals which they constantly held up before their contemporaries; but they were primarily men of their own day, seeing conditions as they were and seeking by every practical means to influence their fellow-countrymen to do the will of God. Their primary function was to proclaim principles, but the sphere of their activity was not limited to the setting forth of spiritual and ethical truths. Everything which concerned the life of the nation was recognized by them as of real religious import. Hence the great Hebrew prophets of the later days were

Deriva-
tion
of nābî

Later Hebrew
conception of
the prophet

Real character
and aims of the Hebrew
prophets

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

not only theologians and ethical teachers, but also social reformers, statesmen, and men of affairs. By their own personal activity and influence, as well as by word of mouth, they sought to make their exalted ideals effective in the life of the nation.

Reason
why
the prophets
were so prominent in Israel's
history

Undoubtedly the most significant fact in Israel's history was the presence and activity of the prophets. The record of their work and influence makes that history unique and the Old Testament, which records it, a book of authority worthy of a place beside the New. Hence the question of why the prophet played such an important rôle in Israel's national life is of profound interest to the student of religion. The fundamental reason is found in Israel's remarkable experiences as a nation. From the first it was confronted with a series of grave political, social, and religious crises which furnished the background and inspiration for the work of the great prophets. It is noteworthy that a prophet never appeared in Israel's history unless there was some great national, social, or moral need, and conversely, there was never a great crisis which did not call forth a prophet or prophetess.

Character
and call of Moses

Israel's national life opened with a supreme crisis in the land of Egypt, and the father of the nation was Moses, its first great prophet. Later Jewish tradition transformed Moses into a mere lawgiver and thereby obscured the real nature of his work. Early prophets, however, like Hosea, recognized and declared that by a prophet Jehovah led his nation Israel from the land of Egypt. Back of the many traditions that have gathered about him, there was evidently a man who, with true prophetic insight, fully appreciated the needs of his people in Egypt, and the necessity for united action, for leadership, and, above all, for the protecting guidance of a strong Deity. In Moses' desert experience there came to him, through his Midianite kinsman, and even more directly, as the spirit of God touches that of man, a vision of Jehovah as a God of justice and power able and willing to deliver the oppressed. This vision of Jehovah's character and the needs of his people constituted Moses' call. The patriot and seer became the man of action and therefore a prophet.

Nature
of his
prophetic
work

The familiar events of early Hebrew history are the proofs of Moses' work as a prophet. In the minds of his fellow-Hebrews their signal deliverance from Egypt confirmed the truth of his message. Amidst the hardships and dangers of the wilderness their prophet-leader was also able to impress upon the minds of his people their obligations to the God who had delivered them, and through this sense of obligation to develop that national consciousness which kept the race intact amidst the disintegrating influences that came to it during the succeeding centuries. As counsellor and judge he taught his followers the principles which became the foundations of Israel's later faith and institutions. There is, necessarily, much uncertainty about the real work of Moses; but it is clear that he was both a seer and a man of action, who towered high above his contemporaries and who stamped his own inspired convictions upon the consciousness of his race.

Debo-
ratu

The second great crisis in Israel's history came during the period of the settlement, when the Canaanites had formed a coalition under Sisera and were making a united effort to subjugate the Hebrews. The faith as well as the independence of Israel was at stake. At this crucial moment the prophetess Deborah rose to deliver the people. She not only appreciated the needs of the situation, but was able to appeal to that common faith and obligation to Jehovah which was the only force binding together the scattered Hebrew clans at this pioneer period in their history. In her grasp of the situation and in her ability to act and to inspire action, Deborah showed herself a true successor of Moses and a forerunner of the great statesmen prophets like Isaiah.

THE PROPHETS IN ISRAEL'S EARLY HISTORY

The third great crisis in Israel's history arose when the powerful Philistines in the southwest of Palestine had succeeded in defeating the armies of Israel and in establishing their rule over the Hebrews. Again the faith and very life of the nation were in danger. The situation called for leadership and organization. Already the blended patriotism and popular devotion to Jehovah had begun to find vehement though crude expression in the prophetic guilds. Their members, who were known as the sons of the prophets, now for the first time emerge into prominence in Israel's history. These groups of religious enthusiasts gathered about the ancient sanctuaries. Their zeal was expressed in music, in song, and frenzy. Their external kinship with the similar prophetic guilds among the Phoenicians was probably close; but in the light of later references it would appear that at this crisis they represented a definite protest against existing conditions, and they were probably active in their opposition to all that threatened the honor of Jehovah through the subjugation of his people.

Probably in partial sympathy with them but superior to them stands Samuel, the so-called rō'ch of Ramah. In the light of the oldest sources it appears that his reputation was but local, depending chiefly upon his ability to answer questions of personal interest which were referred to him. The great crisis, however, transformed the rō'ch into a nâbî. With true prophetic insight, he appreciated Israel's need of a leader, and himself inspired the young Benjaminite Saul with a commanding ambition to deliver his people and to become their king. Tradition, therefore, is right in recognizing in Samuel the great significant figure of this period and the real father of the Hebrew kingdom.

The references to Gad and Nathan in the courts of David and Solomon reveal the presence of other prophetic characters at this stirring period in Israel's national development. They are, however, statesmen, royal counsellors, and official seers, rather than great solitary figures, like Moses, Samuel, and Amos, who stood above rulers and people, acknowledging allegiance to but one Ruler, and freely and fearlessly proclaiming at some great crisis the mandates of that Divine King.

It is also to be noted that at the next great crisis, the division of the Hebrew empire, which destroyed its political strength but saved the rights of the people from Solomon's despotic policy, the prophets encouraged and upheld the action of the northern tribes.

The same devotion to Jehovah and to the rights of the individual are revealed in the popular stories which gather about the name of Elijah. Ahab, in his zeal to build up the material glory of the northern kingdom, had made an alliance with the commercial Phoenicians, and that alliance involved tolera-

The Philis-tine crisis

Samu-el's
prophetic service

Character
of the early
prophets

The division of the empire

The crisis
in the days of Elijah

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

tion of the worship of the god of Tyre within the territory of Israel. It also brought in the person of Jezebel, the daughter of the Tyrian king Ethbaal (a former priest of Baal), a strong dominating spirit devoted to the extension of the worship of her national god. The adoption of Canaanitish institutions and religious ideas, together with the civilization of the land, had made easy the popular identification of Jehovah with the Baal of the land of Israel. The allurements of the debased Canaanitish cults were almost irresistible. The policy of Ahab, therefore, and the popular tendency of the day threatened to undermine that simple faith in Jehovah which the people had brought with them from the desert.

Elijah's work     It was Elijah, the man from the desert, who alone fully appreciated this danger and fearlessly appealed to the conscience of the king and people. Stalwart, clad in the rough mantle of the Arab, he was a striking figure in any age. Impetuous, uncompromising, and courageous in the presence of open danger, he was a worthy representative of the God of the early Hebrews. In his illuminating analysis of the consequences of the Tyrian alliance and in his ringing call to the nation to choose between Jehovah and Baal, Elijah made an impression upon the minds of the Israelites which they never forgot. He also stood as the champion of the rights of the people against Ahab's despotic policy revealed in the incident of Naboth's vineyard. Elijah himself did not live to see the overthrow of the Tyrian Baalism or the fall of the house of Ahab. Other men and measures were required to complete the work which he initiated; but under the direction of his disciple Elisha and the influence of aroused public opinion a great reform swept over Northern Israel during the next half-century.

Achievements
and limitations of
the early
prophets     The bloody reformation of Jehu reflected the fierce zeal of Elijah; but the disasters which followed in the wake of that revolution revealed the limitations of the earlier prophets who conceived of Jehovah simply as Israel's national God. They appealed to the patriotism of their hearers rather than to the higher ethical sense. They achieved their ends through diplomacy more than by the gradual education of the public conscience. They were instrumental in building a nation, rearing an empire, and making and unmaking dynasties, and in leading Israel safely through its early crises. They were worthy successors of the early seers; but for the further development of Israel's faith a higher type of prophets was needed—prophets who could analyze still more deeply the sources of the nation's strength and weakness, who could present a nobler and more ethical conception of Jehovah, and who could guide their race through still greater crises to a serene trust in God.

III

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

THE sixth great crisis in Israel's history came when the invincible armies of Assyria began to move westward against the petty states along the eastern shores of the Mediterranean. Its advance was so gradual and halting that few statesmen in Palestine realized the magnitude of the peril. The appearance of this world power in Palestine, however, inaugurated a new epoch in the history of prophecy. As Assyria drew nearer, conquering in the name of its god Ashur nation after nation, the ancient Hebrew belief that Jehovah was invincible and that he would never give over his people as a prey to a heathen power was forever shattered. Instead there came into the minds of a few prophetic souls, who faced the facts fairly and appreciated the significance of Israel's peril, a vision of a God who ruled impartially and without rival over all nations.

On the eve of the Assyrian period (750–630 B.C.), however, a dangerous overconfidence filled the minds of the leaders of the two Hebrew kingdoms. The Assyrian attacks had weakened the power of their old foes, the Arameans, and left both Northern and Southern Israel free during the middle of the eighth century B.C., to develop their rich national resources. The turn in the tide of battle also brought to them the spoils of victory. Commerce sprang up with the neighboring nations. With foreign products came alien customs, fashions, and ideals. The Aramean wars and the conflicts between the two Hebrew kingdoms had rested most heavily upon the middle class in Israel, so that many of them were on the verge of poverty or else had fallen into debt, with its inevitable consequence in the Semitic world—slavery. The result was that only the rich and those who stood close to the throne were in a position to profit by the favorable turn in the national fortune. The rich grew richer, the powerful still more powerful. The masses by contrast became poorer and more dependent. The wealthy also sought homes in the cities or capital, where they vied with each other in their luxury and display, forgetful of their needy dependents who toiled for them on their great estates. Thus the two Hebrew kingdoms suddenly lost that great middle class, which had hitherto been the source of their strength and that democracy which had been the chief glory of the Hebrew commonwealth. The baneful effects of the close and prolonged contact with the degenerate Canaanitish civilization and cults also became sadly apparent, especially in the northern kingdom. The sanctity of the home was destroyed; immorality was prevalent in the high places and even under the shadow of the sanctuary. Dishonesty was practised in the public mart, and the corrupt leaders of the nation found refuge and a false confidence in the shadow of an elaborate ceremonial.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Amos's
shepherd train'- ing

The great pioneer prophet of this new era was born in the little town of Tekoa, twelve miles southeast of Jerusalem. His home was surrounded by the gray, rolling, limestone hills which extend down to the shores of the Dead Sea. Here the Judean shepherd Amos guarded the flocks of sheep and goats, ever watchful against the attacks of the wild animals which lurked near by, eager to spring upon the helpless animals placed in his charge. His life and environment made him rugged and strong of limb, a lover of nature, and a keen observer of life. His shepherd training gave him a high conception of the duty of those placed in a position of responsibility, especially toward the needy and dependent in their care. It also made him brave and fearless in repelling the attacks of those who prey upon the helpless.

His outlook
upon
life

The scene of Amos's youthful training lay midway between the settled civilization of Canaan and the unchanging life of the desert. His occupation, doubtless, took him to the great market-places of central Israel, where, with his keen insight, he was able to study the strength and weakness of both the northern and the southern kingdoms. Viewed from the point of view of the desert, the false confidence, the cruelty, the injustice and the vice which he found rampant, especially in the north, were revealed in their true character. On the other hand, Amos was in close touch with the faith of the desert and of Moses, with that religion which was intolerant of ritual and with that type of life which regarded rulers and centralized authority with suspicion.

How
his message came to him

Accustomed as he was to watch constantly for the approach of dangerous foes, he saw from afar the approach of Assyria and the terrible consequences, when once this distant, lurking lion should fall upon the fair northern kingdom. Experience had taught him that for every effect there was a corresponding cause. As he sought for the reason why calamity was about to overtake Israel, the significance of its corrupt life was fully revealed to him. The impending doom was no accident, but inevitable because of the nation's crimes. One of the dramatic visions with which he illustrated his message suggests the way in which the truth dawned upon him:

Thus the Lord showed me,
And behold the Lord was standing
Beside a wall, with a plumb-line in his hand.
And Jehovah said to me,
What dost thou see, Amos?
And I answered, A plumb-line.
Then the Lord said, Behold, I am setting a plumb-line
In the midst of my people Israel.
I will not again pass by them any more.
And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate,
The sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste,
And I will rise up against the house of Jereboam with the sword.

His
prophetic
call

As he meditated upon the situation its meaning crystallized into a certainty. Having once seen the danger, his shepherd training and instincts did not allow him to remain silent. It was thus that the prophetic call came to Amos. His own words are illuminating:

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

Surely the Lord Jehovah doeth nothing,
Unless he revealeth his purpose to his servant the prophet.
The lion has roared; who does not hear?
The Lord Jehovah hath spoken; who can but prophesy?

Having received his call, Amos did not hesitate. With shepherd's staff in hand, he proceeded to Bethel, the royal sanctuary of the north. There, before the leaders of the nation assembled on a great feast-day, he tactfully but unhesitatingly denounced their crimes and proclaimed those exalted principles which are the foundation of all true ethics and religion. Behind the calm, cold, irresistible logic with which he laid bare the rottenness and corruption of the northern kingdom was a heart burning with zeal to save this nation from the fate which threatened. In his note of certainty there is also revealed the conviction that his eyes had been opened to the truth by none other than God himself, and that he was directly commissioned by the Highest to interpret the divine will to the men of his day.

Very different in character and call was Amos's contemporary, Hosea. He was evidently a native of Northern Israel, and a citizen of one of its cities, if not of the capital itself. He was of well-known family, and was intimately acquainted with the policy of the court and with the ambitions and follies of the ruling classes. Unlike the rough shepherd who had been educated in the school of experience, Hosea was familiar with the growing literature of his race. He was of a poetic temperament, a man not of logic but of deep emotion. He spoke not as the stern critic but as the passionate lover of his land and people.

In the opening chapters of his prophecy, Hosea throws back the veil and reveals those incidents in his domestic life which were important in his training as a prophet. Like Isaiah and Jeremiah, he interprets his early experience in the light of his later knowledge. That later knowledge had revealed the true character of Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim, who had commanded his youthful affections. As the years went on his awful suspicion that his wife was not faithful to the love which he bestowed so freely is reflected in the names which he gave to his children. "Unpitied" and "Not-my-people" suggested condemnation and rejection because of infidelity, and Hosea's interpretation of these names, as symbols of Jehovah's rejection of guilty Israel, confirm this implication. In these earliest oracles Hosea also shows himself to be a disciple of Amos. The note which he strikes is harsh and judicial.

Only when, following the long-established Semitic custom, he had banished his unfaithful wife from his home, did he realize the depth of his love for her. In the words of the prophet the divine prompting came to him:

Still go, love this woman,
Who loves a paramour and is an adulteress,
As Jehovah loveth the Israelites,
Although they turn to other gods.

Then he tells us that he bought her back at the price of a slave and said to her:

The delivery
of his message

Hosea's
character

The tragedy
of his domestic life

The triumph of love

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Many days shalt thou abide for me,
Thou shalt not play the harlot
And thou shalt not be any man's wife.
Yet I, on my part, will be thine

Thus by loving discipline he sought to lead his erring wife to a full appreciation of her guilt and through penitence and deep contrition prepare the way for that reconciliation for which he longed.

As Hosea looked back upon his tragic experience he realized that, as has been nobly expressed by Dean Plumptre in his poem Gomer:

Funda-mental truths which his experience taught him

Through all the mystery of my years,
There runs a purpose which forbids of the wail
Of passionate despair. I have not lived
At random, as a soul whom God forsakes;
But evermore his spirit led me on,
Prompted each purpose, taught my lips to speak,
Stirred up within me that deep love, and now
Reveals the inner secret.

Out of the depths of his own experiences Hosea caught clear glimpses of those eternal principles which are the foundations of his teaching, as well as of all practical religion. Because his love was so strong even for his unfaithful wife, he appreciated, as had no man before, the agony in the divine heart because of the sins of his people. Also he learned the supreme necessity of disciplining the sinner, when mere kindness fails to arouse contrition. With enlightened vision he realized that, in the presence of defiant wrong-doing, justice and punishment are the highest expressions of love. He also learned to appreciate God's readiness and yearning to forgive the truly penitent sinner. Thus in divine providence Hosea's own personal experience and the light which it shed upon the character and acts of his beloved nation made him a prophet and prepared his mind to grasp those eternal and universal principles which are the essence of his prophetic message.

His work as a prophet

Unceasingly, sometimes with broken sobs, he appealed not only to the reason and the conscience, but also to the heart of his countrymen. His words are the words of a patriot who was able to look beyond the issues of the moment and to see the consequences of the policies which were then so popular. For at least half a decade he labored unceasingly by warning, exhortation, and promise to save his nation from its evil tendencies and to prepare it to meet the Assyrian crisis. To a patriot-prophet like Hosea his ministry was one long martyrdom, for fidelity to truth compelled him to proclaim the certainty of that national tragedy which the failure of his countrymen to hear made inevitable. His voice was scarcely silenced before, in 734 B.C., the northern territory of Israel was overrun by Assyrian armies and made a part of the great empire. A little later, in 722 B.C., Samaria and the remaining territory of Israel suffered the same fate. That overwhelming catastrophe which Amos and Hosea had clearly foreseen then became a reality.

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

While Hosea was still preaching his earnest sermons to the people of Northern Israel, similar crises and problems came to the southern kingdom. The long reign of Uzziah had brought to little Judah extension of territory, prosperity, and foreign commerce. Through the channels of trade heathen customs and ideas had penetrated even to Jerusalem itself. Luxury and greed had taken the place of the ancient simplicity. As Northern Israel rushed headlong to its ruin, the last barrier was removed which protected Judah from the Assyrian invader. Men of rare insight and wisdom and faith were needed to guide the nation through the dangers which threatened from within and without. At this critical moment the death of King Uzziah, in 740 b.c., left the direction of affairs in weak hands, so that Judah's destiny hung in the balance.

The crisis in Judah

It was at this time that a young Hebrew, a citizen of Jerusalem, went up to worship at the temple. His later activity and utterances indicate that he was a man of rare energy and force, intimately acquainted with the court and leaders of the nation. He was also a student of Israel's past and present history, and was inspired by a noble, unselfish purpose. For half a century he was active in the public life of Judah, so that on the memorable year when he went up to the temple at Jerusalem he was still probably but a youth, full of enthusiasm and noble ideals. The wonderful description which he has given of his call in the sixth chapter of his prophecy indicates that already he was meditating upon the alarming conditions in the nation, and was fully awake to the crying need for patriots able to think truly and to speak courageously and to act wisely in behalf of the state.

The young patriot Isaiah

In language which reminds us strongly of Jesus' illuminating description of the great experience which marked the beginning of his ministry, Isaiah tells how he became a prophet. Amidst the suggestive symbolism of the temple he suddenly became aware of the presence and true character of him whom his countrymen worshipped blindly and from afar. Above the sanctuary, with its half heathen rites, Jehovah seemed to rise majestic, holy, surrounded by seraphim, the heavenly beings who symbolized absolute purity. In the presence of this vision Isaiah's own impurity and the guilt of his nation were revealed in all their hideousness. But to Isaiah, who saw his guilt and openly confessed it, there quickly came a sense of divine forgiveness and cleansing. With this clarified vision of Jehovah's character and the needs of his nation also came the call to take up the arduous duties of a prophet, to be the spokesman of Jehovah, the champion of righteousness to an unappreciative but needy generation.

His temple vision

It is clear that Isaiah's vision of Jehovah's majesty and holiness on the one side and the needs of his nation on the other represented primarily a heightening of his powers of perception and volition, for there came to his lips the quick response, Here, Lord, send me. When Isaiah went forth from the temple, the world was richer because a new prophet had entered upon his life-work. His vision of Jehovah, majestic and holy, henceforth inspired his every sermon. In the earlier period of his activity he addressed himself to correcting those social evils and the heathen influences and the pride and false confidence of the people which, in his thought, stood in glaring contrast to Jehovah's majesty and holiness. In each of the great political crises which came to Judah during Isaiah's lifetime, he sought to instil in their minds such a strong faith in Jehovah's benign and overruling providence that they would escape the errors and feverish acts which threatened the life of the state.

Its effect upon his life and teachings

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

His life-work Isaiah is pre-eminently the statesman-prophet. No one else in Palestine knew so well the political situation and could estimate with such unerring accuracy the strength of different parties and forces. Through the varying political crises he calmly and with that conviction which comes only from the grasp of eternal principles and an intimate touch with him who rules the universe, offered counsels which, though usually rejected, were shown by later events to have been supremely wise and true. He also, by act as well as by word, gave to the world a new and nobler definition of patriotism. He refused to be governed by the dictates of party or public opinion, when these were manifestly wrong. He was hampered by no racial prejudices. He taught that righteousness alone exalts a nation, and that the ideal city or state can be attained only as each individual citizen gives unreservedly of his time, thought, and service to the commonweal.

Micah's training and preaching Isaiah's youthful contemporary Micah echoed the social teachings of the great statesman-prophet. In spirit and character he was much like Amos. His home was among the western foot-hills of Judah, near the old Philistine town of Gath, and commanded a view over the western coast plain along which ran the great avenues of commerce, and over which the invading armies from the north approached Judah and Jerusalem. Although he appears to have been only a peasant farmer, his environment and occupation made him, like Amos, a watchman on the outlook for distant danger. The occasion of his sermons appears to have been the approach of the armies of Sennacherib, just before the great crisis of 701 B.C. The approaching danger impelled him, as a patriot, to sound the note of alarm and to point out clearly those evils in the nation which meant weakness and destruction in the hour of peril. He was silent regarding the political issues of his day, and devoted himself to condemning the social wrongs which he found rampant in Jerusalem. With a boldness and bluntness which is unsurpassed in the history of prophecy, he denounced to their face the heartless rulers of Judah. As he contrasted his own spirit with that of the false prophets, he also declared :

I, on the contrary, am full of power,
And the sense of justice and strength,
To make known to Jacob his crime,
And to Israel his sin.

Results of his work Micah appears to have been one of the few prophets of Judah who saw the immediate fruits of his efforts. From one of the later narratives regarding Jeremiah we learn that Hezekiah and his people were deeply impressed by the sermons of this blunt peasant-prophet and forthwith instituted a reform. It is also indicative of the effectiveness of his work that in the sermons of the prophets of the next generation the social evils which Micah so fiercely attacked receive less and less attention.

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

Nahum, the last prophet to deal with the great problems which Assyria's conquest brought to the small province of Judah, is little more than a voice calling across the centuries. Of his life practically nothing is known. Master of a powerful literary style, he sings a song of triumph over the approaching fall of the cruel world power which had brought pain and woe to the many peoples of southwestern Asia. The prophet himself was probably a native of Judah, and he reflects the spirit of his day and nation. He raised his voice because he saw in Assyria's fall the convincing evidence of the justice of Jehovah's world-wide rule.

As one compares the five great prophets of the Assyrian period with those of an earlier age, many obvious points of likeness appear. Their outlook, however, was far broader and their contact with life much deeper. At last the Hebrew prophets had left their mountain heights and thrown off the veil of the ancient seer to grapple directly and practically with the vital problems of their age. They were not only men of their day, but men who lived among men. The seers had become statesmen, social reformers, and ethical teachers, as well as heralds of a broader and nobler conception of Jehovah. They rejected the false national optimism which blinded rulers and people, and in the presence of existing evils proclaimed a message which, perforce, was one of doom. And yet no one can study them carefully and fail to see that they were the most intelligent and most unselfish patriots of their age. They not only saw facts as they were, but also, under the influence of the divine spirit working through their minds, grasped those eternal principles which must forever guide the life of nations, and with supreme courage and effectiveness proclaimed these truths to their own and all succeeding ages.

Nahum's prophecy

Characteristics of the prophets of the Assyrian period

IV

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

The popular reaction against the prophetic teaching

THE teaching of the prophets of the Assyrian period proved too austere and exalted for the people of Judah. After the death of Isaiah the nation, under the misguidance of the weak king Manasseh, went back to the old heathenism. In their radical reaction from the high ideals that had been held up before them, the Judahites also adopted to a great extent the religion of their conquerors, the Assyrians. The sun and moon and heavenly bodies, worshipped from the house-tops, and even under the shadow of Jehovah's temple, were none other than the deities of the ancient Babylonians. The true prophets of Jehovah were either silenced or else suffered martyrdom for their loyalty to Jehovah, and for fully half a century heathenism held sway in Judah.

Zephaniah's ancestry and influence

The spirit and message of the great prophets of the Assyrian period could not, however, be quenched. Their teachings were treasured, as Isaiah had hoped, by a small group of their disciples. History is silent regarding their method of work, but its fruits can be clearly discerned. In many ways the most astonishing fact in this period of Judah's history is that Josiah, the son of Amon and the grandson of the reactionary Manasseh, developed into an ardent disciple of the earlier prophets. The explanation is probably to be found in the influence and work of the prophet Zephaniah. It is exceedingly suggestive that his ancestry is traced back through four generations to Hezekiah. The most satisfactory explanation of this fact is that Hezekiah is none other than the reformer king who reigned in the days of Isaiah and Micah. If this be true, Zephaniah was in a position to exercise a strong influence on the young king Josiah.

His personality

The sermons of Zephaniah reveal a man of strong, stern personality. He has the burning zeal of a reformer and is intolerant of the many forms of heathenism which had crept into Judah during the reign of Manasseh. His spirit is the same as that which later characterized Josiah's iconoclastic reformation. His intense loyalty to Jehovah recalls that of Elijah, and the reformation which followed under the leadership of Josiah had much in common with the earlier reformation of Jehu.

Jeremiah's antecedents

The noblest spirit of this tragic period, which witnessed the gradual decline and ultimate destruction of the Judean state, was the prophet Jeremiah. He is, in some ways, the best known and the least understood of all the Hebrew prophets. His varied experiences and his inner struggles are fully recorded in the remarkable collection of sermons and narratives which bears his name. His birthplace was the little town of Anathoth, north of Jerusalem, just over the Mount of Olives. Thither Solomon had banished Abiathar, the descendant of the priestly house of Eli. Jeremiah appears to have been a scion of this ancient family. In his noble ancestry and in his home training he later recognized a preparation which constituted an important element in his call. In comfortable circumstances, in the quiet of a little country town, and yet in closest touch with Judah's capital, Jeremiah grew up a sensitive, introspective, and conscientious youth.

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

From his later sermons it is evident that he was an ardent, spiritual disciple of the earlier prophets, and especially of the great Hosea, in whom he recognized a kindred spirit. Both were deeply religious and governed largely by their emotions. To both fell the tragic task of striving in vain to save their country from the consequences of its crime and folly and of singing the death dirge of their beloved nation. Both were uncompromising foes of every form of injustice and corruption; but each appreciated and voiced, as did no other men of their day, the yearning love of Jehovah for his people and his passionate eagerness to save them if they would but let him.

Jeremiah's call evidently came to him while he was still a youth. In the opening chapter of his prophecy he tells us of the long struggle between his natural inclinations and the call to public duty. By nature he was quiet and retiring. His constant references to the joys of home and the love of husband and wife, of children and parents, show how ardently he craved them. No man was more sensitive to criticism or longed more for public sympathy and approval. All the innate forces of his nature held him back from taking up a task which called for the sacrifice of almost everything that he held dearest, and yet, for a man with the inheritance and character of Jeremiah, it was still more impossible to ignore the divine call. During his period of struggle it would seem that every incident of his daily life voiced for him that call: the almond-tree, first to wake from the slumber of winter, spoke to him of the unceasing care with which Jehovah watched for the realization of his gracious purpose in the life of his people. A caldron, filled with boiling liquid, suggested the northern foes which threatened each moment to sweep like a flood upon the land of Judah. From the frequent references in his earlier sermons to this northern foe, apparently a horde of dread Scythians, it is evident that their approach was that which led the prophet to make his final decision and to take up his prophetic mission.

From the first Jeremiah realized that his work would be a thankless task. For him it meant a life-long tragedy. He tells us that in devotion to his work and as a symbol to his countrymen of the privations which would come with the approaching exile he denied himself even the joys of married life. Yearning intensely for sympathy and friendship, but ever an object of popular hate and scorn and ridicule, through forty long years he persisted in his mission. At times bitter cries of distress burst from his lips, revealing one of the most human as well as one of the most heroic of the prophets. And yet his patriotism to God and his country did not permit him to remain silent:

If I say, I will not think of it nor speak any more in his name,
Then there is in mine heart, as it were, a burning fire shut up in my bones.

Through all the shifting fortunes of Judah's policy, as the infatuated leaders hurried the nation on to its final ruin, Jeremiah stood firm like a light-house,

His spiritual kinship with Hosea

His prophetic call

His heroic devotion
to his task

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

shedding a clear, divine light upon the seething waters. He himself was fully conscious of his task. At the time of his call the divine word had come to him:

Therefore do thou gird up thy loins and arise,
Speak to them all that I command thee,
Do not be terrified before them, lest I terrify thee.
For behold, I myself make thee this day a fortified city in their presence,
And a brazen wall against the whole land,
Against the kings of Judah, its princes, its priests, and the common people.
And they shall fight against thee, but they will not overcome thee
For I am with thee to deliver thee, saith Jehovah.

Quality
of his heroism

In reading Jeremiah's prophecies one sometimes gains the impression that he was almost weak and dependent, but in the light of the conditions of his age and his own sensitive nature, it is clear that he is in many ways the noblest of all the heroes of the faith who arose in ancient Israel. His was the heroism of the commonplace, that divinest type of heroism which suffers untold agonies yet quietly persists and remains ever true to the God-given task, however distasteful it may be.

His
work during
the first period
of his ministry

In the earlier days of his ministry Jeremiah joined hands with Zephaniah. His early reform sermons are full of warnings and denunciations, and yet through them there breathes a divine love and tenderness which appeals even more strongly to the heart than to the reason or to the sense of fear. The work of Zephaniah and Jeremiah and the group of reformers who gathered about them soon bore fruit in the reformation of Josiah. As is now generally recognized, the basis of that reformation was the remarkable law-book found in Deuteronomy (cf. Vol. IV, 31-5). It represents the united work of priests and prophets. In it the principles laid down by Hosea and Isaiah are formulated in definite laws to guide the people. The formal acceptance and institution of this new code opens another chapter in the history of the Hebrew race. Henceforth the priest and the written law come more and more to the front, and take the place of the prophet with his direct appeal to the national and individual conscience.

His estimate of Josiah's reforms

While the new law-book was being promulgated, and during the remainder of the reign of Josiah, Jeremiah appears to have been quiet. The crisis having passed, he was free to retire to the quiet of his home at Anathoth. From the references in his later sermons it is clear that Jeremiah longed for a deeper reformation which would sweep away not only the high places and the symbols of the old heathen cults, but also the false ideas and motives in the minds of his fellow-countrymen.

The second period of Jere-miah's
activity

The tragic death of Josiah soon brought to the throne his son Jehoiakim, who reversed the policy of his father and had little sympathy with the ideals of the prophets. Egyptian and Babylonian conquerors again laid their hands upon Judah, and foolish counsellors brought to the state new perils. Judah's need called Jeremiah from his seclusion. Until after the final fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C., he spoke continuously in public, dealing with questions relating to the political, moral, and religious welfare of Judah. Frequently he was attacked by the people; he was repeatedly thrown into prison; he was taunted as a traitor, and yet, until death overtook him as an exile in the land of Egypt—stoned, according to tradition, by the men of his own race—he toiled unceasingly to avert the final national calamity.

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

Sometime during the reign of Jehoiakim, Habakkuk, a contemporary of Jeremiah, voiced that sorrow and doubt which filled the minds of the true prophets as they witnessed the overthrow of Josiah's policy and saw, rapidly advancing, their new conquerors, the Chaldeans. Habakkuk's literary style is strong and vigorous. His faith triumphs over his doubts. His point of view, however, is nearer that of the people and lacks the depth and spirituality which characterize Jeremiah's messages.

Judah, at first, accepted the rule of the Chaldeans without opposition; but after three or four years it rebelled, although in the face of Jeremiah's earnest warnings and protests. In a short time Jehoiakim died and Jerusalem fell. As a punishment for this rebellion, in 597 B.C. about ten thousand of the leading citizens of Jerusalem were transported to Babylonia, and over the Jews who were left behind was placed the well-meaning but inefficient Zedekiah. His reign of eleven years marks the third period of Jeremiah's activity. Although the prophet enjoyed the confidence of the king, he was subjected to cruel persecution at the hands of the inexperienced nobles, who shaped Judah's policy during this period. Jeremiah was also bitterly opposed by the false prophets, who were especially active at this time, and who undermined Jeremiah's influence with the people by advocating the popular policy of rebellion against Nebuchadrezzar.

The final capture and destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. confirmed the truth of Jeremiah's prophetic counsels. The last period of his life-work was devoted to the survivors of this great calamity. When the Jewish governor Gedaliah was treacherously murdered, the prophet still advised them to remain in the land and trust to the justice and clemency of Nebuchadrezzar. His counsel, however, was rejected and he was carried away to spend his last years among the Jewish fugitives in Egypt.

Jeremiah is, indeed, the commanding figure of this tragic period of Judah's decline. He alone was able, under divine guidance, to estimate the true significance of the forces at work in the life of his nation, to point out the dangers, and the only way of escape. False prophets and strong popular opposition confronted him on every side. The authority of the prophet with the people was passing. Rejected and despised by his race, with heart breaking because of the calamities which he was forced to predict, for nearly half a century Jeremiah suffered almost daily martyrdom. And yet by his devotion and fidelity he prepared his nation for the supreme crisis of the exile and thereby preserved its faith in Jehovah. It was but just that the later generations should crown him with the highest respect and veneration. In him Hebrew prophecy reached its greatest spiritual height, and at last broke those national bonds which had hitherto prevented Israel's faith in Jehovah from becoming an universal world-religion.

Habakkuk

The third period of Jeremiah's activity

The fourth and last period

Significance of Jeremiah's work

V

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION

The changed conditions of the exile

THE fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. and the changed conditions of the exile called forth such a different type of religious leader that certain modern scholars have asserted that Jeremiah was the last of the real prophets and that Ezekiel and those who followed were but shadowy reflections of their noble predecessors. The assertion, however, must be modified in the light of the fact that a fundamental characteristic of every true prophet is an adaptation of his work and teaching to the peculiar needs of his age. No more sudden and sweeping transformation ever came to a nation than that through which the Israelites passed in the years immediately following 586 B.C. Their political and national life, which had been all-important in the days before the exile suddenly ceased, and for the next four centuries the race was bound hand and foot, powerless under the hands of their foreign masters. The result was that the insistent political problems and crises which had commanded the attention of the prophets of the preceding period ceased to exist. Wealth and social distinctions also vanished, and with these the glaring social evils which had elicited the impassioned sermons of Amos and Micah. Under the deep shadow of the exile the survivors of the race for the first time fully appreciated and accepted the teachings of their earlier prophets. To a great extent heathenism lost its hold upon the Jews and the immoral cults of Canaan ceased to exercise their malign influence. Henceforth the written law, embodying the social and ethical teachings of the prophets, was regarded with ever-increasing reverence.

Loss of confidence in the spoken word

In the light of these changed conditions it is obvious that there was little demand or field for a prophet. In its reverence for the authority of the past and for the written law the new generation was beginning to lose faith in the spoken word. The later prophets also felt the lack of popular confidence and preferred to issue their messages anonymously. From the period of the exile on only four prophecies, those of Ezekiel, Haggai, Zechariah, and Joel, bear the names of those who uttered them. Otherwise the many prophecies of this period are but voices crying in the wilderness.

Ezekiel's early training

The great prophet of the exile and the moulder of later Judaism is Ezekiel. Born in Jerusalem of priestly family, he grew up under the shadow of the temple and under the preaching of Jeremiah. Both of these powerful influences may be traced throughout all his work. His experiences and activity are recorded by his own pen with remarkable fulness and chronological accuracy. He was one of the many priests carried into the exile at Babylonia in connection with the first captivity of 597 B.C. For five years he lived in the colony of Jewish exiles settled beside the great Kabaru Canal which ran between Babylon and Nippur. Communication between these exiles and their kinsmen who remained behind under the rule of King Zedekiah was close. Ezekiel was evidently well informed and keenly interested in conditions and problems in the distant homeland. The folly of the leaders of Judah in defying the authority of Babylonia transformed the priest Ezekiel into a prophet, and constituted the theme of his preaching and activity recorded in the first twenty-five chapters of his prophecy.

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION

Ezekiel has given a detailed account of the call which came to him in 592 B.C. Its elaborate imagery reflects his Babylonian environment, and its highly developed symbolism his priestly birth and training. It is very similar to Isaiah's call both in form and content. The God of Ezekiel's inspired vision was the God of supreme majesty and holiness. In the dark shadow of the exile, however, Isaiah's God, who was thought of as immanent and personally active in all the life of the nation, was conceived of as a transcendent God above and apart from his people. As was natural, Ezekiel also emphasized the ceremonial aspects of Jehovah's holiness, and sought by means of an elaborate ritual to purify the uncleanness of his people.

His conception of Jehovah

A strong ethical note ran through all of Ezekiel's sermons; but he also gave a powerful impetus to that trend toward ceremonialism which characterized post-exilic Judaism. He it was who outlined that programme which, in later days, became the guiding norm of Judaism. His personality is stamped, not only upon all that he wrote, but also on the generations which succeeded him. When the final destruction of Jerusalem had demonstrated the truth of his earlier counsels, his authority as a prophet was firmly established and his predictions satisfied the cravings of his age and race. With the eye of faith he saw a new race and a new religion rising out of the scattered remnants of the Hebrew nation, and he was able to impress this belief upon the minds of his discouraged and disconsolate countrymen. Ezekiel was pre-eminently the organizer who, in the supreme crisis of Judaism, adopting the great doctrines of his prophetic predecessors, developed a creed and a definite plan which met the new needs of the situation. His emphasis upon details and ritual was not only in accord with the spirit of his age, but also furnished a concrete programme which could be understood and adopted by the masses who were groping in the darkness. The stern, conscientious, dramatic priest who labored and wrote beside the Chebar well deserves the place accorded him by later generations in the goodly fellowship of the prophets. He and those who follow him simply compel us to broaden our narrow definition of the word prophet.

Significance of his work

At the beginning of the Babylonian exile the survivors of the earlier Judean kingdom were to be found in three centres. Thirty or forty thousand of the political and religious leaders of the nation were settled by themselves, a little Judah, in the heart of Babylonia. Many Jews—possibly more than those who were carried captive to Babylon—had found temporary or permanent refuge on the borders of the friendly land of Egypt, ready to return to their homes when the Babylonians were through with their rigorous punishment of the Jewish rebels. The majority of the nation, the peasants and the inhabitants of the villages outside of Jerusalem, remained in the land, cultivated the soil, and awaited the time when they should be freed from Babylonian bondage. From incidental references in Jeremiah and Haggai and Zechariah, it appears that they continued to offer sacrifices on the ruins of the great rock-hewn altar which had stood before the temple at Jerusalem. Here also, probably in keeping with the spirit of Deuteronomy, they observed the sad fasts which took the place of the ancient, joyous annual festivals.

Conditions in Judah during the exile

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Delay
in rebuilding the temple

The conquest of Babylonia by Cyrus the Persian evidently did not bring, as later tradition suggests, a general return of the Jews from Babylon. The policy of the Persian conqueror opened the way for the exiles to return and even gave them encouragement to rebuild their cities and sanctuaries; but it would seem that only a little handful of Jews from Babylon, certain priests and descendants of the old Hebrew reigning family, found their way back to the desolate hills of Judah. Otherwise the poor, struggling Judean community included simply the peasants who had been left behind and the fugitives who had returned from Egypt. Eighteen years, apparently, elapsed after the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus before any attempt was made to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem.

Hag-gai's effective preach-
ing

The change in the spirit of prophecy, which first appeared in the character and work of Ezekiel, was again forcibly illustrated. The two men who inspired and directed the rebuilding of the temple were the prophets Haggai and Zechariah. In originality and spirituality they are far inferior to the prophets of the pre-exilic period. In thought and sympathy they are, however, in close touch with the mass of the people. Haggai was a layman, energetic, blunt, direct in speech, and intensely practical in his counsel. By his homely reasoning and encouraging messages he stirred the lazy, faint-hearted, and discouraged Judean community to effective action. The rebellions which, in 521 B.C., broke out in many parts of the Persian empire also kindled the hopes of the people and encouraged them to believe that the hour of their deliverance was at hand.

Zechariah's personality

Haggai's contemporary and fellow-worker Zechariah was apparently of priestly descent. He belonged to the priestly family of Iddo (Neh. 12<sup>4</sup>). His point of view and interests are those of a man brought up in the atmosphere of the ceremonial law. His kinship with the other priest-prophet Ezekiel is close. Being a priest, it is exceedingly probable that he was born among the exiles in Babylonia. The breadth of his outlook and his keen interest in the great world movements further suggest that his early training was received in Babylon. Like Haggai, he was a man of great energy and took up the work of encouraging and directing the thought of the Judean community in the same spirit as his fellow-prophet. In a series of impressive visions he dealt practically with the problems that confronted the temple-builders. He was an able pastor who dispelled the popular doubts and inspired the people under his care to continued activity.

Work
of Haggai and Zechariah

The entire recorded work of these two prophets of the new temple was limited to the two or three years between September 520 and 518 B.C. At a critical moment, however, in the life of Judaism they stood forth to make clear to their race its supreme duty in the light of changed conditions which had resulted from the destruction of their city and temple. Unlike many of the pre-exilic prophets, they also lived to see the fruit of their labors in the re-building of the temple and in the rebirth of hope in the minds of the Jews of Palestine. Even though the larger restoration for which they hoped did not come for more than a century, Haggai the layman and Zechariah the priest must be counted among the founders of Judaism.

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION

The prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah are of great value for the study of post-exilic prophecy, inasmuch as they can be definitely dated and shed clear light upon the hopes of the Jews during the days immediately following the exile. They afford by far the best approach for the study of the difficult problems presented by Isaiah 40–66. They indicate clearly that in 518 B.C., the hopes for a general restoration of the exiles to Jerusalem were exceedingly strong in the minds of prophets and people, but that the realization lay in the future rather than in the immediate past. Zechariah also bears testimony to the fundamental changes that took place in his own expectation regarding the future of his nation during the critical years that lay between the beginning and completion of the second temple. In 520 B.C. both he and Haggai, doubtless reflecting popular belief, trusted and predicted that the immediate future would bring to them independence and national glory under the rule of Zerubbabel, a scion of the Davidic royal line. By 518, however, this hope of a Davidic king and kingdom had passed away, but the expectation of a general restoration of the exiles had only grown the stronger. It had broadened, however, into the belief that other nations would come to worship Jehovah as the universal, divine Ruler. Zechariah's closing prophecy regarding Jehovah's return to Zion, and the prosperity and glory which would come to the sacred city and the chosen people, is the fitting prelude to the proclamation of the early restoration of Jehovah's people with which Isaiah 40–66 opens. The basis of the hopes for a general return of the exiles, which Zechariah shares with the author of Isaiah 40–66 (who may be designated as the great prophet of the restoration), was not merely the conquest of Babylon, but also the fact that the communal life at Jerusalem and the temple service had been re-established.

In Isaiah 56 and the following chapters there are repeated references to the temple and its service, indicating that it had already been restored (cf. §§ 176, 178, introd. notes). Moreover, these references are not confined to the latter part of the book. In 43<sup>23</sup>, <sup>24</sup> the prophet complains, in the name of Jehovah, that the community had not brought to him the sheep of their burnt-offerings nor honored him with their sacrifices. Such a charge would be meaningless if the temple were not already rebuilt. The charges are also very similar to those made by the author of the book of Malachi, who wrote sometime about the middle of the Persian period.

Chapters 56–66 are generally recognized as post-exilic, but, on the basis of the mention of Cyrus in two passages (44<sup>28</sup>, 45<sup>1</sup>), Isaiah 40–55 have been attributed by the majority of recent scholars to the closing years of the Babylonian exile. The fact, on the one hand, that there are few, if any, allusions to contemporary events in these chapters, and, on the other hand, that little or nothing is known of the condition and hopes of the Jews during this period makes this dating of these prophecies possible although far from certain. As

Ex-
pecta-tions
of
the rebuilders
of
the temple

Evidence
that Isaiah 40–66 were written after 516 B.C.

Israel,
not Cyrus,
Jeho-
vah's anoint-ed

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

will be shown, however, in connection with the text, the references to Cyrus were, beyond reasonable doubt, added by a scribe familiar with the opening chapters of the book of Ezra. A comparison of the description of Jehovah's anointed, in Isaiah 45, with closely parallel passages in the same context and in 49 shows that the prophet had in mind not a foreign king but Israel, the messianic nation, called and upheld by Jehovah through the ages and given dominion as in the days of David over heathen kings and nations.

Isaiah
40-66
written in Palestine

Also the assumption that the author of these chapters lived in the Babylonian exile is not supported by a close examination of the prophecies themselves. Possibly their author was one of the few who, like Zerubbabel, had been born in Babylon and later returned to Palestine. He was also dealing with such broad and universal problems that he gives few indications of his date and place of abode; but all the evidence that is found points to Jerusalem as the place where he lived and wrote. Babylon is only one of the distant lands of the dispersion. As Jehovah's spokesman the prophet addresses Jerusalem, declaring:

Fear not I am with thee,
From the east I will bring thine offspring.
From the west I will gather thee.
I will say to the north, Give up.
And to the south, Withhold not!
Bring my sons from afar and my daughters from the ends of the earth.

The prophet's interest and point of view centre throughout in Jerusalem, and he shows himself far more familiar with conditions in Palestine than in distant Babylon. Most of his illustrations are drawn from the agricultural life of Palestine. His vocabulary is also that of a man dwelling in Palestine, and in this respect is in marked contrast with the synonyms employed by Ezekiel, the prophet of the Babylonian exile.*

Content
and purpose of these chapters

While in touch with his own age, the great unknown prophet lives in the atmosphere of the past and the future. His prophecies rise above the limitations of place and time; the entire panorama of ancient history is spread out before his inspired vision. His reasoning is as simple and powerful as is his literary style: Jehovah's incomparable superiority to all other gods is revealed in the leadership and exaltation of his chosen people in the past; the same God who led from the distant East a little clan and gave them possession of Palestine and rulership over their neighbors is able and will again gather his scattered people and realize through them his noble purpose in the history of mankind. It was his supreme vision of Jehovah, as revealed in the past life of his race and of humanity, in the heavens and in nature, that impelled the great unknown prophet to write those immortal poems which illuminate all human history and which present, as do no other passages of the Old Testament, the true character of the infinite, omnipotent, omniscient, and benign Ruler of the universe.

* Cf. Cobb, Jour. of Bib. Lit., XXVII, 48-64.

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION

In his picture of the suffering servant of Jehovah one recognizes the profound impression which the long, voluntary martyrdom of Jeremiah made upon the receptive mind of this deep student of Israel's past. In his treatment of the problem of evil and in his exalted estimate of suffering voluntarily borne for others, it is impossible not to see the influence of that bitter and prolonged affliction which was then the lot of the prophet in common with the faithful of his race. His glorious picture of the future was the triumphant cry of a soul who has passed through the valley of the shadow of death and seen the great light. His was the vision of a seer, the spirit of a philosopher, and the soul of a poet. Bold in denouncing the blindness of the people and the hypocrisy and rapacity of their leaders, he speaks with divine tenderness to the timid and despondent. He, above all others, was the prophet who bridged the centuries, who took firm hold of the eternal verities, who inspired in the heart of his race a deathless hope, who spiritualized the aspirations of weak humanity and made the message and mission of Judaism universal.

The biblical historians are silent regarding the seventy years following the rebuilding of the temple in 516 B.C. From Nehemiah's vivid account of conditions as he found them in Jerusalem about 445 B.C., it is clear that the intervening years had brought disappointment and distress to the Jews of Palestine. The ancient city walls were still in ruins so that the inhabitants of Jerusalem were an easy prey to the attacks of their hostile neighbors. The Edomites, who at the beginning of the Babylonian exile had been driven from their own homes, had seized southern Judah. From this vantage-point they vented their hereditary enmity upon the helpless Jewish peasants. In the thought of the Jews the Edomites were the symbol of all that was evil and opposed to the interests of Jehovah and his people. Their overthrow is the theme of the little prophecy of Obadiah, which comes from this period. On the west were the survivors of the ancient Philistines, and just across the Jordan the Ammonites continued that close ring of hereditary foes with which the Jews were encircled. On the north the half-heathen Samaritans completed the circle.

Within the Jewish community itself the more aggressive leaders had, in time, acquired property and influence and formed a strong and powerful party which protected itself by making alliances with the leaders of the neighboring nations and regarded the temple service and the poorer classes, who found in it their only joy, with scorn or open contempt. There was nothing that was great or inspiring in the life of the Judean community. The author of the little book of Malachi throws clear light upon conditions in Jerusalem in the years not long preceding the advent of Nehemiah. The temple had long been rebuilt, and even the priests themselves had begun to be careless in the performance of their duties. Apparently the walls of Jerusalem had not yet been built. The sceptics are outspoken in their avowal of their doubts regarding Jehovah's power to deliver his people, but in the minds of the faithful there is a strong hope, even as in Isaiah 40-66, that Jehovah is about to rise and vindicate his own.

Malachi is but the Hebrew equivalent of my messenger, the one who, according to 3<sup>1</sup>, was to come speedily to prepare for the advent of Jehovah. The

The personal-ality of their author

Fortunes
of the Judean
community
after 516
B.C.

Internal conditions

Title of the book of Malachi

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Greek translators translate Malachi in the superscription with the words, By the hand of his messenger, and the later Jewish and Christian scholars were almost unanimous in concluding that Malachi was not the name of the prophet, but simply a part of the later scribal designation of the book. Hence it would appear that, like most of the prophets of this period, the author of the book of Malachi wrote anonymously.

His personality and spirit, however, are revealed by his words. He was in closest touch with the different members of the Judean community. Like his predecessors Haggai and Zechariah, he labored earnestly to maintain the purity of the ritual, as well as the standards of justice and mercy. He was by no means, however, a narrow champion of Jewish exclusiveness. With an astonishing breadth of vision he declares that the blind though devoted worship of the heathen was even more acceptable to Jehovah than the half-hearted, hypocritical service of the Jerusalem priests. The prophet was evidently a man of great independence, originality, and energy. He addressed himself frankly and boldly to the existing problems and evils of his day. Repeatedly he presents the objections in the minds of his hearers and then deals with them plainly and effectively. He is, indeed, himself a voice crying in the wilderness, Jehovah's messenger preparing the way for the later reformation carried through by Nehemiah, and the great movement represented in tradition by Ezra.

It is clear that during the days preceding the appearance of Nehemiah in Palestine the minds of certain members of the Judean community were filled with a great expectation. The mighty Persian empire still held them powerless in its iron grasp; but out of the seventy years of persecution and distress which had followed, under the inspiration of the messages of the authors of Isaiah 40–55 and the book of Malachi, the hopes of the faithful rose again in nobler and more spiritual form. Possibly these hopes inspired the little group of Jews to face the discomforts and perils of the long desert journey to distant Susa that they might enlist the co-operation of their kinsmen, the royal cup-bearer Nehemiah. In the remarkable prayer which stands at the beginning of his memoirs (Neh. 1) it is not difficult to recognize the influence of the thought of the great prophet of the restoration. In six verses he uses the term servant (in the sense of servant of Jehovah) eight times. His words in 1<sup>o</sup>, Now these are thy servants and thy people whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power and by thy strong hand, are an echo of the familiar teachings of the II Isaiah. Nehemiah himself was one of the true servants of Jehovah. His work in part realized the divine promises proclaimed by the great prophet of the restoration. He it was who energetically and successfully attacked the social and moral evils in the Judean community, and as Jehovah's messenger prepared the way for a great spiritual revival (cf. Neh. 5, 13). The rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem and the repeopling of the city under the direction of Nehemiah led to that extension of Judah's territory and the general return of the exiles, which apparently took place somewhere during the first half of the fourth century B.C. (cf. Vol. II, § 165).

Character of its author

Effect
of the prophetic teaching
upon
the
community

VI

THE PROPHETS OF LATER JUDAISM

THE period between 400 and 350 b.c. furnishes the most probable background for the prophecy of Joel. The social evils which the earlier prophets had denounced have already disappeared. The elders and the priests are the ruling classes in the community. The temple and its service occupy a central place, not merely in the life of Judah, but in the thought of the prophet. Like Ezekiel and Zechariah, Joel is an ardent champion of the ritual and is in full sympathy with the ceremonial trend of later Judaism. His attention is fixed entirely upon the problems of the Judean community. Its heathen neighbors the Edomites, the Phoenicians, and the Philistines are still a thorn in the flesh, and the great barrier in the way of the establishment of Jehovah's worldwide kingdom. The immediate occasion of his prophecy was the invasion of a great swarm of locusts, which threatened to destroy all vegetation, and thus to make impossible the continuation of the temple service. In the prophet's mind this calamity was an index that Jehovah's great day of judgment was at hand. In detail and with graphic imagery he pictures the different aspects of this era of vindication and exaltation, which he, in common with the majority of the prophets of his age, believed to be near at hand. To him the overthrow of the wicked heathen nations who had long oppressed Jehovah's faithful people seemed essential, not only for the realization of the destiny of the Jews, but also for the vindication of Jehovah's justice.

In the light of history, Joel must be reckoned as one of the lesser prophets. He marks the great transition from the earlier ethical prophets, who addressed themselves to the living problems of their day, to the new type of prophet, who lived largely in the future and dreamed of some great, miraculous, divine interposition to right the evils of the world, and to institute that righteous social order which the earlier prophets had sought to develop through the appeal to the consciences of their countrymen.

The next half-century brought to the Jewish community in Palestine, not the realization of the hopes which Joel had expressed in such vivid imagery, but a new series of disasters. In 368 b.c. Artexerxes Ochus, the most cruel and blood-thirsty, as well as one of the most energetic of the Persian rulers, came to the throne. Egypt, Phoenicia, and probably all of Palestine were soon involved in a general uprising, which was for a time successful but was in the end put down with relentless cruelty and appalling loss of life. Thousands of the Phoenicians perished, many of the Jews appear to have been transported to the province of Hyrcania, south of the Caspian Sea, and the temple at Jerusalem was desecrated, if not temporarily destroyed.

Joel's point of view

The new type of prophet

Closing years of the Persian period

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Effects of Alexan-der's
conquests

A few years later Alexander the Great appeared on the northern horizon of Judah in his victorious march to the conquest of the Persian empire, which was completed by 331 B.C. This change of rulers does not seem to have greatly affected the Judean community. In making Alexandria the great commercial seaport of the eastern Mediterranean, Alexander offered special inducements to the Jews, who settled there in great numbers. Again the tide of Jewish colonization set away from rather than toward Jerusalem, and the religious and intellectual life of the Jews of Alexandria became in many ways more important than that of the temple-city itself.

The
book of Jonah

Disappointed in its hopes of a signal vindication and world-wide rulership, and suffering under the wrongs inflicted by their heathen neighbors and rulers, the hearts of the great majority of the Jews both in Palestine and in the lands of the dispersion were embittered. They forgot that they had been called to be Jehovah's witnesses before the Gentiles and that they were to conquer the world by the invincible weapons of love and service rather than by the sword. One great prophetic soul, however, like Jeremiah and the II Isaiah, stands apart and above his age and proclaims a message of profound spiritual significance. It is the author of the much misunderstood little book of Jonah. It is not a prophecy but a story regarding a prophet. At first glance its place among the distinctively prophetic books of the Old Testament seems anomalous, but a more careful reading leads to the conclusion that it is more than a mere history, it is rather a story or parable intended, like the didactic stories and parables of the rabbis and of the Great Teacher of Nazareth, to convey certain profound and universal religious truths.

Its
real nature
and purpose

Its hero is Jonah, the son of Amitai, the prophet from Gath-heper, who lived in Northern Israel about the middle of the eighth century B.C., and who, according to II Kings 14<sup>25</sup>, predicted to Jereboam II the restoration of Israel's ancient boundaries. The story-teller, however, has drawn freely from the field of tradition and popular wonder stories. The result is that the narrative from beginning to end abounds in the miraculous. The prophet has also shaped or freely adapted his materials to the realization of his didactic purpose. The result is a story so dramatic and fascinating that it holds the attention from beginning to end, so simple that it seems almost childish, and yet, with quiet humor and an irony which is irresistible, it teaches truths which are of profound and universal significance. On the one side the book is a protest against the pride and narrow exclusiveness, which was beginning to characterize the Jews, and of that spirit of hostility, which is expressed in the closing chapters of Joel and in the book of Malachi. On the other side it is a powerful declaration of the great truth that Jehovah's love and care were limited to no one race. Jonah stands forth as a type of Israel, which had been called to be a prophet-nation and to proclaim Jehovah's will to all mankind. In the experiences of Jonah the folly of refusing to carry out the divine commission was clearly pictured. He also exemplifies Israel's narrowness and inconsistency. He complains bitterly to the God of mercy and love because of the little misfortunes that came to him, such as the withering of the gourd; while in the same breath he arrogates to himself the right of reprimanding Jehovah because, in his divine goodness, he had shown mercy to the heathen and to his innocent and helpless creatures. In contrast to Jonah and the prophet-nation the heathen sailors and the Assyrians themselves, in accordance with their light, are far better and more deserving of the divine favor. The book is, therefore, a missionary tract. It is a stern call to Israel to cease praying for the destruction of the heathen, and instead to arise and perform its divine task in leading the nations to a knowledge of Jehovah. It is also a powerful declaration of the quality and depth and universality of Jehovah's love—a love which is as strong for the ignorant and helpless heathen as for his favored people.

THE PROPHETS OF LATER JUDAISM

During the Greek period, which followed the conquests of Alexander, the Jews were subject at first to the Ptolemies, who ruled over Egypt, and later to the Seleucidae, with their capital at Antioch. The territory of Palestine, lying midway between these two rival kingdoms, was a constant bone of contention. The result was that sometimes the Jews were courted and sometimes plundered and cruelly oppressed by the kings of Egypt and Syria. From the references in the II Isaiah to the oppression of the scattered exiles, and from the records of later persecutions in Egypt and other parts of the world, it is evident that the lot of many of the Jews was a far from pleasant one. To be loyal to their religion and peculiar institutions demanded rare courage and devotion.

It is now generally recognized that the book of Daniel comes from the period following the conquests of Alexander. The presence of so many Greek as well as Persian words in its opening chapters points definitely to this conclusion. Its peculiar literary style and constructions are found only in late writings, like Chronicles, Ecclesiastes, Esther, and later Jewish literature. Although its background is the Babylonian and Persian periods, it reveals an ignorance of the actual course of history during these periods which is inconceivable, if the author lived contemporaneously with or soon after the events described. Thus, for example, Belshazzar is said to have been the son and immediate successor of Nebuchadrezzar and to have ruled over Babylon at the time of its fall. From contemporary Babylonian inscriptions, however, it is an established fact that four kings succeeded Nebuchadrezzar on the throne of Babylon, and that the last king was Nabonidus. Belsharuzur was the name of a son of Nabonidus who apparently never came to the throne of Babylon, for the city fell before his father's death. In the book of Daniel the conqueror of Babylon is not Cyrus, but Darius the Mede. The belief that the Medes conquered Babylonia was probably based on the predictions in Isaiah 13<sup>17</sup> and 21<sup>2</sup>. Cyrus the Persian is represented as the conqueror of Darius. The names and order of the four Persian kings mentioned in the book of Daniel are those which appear in late Jewish tradition, suggesting strongly that we have here, not historical narratives, but the vague memories of a later age. This conclusion is confirmed by the fact that, in contrast, the events and character of the Greek period are presented with great detail and fidelity. The interest of the entire book focuses on this and the early part of the Maccabean age. These and other converging lines of evidence leave little reasonable doubt that the book of Daniel must be dated somewhere after 300 B.C.

Lot of
the Jews in the Greek period

Evidence regarding the date of the book of
Daniel

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Indications
that Daniel
1-6 was originally a distinct
book

Hitherto the book has been attributed, with remarkable unanimity among modern scholars, to one author. A recent writer,* however, has adduced convincing evidence that the original edition of Daniel contained simply the stories found in chapters 1-6. Briefly summarized, the evidence is, first, the fundamental differences in style between the first and second halves of the book. In 1-6 many Persian and Greek words are introduced, evidently with deliberate purpose, but in the second half, although the theme is almost identically the same, these practically disappear. The literary style of 1-6 is that of the ordinary narrative or story of the period, but 7-12 abounds in original expressions, peculiar uses of words, and unique idioms, which differentiate it from every other Old Testament writing. In 1-6 Daniel is a man of learning and rare insight, who is able, because of his abilities, to interpret dreams, and who enjoys high favor under his foreign masters. In 7-12, on the contrary, he is simply a passive recipient of the divine relation, he is frequently terrified and even faints, and is able to interpret the visions only as their meaning is explained to him in minutest detail. The result is two fundamentally different portraits.

Differences in content

The contents of the two parts are also very different. Chapters 1-6 contain edifying stories, akin to those in the book of Genesis, with little, if any, apocalyptic material; while 7-12 are pure apocalypses. Furthermore, the chronological data of the two parts do not agree. In 1<sup>21</sup> it is stated that Daniel continued even to the first year of King Cyrus, which is clearly intended to mean that this date marks the end of his long activity, but in 10<sup>1</sup> Daniel's final and most important vision is dated in the third year of Cyrus. Most significant of all is the fact that 1-6 does not contain the slightest reference to the persecutions under Antiochus, which occupy the central place in 7-12. Instead, Nebuchadnezzar and Darius, the kings who figure most prominently in 1-6 are regarded very favorably and prove themselves the friends of Daniel and, according to their light, the champions of the religion of Jehovah. In these respects they resemble certain of the early Greek rulers, who proved themselves generous patrons of the Jews.

Date
of 1-6

Chapter 2 furnishes the data for determining the approximate date of these stories, for the predictions culminate in an unmistakable allusion to the marriage between Antiochus Theos and Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus, in 248 b.c., and the references to the historical events of the period cease with the statement that the alliance between Syria and Egypt, thus consummated, was soon broken. The chief event, in the mind of the author, was the murder of Berenice and Antiochus by Laodice, his former wife, and the subsequent invasion of Syria by Ptolemy Euergetes, who reigned between 247 and 222 b.c. He was the strongest ruler of this period and extended the authority of Egypt through southwestern Asia. His kingdom is evidently represented by the strength of the iron and the Syrian kingdom by the miry clay of Daniel 2<sup>11</sup>. It is practically certain, therefore, that the author of these stories must have lived somewhere between 245 and 225 b.c., for if he had lived even to the latter part of the third century b.c.,

---

* Professor Torrey in Transactions of the Conn. Acad. of Arts and Sciences, XV, 241-82.

THE PROPHETS OF LATER JUDAISM

when Syria's growth in strength was as rapid as Egypt's decline, his estimate of the two powers would have been fundamentally different.

The method of the author of these stories was similar to that of the book of Jonah. It was to teach certain important truths by means of graphic and impressive stories. The allurements of Egypt and Antioch, and of Greek civilization in general, were a great source of temptation to the Jews, scattered as they were at this time throughout the known world. Each of these stories teaches its obvious and practical moral. They present, in very concrete form, the duty and the rewards of fidelity to the Jewish law, and of unswerving trust and loyalty to the God of their fathers. The temptations which came to Daniel and his friends were typical of those which came to the Jews of the period. The example of these heroes of the faith was undoubtedly a great source of inspiration to those who were thus tempted. Jehovah's superiority over heathen rulers and powers is also vividly set forth in the language of popular story.

That the early stories in chapters 1-6 made a profound impression on the Jews of the period is shown by the use that is made of them by the author of the remaining chapters of the book. He deliberately bound the two parts closely together, and was strongly influenced by the older models. Daniel's visions in 7-12 are distributed through the reigns of the same kings as are the stories in 1-6. The method of interpreting past history in the form of vision, first introduced in 2, is not only employed but further developed in chapters 7-12. In this way the history, beginning with the Babylonian period and culminating with the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, is traced with increasing detail in three distinct visions.

Most of the historical allusions can be definitely identified. In each vision the prediction culminates in a minute description of the impious character and pitiless persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes. Certain minor variations suggest that perhaps these were issued, not all at once, but in succession. The evidence points to the year 166 B.C. as their probable date. The Maccabean uprising, while alluded to in 11<sup>34</sup>, is not as yet regarded as of especial significance. Evidently the Hasideans or the party of the pious, to which the author belonged, had not yet allied themselves with Judas Maccabeus and his followers. There is also no reference to the great victories which resulted in the restoration of the temple service late in 165 B.C. Instead of the eastern expedition, during which Antiochus died (164 B.C.), the author predicts for him an Egyptian expedition, 11<sup>40-45</sup>, to which there is no reference in contemporary records. With the events of the year 166 B.C., when the author in all probability wrote, the minute detailed predictions suddenly ceased and instead only the most general descriptions of the victory of the saints and the institution of Jehovah's messianic rule are given.

The aim of the prophetic author of these visions was to keep alive the faith and hope of his persecuted countrymen and to inspire within them undying patience and courage. In the trying days before Judas and his followers unsheathed the sword, these were the only obstacles which deterred Antiochus from realizing his desire to stamp out the Jewish religion and hellenize the Israelitish race. The methods of this late prophet were very different from

Their teachings

Evidence
that 7-12 is based on 1-6

Date of 7-12

Aim of the author

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

those of an Isaiah or a Jeremiah, but in the perspective of history the value of his service cannot be overestimated, for he helped to keep alive the faith of his race and to preserve for humanity the inestimable heritage which had been intrusted to Judaism.

Zechariah
9-14

The authors of the two different parts of the book of Daniel belong to the party of the Hasideans or pious, the forerunners of the later Pharisees. Their point of view is pietistic and ecclesiastical. They taught that, if the nation was but loyal to the demands of the ceremonial law, Jehovah would in time surely intervene, and, by a great miracle, bring about the deliverance and vindication for which they so earnestly hoped and prayed. Fortunately, there is found in the Old Testament another prophet, whose writings throw a new light upon that supreme crisis in Israel's history, which resulted from the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes. The detailed reasons for concluding that the author of chapters 9-14, which are appended to the book of Zechariah, come from about the year 160 b.c. will be presented later. In this historic setting these otherwise obscure chapters find their clearest and most satisfactory interpretation. They are filled from beginning to end with the ideas and phrases, not only of the earlier but also of the later prophetic books. Above all, they breathe the martial spirit which, after lying dormant for four long centuries, was kindled anew in the breasts of the patriotic Jews by the cruel and unjust acts of Antiochus Epiphanes and the intrepid leadership of Judas Maccabeus. Only a prophet aroused by the spirit of the age could declare, in the name of Jehovah:

I will urge thy sons against the sons of Greece,
And I will make thee like the sword of a hero.

Jehovah of hosts shall defend them,
And they shall devour and tread down the slingstones,
They shall drink the blood of their foes like wine,
They shall be filled with it like the crevices of an altar,
And Jehovah their God will give them victory (9<sup>13, 15, 16</sup>).

Point of view of their author

The author of these stirring chapters was evidently in sympathy with the policy of Judas and rejoiced in the victories and in the new national spirit which had suddenly come to his race. He was also filled with bitter resentment against the apostate high priests, who, in the hour of peril, had betrayed their nation. He shared the bitter hatred for their heathen persecutors, which stirred the hearts of the Jewish patriots of the period. His pictures regarding the future are colored by this spirit, so that, in his closing chapter, he has surpassed even Joel in the lurid colors with which he has painted the fate of the impenitent heathen. At the same time, like the author of Daniel 7-12, he has a profound regard for that law, for which martyrs had already given their lives, and for Israel's ceremonial institutions, which he emphasized, even to the ignoring of moral obligations. In his intimate familiarity with Israel's past history and literature, in his passionate and in many ways narrow patriotism, in his zeal for the temple and its ritual, and in his boundless confidence in Jehovah's ability and willingness to interpose in the behalf of the chosen people, he is the incarnation of the spirit of this warlike age.

THE PROPHETS OF LATER JUDAISM

His
teachings

His theme is the certain and speedy and complete overthrow of the hostile heathen powers and the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom, with Jerusalem as its centre. Like earlier post-exilic prophets, he declares that this kingdom is to be universal, but that it is to be established by the sword. The rebellious are to be smitten with dire calamities, and those who share in its blessings must come to Jerusalem to pay homage to Jehovah, the Divine King, and to participate in the temple service. The prophecy does not voice the highest ideals reached by Israel's spiritual teachers, but it does represent, with marvellous fidelity, that peculiar type of Judaism which emerged from the Maccabean crisis and which, for the next few centuries, remained the hater and the hated of all the Gentile world.

This outline study of the character and work of the different prophets in the light of Israel's history demonstrates convincingly that Hebrew prophecy passed through several distinct stages. Its rise was gradual, but amidst the throes of the Assyrian and Babylonian crises it rapidly reached its zenith and then, from the period of the exile on, gradually declined. With the exception of the II Isaiah, the great prophets of Hebrew history came from the period before the exile. They were great because of the significance of the crisis which called them forth, because of the closeness of their contact with life, and because of the supreme unselfishness with which they took up their task.

Rise
and decline of
Hebrew
proph-
ets

Although some of them came from the humbler walks of life, they were, as a rule, the best educated men of their age. Some, like Hosea and Isaiah, were acquainted with books and in touch with the centres of learning. All were trained in the great school of experience. Their knowledge was not theoretical but practical. It included an exact and intimate acquaintance with their land and age, and with the political and social forces at work in Palestine, as well as in the larger world which encircled and largely determined the course of Israel's history. They also knew men and how to appeal to their feelings and wills with rare effectiveness.

Qualific-ations
of
the great
prophets

Their
attitude toward life and toward
God

Another striking characteristic of Israel's prophets was their keenness of insight. They were able to look beneath the surface and to see that which was essential and significant. Popular conclusions and conventional doctrines did not satisfy them. Rejecting the traditions of men, they looked, with open mind, to God for a newer and fuller revelation of the truths and principles which alone would guide them and their race through the great crises which confronted them. Thus they became effective teachers of men because they were the eager, alert disciples of the Highest. The truths and principles thus apprehended were so new, so obvious, and so convincing that each true prophet was absolutely sure of their divine origin. They felt that their own individuality was merged into the divine personality, and that when they spoke it was Jehovah's voice speaking through them. Hence it is easy to understand their impatience because of the blindness and folly of their fellow-countrymen, their almost frenzied zeal to point out the danger of a popular but false policy, and their eagerness to impress upon the people, by the use of every possible method, the vital truths which had been revealed to them.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Reasons why
the pre-exilic are superior
to the post-exilic
proph-
ets

In contrast to their successors, the pre-exilic prophets are great primarily because they were not dreamers but men of action; they lived in the present rather than the future; they appealed to men's wills rather than to their hopes, and they proclaimed principles rather than predictions. The present had for the majority of the post-exilic Jews little of interest or inspiration. Hence, they lived in the past and in the future. The result was that the prophet in time again became a seer. His message lost that practical, ethical, and spiritual quality which is the essence of true prophecy. When the prophets ceased to be preachers and became mere predictors, they lost their birthright. Not until John the Baptist appeared as the preacher of righteousness, as well as the herald of a new era, did prophecy win back again that forfeited birthright.

Universality of their message

Patriotic citizens of little Israel, keen of insight, eternally discontented with the imperfections of their race and age, prompt and fearless to act, unselfish in their devotion, firm believers in the justice and goodness of him who rules the universe, the true Hebrew prophets belonged to that kingdom of God which knows no bounds of race or time. As the first citizens of that eternal kingdom, they still stand as guides and teachers of the present as of the past.

VII

THE HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS

THE familiar terms Messiah and messianic are derived from the Hebrew word meaning to smear, to anoint. It was used to describe the anointing or consecrating of weapons of war, of sacred pillars, altars, the holy vessels of the temple, the ark, the tabernacle, and even the Holy Place. Persons as well as objects were also anointed and consecrated to their appointed tasks. Thus kings, like Saul, David, and Solomon, were publicly anointed; prophets, like Elisha, by the hand of Elijah; and priests, as they assumed the duties of their sacred office. The object or person thus anointed became a Messiah, in so far as the act symbolized consecration to a definite task. In each of these cases the anointing by oil represented the conferring of certain divine authority. If, as seems probable, the oil used in anointing was but the later substitute for the fat of the sacrificial victim, which was employed in the earlier rites, the historical content of the custom at once becomes clear. In primitive thought, by this act something of the sanctity and power of the Deity was thus imparted to the object or person upon whom the fat of the sacrifice rested.

In its narrower usage the term messianic is limited to those prophecies which describe the person or agent called and empowered to do a definite work and to realize the divine purpose in human history. In this more limited sense the messianic prophecies would include simply those which describe the work and character of the Messiah, whether the Messiah be an individual or a nation.

In its history and derivation, however, as well as in its popular use, the word messianic has a far broader application. To anoint in the technical sense was to set apart and divinely equip an object or individual for the realization of a definite task or purpose. The realization of that definite divine purpose in human history is, therefore, the essential element in Hebrew messianic prophecy, although it necessarily includes a description of the means and agencies by which this divine purpose is to be realized. Hence in its broader definition and use the term messianic comprises all those varied prophecies in the Old Testament and in late Jewish literature which describe the noble destiny that God has in store for the race and the different agents and agencies by which that destiny is to be realized.

Messianic prophecy in its broader and even in its narrower sense was by no means limited to the Hebrews. The same psychological tendencies which gave rise to the earlier forms of Israel's messianic hope were at work in the minds of other peoples. The desire to be delivered from want and oppres-

Deriva-
tion
and meaning of the term
messianic

Its narrower
and broader use

Messianic
prophecy among other nations

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

sion, the aspirations for national glory and prosperity, and the craving for peace and the sense of harmony with man and God, are as old as man. One of the best illustrations of early messianic prophecy is found in the literature of the Middle Egyptian kingdom. As has already been noted (p. 5), a certain prophet, Ipuwer, predicted in the presence of the king that the existing social and political organizations would be overthrown by foreign invaders and that frightful calamities would overtake all classes. Then a saviour would arise to restore the land. He would bring cooling to the flame. He would smite evil when he raised his arm against it. Many other such prophecies are found in Egyptian literature. The motive may have been thus tactfully to extol the achievements of the reigning monarch, or else to hold up before him and his people certain ideals which would inspire them to nobler achievements.

While traces of the hope of a golden era in the future occasionally appear, most ancient peoples believed that that ideal age lay in the past rather than in the future. The Egyptians themselves conceived of the early reign of Ra as the age of perfection. The Babylonians, Persians, and most of the peoples of southern Asia had their traditions of the days of the past when men and gods lived together on some mountain peak or mystical garden amidst conditions which were the realization of the fondest human ideals. The opening chapters of Genesis contain the Hebrew version of this ancient belief. It was Israel's prophets, however, who reversed this practically universal tendency, the logical outcome of which was pessimism regarding the present and future, and taught mankind that

The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first was made.

No subject in the wide realm of biblical literature and thought is less understood and more variously interpreted than messianic prophecy. The reasons for this confusion are many. Ordinarily these prophecies are approached from the point of view of the New Testament and with the methods of interpretation of the early Church. It is inevitable that this reversal of the historical method of study should obscure, rather than reveal, the true order of development. Most of the distinctly messianic prophecies are also anonymous, so that it is difficult to determine their date with assurance. Furthermore, the tendency was strong among the later Jewish editors of the Old Testament writings to project the ideals of their age back into the earliest periods of their history in order to secure for the many anonymous prophecies of a later age the authority of a Moses, an Isaiah, or a Jeremiah. The tendency was closely parallel to that which led them to attribute practically all of their laws to Moses, their Psalms to David, and their proverbs to Solomon.

Interpreted, as they usually are, in their present literary setting, these different prophecies give an entirely false conception of the historical development of Israel's messianic ideals. These messianic prophecies are also the product of many different tendencies. The result is that there are wide differences in detail between the representations of different passages and writers. Hence, messianic prophecy in its present order is kaleidoscopic and

The ancient and the prophetic idea
of the golden age

Difficulty in tracing the development of Israel's messianic
ideals

The resulting confusion

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS

leaves in the mind of the reader and student a confused rather than a definite impression. It is not strange, therefore, that the most widely divergent conclusions are reached by different interpreters, and that by some an undue authority is attributed to certain passages, while to the majority of the Bible students of to-day the messianic prophecies of the Old Testament have little significance.

The first step in tracing the development of Israel's messianic hopes is to study the teachings of the prophets whose writings can be definitely dated and to make these one of the bases for determining the dates of the anonymous prophecies. It is astonishing to find how few are the passages whose date is definitely fixed. As has been already noted, the pre-exilic prophets were preachers rather than predictors. Present political, social, and religious crises demanded their attention so completely that they had little time to devote to thoughts of the future except as they pointed out the consequences of mistaken policies or lines of conduct. Ezekiel was apparently the first of the prophets to turn his gaze largely to the future, and his prophecies are full of valuable suggestions regarding the messianic hopes of his race. Haggai and Zechariah, who spoke soon after the close of the Babylonian period likewise threw clear light on the popular hopes of their day. It is also possible to date, with reasonable certainty, Isaiah 40-66, the book of Malachi, the prophecy of Joel, the book of Daniel, and Zechariah 9-14, and in the later period the different sections of the book of Enoch and the Psalms of Solomon. Another important aid is the close connection between the historical background and the different phases in the development of Israel's messianic hopes. With these guides and the light of internal evidence, it is possible to determine approximately the period from which the important anonymous prophecies come. On the basis of this chronological classification of the messianic prophecies, the tracing of the unfolding of Israel's hopes regarding the future is comparatively simple and definite.

Among the many different influences which gave rise to messianic prophecy one of the most important was the ideas inherited from the pre-Hebrew Semitic past. These were a part of the atmosphere in which the prophets and their readers lived and thought. The old Semitic tradition of the contest of the gods against Tiamat, the personification of Chaos, in its naturalized and Hebraized form, was constantly moulding popular belief, not only regarding the past, but also regarding the future. Out of this ancient soil largely sprang the later beliefs that Jehovah would again come as an invincible Warrior or Judge or Saviour, to put down the powers of evil and to institute a new régime of righteousness and peace. The belief that the goal of all history and life was a state of blessedness, in which men should live in harmony with each other and the divine purpose, was undoubtedly largely suggested and intensified by the current traditions regarding the primitive day when certain favored individuals lived in Paradise together with God or with the gods of early Semitic religion.

Many of the messianic hopes of Israel, as well as those of other early peoples, can be traced to universal psychological tendencies. The sense of helplessness under cruel and unjust oppression inevitably gave rise to a pow-

Dating
the messianic
prophecies

Influences which gave rise to messianic
prophecy; inherited traditions

Psychological tendencies

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

erful longing for a mighty deliverer to crush the oppressor and right the wrong. Present adversity and discord naturally begat hopes of a time when peace and prosperity should prevail. These hopes sprang up especially in the minds of a race who believed that a just and benign God rules the universe. Moreover, Israel, in its later periods of distress, ever had before it in memory, and still further idealized by tradition, the victories and glories of the Hebrew empire under David and Solomon. What had been they hoped would again be in larger measure. This Davidic motif is one which constantly recurs throughout the messianic prophecies. It was closely akin to that patriotic motif, which Israel again shared with every virile, conquering nation. These national ambitions are woven into the very warp and woof of Israel's messianic prophecies.

Ethical
and missionary
ideals

Under the influence of the preaching of the great ethical prophets of the eighth and seventh centuries B.C., more distinctly moral and religious motifs begin to appear. The pictures of the ideal ruler and state are presented with the practical aim of inspiring all members of the community to strive for their realization. In time, also, the missionary ideal appears to take the place of the narrow national ambitions which had characterized the earlier messianic prophecies. It is not strange, therefore, that with the blending of these many different tendencies in many different minds Israel's messianic ideals should assume very diverse forms and pass through innumerable transformations.

The three distinct types of messianic
prophecy: (1)
Kingly
and national

Out of this seemingly hopeless confusion it is possible to distinguish three distinct types of messianic hope. The first was kingly and national. It anticipated a glorious future for the nation Israel. It was also thoroughly concrete. The object of its hope was a conquering king like David, who should overthrow and subdue Israel's foes and build up a world-wide empire. In time its ideals became more ethical and spiritual, but from first to last it anticipated a material kingdom, with its centre at Jerusalem and with the heathen nations simply as subjects of victorious Israel. It was a kingdom to be established and maintained by the sword. It was the ideal of the warrior, of the statesman, and of the popular patriot of the earlier days, as it was of the common people and the Zealots far down in the Roman period.

(2)
Apocalyptic
and catastrophic

The second type of messianic hope was apocalyptic and catastrophic. Its future kingdom was to be established, not by the sword of a Davidic king, but by the hand of a Divine Warrior. The heathen were to be overthrown, but not through the personal activity of the Israelites. Its watchword was the Day of Jehovah, which was popularly conceived of as a definite time, somewhere in the future, when Jehovah himself would appear and, by miraculous means, overthrow the hostile, wicked, heathen powers and vindicate his people, giving them the central place in the universal kingdom which he would thus by his might establish. This conception did not entirely preclude the presence of a messianic king, to rule as his viceroy, but Jehovah himself was the chief figure, both in establishing and maintaining his sovereignty. Although we are still ignorant regarding many of the phases of the messianic and kindred hopes entertained by primitive Semitic peoples, it would seem clear, in the light of the facts already known, that this type of Israel's popular hope was largely inherited from its Semitic ancestors. At the same time it was thoroughly naturalized and underwent many transformations during the later periods of Jewish history. It was the type of faith which appealed strongly to that mysticism which is characteristic of the oriental mind. It taught passivity rather than action. It probably appealed in the earliest times to the dreamers and pietists of ancient Israel, as it did to the Essenes and, to a great extent, to the Pharisees of the Roman period.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS

The third type may be designated as ethical, spiritual, and universalistic. The goal of its hope was an ideal state, in which king and people should be governed in all their thoughts and acts by the principles of love and service. It was to be a kingdom in which the revealed will of Jehovah should be fully recognized and realized. It anticipated no fundamental change in the political order, but a far deeper transformation in the wills and the minds of men. It anticipated no miracle except that which comes when men yield their wills to the divine will. Its exponents, Israel's true prophets, taught that its consummation should come, not in some far-distant day, but the moment that Jehovah's people should respond to his just demands. As in time their vision broadened, they also conceived of Jehovah's rule as becoming universal, with no distinctions of race or faith; and they taught that this final consummation would come simply through the faithful, unselfish service of Jehovah's prophet-nation.

Apparently from the very beginning of Israel's history these three distinct types of messianic hopes were present. It is clear that Moses stood as the exponent of the ethical, prophetic type which sought to realize Jehovah's purposes in the present and in the life of the individual. The primitive injunctions, which the earliest traditions attribute to Moses, bear witness to this fact. It is, however, the first type of the messianic hope which finds expression in Israel's poetry, as, for example, the song of Deborah and especially the so-called "Blessing of Jacob" (Gen. 49) and the oracles of Balaam, which come from the days of the united kingdom. They voice the exultation over victories secured, and the belief that these are but an earnest of the still more glorious conquests in store for Jehovah's chosen people and their king. The same belief is expressed in the form of a promise to David and to his descendants. The conditional form, however, in which it is cast implies that it comes from the days of the divided kingdom, when the Assyrian and Babylonian war-clouds had already begun to overshadow Israel's horizon.

From the sermons of Amos, Isaiah, and Zephaniah, it is clear that, in their day, the apocalyptic or catastrophic type of messianic hope already occupied a large place in the popular mind. Against this misleading faith, which was lacking in ethical content, and inculcated a spirit of passivity, these, the true prophets, earnestly set their faces. True, they retained the popular watchword, the Day of Jehovah, but they plainly declared that this was not to be a day of victory and glorious vindication for Jehovah's chosen people, but a day of well-deserved judgment and humiliation. They also taught that that day was not to come in a moment, nor through miraculous means, but through the agency of the Assyrian conquerors, who were already advancing toward the kingdoms of Israel and Judah. They also taught that this divine judgment was but a means to an end, and that end was to lead Jehovah's people

(3) Ethical
and universal s

Earliest messianic
hopes

During
the days of the divided Hebrew
kingdoms

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

to do, as well as to know, what was the divine will. Later editors have supplemented the sermons of these great pre-exilic prophets by passages which voice both the first and the second type of messianic hope. But the evidence of the undisputed passages leaves little doubt that the prophets themselves had no sympathy with these lower, material phases of the messianic ideal. They believed and consistently taught that there was but one supreme King, and that was Jehovah; that victory came, not by the sword or the hand of men, but in accordance with the divine purpose, and that the ultimate goal was not a kingdom with bounds extending to the end of the then-known world, but the rule of God, supreme in the hearts of men.

The destruction of Jerusalem, and the mighty transformations which came into the life of the Jews as a result of that event, exerted a powerful influence upon the development of Israel's messianic ideals. Ezekiel, the great prophet of the exile, represents so nearly the popular point of view that it is now possible to follow this development with definite assurance. His predictions regarding the future are an interesting blending of the kingly and the apocalyptic types of the messianic hope. The first problem was whether the nation should be restored to its former home in Palestine. To this question he answered, Yes, in the strongest possible terms. In its behalf Jehovah would perform a great miracle. Not only should the dead nation be raised again to life, but Jehovah, like a shepherd, would gather his scattered flock and restore them to their homes. In time also he would gather all their heathen foes and completely overthrow them. In Ezekiel the apocalyptic type of messianic hope found its first great prophetic exponent.

Ezekiel also declared that Israel and Judah would again be united under a Davidic prince, who should rule over his people forever. It is true that, in the prophet's later portrait of the restored temple and community (40-48) the Davidic prince is assigned a very secondary part, but Ezekiel apparently first voiced the hope, which is reiterated in ever stronger terms in the anonymous prophecies which come from out the gloom of the Babylonian exile. They all bear the imprint of that great catastrophe, and they doubtless each contributed fuel to that flame of patriotic hope which burned so fiercely in the minds of Haggai and Zechariah, and those who with them rebuilt the second temple. The restoration of the Davidic house seemed to the Jewish patriots of this period absolutely indispensable to the realization of their nation's destiny. The liberation of Jehoiachin, 561 B.C., and the presence of descendants of the Davidic reigning house encouraged the people in this hope. Even as in the hour of their humiliation and oppression at the hands of the Philistines, David had come forth to lead his discouraged people to freedom and conquest, so the unknown author of the little prophecy in Micah 5<sup>2, 4</sup> declares that another descendant of the same illustrious family shall rise and build up a kingdom, which shall extend to the ends of the earth.

The horrors of Assyrian and Babylonian conquest, the selfishness, and fatal mistakes and cowardice of the later kings of Judah, and the pain and humiliations of the exile, as well as the noble social and ethical ideals of the great pre-exilic prophets, lie back of the famous messianic passages found in Isaiah 9<sup>1-7</sup> and 11<sup>1-10</sup>. Here, also, the higher kingly ideal established by Josiah is

Eze-
kiel's predictions of a glorious national restoration

Hopes of deliv-erance
through a Da-vidic prince

The ideals
of Isaiah
9<sup>1-7</sup>
and 11<sup>1-10</sup>

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS

blended in these wonderful portraits of a ruler who shall come from the deposed dynasty of David, and who shall not only establish a world-wide dominion, but who shall rule in the spirit of justice and God-given wisdom, and who shall bring to his subjects and to all mankind that peace and prosperity and happiness which for countless ages has been the dream and hope of suffering humanity. In these passages the type of kingly, messianic prophecy attained to its noblest expression and became a permanent ideal for all who rule their fellow-men.

The prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah record the culmination and the sudden extinction of the kingly Davidic type of messianic hope. The immediate background was the seeming collapse of the Persian kingdom, and the promise which this event gave of an opportunity for the Jews again to secure their freedom. The hopes centred about the person of Zerubbabel, then governor of Judah and scion of the house of David. These hopes were strengthened by the consciousness in the minds of the Judean community that, in rebuilding the temple, they were again winning Jehovah's favor, and the belief that, with his presence in their midst, they were invincible. The sermons of Haggai and Zechariah indicate clearly that these earnest prophets of the second temple firmly believed and taught that Zerubbabel would realize the popular hopes which still gathered about the house of David and that Jerusalem should speedily become the capital of a great and powerful kingdom.

History is silent as to whether the crown, prepared at Zechariah's suggestion, was ever placed on the head of Zerubbabel. This silence, however, tells even more effectively than written words the story of disappointed hopes. The complete absence in the literature of the next few centuries of any reference to the Davidic hope is equally suggestive. Descendants of the house of David doubtless survived, but apparently not until the beginning of the Roman period, in the Psalms of Solomon, is this kingly Davidic hope revived.

The effect of this tragic disillusionment upon the faithful patriots in the Judean community is recorded in the eighth chapter of Zechariah. Their belief in Jehovah's ultimate restoration of his people was unshaken. As their hopes in a Davidic deliverer were disappointed, they transferred them to Jehovah, their Divine King. Henceforth in the literature of the next two or three centuries he figures more and more as the one who will gather and, in person, lead back his people. He it is who will give them victory over their cruel foes and vindicate and ultimately exalt them to a position of universal world-rulership.

The majority of the messianic prophecies of this period are of the catastrophic type. Jehovah, by some great signal deliverance, is to fulfil the hopes of his people. Sometimes he figures as the Divine Warrior, going out to meet the foes of his chosen people and executing vengeance upon the heathen. Sometimes he is the Divine Judge, assembling all nations before him, condemning the proud, arrogant sinners within the Judean community, as well as their heathen allies. The hopes of this period are for the most part nationalistic. Jehovah's kingdom is to be a material one, with its centre at Jerusalem.

Predictions
of Haggai
and Zechariah

The disillusion-
ment

The effect

The
new type
of
hope

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The
missionary
ideal

In certain of these prophecies, however, a new note appears. Zechariah voiced it in the prediction that many peoples and strong nations should come to seek Jehovah at Jerusalem. In the thought of these prophets the temple doors were at last opened to receive even the hated heathen who should come to them. It was the II Isaiah, the great prophet of the restoration, who first proclaimed Israel's world-wide mission and formulated most fully and nobly the messianic purpose to be realized by his nation in the life of humanity. With him Israel's messianic prophecy reached its zenith. While he echoed the current beliefs of his day that his nation should be restored, and fulfil its noble destiny, he declared that that restoration was not because of any previous promises, nor because of the deserts of the nation, but because its services were absolutely essential, if the divine purpose, which had been gradually revealed through the ages, was to be fully realized.

The ideal of service

Taking the messianic ideal of the pre-exilic prophets, the II Isaiah interprets it into universal terms and makes it concrete by painting in immortal colors the portrait of Jehovah's ideal servant. He taught that all the experiences of Israel's past, its victories and its sufferings, had been but the training of the servant nation. Recognizing the disappointments and humiliations and sufferings under which his nation was still crushed, he interpreted, with divinely given insight, the significance of sufferings, if it be but voluntarily and nobly borne. He proclaimed that Israel's highest ideal was service—service not only for themselves but for their hated heathen foes. Clearly he showed them, in his portrait of the servant, how it is possible for them to transform the humiliation and suffering of which they were then the victims into potent factors in the salvation of mankind.

The new interpretation
of suffering

From the days of Hosea the prophets had declared that Jehovah was ever eager and ready to save the penitent. Hence what was required to save men was simply to arouse in them a true appreciation of their own guilt and to turn them in contrition to God. The voluntary, patient suffering of the innocent for the guilty was, and ever will be, the most powerful influence upon the minds and wills of the ignorant and unrepentant. The prophet also declared that victory should, in the end, come to those who were willing to make the great sacrifice and faithfully to serve Jehovah, even though they be despised by their own generation and suffer all that man's hatred could heap upon them. In his portrait of the suffering servant of Jehovah, the great prophet of the restoration presents a fundamentally different ideal than that which had been held up before his race in the preceding ages. The Davidic prince with his conquering sword sinks, by contrast, into insignificance. The kingdom of the prophet's vision is hemmed in by no racial barriers and its central victorious figure is neither a warrior nor a king, but a heroic sufferer destined to be crowned by later generations simply because he had proved himself a faithful servant of God and his fellow-men.

Its immediate application

It is evident, from the prophet's sermons as a whole, that he was not merely describing what the distant future would bring forth, but appealing directly to the afflicted, scattered members of his race. Opening the eyes of the pious and humble ones in the Judean community to the divine significance of their loyalty and appealing to the exiles to leave behind the opportunities and material luxuries of Babylon and Egypt, and to come back and share in the seemingly hopeless task of making Jerusalem indeed a city that would win for Jehovah the homage of all the world.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ISRAEL'S MESSIANIC IDEALS

Devoted patriots like Nehemiah in part realized this ideal of service, but for the great majority of the race it proved too high; the contrast was too great between its spiritual demands and the material and nationalistic hopes that for generations had filled their minds. Hence during the closing years of the Persian and the succeeding Greek period there were as many different currents of messianic hope as there were parties in Judaism. The psalmists who speak through Psalms 96–100 saw ever more clearly the outlines of the kingdom of God embracing all races and founded on the eternal principles of justice, mercy, and good-will toward men; but the patriots who rallied about Judas and the other Maccabean leaders apparently still clung to the old hope of a world-judgment, in which all those who did not pay homage to Jehovah at his sanctuary should be mercilessly cut off (Zech. 14).

As the theological teachers of later Judaism developed still further Ezekiel's conception of Jehovah as a transcendent God, far removed from contact with earthly things, the intermediary angelic beings occupied an ever increasingly important place in their thought. The belief that Jehovah himself would come as a warrior to conquer and to judge their foes and to reign over them as king seemed inconsistent with their idea of the Deity. On the other hand, the old Davidic messianic hope did not satisfy. The result was that there sprang up a belief in an angelic Messiah, not a man, but one like a son of man, who should come on the clouds and gather together the martyrs who had died and the faithful still living and thus establish the kingdom of the righteous on the earth (cf. Introd. to § 212). In the book of Daniel this angelic Messiah is identified with Israel's guardian angel Michael. In the Similitudes of Enoch (Enoch 37–71) and IV Esdras the Son of Man is definitely identified with the Messiah. He is described as pre-existent, and the conception of his transcendent character and eternal rule is further developed. In these portraits one recognizes the influence of the ancient Semitic beliefs which in this later age occupied a large place in the thought of Judaism. These later hopes are, on the whole, more exalted and spiritual than the early kingly messianic ideals. They rise from the temporal and material and national to the contemplation of that which is eternal and universal; they also hold up to mankind the hope of individual immortality, and yet they are far removed from the simple, ethical ideals of the pre-exilic prophets and of the II Isaiah, who appealed to the wills and minds of men and who sought to realize in the life of their nation the principles of justice and mercy and of love to God and man.

As the reverence for the written words grew, as it did rapidly in the later period, the Jewish teachers felt under compulsion to accept as authoritative all the various types of messianic prophecy which they found included in their Scriptures. The task which they attempted was impossible of achievement. The result was inevitable and hopeless confusion. As a matter of fact different parties singled out different types of messianic prophecy to which to pin their faith. Under the grinding heel of Rome, the Zealots and many

Various types of later messianic hope

Belief in the angelic Messiah

Later revival of the Davidic hopes

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

of the common people naturally reverted to the old nationalistic and kingly messianic hopes. They looked for a son of David who would free them from their oppressors and build up for the Jews a world-wide kingdom.

The Pharisees and the Essenes apparently fixed their faith on the more transcendental, apocalyptic, and catastrophic type of messianic prophecy, and prayed ardently for the day when one like a son of man should appear on the clouds of heaven to inaugurate the reign of the saints. It would seem clear that the great majority of the nation had almost lost sight of the simple ethical ideals of the early prophets, and of the II Isaiah's matchless portrait of the suffering, yet victorious, servant of Jehovah. And yet in the light of history it was clear that the latter stood as Israel's noblest ideal, in comparison with which all else was but a misleading will-o'-the-wisp.

Dominance
of the apocalyptic
type of hope Jesus'
attitude toward
the messianic hopes
of his race
The older sources imbedded in the Gospels of the New Testament tell with rare simplicity and beauty of how Jesus of Nazareth, God's Anointed, grasped the eternal purpose and, as the Lover and Teacher of men, entered upon his divine task of saving the few whom he was able to touch directly, and through them all mankind. Accepting the teachings, the methods, and the aims of Israel's noblest prophets and sages, he devoted himself wholly and completely to saving those who were lost. The fanciful speculations and hopes which largely occupied the attention of the leaders of his race he put aside with the simple statement, The future no man knoweth. It was inevitable that later generations of Christians—the great majority of whom had been brought up at the feet of the rabbis—should associate with Jesus many of the ideals which seemed supremely vital to later Judaism. The actual Jesus of history, however, failed completely to satisfy the ideals of the Jewish leaders of his day. This failure confirms the testimony of the oldest Gospels that he himself rejected those ideals and went back to the simple eternal teachings of the true prophets. In realizing and more than realizing the lofty ideal of the suffering servant of Jehovah, in fulfilling—that is, bringing to fuller and more complete expression—the noblest teachings of the earlier law and prophets, and in revealing through his own life the very character and will of God himself, he became not only Israel's true Messiah, but the universal Saviour of men.

VIII

THE LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

It is a significant fact that all the writings of the pre-exilic and the majority of those of the exilic and the post-exilic prophets were originally uttered or written in poetic form. Three explanations of this fact may be suggested. The first is that from earliest times the oracles of the seer and prophet were expressed in the form of poetry. This tradition had undoubtedly been firmly established long before the days of Amos. The second reason is more fundamental. Poetry alone was fitted to express that blending of exalted thought and strong emotion which constituted the prophet's message. Finally, the finished, attractive, poetic form in which the prophetic oracles were cast contributed greatly to their effectiveness in appealing to the intelligence and feeling of the people whom the prophet wished to influence. The prophets were poets under the compulsion of the great truths that were struggling within them for utterance, but they were also poets by intention, as the careful development of their figures clearly indicates.

The poetry of the prophets, like all Hebrew poetry, is characterized by two and sometimes three types of rhythm. The first is parallelism, or rhythm of ideas—that is, the second line of each couplet repeats the same thought in similar or contrasting terms or else develops still further the idea presented in the first line. To the oriental ear repetition of thought was as pleasing as is rhyme to the occidental. This rhythm of ideas, which the Hebrews shared with most other ancient oriental peoples, is an invaluable aid in interpreting the prophetic writings, for, if the meaning of one line is not clear, it is usually illuminated by the other member of the couplet.

Hebrew like English poetry is also characterized by symmetry in the number of beats or accented syllables in each succeeding line. The three-beat measure was the one most commonly employed by the prophets. Poetry written in this measure was usually clear, straightforward, energetic, and rarely cumbersome or involved. The two-beat measure was used occasionally to express great excitement, as, for example, when the approach of an enemy was announced. The formal four-beat measure is also almost equally rare. It was apparently employed for variety or in formal argumentation. The most common measure, next to the three-beat, was the five-beat. Ordinarily it consisted of a three-beat followed by a two-beat measure. It was used to express strong emotion, whether of sorrow, as the mourners wailed over the bier of the dead, or of joy and exultation, shot through with deep emotion, as

Reasons why the prophets spoke in the language of poetry

Characteristics of Hebrew poetry: parallelism

Regular measured beats

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

when a prophet proclaimed the glorious future, which Jehovah, in his love, was preparing for his people.

Strophic rhythm The third characteristic of Hebrew poetry, which appears occasionally in the writings of the prophets, was the rhythm of succeeding strophe. Often there is the same repeating or contrasting or expanding parallelism between succeeding strophes, as between the succeeding lines in a couplet (cf., for a fuller treatment of the characteristics of Hebrew poetry, Vol. V, in loco).

Rhythm of words In addition to these fundamental characteristics of Hebrew poetry, many of the prophets rendered their messages still more effective by a careful use of onomatopoetic words, in which the Hebrew language is especially rich, so that every sound which reached the ear drove home the truths the prophets wished to teach. Alliteration, assonance, and even rhyme were sometimes employed.

Poetic figures Their figures were also drawn from nature or else the familiar life of the people whom they addressed. Palestine, with its striking contrast, with its dashing storms and tempests, its hot siroccos, its snowy peaks, its borders of burning sands and roaring sea, with its varied fauna and flora, furnished rich materials for the use of the prophet-poets. Most of the prophets were also masters of the familiar figures, such as the metaphor, the simile, and metonymy; but their sermons are especially rich in the figures of feeling, such as the apostrophe, personification, interrogation, and exclamation.

Brevity of statement In the earlier prophets the reader is impressed by the remarkable brevity and compression which characterizes the prophetic addresses. This characteristic was probably an inheritance from the ancient seer who cast his oracle in brief and often in epigrammatic form. A word, a simile, often simply an exclamation from the lips of these Hebrew prophets expresses more than would a dozen sentences in the mouth of a modern orator.

The preservation of the pre-exilic prophecies The pre-exilic, in contrast to the post-exilic prophets, depended on the spoken rather than the written word. With them writing appears to have been only one of the many ways which they employed to convey their teachings. It is a question whether Amos would have ever resorted to writing had he not been prevented from speaking to the people of Northern Israel. The present form of Hosea's and Isaiah's writings indicate that they paid little attention to editing them. Doubtless hundreds of the sermons delivered by the pre-exilic prophets were never committed to writing. Those which have been recorded are in most cases only fragmentary. It is not certain that these early prophets themselves wrote down their sermons. The one definite bit of testimony, that of Jeremiah 36, indicates that they were sometimes at least dictated to a scribe. In the case of Jeremiah this was done many years after they had been delivered. In all probability most of the pre-exilic prophetic writings owe their existence to the devotion of the faithful disciples of the prophets who, like Baruch, sought to preserve the writings of their masters.

The editing and revising of the prophetic writings To the disciples of the prophets and to later editors is also probably due the present order of the pre-exilic writings. The longer books, like Isaiah and Jeremiah, give evidence of repeated editing. The profound regard for the sanctity of the written word, which characterized the later scribes, seems to have been unknown in the earlier period. Later prophetic editors felt perfect liberty, and often under obligation to adapt the earlier oracles to the needs and point of view of their own age. As a rule, the greater the authority of the prophet the more thorough the later revision of his original writings. A convincing illustration of this tendency is furnished by a comparison of the Greek and Hebrew versions of the book of Jeremiah. The Hebrew is fully one-eighth longer than the Greek version. In a few instances the Greek text may represent an abridgment of the longer original, but in most cases the Hebrew has been clearly expanded by the additions of later scribes.

LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

Detailed comparisons of the texts of the same passage as, for example, Isaiah 2<sup>1-4</sup> and Micah 4<sup>1-7</sup> reveal, in practically every case where such duplication occurs, variations, due to errors or else to the freedom with which the early scribes treated their text. This evidence, which is confirmed by many similar duplicates in the Psalms and other Old Testament writings, proves beyond a shadow of doubt, that many variations from the original have crept into our Hebrew text, and that one of the most important tasks of modern biblical scholarship is, with the aid of available guides, to restore as far as possible this original text. At the same time it is even more essential that this restoration should not be done arbitrarily, but conservatively and in accordance with established principles.

These variations from the original text assume many different forms, according to the causes which gave rise to them. Many are due simply to the errors of copyists. Sometimes a word or clause is repeated; sometimes the eye of the scribe passed to a similar word occurring later in the sentence, with the result that the intervening words were left out or else introduced at another place in the text; sometimes the scribe mistook similar Hebrew words or divided the letters differently from the original. In some cases the original copy was obliterated; in other cases the errors are due to the attempt of the scribes to restore a broken or confused text. In their eagerness to preserve all the writings of a prophet, later scribes often incorporated marginal notes left by some earlier copyist. Frequently, when an unfamiliar Hebrew word was used, a scribe has added, in the text, its better-known equivalent. Often explanatory notes are incorporated in the text in order to make the meaning clear. In other cases the text is expanded by the repetition of words and phrases suggested by the context. Many of the variations between the Hebrew and Greek texts of Jeremiah are due to this tendency. One of the chief tendencies which gave rise to later additions was, as has already been noted, a desire to adjust, for example, a prophecy of denunciation and destruction to the needs of a later and more hopeful age. Much of the present book of Isaiah consists of additions of this type which clearly reflect the exilic and post-exilic point of view. Not a little of the obscurity and consequent neglect and misunderstanding of the prophetic books is due to these causes.

It would seem that most of the pre-exilic books passed through at least five different stages in their literary history. The first was the fuller verbal form, in which the prophecy was first delivered. The second was its literary form, as recorded by the prophet or his amanuensis. The third stage was its revision by later prophets to adapt it to the point of view of their age. In the fourth stage it was supplemented by minor scribal notes. The last stage, which really began when the prophecy was committed to writing, represents

Later errors and additions

Causes of scribal errors

Literary history of the prophetic books

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

the transformations due to the errors of copyists. Some of the earlier prophetic writings were subject to this later influence for fully a thousand years before the work of the Massoretic editors insured a reasonably stable text.

Each textual problem must be considered by itself, and yet there are certain general guides which aid in distinguishing between that which is primary and that which is secondary. Among the more important evidences of additions to the original text are: (1) variations from the prophet's characteristic vocabulary and literary style; (2) words or clauses which interrupt the logical sequence or else are very loosely connected with the context; (3) words which destroy the regular metrical structure of the verse; (4) wide variations in thought and teaching from those contained in the sections unquestionably genuine; (5) allusions to the events of an age subsequent to that of the original prophet; (6) reflections of the ideas and interests of a later age; and (7) obvious products of the scribal tendency to repeat, expand, or explain words or phrases found in the original text. Followed with care and sanity, these indices point the way to a translation which is certainly far nearer the original than those based simply on the traditional Hebrew text in its present corrupt form.

As a rule, the titles of the different prophecies come from the hands of later scribes. The prophets and their contemporaries knew well who was the author of a given prophecy and therefore there was no need of a superscription. It was not until the name of a prophet was beginning to be forgotten that the demand for titles and superscriptions arose. Jeremiah and Ezekiel were the first prophets who began to date their individual prophecies. In the earlier days questions of authorship and date were evidently regarded as of little importance, as long as the prophet's message was imparted to his people. The result is that the few meagre titles which have been preserved aid little in determining the dates of the pre-exilic prophetic writings. As in the case of many other Old Testament books, the student is dependent almost entirely, in determining the date, upon internal evidence, that is, upon the characteristics of literary style, upon allusions to historical events, and upon the type of thought and theological belief presented in each writing. While the testimony of internal evidence is not always decisive, it is absolutely trustworthy, for it is the testimony of the prophetic writers themselves.

The prophecies of Amos, the oldest prophetic addresses preserved in the Old Testament, are not the crude products of a primitive stage, but are among the noblest examples of the prophet's literary skill. The book itself falls naturally into three general divisions. The first, chapters 1 and 2, is the introduction and contains a group of brief oracles of judgment directed first against Israel's hereditary foes, and then culminating in a grim, relentless oracle against Northern Israel itself. The second division, including chapters 3-6, is the main body of the book. It is in the form of a judicial charge against the different guilty classes in the nation. These charges are supplemented by arguments, exhortations, lamentations, and warnings. A clear-cut logic characterizes each section, but the prophet frequently reverts to an earlier theme in order to develop it more thoroughly, so that the division as a whole contains a series of cycles of woe, condemnation, and doom. The third

Evidences of variations or later additions

History
of the titles and su-perscrip-tions

Content of the book of Amos

LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

division, 7–9, consists of visions, in which, by means of graphic pictures, the same messages of judgment and warning are effectively reiterated and illustrated.

Amos's literary style is calm, judicial, logical, and supremely forceful. His figures are exceedingly varied, and are drawn, for the most part, from the shepherd life with which he and his hearers were most familiar. While he uses these figures freely, there is a marvellous concreteness and vividness in his utterance which left no doubt in the minds of his audience as to whom they were addressed and what the prophet wished to say. The whole is transfused with strong emotion, which is the outgrowth of Amos's own personal feeling and experience.

The sermons of Hosea fall, naturally, into two general divisions. The first, 1–3, contains the prophet's earlier addresses, which were based on his own tragic private experience. The second, 4–14, consists of extracts from different sermons, probably delivered after the death of Jereboam II in 740, and before Tiglath-pileser IV invaded Northern Israel in 735 B.C. Impassioned denunciation and exhortation take the place of the calmer judicial arraignments found in the book of Amos. The language is that of the heart and feelings rather than of the logical mind. In originality and boldness of figure they are surpassed by no other prophetic writings. Exclamation, apostrophe, and interrogation are employed with great effectiveness, but the style is often obscure because it lacks logical unity and depends for expression largely on gesture and intonation and the deeper currents of feeling, which inevitably escape the modern reader.

Hosea's contemporary, the young Isaiah of Jerusalem, was the recognized prince of prophetic orators. The rich storehouse of illustration inherited from Israel's past was at his ready command. He was in touch with every side of his nation's life. Supreme crises spurred him on to heroic diction. He also spoke with an assurance, which was in part the product of his birth and training. He blends the literary strength of Amos and Hosea, for he has the judicial logic of the former and much of the feeling of the latter. His sentences are like sledge-hammer blows, struck with precision and in rapid succession, breaking down before him all opposition.

Unfortunately the prophecies of Isaiah are not arranged, at present, in chronological order. The book has evidently been frequently edited and supplemented. This repeated re-editing is one of the many testimonials of the esteem with which the prophet was regarded by later generations. Not only were the writings of the II Isaiah (40–66) added, but also shorter appendices after every important division. The result is that the book is more than twice as large as when it came from the prophet.

Isaiah's original prophecies are found in the first thirty-nine chapters. These fall naturally into eight or nine divisions. The general introduction, chapter 1, is followed by a group of social sermons, 2–5, to which also belongs 9<sup>8</sup>–10<sup>4</sup>. These represent the first period of Isaiah's activity, from 740–735 B.C. The second stage of Isaiah's work, which was in connection with the crisis of 734 B.C., is recorded in 7 and 8. These chapters are introduced by an account of the prophet's call, in 6, and are supplemented by the messianic prophecies

Amos's literary style

Hosea's sermons

Strength of Isaiah's diction

History of the book of Isaiah

Its contents

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

in 9<sup>1-7</sup>, 11, 12. The next group contains a collection of foreign prophecies, 13-23, of various dates. Some of these are from Isaiah, but the majority are, apparently, from otherwise unknown later prophets. Chapters 24-27 are a very late apocalypse, describing Jehovah's final judgment of the world. The original sermons in 28-31 were delivered in connection with the crisis of 701 b.c. Chapters 34, 35 contain another post-exilic apocalypse. The historical chapters, 36, 37, tell of Isaiah's work in the fourth and last great period of his activity, while 38 and 39 record certain events preceding the invasion of Sennacherib in 701 b.c.

Micah's proph-
ecies

Isaiah's younger colleague Micah had the direct, resistless style of Amos. With all the strength of his vigorous invective he attacked certain definite evils in Judah. His original addresses are found in chapters 1-3. To these later editors have appended, in 4 and 5, strongly contrasting predictions regarding the future deliverance and glory of Jerusalem. Evidently these chapters were written after the Babylonian exile. The third division of the book, 6<sup>1-7</sup>, is in the same direct, forceful style as the opening chapters and deals with the evils which flourished in Israel's early history. The closing section, chapters 7<sup>9-30</sup>, like many of the psalms of the Psalter, reflects the trials and hopes of the post-exilic Judean community.

Prophecy of Nahum

The little prophecy of Nahum has all the vigor and strenuousness which characterized the prophets of the Assyrian period. It deals with but one theme, the coming fall of Nineveh, but the first chapter has evidently been supplemented by extracts from an alphabetical psalm describing Jehovah's avenging might. The original prophecy portrays in most vivid imagery the advance of Nineveh's foes and the resulting terror and confusion within the city. It concludes with the songs of rejoicing which will be sung over the city's downfall by the nations which, like Judah, had experienced the untold horrors of Assyrian conquest.

Zeph-aniah's
note of warning

The brief prophecy of Zephaniah is a clarion cry of warning and a call to reform. In its five-beat, measured stanzas the reader feels the terror inspired by the advance of the dread Scythians and the greater horror which the true prophets felt as they contemplated the heathen practices which had been introduced into Judah during the reign of Manasseh. Through the prophet's eyes one may, in imagination, follow the devastating advance of the dread invaders and, at the same time, see in these events the vindication of Jehovah's justice and the working out of his eternal, benign purpose.

Content of his book

The prophecy falls into four divisions. The first chapter describes Jehovah's day of judgment upon Judah; the second, its effect upon Judah's powerful neighbors. The third division, 3<sup>1-7</sup>, analyzes the crimes of the different classes in Jerusalem; while the last division, 3<sup>8-20</sup>, contains a post-exilic supplement abounding in promises of national restoration and glory.

History of the book of Jeremiah

The book of Jeremiah is the most complex of all the Old Testament prophecies. Many of the sermons which it contains have evidently passed through repeated revisions. It consists, in its present form, of different collections of Jeremiahian literature which were once distinct. It includes not only the prophet's original sermons, but traditions regarding his preaching and many narratives regarding his personal experiences. In some cases the original sermon and the popular tradition regarding it have been preserved. The same common proper names are differently spelled in different parts of the book, clearly revealing the work of various narrators and editors. The result is that the present book of Jeremiah is not only a collection of the prophet's original sermons, but is also a biography recording the memories and impressions of the prophet, as they were recalled by Baruch and later writers who held in ever-increasing esteem the authority and character of the great prophet.

LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

In its final form the book of Jeremiah may be divided into nine general divisions. The first, 1–17, contains the prophet's early reform sermons. They are supplemented by his personal prayers and complaints because of the persecutions which he suffered at the hands of his countrymen. In this section there is evidence of a definite attempt to arrange the subject-matter in chronological order. Here are found the extracts from the earlier sermons which, according to chapter 36, were collected by the prophet himself in the year 605–604 B.C. The second division includes chapters 18–20. It contains narratives concerning Jeremiah's preaching and persecution during the days of Jehoiakim. The third division, 21–24, is a collection of prophecies, drawn from different periods of Jeremiah's activity, which deal with the mistakes and crimes of Judah's rulers. These sermons are arranged in approximately chronological order. In the Greek version chapter 25 introduces the group of foreign prophecies now found in 46–51. The fifth group (26–29) record Jeremiah's relations with the false prophets and his predictions concerning them. In 30–33 is found a little group of messianic prophecies which perhaps formed the conclusion to an exilic edition of Jeremiah's book. The seventh group, 34<sup>1</sup>–40<sup>6</sup>, is another collection of biographical narratives. Here the chronological order is entirely disregarded. Chapters 40<sup>7</sup>–44<sup>14</sup> recorded Jeremiah's experiences with the Jews who survived the fall of Jerusalem and who ultimately found refuge in Egypt. To this has been appended 45, which is a brief oracle regarding Baruch. The ninth and last division, chapter 52, is an historic appendix telling of the final destruction of Jerusalem.

The present book of Jeremiah, especially in the Hebrew form with its many cumbersome repetitions, gives the reader a false impression of Jeremiah's literary style, for many of these chapters are but the fragmentary traditions regarding what he actually said. Fortunately the earlier sections contain extracts from many of his original sermons. These reveal an exceedingly finished, well-rounded style, abounding in strong and varied figures and imbued with a wealth of powerful emotion. Jeremiah, like Hosea, spoke in the language of the heart rather than that of the head. His arraignment of the sins of his people lacks the uncompromising judicial harshness of his colleague Zephaniah. Repeatedly he breaks forth into lamentations over the crimes of his people, or else voices, with supreme tenderness and yearning, Jehovah's love for them and his eagerness to forgive if they will but repent. In practically every address Jeremiah appears to have used the impassioned five-beat measure, which was superlatively well adapted to his theme and spirit.

The contrast between the literary style of Jeremiah and Ezekiel is worldwide. The one was a poet by nature and his thoughts found spontaneous expression in the language of the emotions. The other was judicial in his con-

Contents of the book of Jeremiah

Jere-
miah's literary style

Ezekiel's
style

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

creteness and precision. The result is that his style is at times verbose and repetitious. He was not lacking in imagination, but it was of the mechanical, formal, symbolic type. Sometimes he broke forth into poetry, and there is a constant suggestion of poetic parallelism running through his sermons; but for the most part he wrote in carefully elaborated prose.

Ezekiel was also the first Old Testament prophet to use the apocalyptic style. By the apocalyptic style is meant the use of symbols, usually drawn from the natural world, as a medium for presenting prophetic truth. Ordinarily it deals with the future rather than with the past or present. Its primary aim was to conceal and at the same time reveal truth, so that only those for whom it was written could appreciate its meaning. It was also intended to arouse the curiosity and to fix in the mind of the reader the truth thus presented. Although the apocalypse became a characteristic type of Israel's later prophecy, its beginning may be traced back to the days of David in the so-called oracles of Balaam, where the ancient seer is pictured as saying, regarding Israel:

I see him, but not now;
I behold him, but not near;
A star comes forth out of Jacob,
And a sceptre arises out of Israel,
And shatters the temples of Moab,
And the skull of all the sons of Seth (Num. 24<sup>17</sup>).

Ordinarily the apocalyptic type of literature was developed in a period of persecution, such as the Babylonian exile and the later crises in the history of Judaism. It is far removed from the straightforward direct address of the pre-exilic prophets. Although the apocalypse proper is cast in the form of a dream or vision, it appears to have always been the product of careful elaboration.

The book of Ezekiel includes four general divisions. Chapters 1–24, with the exception of 19, were apparently all written before the fall of Jerusalem and deal with the problems of the Judean state under Zedekiah. The second group, 25–32, consists of prophecies regarding foreign nations. The third division, 33–39, to which should be added 19, was written after the final fall of Jerusalem and is concerned with the problems of the exiles. The fourth division, 40–48, contains Ezekiel's programme for the restored temple and Jewish community. His writings have been carefully edited, probably by the prophet himself, and are in the main in chronological order.

The brief prophecy of Haggai the layman, like its author, is plain, direct, and matter-of-fact. It is a blending of prose and poetry although, on the whole, the prose element predominates. The same is true of the literary style of Haggai's colleague Zechariah. The teachings of this priest-prophet, found in the first six chapters of his prophecy, consist for the most part of visions regarding the future of the Judean community. Apparently he used this apocalyptic style of teaching, that he might, in impressive form, convey his teachings to his hearers and at the same time escape the charge of rebellion against Persian rule. This style is abandoned, however, in chapters 7 and 8, which contain earnest addresses, full of counsel and encouragement, to his dis-

Characteristics of the apocalypse

Contents of the book of Ezekiel

Literary style of Haggai and Zechariah

LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

couraged countrymen. In 8, as well as in 4, the prophet also rises to noble and inspiring poetic expression. As has already been noted (p. 36), the last division of the book of Zechariah is an appendix regarding the overthrow of the heathen and the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom, which comes from a much later period.

The crowning literary product of the Old Testament prophets is the marvellous collection of poems found in Isaiah 40–66. Here nobility of theme, breadth of outlook, wealth of figure, and strong emotion are marvellously blended. The prophet's literary kinship, however, is with the later rather than with the earlier prophets. In the opening prophecies his vision is fixed on the universe as a whole rather than on the specific problems of little Judah. Although concealed by his imitable style, there is, in his prophecies, a large element of repetition and his ideas are developed with an elaborateness very different, and yet comparable to that which characterizes Ezekiel's writings.

The poems found in Isaiah 40–66 are not a closely connected unit. They are rather a collection of songs, written probably on different occasions. The same themes frequently recur, and yet from beginning to end there is distinct progress, a progress that suggests a development in the prophet's own experience from the buoyancy and optimism of youth to that increased knowledge of specific facts and closer contact with conditions in the Judean community which came with maturer years. Ordinarily these chapters are divided at the end of 55, and the latter half is attributed to still another prophet, conventionally designated as the Trito or III Isaiah. As has already been noted, and will be illustrated further in connection with the detailed prophecies, the grounds urged for this separation are far from convincing. On the other hand, the same exuberant poetic style, the same words and idioms, the same peculiar ideas and ideals characterize these twenty-seven chapters from beginning to end. Even the advocates of a III Isaiah admit that he is a close imitator—little more than a shadow—of the II Isaiah. Recognizing the differences in theme between the various parts of Isaiah 40–66, and granting that they represent a prophet's life-work, the reasons for separating these chapters, which are bound together so closely, almost, if not wholly, disappear. They fall naturally, according to theme, into two parts; chapters 40–55 and 60–62 deal with the destiny of the chosen people; while 56–59, 63–66 are messages of exhortation and denunciation addressed to the Judean community.

Three other short books come from the second part of the Persian period. One is the brief book of Obadiah, a forceful proclamation of the doom that has already overtaken Israel's ancient foes the Edomites. Its impassioned stanzas reflect the hostility which had grown only deeper and more deadly as a result of centuries of cruel warfare. It also voices the popular hope that at last Jehovah was about to vindicate his people by overthrowing their ancient foes of whom the Edomites were the types.

The author of the book of Malachi writes in poetry but he lacks the vigor and finished literary style of his immediate predecessors. His themes, the disregard of the temple ritual and the petty crimes of the ruling classes, were not calculated to inspire exalted utterance. An earnest and hopeful spirit, however, is revealed in these four short chapters.

Literary characteristics of the II Isaiah

Unity of Isaiah 40–66

The book of Obadiah

The book of Malachi

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The prophecy of Joel

Joel, the closing prophet of the Persian period, is highly poetic in form and gives evidence of careful literary work. Like most of these post-exilic prophecies, it is full of echoes and quotations of earlier prophetic writings, and like all imitative poetry, it lacks the strength and conciseness of a more original utterance. The prophet portrays in lurid colors the coming day of Jehovah. The details are developed at length, and one is constantly impressed with the evidence of conscious effort, and misses those broad, simple, fresco strokes which characterized the wonderful pictures painted by Isaiah and his contemporaries.

The stories of Jonah and Daniel

In the brief book of Jonah the prophet throws aside the ancient oracle and goes back to the plain prose story, such as is found in the opening chapters of Genesis, in order to teach his great prophetic truths. In this respect he was but a forerunner of the author of the first six chapters of Daniel and the teachers of later Judaism, who used the parable and didactic story with great effectiveness. Notwithstanding the fact that it is simple prose, the story of Jonah is a remarkable example of concise dramatic narration and adaptation to the prophet's purpose. The same is true of the opening chapters of the book of Daniel. They lack, however, the conciseness of the story of Jonah. In their frequent though stately repetitions they show the influence of the ceremonial, priestly atmosphere in which they took form.

Literary characteris-tics of Daniel
7-12

In the last six chapters of the book of Daniel, the Old Testament apocalypse reached its zenith. They well illustrate the illusiveness and vagueness which characterize the pure apocalyptic style. Their symbolism is cumbersome, though impressive, even as was the ceremonial ritual of the temple; for both were the product of the same dominant psychological tendency of the age. The fascination of these closing chapters of Daniel is the note of mystery which runs through them. Through the eyes of Daniel the reader catches fugitive visions of that heavenly world which occupied such a large place in the thought of later Judaism.

Their contents and permanent value

The prophet's purpose in these chapters is to pierce the future and to determine what it holds in store. His real theme is the overthrow of the tyrant Antiochus Epiphanes and the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom. The literary form which he employs is the vision. Chapter 9 represents an attempt to interpret, in the light of history, Jeremiah's declaration that the exile should last but seventy years. Chapters 7, 8, 10-12 contain three parallel visions, which review the past history of the world, beginning with the Babylonian period and extending to the reign of Antiochus during which the prophet lived and wrote. Each succeeding vision, in the form of a prediction, traces the past history in greater detail and concludes with a picture of the overthrow of Antiochus and the speedy establishment of the kingdom of the saints of the Most High. The detailed analysis of the elements which have entered into these visions and the elaborate interpretation of their meaning indicate that, like the visions of Ezekiel and Zechariah, they are not the mere report of what was seen by the prophet in a trance, but carefully worked out literary products. Their permanent value is found not in the detailed predictions, but in the broader principles which underlie them. They teach the unity of all history and the presence of the divine hand at each stage in its development. The doctrine that wrong and suffering and oppression are but for the moment, and that the ultimate vindication and establishment of Jehovah's just and universal rule are absolutely assured must be counted among Israel's greatest contributions to the faith of mankind. To this is added the confident belief in the immortality of the individual. Thus in Israel's later prophecies the old national bonds are broken, and the messages of the prophets look beyond this present life and become individual and universal.

LITERARY FORM OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHECIES

ISRAEL AND JUDAH AFTER THE DIVISION OF THE HEBREW EMPIRE.

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

AMOS, HOSEA, ISAIAH, MICAH, AND NAHUM

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

I

THE SERMONS OF AMOS

§ 1. The Superscription and Text of the Book, Am. 1<sup>1</sup>,<sup>2</sup>

THE WORDS OF AMOS

WHO WAS AMONG THE SHEPHERDS<sup>a</sup> OF TEKOAH

WHICH HE SAW CONCERNING ISRAEL

IN THE DAYS OF UZZIAH KING OF JUDAH

AND

IN THE DAYS OF JEROBOAM THE SON OF JOASH KING OF ISRAEL

TWO YEARS BEFORE THE EARTHQUAKE

---

The Sermons of Amos.—The sermons of Amos are of surpassing interest and importance because they throw upon a crucial epoch in Israel's history the clear light of contemporary testimony. The long period of Aramean oppression which followed the revolution of Jehu in 842 B.C. had been succeeded by an era of conquest and unprecedented prosperity under Jeroboam II. Cf. Vol. II, §§ 94–97. The spoils of victory and the revival of industry and commerce suddenly transformed the nobles who stood close to the throne into a wealthy, arrogant class intent only upon their own pleasure and regardless of the rights of those dependent upon them. Shutting their eyes to the dangers of an attack from Assyria which would prostrate their nation, as it already had their old rival Aram, they trusted by the lavishness of their sacrifice and by their devotion to the ritual to purchase Jehovah's favor and protection. False confidence, greed, luxury, oppression, and immorality were in the ascendancy within, while without an invincible foe was threatening to swoop down upon fair Israel.

Amos's sermons are also of supreme significance because they are the earliest examples of oral prophecy. At last the influence of the prophets, which had already moulded the life of the nation and recorded that life in the instructive narratives preserved in the earlier O.T. books, found expression in the direct spoken address. Amos also first proclaimed those vital truths regarding Jehovah's just and universal rule and the obligation of man to man which inaugurated a new epoch in the history of religion. Cf., for the historical setting of Amos, Introd., p. 14; for the literary form of his sermons, Introd., p. 53.

§ 1 Like most of the superscriptions of the prophetic books, this was probably added by a later Judean editor. There is every reason, however, for believing that the important date which it contains are authentic. Cf. Am. 7<sup>9</sup>, 12, 14. Tekoa is in Judah, south of Jerusalem. Cf. II Sam. 14<sup>2</sup>, 23<sup>2</sup>; Jer. 6<sup>1</sup>; I Mac. 9<sup>33</sup>. It was situated on the top of a broad, low hill surrounded by the wilderness of Tekoa with its dry pasture lands. The earthquake in the days of Uzziah is again referred to in Zech. 14<sup>5</sup>, but its exact date is unknown, so that the definite time when Amos's sermons were delivered must be determined from other sources.

The brief stanza which follows consists of four lines of three beats each. It appropriately voices the note of doom that characterizes the entire prophecy. It is distinct from the rest of the book and was probably added by a post-exilic editor, who conceived of Jerusalem as Jehovah's peculiar abode, and who had in mind Joel 3<sup>16</sup>. The initial words fit the context of Joel much more naturally. The editor, however, has adopted them to the shepherd point of view of Amos and regards the rich fields on the top of Mount Carmel as the superlative examples of fertility. Cf. Is. 33<sup>9</sup>, Nah. 1<sup>4</sup>. The figure of Jehovah's coming forth to destroy as a roaring lion is suggested by Amos in 3<sup>8</sup>. This concise expression of the main thought of a book in one verse and in figures suggested by the original author is exceedingly effective, although without analogy in the history of prophetic literature.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>1</sup> The clause, who was among the shepherds, fits its context very awkwardly and was probably added by a later scribe.

De-
struc-
tive effect of Jeho-
vah's wrath

Am. 1 <sup>2</sup>And he said:

Whenever Jehovah roars from Zion,
And utters his voice from Jerusalem,<sup>b</sup>
The pastures of the shepherds mourn,
And the top of Carmel withers.

§ 2. The Judgment About to Overtake Israel's Guilty Neighbors, Am. 1<sup>3</sup>–2<sup>5</sup>

Cumulative
crimes
of the Arameans

Am. 1 <sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Damascus,
Yea, for four I will not revoke it;
Because they have threshed Gilead<sup>c</sup> with threshing instruments of iron.

The
judgment awaiting
them

<sup>d</sup>Therefore I will send fire<sup>d</sup> into the house of Hazael,
And it shall devour the palaces of Ben-hadad,<sup>e</sup>
<sup>5</sup>And I will break the bar<sup>f</sup> of Damascus,
And I will cut off the inhabitants from the valley of Aven,<sup>g</sup>
And him who beholdeth the sceptre from Beth-Eden,<sup>h</sup>
And the people of Aram shall go into captivity to Kir,<sup>i</sup> Saith Jehovah.

Cumulative
crimes
of the Philis-
ties

<sup>6</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Gaza,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because they carried away captive all the people,<sup>j</sup>
To deliver them up to Edom.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>12</sup> The form of the Heb. indicates that the first two lines are subordinate to the second two, and the whole verse describes what is ever true.

<sup>2</sup> Before delivering his message of denunciation and doom against Israel, Amos, the humble shepherd from despised Judah, with superlative tact first won the attention of his proud, self-satisfied audience, then led them to assent to certain principles which he at once asked them to apply to themselves. Thus he established the broad truth that Jehovah's rule is not limited to Israel, but is universal, that while he is merciful, he will in the end surely punish guilt, and that the punishment is proportionate to the enlightenment and therefore to the moral responsibility of each nation. The impressive and constantly repeated introductory formula leads dramatically to the culminating arraignment of Israel. The numbers three and four are simply symbolic. For similar formulas, cf. Jer. 36<sup>22</sup>, Prov. 30<sup>5, 18, 21, 29</sup>, B. Sir. 26<sup>5</sup>. The meaning is that each nation has gone on sinning so far that the merited judgment can no longer be averted. In each case a typical sin is cited.

In the original sermons only Israel's four most hated enemies appear to have been introduced, Aram, Philistia, Ammon, and Moab. The judgment upon Tyre is simply an echo of that upon Philistia. Edom concerned only Judah, and the crimes attributed to the Edomites had no historical basis before the Babylonian exile. The crimes of Judah are described in the language of the late prophetic school represented by Dt. Throughout the three-beat movement prevails, but in the four supplemental sections a distinctly different strophic arrangement is found: the original sections having strophes of alternately 5 and 7 lines, while the later sections have but 2 lines in the second strope.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>13</sup> Probably a reference to the cruel treatment of the Israelites east of the Jordan by Hazael during the reign of Jehu and Jehoahaz. Cf. II Kgs. 8<sup>12</sup>, 10<sup>32, 33, 137</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>14</sup> Fire is the symbol of war, as in Judg. 9<sup>20</sup>, Dt. 4<sup>24</sup>, 32<sup>22</sup>. Cf. also 14<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>14</sup> Probably Ben-hadad III, the son of Hazael. Cf. II Kgs. 10<sup>3</sup>, 13<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>15</sup> The bar which fastened the city gate stood for the defence of the city.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>15</sup> The Gk. identifies this with the plain about Baalbek.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>15</sup> Many identifications have been suggested. The most probable are:

(1) Ehden, on the northwestern slope of Lebanon, near the great cedars;

(2) Jubb-Adin, twenty-five miles northeast of Damascus; and

(3) The Bit-Adini, of the Assyrian inscriptions. Cf. also Ezek. 27<sup>29</sup>. It was an Aramean kingdom along the middle Euphrates.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>15</sup> Cf. 9<sup>7</sup> and II Kgs. 16<sup>9</sup>. Possibly the original home of the Arameans; according to Is.

<sup>22</sup> near Elam. Cf. Arian III, 8<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>16</sup> Lit., a whole deportation, i. e., all the people of the same town or district.

<sup>7</sup>Therefore I will send fire on the wall of Gaza,
And it shall devour her palaces.

The
judgment
that awaits
them

<sup>8</sup>And I will cut off the inhabitants from Ashdod,
And him who holds the sceptre from Askelon,
And I will turn my hand against Ekron,
And the remnant of the Philistines shall perish,

Saith Jehovah.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
For three transgressions of Tyre,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because they have carried away captive all the people to Edom,
And did not remember the brotherly covenant.<sup>l</sup>

Cumu-
lative
crimes
of the Phoenicians

<sup>10</sup>Therefore I will send a fire on the wall of Tyre,
And it shall devour her palaces.

Their punishment

<sup>11</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
For three transgressions of Edom,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because he pursued his brother with the sword,
And stifled his pity,<sup>m</sup>
And cherished his wrath continually,
And retained his anger forever.<sup>n</sup>

Cumulative
crimes
of the Edom-
ites

<sup>12</sup>Therefore I will send a fire into Teman,
And it shall destroy the palaces of Bozrah.<sup>o</sup>

Their
punishment

<sup>13</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
For three transgressions of the Ammonites,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because they have ripped up the pregnant women of Gilead,<sup>p</sup>
That they might enlarge their border.

Cumulative
crimes
of the Ammon-
ites

<sup>14</sup>Therefore I will kindle a fire on the wall of Rabbah,
And it shall destroy her palaces,
With a war-cry in the day of battle,
With a tempest in the day of the whirlwind.

The
judgment
that awaits
them

<sup>15</sup>And their king shall go into exile,
He and his nobles together,
Saith Jehovah.

2 <sup>1</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
For three transgressions of Moab,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because they have burned the bones of the king of Edom, <sup>2</sup>c To desecrate the dead on account of violence done to Moab.<sup>q</sup>

Cumu-
lative
crimes
of the Moab-
ites

<sup>k</sup> <sup>18</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., Lord.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>19</sup> Cf. II Sam. 5<sup>11</sup>, 1 Kgs. 5<sup>1</sup>, 9<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>11</sup> The fifth and seventh lines are possibly glosses, for they destroy the uniform strophic form of the section and are little more than repetitions of the fourth and sixth lines.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>11</sup> The cruelty of the Edomites to the Jews at the final destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. is probably in the mind of the exilic editor who added this section. Cf. § 139.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>12</sup> The chief cities of Edom.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>13</sup> For references to similar barbarous practices, cf. II Kgs. 8<sup>12</sup>, Hos. 10<sup>14</sup>, 13<sup>16</sup>, Is. 13<sup>16</sup>, Nah. 3<sup>10</sup>, Ps. 137<sup>9</sup>; Iliad, IV, 57, 58.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>22</sup> Following the acute reconstruction suggested by Harper (Amos and Hosea, 38, 41). This clause restored to its natural position not only gives a consistent text, but is also

The judgment that awaits them

Cumulative crimes of the Judahites

Their punishment

<sup>a,b</sup>Therefore I will send a fire into Moab,
And it shall devour the palaces of Kiroth,
<sup>2d</sup>With a war-cry, with the sound of trumpets,
<sup>3</sup>And I will cut off the ruler<sup>r</sup> from his<sup>s</sup> midst,
And all his nobles will I slay with him;
Saith Jehovah.

<sup>t</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
For three transgressions of Judah,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it,
Because they have rejected the law of Jehovah,
And have not kept his statutes,
But their lies<sup>t</sup> have caused them to go astray,
After which their fathers walked.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>v</sup>Therefore I will send a fire on Judah,
And it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

§ 3. The Judgment Awaiting Thrice Guilty Israel, Am. 2<sup>6-16</sup>

Am. 2 <sup>w</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Israel,
Yea, for four, I will not revoke it;
Because they sell the righteous for money,
And the needy<sup>v</sup> for a pair of shoes.
<sup>7</sup>Who trample<sup>w</sup> on the head of the poor,
And turn aside the way<sup>x</sup> of the humble.
And a man and his father go into the same<sup>y</sup> maid,
And so profane my holy name;<sup>z</sup>

supported by the strophic symmetry thus obtained. The typical crime was evidently some act of impiety toward the dead which was condemned by all ancient people.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Heb., judge, but, as in II Kgs. 15<sup>5</sup>, it is used in the sense of ruler, since Moab, at this time, had no king but was subject to Israel.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Heb., her, but context requires the above.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> Probably an allusion to the idols. Cf. Is. 66<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> The language and point of view in this section are peculiar to the later prophetic school and especially to the editor of Kgs. The last two lines may well be still later additions. Cf. Jer. 23<sup>13, 32</sup>.

<sup>§ 3</sup> Having proclaimed in his dramatic introduction the universal rule and justice of Jehovah and the truth that each nation is by him held responsible for its acts in proportion to its moral enlightenment, Amos in the same powerful terms pronounces Israel's doom. Her typical crimes are those of cruelty, not against hostile foes, but against innocent fellow-countrymen whose dependence should command the pity of the greedy, merciless rulers who are leading Israel on to her ruin. Israel's guilt is thrice heinous because of the special protection and instruction that Jehovah has given her. Hence her punishment will be more complete.

The poetic structure of the section is significant. Throughout the arraignment, as in the preceding section, the three-beat movement prevails, but in the description of what Jehovah has done for Israel and of her infidelity the impressive four-beat measure is introduced. Again in the description of the punishment that is speedily to overtake the nation the quick three-beat measure is restored, as in the corresponding announcement of doom in the oracles regarding the foreign nations.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> The reference is evidently to the sale of poor Hebrews as slaves because they are unable to meet their petty debts. Cf. II Kgs. 4<sup>1</sup>, Mt. 18<sup>25</sup>, Ex. 23<sup>6-8</sup>, and the later law of Dt. 16<sup>18-20</sup>, Lev. 19<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. in accordance with a suggestion found in the Gk. This consonant reading is supported by 8<sup>4</sup> and the Lat. and Targ. To this a scribe has added the explanatory gloss, to the dust of the earth.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> I. e., deprive them of their legal right.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The Heb. omits, but implies, same.

<sup>z</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Probably resort to the same harlot or temple prostitute. Cf. Gen. 38<sup>21, 22</sup>, I Kgs. 14<sup>24</sup>. For the later law prohibiting the institution, cf. Dt. 23<sup>17</sup>.

THE JUDGMENT UPON GUILTY ISRAEL [AM. 2<sup>8</sup>]

<sup>8</sup>And upon garments taken in pledge<sup>a</sup> they stretch themselves beside every altar,
And the wine of those who have been fined<sup>b</sup> they drink in the house of their God.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>10</sup>And yet it was I who brought you up from the land of Egypt,
And led you forty years in the wilderness,
And brought you hither<sup>d</sup> to possess the land of the Amorites.<sup>e</sup>

What Jehovah has done:
Egypt
and the wilderness

<sup>9</sup>And it was I who destroyed from before you the Amorite,<sup>f</sup>
Whose height was like that of the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks;
Yet I destroyed his fruit from above and his roots from beneath.<sup>g</sup>

Conquest of Canaan

<sup>11</sup>Moreover I raised up some of your sons to be prophets and some of your youths to be Nazirites.<sup>h</sup>

In-
struc-
tion by
prophets and Nazirites

Is not this indeed so, O Israel? It is of the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>12</sup>But ye made the Nazirites drink wine and upon the prophets ye laid a prohibition.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Behold it is I who will make you groan<sup>j</sup> in your places,
As groans a wagon under its load of sheaves.

Judgment awaiting
them
Impossibility of escaping it

<sup>14</sup>Then shall refuge fail the swift,
And the strongest not avail himself of his strength,
Neither shall the warrior deliver himself,

<sup>15</sup>Nor he who handles the bow stand,
Nor the swift of foot escape,<sup>k</sup>

Even he who is mounted shall not save his life,

<sup>16</sup>But he who is stoutest of heart among warriors,
Shall flee away naked<sup>l</sup> in that day,<sup>m</sup>

It is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> The outer garments which kept the poor man warm at night. For the law forbidding the judges from holding these overnight, cf. Ex. 22<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> I. e., wine secured through unjust decisions.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> The final clause, beside every altar, and in the houses of their God, destroys the metre and may be later explanatory glosses.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> So Syr. and the inflection of the Heb. and the requirements of the metre. The Heb. text lacks the first part of the vs.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> Restoring this vs. to its true chronological position before <sup>9</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> So certain manuscripts and the demands of the context. Heb., them. The Amorite is the general designation in Amos and the Ephraimite prophetic narratives of the early Canaanish inhabitants of Palestine.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> I. e., destroyed root and branch. Cf. Is. 5<sup>24</sup>, Hos. 9<sup>16</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> Men separated, consecrated to God for life, as in the case of Samson and Samuel, or for a limited period in which they abstained from cutting their hair, from contact with the dead, and from all products of the vine. Cf. Nu. 6<sup>2-4</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> The above rendering satisfies the demand of the sense and metre. The Heb. adds, saying, ye shall not prophesy.

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> The exact meaning of this verb is not known, for it occurs nowhere else in the O.T. The above rendering is based upon the meaning of the same root in the Arabic. Other possible translations are, I will stop you, or, I will press you.

<sup>k</sup> 2<sup>15</sup> So Gk., Lat., and Targ., Heb., save.

<sup>l</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> I. e., stripped of his weapons.

<sup>m</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> I. e., the day of judgment, when foreign armies shall ravage Israel. This represents the beginning of the prophetic doctrine of the day of Jehovah, which is prominent in subsequent prophecies.

§ 4. The Basis of the Prophet's Arraignment of Israel, Am. 3<sup>1-5</sup>

Re-sponsi-bility proportionate to op-portu-nity

The laws of cause and effect

Prophet present to warn because Jehovah has spoken

Sama-ria's wickedness aston-ding even to the heathen

Am. 3<sup>1</sup> Hear this word

Which Jehovah hath spoken against you, O Israelites, Against the whole race that I brought up from the land of Egypt:
2 You only have I known of all the races of earth,
Therefore will I visit upon you all your iniquities.'

<sup>3</sup> Do two walk together unless they be agreed?<sup>n</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Does a lion roar in the forest, when there is no prey for him?

Does a young lion cry out in his den,<sup>o</sup> unless he has taken something?

<sup>5</sup> Does a bird fall to the earth,<sup>p</sup> if no bait<sup>q</sup> is set for it?

Does a snare spring up from the ground, without catching anything?

<sup>6</sup> Can a trumpet be blown in a city and the people not tremble?

Can calamity befall a city and Jehovah not have caused it?

<sup>7</sup> Surely the Lord Jehovah doeth nothing,

Unless he revealeth his purpose to his servants the prophets.

<sup>8</sup> The lion has roared; who does not fear?

The Lord Jehovah hath spoken; who can but prophesy?

§ 5. The Guilt and Doom of Samaria, Am. 3<sup>9-4<sup>a</sup></sup>Am. 3<sup>9</sup> Proclaim over the palaces in Ashdod,

And over the palaces in the land of Egypt,

'Gather upon the mountain<sup>r</sup> of Samaria,

And see the manifold tumults,

And acts of oppression in its midst;

<sup>10</sup> For they know not how to do right,

They are heaping up violence and oppression in their palaces,<sup>s</sup>

It is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>t</sup>

§ 4 In this brief section the prophet pauses to state the reasons for his sweeping arraignment. To the popular belief that Israel stood in a peculiarly intimate relation to Jehovah, Amos replies: "It is because you have enjoyed special privileges, that your heinous crimes will surely be punished. If your ears are deaf to Jehovah's warnings, mine are not, and as a true prophet, impelled by the truth of his God-given message, I am here to raise the cry of alarm." The four-beat movement is employed throughout the section, except in the last two vss.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>3<sup>1</sup></sup> Heb., they have made an appointment, or have met together; Gk., have become acquainted with each other. By some this vs. is joined to the preceding and interpreted as referring to the necessity of severing the covenant relation between Jehovah and Israel. By others it is connected with the following vss. and interpreted as meaning that two men do not walk together by accident, but as the result of a previous appointment. Even so, Amos was not standing as Jehovah's herald in the northern sanctuary of Bethel as the result of mere chance but because God had given him a message which he must deliver. On the whole, the latter interpretation best satisfies the context.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>3<sup>1</sup></sup> The clause from his den may be a later gloss, for it is not required by the context and destroys the metrical symmetry of the vs.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>2<sup>9</sup></sup> So Gk. Heb., snare of the ground.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>2<sup>9</sup></sup> Or, if there is no hunter.

§ 5 Having established the basis of his prediction, Amos reiterates in the form of a public arraignment, summoning the Philistines and Egyptians as witnesses, the charge against Israel, and proclaims in greater detail the overwhelming destruction that is to overtake her.

The glaring crimes are those of the nobles and their dissolute wives, who defile the capital city of Samaria by their acts of injustice and debauchery. Even more clearly than before he

<sup>r</sup> <sup>3<sup>9</sup></sup> So Gk. Heb., mountains, but cf. 4<sup>1</sup>, 6<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>3<sup>10</sup></sup> In their palaces destroys the metrical structure and appears to be secondary and derived from <sup>9</sup>. Possibly the entire vs. is an explanatory gloss.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>3<sup>10</sup></sup> The present Heb. awkwardly introduces It is the oracle of Jehovah into the middle of the vs. This is probably due to the mistake of a scribe or else the clause is a later addition.

<sup>11</sup>Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah,
 'An adversary shall surround<sup>u</sup> the land,
 And he shall strip from thee thy strength,
 And thy palaces shall be plundered.

The
penalty

<sup>12</sup>Just<sup>v</sup> as a shepherd rescues from the mouth of a lion
 Two shin-bones or a piece of an ear,<sup>w</sup>
 So shall the Israelites be rescued—
 They who sit in Samaria on the corner of a couch,
 On the damask<sup>x</sup> of a divan!'

<sup>13</sup>Hear and testify against the house of Jacob,'
 It is the oracle of Jehovah, the God of hosts,

Temple,
palace,
and hovel all to be destroyed

<sup>14</sup>That in the day when I visit the transgressions of Israel upon him,
 I will also visit in judgment the altars<sup>y</sup> of Bethel,
 And the horns of the altar shall be cut off,
 And they shall fall to the ground.

<sup>15</sup>And I will smite the winter house together with the summer house;<sup>z</sup>
 And the houses of ivory shall perish,
 Yea, many houses<sup>a</sup> shall be swept away,'
 It is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>b</sup>

Am. 4 <sup>1</sup>Hear this word,

Ye kine of Bashan, who dwell in the mountain of Samaria,
 Who oppress the poor and crush the needy,
 Who say to your husbands, 'Bring that we may drink.'

Guilt
of the wives
of the nobles

<sup>2</sup>The Lord Jehovah hath sworn by his holiness:

'Behold, days are coming upon you,
 When ye shall be taken away with hooks, even the last of you with fish-hooks,

Their fate at the hands
of the conquer-
ors

<sup>3</sup>And through the breaches shall ye go out, each woman straight before her,
 And ye shall be cast toward Harmon,<sup>c</sup> is Jehovah's oracle.

announces that the agent of judgment is the foreign conqueror. The metre is unusually irregular, but the three-beat is predominately employed except in 4<sup>1-3</sup> where the more impressive four-beat measure appears. The whole consists of brief oracles, of approximately the same length, giving the strophic effect. The recent attempts by transpositions and elisions to restore absolute uniformity are not satisfactory, and do not improve the resulting text.

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.<sup>v</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> The Heb. repeats, probably by mistake from 11<sup>a</sup>, Thus saith Jehovah; but <sup>12</sup> is the immediate sequel of <sup>11</sup>. Cf. Ex. 22<sup>13</sup>.<sup>w</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> For the custom of bringing in the remaining pieces as evidence, cf. Ex. 22<sup>13</sup>.<sup>x</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> The meaning of this word is very doubtful. Gk., in Damascus, but the address is to the rulers of Samaria. The reference may be to some imported Damascene material with which the divan was covered. This last clause is possibly a later scribal addition. As in 4<sup>1</sup> and 6<sup>1</sup>, Amos evidently here addresses contemptuously the luxurious ruling class. The peculiar construction of the ys. is similar to that found in <sup>10</sup>.<sup>y</sup> 3<sup>14</sup> The original probably read mæggebah or pillar.<sup>z</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Probably the lower and upper stories (or roof) of the same houses are intended. Cf. Judg. 3<sup>20</sup>, Jer. 36<sup>22</sup>. Thus in an inscription recently discovered at Zinjirli, a contemporary king of Sham'al states that the palace of his fathers was for them a summer house and a winter house.<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> I. e., of the common people.<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> This clause as elsewhere may be a later addition.<sup>c</sup> 4<sup>3</sup> The translation is doubtful because the place mentioned has not been identified. The versions established the presence of a proper name and this interpretation best satisfies the context.

§ 6. Israel's Failure to Understand Jehovah's Judgments, Am. 4<sup>4-12</sup>

Futility of ceremonial

Am. 4 <sup>4</sup>Come to Bethel and transgress,
At Gilgal<sup>d</sup> increase your transgression;
And bring in the morning your sacrifices,
On the third day your tithes!<sup>e</sup>

Its selfish motive

<sup>5</sup>And burn some leavened bread as a thank-offering,
And proclaim aloud the voluntary offerings,
For you love to do so, O Israelites!'
It is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.

Failure to learn the lesson taught by famine
By drought

<sup>6</sup>But it was also I who gave to you
Cleanness of teeth<sup>f</sup> in all your cities,
And lack of bread in all your palaces,
Yet ye have not returned to me,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

By blight and insect plagues

<sup>7</sup>I also it was who withheld from you the rain,<sup>g</sup>
And I sent rain upon one city,
While upon another I did not let it rain,<sup>h</sup>
<sup>8b</sup>Yet ye did not return to me,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

By
pestilence
and de-
struc-
tive
war

<sup>9</sup>I smote you with blight and mildew,
I laid waste your gardens and vineyards,
Your fig and your olive trees the young locust devoured;
Yet you did not return to me,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>10</sup>I sent among you a pestilence by the way of Egypt,<sup>i</sup>
I slew<sup>j</sup> your youths with the sword,<sup>k</sup> taking captive your horses.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>6</sup> In this address, the occasion of which was probably a religious festival at Bethel, Amos directly condemns Israel's ceremonial worship, not because it was evil in itself, but because the people were actuated simply by a selfish desire to purchase Jehovah's favor. Ironically he tells them to go on with their round of sacrifices, for it gives them pleasure. Jehovah's displeasure has been shown in unmistakable ways, but they have so long shut their eyes to his warnings that even the time for repentance is all but past. The three-beat movement is used in <sup>4</sup>, <sup>5</sup>, and <sup>13</sup> and four-beat in <sup>6-12</sup>. This section originally appears to have consisted of nine strophes of four lines each—the third through the seventh ending with the same pathetic formula, Yet ye did not return to me, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>4</sup>Evidently the reference is to the northern Gilgal, prominent in the Elisha stories and situated a little southwest of Shiloh. Cf. II, § 81, introd. note.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>The current ceremonial usage. Probably the tithe was presented on the third day after the arrival at the sanctuary.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>4</sup>I. e., gave you nothing to eat. The reference may be to the famines in the days of Ahab, I Kgs. 17<sup>12</sup>, and Jeroram, II Kgs. 4<sup>38</sup>, but it is probably to a more recent event.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>4</sup>The line, During the three months before the harvest, appears to be an explanatory note. Amos was interested simply in the general fact. The harvest was in May and June, and the rains in March and April were essential to the growth of the grain.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>b-<sup>8a</sup> A scribe has further expanded the original by adding the awkward, circumstantial, explanatory clause, the prose form of which clearly proclaims its secondary origin: One field being rained upon, and another field, which was not rained upon, drying up; two or three cities staggering to one city to drink water without being satisfied. After removing this gloss to the margin the perfect parallelism of each succeeding stanza is revealed. Cf. for a similar addition <sup>6b</sup>, <sup>10</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>Or, after the manner of Egypt. Egypt was the home of plagues and from that centre the plague referred to may have spread to Palestine. In 803, 765, and 759 B.C. pestilences in Western Asia are recorded.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>4</sup>Recalling Israel's experiences during the Aramean wars.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>4</sup>Lit., with the captivity of your horses. This awkward clause is perhaps a gloss.

And I caused the stench of your camps to rise in your nostrils;<sup>m</sup>
 Yet ye did not return to me,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>11</sup>I wrought a destruction among you,<sup>n</sup>
 As God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah,<sup>o</sup>
 And ye were as a brand plucked from the burning;
 Yet ye did not return to me,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

By a great disaster

<sup>12</sup>Therefore thus will I do to thee, O Israel, Because I am about to do this<sup>p</sup> to thee,
 Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.<sup>q</sup>

Doom
impending

<sup>13</sup>For behold it is he who formeth the mountains,
 And createth the wind,
 And declareth to man what is his thought;
 He maketh dawn and darkness,<sup>r</sup>
 And treadeth upon the heights of the earth,
 Jehovah, the God of hosts, is his name.<sup>s</sup>

Jeho-
vah's omnipotent
rule

§ 7. Certain Destruction Awaiting Israel Unless She Seeks Jehovah, Am. 5<sup>1-6</sup>, 8, 9

Am. 5 <sup>1</sup>Hear the word which I take up against you, even a dirge, O house of Israel:

<sup>2</sup>Fallen, no more to rise, is the virgin Israel!
 Hurled down upon her own soil she lies, with none to raise her!

Overwhel-ming disaster imminent

<sup>3</sup>For thus saith the Lord Jehovah:

'The city that taketh the field with a thousand hath but a hundred left,
 And the one that taketh the field with a hundred hath but ten left.'<sup>t</sup>

<sup>m</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>n</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> Possibly a clause has been lost from this line.

<sup>o</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> Cf. Gen. 19.

<sup>p</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> The nature of the punishment has been clearly stated in the preceding sections.

<sup>q</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> Gk., prepare to call upon thy God. The Gk. translators evidently interpreted this as a call to repentance. To arouse the leaders of the nation to appreciate the heinousness of their crimes and the inevitable consequences, and thus to lead them to avert the evil, was the ultimate aim of all of Amos's preachings; but to impress them with the imminence of the danger, he represents the doom as impending.

<sup>r</sup> 4<sup>13</sup> So Gk. The current translation, maketh dawn darkness, is not supported by the Heb. or the parallelism.

<sup>s</sup> 4<sup>13</sup> This majestic little poem may be from Amos, but the sudden change of metre and the fact that it introduces certain universal conceptions of Jehovah which first found expression in Is. 40-50, Gen. 1, and other writings of the exilic and post-exilic period strongly suggest that it was added by a later editor. Its sequel is found in 5<sup>8a-e, 9</sup>. Similar extracts are abruptly introduced in 5<sup>8, 9</sup>, and 9<sup>5, 6</sup>. The original motif of which they are the expansion may be found in 1<sup>3</sup>. They impressively describe the omnipotent and universal rule of Jehovah, and emphasize the folly of man's rebellion and the certainty that the divine judgment will be carried out.

§ 7 The prophet next expresses his absolute conviction that Israel's fate is sealed by singing over her a funeral dirge like those sung by the wailing women over the dead. The metre consists of a three-beat followed by a two-beat line, echoing the first and suggesting a plaintive sigh. The two brief dirges of four lines each are followed by an impassioned call to seek Jehovah with the heart and not by forms. This is in the quick two-beat movement. Its logical connection with the preceding is clear; Israel's death knell has sounded, ceremonial worship has proved of no avail; God, the compassionate judge, alone can save and he will never fail the truly repentant.

Vss. 8, 9, like 4<sup>13</sup>, are clearly later additions. Their connection with the context is very loose and uncertain. In the mind of the scribe who introduced them they probably were associated with 6.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>9</sup> The Heb. adds, to the house of Israel, but this is evidently due to the mistaken repetition of the same clause in the next line or may have been added by a scribe to make the sense very clear.

The true source of deliv-
erance

<sup>4</sup>For thus saith Jehovah to the house of Israel:
 ‘Seek me and live,
<sup>5</sup>But seek not Bethel,
 And Gilgal do not enter,
 To Beersheba go not over;
 For Gilgal shall taste the gall of exile,<sup>u</sup>
 And Bethel [House of God] shall go to perdition.<sup>v</sup>

Danger of not seeking Je-
hovah

<sup>6</sup>Seek Jehovah and live,
 Lest he cast fire on the house of Joseph,<sup>w</sup>
 And it devour and there be none to quench it for Bethel.<sup>x</sup>

His omnipo-
tence

<sup>8a-e</sup>He it is who made the Pleades and Orion,
 Who turneth deep gloom into morning,
 And darkeneth day again into night,
 Who calleth the waters of the sea,
 And poureth them out on the face of the earth,
<sup>9</sup>Who causeth destruction to burst over the strong,
 And bringeth devastation<sup>z</sup> upon the fortress,
<sup>y</sup>Jehovah is his name.<sup>a</sup>

Woe to
the foes of justice

§ 8. A Solemn Warning to the Corrupt Judges, Am. 5<sup>7</sup>, 10-17

Am. 5 <sup>7</sup>Alas,<sup>b</sup> for those who turn judgment<sup>c</sup> to wormwood,
 And cast righteousness to the ground,
<sup>10</sup>Who hate him that reproves in the gate,
 And abhor one that speaks uprightly!

Their
punishment

<sup>11</sup>Therefore, because ye trample upon the weak,
 And take from him exactions of grain,
 Houses of hewn stone have ye built,
 But ye shall not dwell in them,
 Charming vineyards have ye planted,
 But ye shall not drink their wine.

Their judicial
crimes

<sup>12</sup>Surely I know how many are your transgressions,
 And how great are your sins!

<sup>u</sup> 5<sup>5</sup> Following G. A. Smith, Bk. of the Twelve, I, 165, in order to bring out the intentional paranomasia, ha-gilgal galoh yiqleh; lit., Gilgal shall surely go into exile.

<sup>v</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Or, become Bethaven (House of delusion). These last two lines may be a later addition.

<sup>w</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. The house of Joseph is a designation of Northern Israel.

<sup>x</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Gk. and some Heb. mss., for Israel. This may be the earlier reading. The clause is probably a scribal addition.

<sup>y</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> These stars, as in Job 9<sup>9</sup>, 38<sup>31</sup>, 22, stand for the starry world.

<sup>z</sup> 5<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. in the restoration of the original Heb.

<sup>a</sup> 5<sup>8f</sup> The Targ. fills out this line, Let there be fear in the presence of him whose name is Jehovah. It probably belonged originally at the end of the poem. The expression, Jehovah is his name, is one of the many indications that this and the similar passages in 4<sup>13</sup> and 9<sup>6</sup> were originally independent doxologies, added here to emphasize Jehovah's omnipotence.

<sup>§ 8</sup> In this section Amos turns upon the judges who parody justice, using their office to exact bribes and unjust fines. In their eyes a man who spoke the truth openly was supremely odious. The gate, so often referred to, was the open place near the city gate where the Hebrew judges held their primitive court and where the civic and social life of the town centred. The section consists of three strophes of four lines, followed alternately by three corresponding strophes of six lines, each introduced by therefore. The three-beat movement prevails.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> This line, like 1<sup>8</sup> and 6<sup>1</sup>, probably began with the Heb. word, Alas, which was left out by some scribe because it contained the same letters as those which stood at the beginning of the following word. Restored, it makes clearly intelligible an otherwise very obscure passage.

<sup>c</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> I. e., civil justice.

Ye persecutors of the righteous, takers of bribes!
Yea, the needy in the gate<sup>d</sup> they thrust aside.

<sup>13</sup>Therefore since the prudent man at such a time keeps silent,
It is surely an evil time.

<sup>14</sup>Seek good and not evil,

That ye may live;

That this Jehovah, God of hosts,
May be with you, as ye have said.

Advice
to the prudent

<sup>15</sup>Hate evil and love good,
And establish justice in the gate;
Perhaps Jehovah will be gracious,
The God of hosts, to a remnant of Joseph.<sup>e</sup>

Hope
for the honest
man

<sup>16</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah the<sup>f</sup> God of hosts:
'In all squares there shall be wailing,
And in every street they shall say, "Alas! Alas!"
And they shall summon the husbandman to mourning,
And to wailing those skilled in lamentation,<sup>g</sup>
<sup>17</sup>Yea, in all vineyards there shall be wailing,
When I pass through the midst of thee,' saith Jehovah.

The
catastrophe about to overtake all classes

§ 9. Captivity Awaiting Corrupt Israel, Am. 5<sup>18</sup>-6<sup>14</sup>

Am. 5 <sup>18</sup>Alas, for those who long for the day of Jehovah!

What have you to do with the day of Jehovah?

It is darkness, and not light.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>19</sup>It is as when one flees from a lion,
And a bear falls upon him,
Or goes into the house and leans his hand upon the wall,
And a serpent bites him.

<sup>20</sup>Shall not Jehovah's day be darkness and not light, Yea, murky darkness without a ray of light in it?

Horrors of the day of Je-
hovah

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>12</sup> I. e., refuse to give them justice before the tribunal.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>13-15</sup> The authenticity of these verses has been seriously questioned, chiefly because they are not closely connected either with the preceding or following context and because the idea of a remnant,<sup>15</sup>, implies a familiarity with the exile. The exhortation in <sup>14, 15</sup>, however, is not to seek Jehovah, as in <sup>4, 6</sup>, with which these vss. are joined by some, but to seek what is right and to restore justice in the gate. The last expression binds them closely to the present context. There is also no evidence that remnant is used in its later technical sense.

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> So Gk., Syr. and seven Heb. mss. The accepted Heb. adds Lord, making an unprecedented array of divine titles; God of hosts may also be secondary, for it destroys the metrical harmony.

<sup>g</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> This line may be a later addition, for in the original the victims of the calamity lament, making unnecessary the services of the hired mourning women. If secondary, the symmetry of the strophe is maintained.

<sup>h</sup> 9 The symmetry of this poem is remarkable. As Harper has pointed out (Amos and Hosea, 128) it consists of three triple strophes, with from six to nine three-beat lines in each strophe. In each triple strophe, the first contains a woe, the second a denunciation of some phase of wickedness, and the third an announcement of coming captivity. Each announcement is more specific than the preceding, until in the last, 6<sup>14</sup>, it requires little imagination to see the Assyrian armies sweeping from one end of Israel to the other. Its high ethical and social ideals, its scathing denunciation of mere formal worship, and its direct, fearless spirit make this section one of the classic passages of the O.T.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>18</sup> Evidently Amos found the popular belief in the day of Jehovah, as a time when Jehovah would punish Israel's foes and make his people supreme, irrespective of their acts or deserts, already firmly established. He interprets it as a day of judgment upon guilty Israel

Jehovah's
rejection of ceremonial-ism
without ethical righteous-ness

Banishment of the nation
that trusts in ceremonial-
ism

Woe to
the irresponsible rulers
of Israel

<sup>21</sup>I hate, I despise your feasts,
And I will not smell the savor of your festivals,
<sup>22b, c</sup>And with your cereal-offerings<sup>i</sup> I will not be pleased,<sup>j</sup>
And the peace-offerings of your fatlings I will not regard with favor.
<sup>23</sup>Banish from me the noise of your songs,<sup>k</sup>
For to the melody of your lyres I will not listen.
<sup>24</sup>But let justice roll on as a flood of waters,
And righteousness like an unfailing stream.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Was it only sacrifices and cereal-offerings ye brought me
In the wilderness during forty years, O house of Israel?<sup>m</sup> <sup>26</sup>But now ye shall lift up the shrine of your king,
And the image of your God which you have made for yourselves,<sup>n</sup> <sup>27</sup>And I will carry you away into exile beyond Damascus, Saith Jehovah the God of hosts.<sup>o</sup>

6 <sup>1</sup>Alas for those who are careless in Zion,
And overconfident on the mountain of Samaria!<sup>p</sup>
Men of mark of the first of the nations,
To whom the house of Israel resort!<sup>q</sup>
<sup>2</sup>Pass over to Calneh and see,<sup>r</sup>
And go from there to Hamath the great,
Then go down to Gath of the Philistines—

as well as upon her foes. Thus Amos introduces that new ethical conception of the day of Jehovah which later prophets like Zephaniah develop at length. While he retains the figure of specific day, his practical interpretation of the method of judgment indicates that he expected it to be a gradual process and the method natural, i. e., through the instrumentality of Assyria. Cf. Introd., p. 43. Thus in the earliest oral prophecy appears the ever existing antithesis between the popular expectation of a specific miraculous judgment day, projected into the future, and the saner doctrines of a slow development in the life of nations and individuals, gradually and naturally unfolding, as the inevitable results of obvious causes. Cf. R. H. Charles, A Critical History of the Doctrine of a Future Life, 80–137, and Hast., DB., I, 741–567.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>22</sup> The clause, Though ye offer me burnt offerings, interrupts the sequence of the thought and was probably added by a learned scribe who missed any reference to the burnt-offerings.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>22</sup> The prophet here speaks on the basis of the popular belief that the Deity took delight in the savor of offering. Cf. Gen. 8<sup>3</sup>, Ex. 29<sup>4</sup>, 30<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>23</sup> Songs, the playing of musical instruments, and dancing were regular accompaniments of ancient festivals. Cf. 8<sup>10</sup> and Ex. 32<sup>6</sup>, 17–19. They were reckoned with the offerings as gifts to Jehovah. The dominant note was that of joy and merry-making, very different from the deeper motives that find expression in the psalms of the second temple found in the Psalter. Cf. Vol. V in loco.

<sup>l</sup> 5<sup>24</sup> In a similar powerful passage, 11<sup>0–17</sup>, Isaiah defines true religion and worship in the terms not of the ritual but of right doing and living. The figure is that of a full, constant flow, not of sacrifice and the melody of song, but of just acts.

<sup>m</sup> 5<sup>25</sup> I. e., sacrifices to win Jehovah's favor are useless, as is shown by the fact that he led and signally protected his people in the wilderness when they had nothing to offer him.

<sup>n</sup> 5<sup>26</sup> This is one of the most difficult passages in the book and was evidently so regarded by later scribes, who modified the original text and added explanatory notes. The vs. appears to be parallel to the following, although <sup>26</sup> also recalls the carrying of the ark through the wilderness and suggests the figure in <sup>26</sup>. Removing the unintelligible gloss, your images, the star of, and slightly restoring the Heb. words for shrine and image, which have been modified by a scribe who, like the translators of the Gk. and Syr. had in mind the Semitic star worship and who would furnish the names of the gods Adar and Saturn, a clear text remains. Amos does not here speak of idolatry, but, with an underlying note of irony, declares that the Israelites shall soon, with the symbols of their ceremonial worship, go forth into exile. Cf. 6<sup>14</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 5<sup>27</sup> A scribe, familiar with the later doxologies in 4<sup>4</sup>, 5<sup>8</sup>, and 9<sup>6</sup>, has added the awkward expression, his name.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> The irony is clear. Israel's proud unfounded claims to superiority are held up to ridicule.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> Syr., and spoil for themselves the house of Israel; this may represent the original.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> This vs. breaks the close connection between <sup>1</sup> and <sup>2</sup>. That it was added by a later editor, familiar with Nah. 3<sup>8</sup>, is demonstrated by the fact that certain of the cities mentioned were not destroyed until after the days of Amos. Furthermore, in <sup>1d</sup>, but one kingdom is mentioned, while in <sup>2</sup> the reference appears to be to both Israel and Judah.

Are they better than these kingdoms,
Or is your<sup>a</sup> territory larger than their territory?

<sup>3</sup>They who would postpone the day of calamity,
And yet have instituted a rule of violence.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>4</sup>They who lie on ivory couches,
And sprawl upon their divans,
And eat lambs from the flock,
And calves from out the stall;
<sup>5</sup>They drawl to the sound of the lyre,
Like David, they devise for themselves instruments of song.<sup>u</sup>
<sup>6</sup>They drink bowlfuls of wine,<sup>v</sup>
And anoint themselves with the finest of oil,
But they do not grieve over the ruin<sup>w</sup> of Joseph.

Their
selfish indulgence
and debauch-
ery

<sup>7</sup>Therefore now they must go into exile at the head of the captives,
And hushed shall be the revelry of the sprawlers',

<sup>8b</sup>It is the oracle of Jehovah, the God of hosts.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>8a</sup>Jehovah<sup>y</sup> hath sworn by himself:

<sup>8c-e</sup>I abhor the pride of Jacob,

And his palaces I hate,

Therefore I will deliver up the city and all that is in it,<sup>z</sup>

<sup>11b, c</sup>And one shall smite the great house into atoms,<sup>a</sup>

And the small house into fragments.<sup>b</sup>

Conquest
and exile awaiting
them
and their subjects

<sup>12</sup>Do horses run upon crags?

Does one plow the sea with oxen?

That you turn justice into poison,

And the fruit of righteousness into wormwood?

<sup>13</sup>Ye who rejoice in that which is not,<sup>c</sup>

Who say, 'Have we not by our own strength taken horns<sup>d</sup> for ourselves.'

Folly
of trusting in their own strength

<sup>a</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> Correcting the pronominal suffixes as the context absolutely demands.

<sup>t</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Lit., draw near the seat of violence. The prophet here casts his thought in the form of an epigrammatic proverb. The verb has been attracted through the influence of the preceding note from the prevailing third to the first person (Heb., ye).

<sup>u</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> Or, possibly, compose all sorts of melodies, or emending the text, they consider themselves, like David, skilled in singing. Like David may be a later scribal insertion.

<sup>v</sup> 6<sup>6</sup> Lit., from bowls of wine, i. e., are not satisfied with ordinary cups.

<sup>w</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Lit., breach, i. e., the moral and social ruin of the northern kingdom.

<sup>x</sup> 6<sup>8b</sup> This clause is not found in the Gk. Its only natural position is at the end of the strophe, for in its present position in the Heb. it destroys the harmony of the context.

<sup>y</sup> 6<sup>8a</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., Lord.

<sup>z</sup> 6<sup>8a</sup> Vss. 9-11e, are in prose, not poetry, and introduce a theme and figure distinct from those found in the preceding and following context. They may be rendered: <sup>9</sup>And it shall come to pass, if there be ten men left in one home that they shall die. <sup>10</sup>And one's relative even the one to burn him, shall take him up to carry the bones from the house and shall say to him who is in the innermost parts of the house, Are there any more with you? And he shall say, None. And he shall say, Hush! for one must not mention the name of Jehovah. <sup>11a</sup>For behold, Jehovah will command . . .

The picture is that of a plague, and although there is much that is obscure, the reader feels the horror of the situation. If the passage is from Amos, it clearly belongs in a different context. Its form and setting strongly suggest that it was added by a scribe.

<sup>a</sup> 6<sup>11b, c</sup> I. e., palace and hovel alike.

<sup>b</sup> 6<sup>11c</sup> Lit., fissures.

<sup>c</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> Or, Who rejoice because of Lodebar,

Who say, 'Have we not captured Karnaim by our might.'

If this be the right translation, the reference is to the recent capture of these east-Jordan towns by Jeroboam. The versions and the context and the Heb. favor the ordinary translation followed above.

Approach
of the
Assyrian
conqueror

Jeho-
vah's leniency in avert-
ing the locust plague

In avert-
ing the drought

<sup>14</sup>Verily, I am now raising up against you,
O house of Israel, a nation;
And they shall oppress you,
From the entrance of Hamath<sup>e</sup>
Even to the brook of the Arabah,
Is the oracle of Jehovah, the God of hosts.<sup>f</sup>

§ 10. Symbolic Pictures of the Impending Judgment, Am. 7<sup>1-9</sup>

Am. 7 <sup>1</sup>Thus the Lord<sup>g</sup> Jehovah showed me,
And behold, he was forming locusts,
When the late spring grass<sup>h</sup> began to come up.<sup>i</sup>
<sup>2</sup>And when they were making an end<sup>j</sup>
Of devouring the vegetation of the land,
I said, O Lord Jehovah, forgive, I pray,
How can Jacob stand, for he is small?
<sup>3</sup>Jehovah relented concerning this;
It shall not be, said Jehovah.

<sup>4</sup>Thus the Lord Jehovah showed me,
And behold, he was giving command to execute judgment,
By fire—the Lord Jehovah.
And it devoured the great deep,<sup>k</sup>
And had begun to devour the tilled land;

<sup>d</sup> 6<sup>13</sup> The horn stands for strength. Cf. Dt. 33<sup>17</sup>, Jer. 48<sup>25</sup>, Ps. 89<sup>17</sup>. The meaning is, Have we not by our own efforts attained this new power and prestige under Jeroboam II? The verse is unusually long and may be divided, or possibly may have received later supplements.

<sup>e</sup> 6<sup>14</sup> From Hamath in the extreme north to a stream flowing into either the northeastern or the southeastern end of the Dead Sea.

<sup>f</sup> 6<sup>14</sup> Transferring this line from its impossible position earlier in the vs.

<sup>g</sup> 10 With the preceding section Amos's arraignment of Israel and of its guilty rulers reaches a climax. It would seem that he felt that he had accomplished all that he could by dire invective and warning. He could plainly see, however, that he had not reached the minds and much less the hearts of most of his hearers. Now by simple, concrete pictures, similar to the parables of the sages, he seeks to impress upon their minds the same fundamental truths that Jehovah is long suffering, but that he is also just and cannot longer leave the wicked, unrepentant nation unpunished. The formula, for three transgressions, yea, for four is here vividly and forcibly illustrated. The locust plague, the drought and famine were familiar memories to his hearers. Cf. § 6. What Amos here presents is something objective, not merely a vision; but he saw beyond mere things and events to their deeper significance, and beheld the God back of all phenomena. In this he reveals incidentally the process by which he became a prophet. It is possible also that the results of all his keen observation and enlightened thought were originally, as in Isaiah's inaugural vision (§ 40) gathered up and made real in a vision of Jehovah standing over Israel with a plumb-line, the symbol of strict justice, or else of Jehovah standing, ready to strike, above the altar and sanctuary which symbolized Israel's social and religious life (8<sup>1-4</sup>).

From 7<sup>13</sup> it is clear that these visions at least were presented at the sanctuary at Bethel. While they lack the parallelism of succeeding lines, they are characterized by an unmistakable poetic structure. There is a close parallelism in form and thought between the corresponding lines of these three pictures or visions, and each contains three stanzas of approximately nine lines in the three-beat measure.

<sup>g</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> Here, as in <sup>2</sup> and frequently in the book, the word Lord may be secondary. It is often omitted in the Gk. and usually destroys the metre.

<sup>h</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> The last growth which came up as result of the late spring rains in March and April.

<sup>i</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> The line, And behold there were full-grown locusts after the kings mowings, is clearly a later gloss, intended to fix the exact time. The reference is probably to the levy of grass for the support of the royal animals. Cf. I Kgs. 18<sup>5</sup>. The later Roman rulers of Palestine exacted a similar levy from the pasture lands in March and April.

<sup>j</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> Dividing the consonants so as to secure a harmonious reading.

<sup>k</sup> 7<sup>4</sup> I. e., so great was the drought that it dried up the great deep from which came the water in springs and rivers. Cf. Gen. 7<sup>11</sup>, Dt. 33<sup>18</sup>, Ps. 24<sup>2</sup>, and the diagram, Vol. I, p. 52.

<sup>5</sup>Then I said, O Lord Jehovah cease, I pray,
How can Jacob stand for he is small?
<sup>6</sup>Jehovah<sup>1</sup> relented concerning this;
Neither shall this be, said Jehovah.

<sup>7</sup>Thus the Lord<sup>m</sup> showed me,
And behold the Lord was standing
Beside a wall,<sup>n</sup> with a plumb-line in his hand.
<sup>8</sup>And Jehovah said to me,
What dost thou see, Amos?
And I answered, A plumb-line,<sup>o</sup>
Then the Lord said, Behold I am setting a plumb-line
In the midst of my people Israel,
I will not again pass by them any more.
<sup>9</sup>And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate,
The sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste,
And I will rise up against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.<sup>p</sup>

Inevitable judgment to overtake guilty Israel

§ 11. Amaziah's Accusation and Amos's Reply, Am. 7<sup>10-17</sup>

Am. 7 <sup>10</sup>Then Amaziah the priest of Bethel sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos has conspired against you in the midst of the house of Israel; the land is not able to bear all his words.<sup>11</sup> For thus has Amos said, ‘Jeroboam shall die by the sword,<sup>q</sup> and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of his land.’

Amaziah's message to the king

<sup>12</sup>Also Amaziah said to Amos,<sup>r</sup> O seer,<sup>s</sup> go flee away to the land of Judah, and there eat bread and there prophesy; <sup>13</sup>but you shall no longer prophesy at Bethel; for it is the king's sanctuary, and it is the royal residence.

Command to Amos

<sup>1</sup> <sup>7<sup>6</sup></sup> The Heb. adds Lord, but cf. the parallel in <sup>3</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>7<sup>7</sup></sup> So Gk. and Lat. The Heb. omits Lord, evidently as a result of a scribal error.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>7<sup>7</sup></sup> In the Heb., plumb-line has been introduced twice in the sentence, probably by a mistake of a copyist. A correct text is followed above.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>7<sup>8a-c</sup></sup> If these lines be secondary, the third strophe originally had the regular nine lines. But cf. the similar expression <sup>7<sup>7</sup></sup>.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>7<sup>9</sup></sup> As in the preceding addresses, the predictions culminate in the declaration that Israel and the rulers shall be punished by the sword of the conqueror.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>11</sup> The early editor of the book of Amos, who was probably one of his disciples, has introduced here the record of a crucial experience in the work of the prophet. Its unusual position in the midst of the direct addresses strongly supports the conclusion that from the first it stood in its present place, because it described events which immediately followed Amos's words in 6<sup>7</sup>, <sup>14</sup> and 7<sup>2</sup>, freely quoted by Amaziah in 1<sup>2</sup>. This position is more natural than after 6<sup>14</sup> or 9<sup>7</sup>, which has been advocated by certain scholars. The reply of Amos in 7<sup>17</sup> indicates that Amaziah's warning did not daunt him, so that there is no reason for doubting that the visions and further addresses in 8 and 9 were delivered subsequent to the incident here recorded. His ultimate banishment from Northern Israel may however, explain why he, first of all the prophets, resorted to writing as a means of preserving and further presenting his message. As in the addresses and visions, a certain symmetrical structure is discernible even in this passage, which has led certain recent writers to treat it as poetry. Cf. Harper, Amos and Hosea, 168. It lacks at many points, however, the essential element of parallelism, as well as metrical regularity, so that it is best classified as prose.

<sup>r</sup> <sup>7<sup>11</sup></sup> Amaziah makes personal the prophet's general statement in <sup>9</sup> regarding the reigning family.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>7<sup>12</sup></sup> There is no evidence whether Amaziah here speaks on his own or the king's authority. <sup>8</sup> <sup>7<sup>12</sup></sup> The old designation of a prophet. Cf. II Sam. 24<sup>11</sup> and many passages in Chrs. The term suggests that the visions are in the mind of Amaziah—further confirming the present position of the narrative—and also carried with it a note of mockery, O visionary. The priest also classifies Amos with the professional seers who received pay for their services. Cf. Am. 9<sup>7, 8</sup>.

Amos's
reply
and vindication

The fate of Amaziah and his class

Israel's ripeness for judgment

The evidences of decay

<sup>14</sup>Then Amos answered and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, nor a son of a prophet;<sup>t</sup> but I was a shepherd and a dresser of sycamores; <sup>15</sup>but Jehovah took me from following the flock, and Jehovah said to me, ‘Go, prophesy against my people Israel.’

<sup>16</sup>Now therefore hear the word of Jehovah: ‘Thou sayest, “Thou shalt not prophesy against Israel, nor preach against the house of Isaac.”’ <sup>17</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: ‘Thy wife shall be a harlot in the city and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die upon an unclean soil, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of his land.’<sup>u</sup>

§ 12. The Symbolic Picture of Israel's Approaching End, Am. 8

Am. 8 <sup>1</sup>Thus the Lord Jehovah showed me,
And behold, a basket of summer fruit.
<sup>2</sup>Then he said, ‘What dost thou see, Amos?’
And I said, ‘A basket of summer fruit.’
And Jehovah said to me,
‘The end has come to my people Israel,
I will not again pass them by.’

<sup>4</sup>Hear this, you who trample upon the needy,
And oppress<sup>v</sup> the poor of the earth, saying,
<sup>5</sup>When shall the new moon<sup>w</sup> pass that we may sell grain,
And the sabbath that we may open<sup>x</sup> the corn—
Making smaller the measure and enlarging the weight,<sup>y</sup>
And perverting the false balances—<sup>z</sup>
<sup>6</sup>And that we may sell the refuse of the corn!<sup>a</sup>

<sup>t</sup> 7<sup>14</sup> I. e., one who belonged to the prophetic guild. Cf. Introd., p. 11. Amos does not deny but rather in <sup>15</sup> acknowledges that he had become a prophet in response to the divine call. He does, however, repudiate the charge that he belonged originally to the order of professional prophets.

<sup>u</sup> 7<sup>17</sup> Amos's prediction in form is personal, but in spirit it is general, for Amaziah is but one of the guilty ruling class, whose speedy captivity he has already proclaimed. His reiteration of the very words with which Amaziah had charged him reveals his unflinching courage.

§ 12 Amos's experience at Bethel may have intensified his conviction that there was no hope for Israel. The next picture forcibly expresses that belief. The nation is symbolized by a basket of rich, tropical fruit, now attractive in appearance but dead ripe, and certain, in a brief time, to become a mass of loathsome putrefaction. The Heb. word for summer fruit, kāyic, also suggests the similar word, kēg, end. The picture anticipates in many ways Juvenal's descriptions of decadent Rome. In the practical application of the illustration Amos turns again with bitter invective and irony upon the rich corrupt rulers who by their crimes are hastening the end. Then in the powerful imagery of earthquake, eclipse, pestilence, and famine—want of religious truth, as well as want of food—he portrays the final collapse of the nation. Through it all, as in 5<sup>1-3</sup>, one hears repeatedly the dirges of the wailing women. After the first strophe of seven lines, the alternating stanzas contain respectively seven and six lines. Possibly six was originally the strophic unit. Throughout the three-beat movement is employed with remarkable regularity.

<sup>v</sup> 8<sup>4</sup> So Gk., instead of the obscure Heb., for making the poor of the earth cease.

<sup>w</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> The new moon was one of the most important primitive festivals. Cf. I Sam. 20<sup>5, 18</sup> and Vol. IV, § 216.

<sup>x</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> I. e., expose the corn for sale.

<sup>y</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> Lit., to make small the ephah and to enlarge the weight, i. e., to cheat by giving small measure and by using too large weights.

<sup>z</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> These two ironical lines appear to be interjected by the prophet, although they may have been put in the mouth of the deceitful merchants.

<sup>a</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> Two lines,

*Buying the poor for silver,
And the needy for a pair of shoes!*

are alien to the thought of the context and were probably added by a scribe from 2<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>7</sup>Jehovah hath sworn by the pride of Jacob,
Never shall I forget all their deeds!

Consequences
of the crimes
of the Israelites;
earthquake

<sup>8</sup>For this shall not the land tremble,
And all her inhabitants mourn?
Shall not the whole of it rise like<sup>b</sup> the Nile,
And sink like the Nile of Egypt?

<sup>9</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day,
It is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah,
'That I will make the sun set at noon
And darken the earth in broad day,
<sup>3</sup>And the singing-women of the palace shall wail,<sup>c</sup>
It is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.
A multitude of carcasses! In every place they are cast!

Eclipse
and pestilence

<sup>10</sup>And I will turn your festivals into mourning,
And all your songs into dirges,
I will bring upon all loins sackcloth,<sup>d</sup>
And upon every head baldness,
I will make it like the mourning for an only son,
And the end of it like a bitter day.

Uni-
ver-sal lamentation

<sup>11</sup>And I will send hunger in the land,<sup>e</sup>
Not a famine of bread nor a thirst for water,
But for hearing the word of Jehovah.

Ab-sence of divine revela-
tion

<sup>12</sup>Then shall they wander from sea to sea,
From the north to the rising of the sun shall they run to and fro,
To seek the word of Jehovah, but they shall not find it.

<sup>13</sup>In that day shall faint
The fairest maidens and the youths,<sup>f</sup>
<sup>14</sup>Who swear by the guilt<sup>g</sup> of Samaria,
And say, 'As liveth thy God, O Dan!
And as liveth thy patron,<sup>h</sup> O Beersheba!'
And they shall fall, no more to rise!

De-
struc-
tion of
the flower
of the
nation

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>a</sup> So Gk. Cf. 9<sup>a</sup>. The Heb. adds and heave, but it destroys the antithetic parallelism as well as the metre of the vs. Cf. Is. 24<sup>19, 20</sup>. The figure is that of an earthquake, which is likened to the periodic rise and fall of the Nile.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>b</sup> Following Harper in transferring this vs. from its unnatural setting to the position where it fits the context, and in omitting as a gloss, in the day. As in 6<sup>a, 10</sup>, a scribe has added to this highly dramatic picture of slaughter the impressive word, Hush!

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>10</sup> I. e., symbols of mourning.

<sup>e</sup> 8<sup>11</sup> This line is the sequel of <sup>10</sup> and the opening line,

'Behold days are coming,' is the oracle of Jehovah, is clearly a later scribal addition. Vss. 11, 13 speak of a definite day, while the expression, Behold days are coming, is characteristic of a later age. Cf. 9<sup>13</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> A scribe, who had <sup>11</sup> in mind, has added, for thirst.

<sup>g</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> Possibly the original read, asherah; the two Heb. words are similar.

<sup>h</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> The present Heb. reads, way, and may refer to the pilgrimage to the old southern shrine, but a simple change of a letter gives the above harmonious reading.

§ 13. The Portrayal of the Final Destruction of the Nation, Am. 9<sup>1-8</sup>

Am. 9 <sup>1</sup>I saw the Lord standing by the altar;
 And he said, 'Smite the capitals that the thresholds may shake,
 Yea, break them off upon the head of all of them,
 And the rest of them I will slay with the sword,<sup>i</sup>
 Not one of them shall escape,
 Nor shall a refugee be delivered from among them.

Absolutely no escape from Jehovah
<sup>2</sup>If they dig through to Sheol, Thence will my hand take them;
 And if they climb up to heaven,
 Thence will I bring them down;
<sup>3</sup>And if they hide themselves on the top of Carmel,<sup>j</sup>
 Thence will I search them out and take them.

Retribution to overtake all
 And if they hide out of my sight at the bottom of the sea,
 Thence will I command the sea-serpent<sup>k</sup> to bite them;
<sup>4</sup>And if they go into captivity before their enemies,
 Thence will I command the sword to slay them,
 And I will keep my eye on them,
 For evil and not for good.'

Jehovah's omnipotence
<sup>5</sup>And it is the Lord Jehovah of hosts,
 Who toucheth the earth and it melts,
 And all who dwell in it mourn,
 And all of it rises up like the Nile,
 And sinks like the Nile of Egypt.<sup>l</sup>
<sup>6</sup>He who buildeth his chambers in the heavens,<sup>m</sup>
 And hath established his vault upon the earth;

§ 13 As Amos departs from the royal sanctuary at Bethel, he sees in imagination Jehovah standing over the altar and sanctuary, whose hypocritical ceremonial is so distasteful to him. He also seems to hear the divine command, probably addressed to the angelic attendants, to destroy the temple over the heads of the guilty worshippers. Then follows a powerful description of the impossibility of escape (cf. 2<sup>11</sup>, 13-16) and of the completeness of the ruin about to overtake the sinful kingdom. Thus in their original form Amos's sermons ended with the same note of doom with which they began. In the presence of the injustice, hypocrisy, and defiant attitude of Israel's leaders no other conclusion was possible. For him in the circumstances to have spoken peace and predicted prosperity would have been to be untrue to his mission and message and, like a false prophet, to have lured Israel on to her approaching ruin. It remained for some later prophet, who lived amidst changed conditions, to give expression to Jehovah's love and care for his people, which constituted the real background of all of Amos's preaching. This section falls naturally into four stanzas of six lines each. The more solemn four-beat movement prevails, although in describing the flight and Jehovah's hot pursuit of the fugitives in <sup>2</sup>, <sup>3a</sup>, <sup>b</sup>, the prophet appropriately uses the more rapid three-beat measure.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> A radical reconstruction of the text suggested by Volz and accepted by Marti (Dodekapeten, 221) gives the following simple and consistent reading, And he (Jehovah) smote the capitals and the thresholds shook; and he said, 'I will smite them all with the earthquake and will slay with the sword.' The present Heb., however, is clear and is strongly supported by the vss.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>2</sup> With its wooded heights and its caves, over two thousand in number, furnishing many places of refuge.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> Cf. for other traces of the belief in the existence of the primeval sea-monster, Gen. 1<sup>21</sup>, Is. 27<sup>1</sup>, 51<sup>9</sup>, 10.

<sup>l</sup> 9<sup>5</sup> Cf. the original of this figure in 8<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> For the Heb. conception of the universe here reflected, cf. diagram, Vol. I, p. 52.

He that calleth for the waters of the sea,
And poureth them out upon the face of the earth—
Jehovah is his name.<sup>n</sup>

Israel,
like the hethen, to be destroyed
for its crime

<sup>7</sup>Are ye not as the Cushites to me,<sup>o</sup>
O Israel?" is the oracle of Jehovah.
Did I not bring up Israel out of the land of Egypt,
And the Philistines<sup>p</sup> from Caphtor, and Aram from Kir?
<sup>8</sup>Behold the eyes of the Lord Jehovah are upon the sinful kingdom,
And I will destroy it from the face of the earth,
Except that I will not completely destroy the house of Jacob,
It is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>q</sup>

II

THE SERMONS OF HOSEA

§ 14. The Superscription to Hosea's Sermons, Hos. 1<sup>1</sup>

THE WORD OF JEHOVAH TO HOSEA THE SON OF BEERI
IN THE DAYS OF UZZIAH, JOTHAM, AHAZ, AND HEZEKIAH, KINGS OF JUDAH
AND
IN THE DAYS OF JEROBOAM, SON OF JOASH, KING OF ISRAEL.

<sup>n</sup> 9 5, 6 The different idioms and literary style, and the lack of connection with the context leave little doubt that these beautiful vss. were added by an exilic or post-exilic poet, who was impressed by Jehovah's omnipotent rule, as he read the prophecies of Amos and caught the spirit, although he voices his exalted emotions in the language of Is. 40-55 and Job. He was probably the scribe who also added the similar doxologies in 4<sup>10</sup>, 5<sup>5</sup>, 9. Together they constitute a majestic psalm, with the regular three-beat movement throughout.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> I. e., Jehovah treats with equal favor and justice the black-skinned Ethiopians and his chosen people the Israelites.

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Their hated foes, the Philistines, have been led and guided alike by Jehovah.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> These two lines, which contradict Amos's words, were evidently added by a later scribe, who recognized that the prophet's prediction had not been literally fulfilled. They are out of harmony with the prevailing metre and the last line is but a repetition of 7.

The Sermons of Hosea:—Only a few years later, and possibly contemporaneously with Amos (cf. Introd., p. 15), Hosea began his work. The background of 1-3 appears from the allusion in 1<sup>4</sup> to be the closing years of the long and prosperous reign of Jeroboam II; while 4-14 consist of extracts from Hosea's sermons delivered during the period of anarchy and rapid national decline that followed the death of the great king. They are the utterances of a poet-patriot, whose heart was breaking as he saw his beloved nation rushing to its certain ruin through disregard of the universal laws of society and morality. Stern denunciation, bitter indignation, piteous entreaty, and heartbroken sobs are all mingled together in his impassioned sermons. The style is so condensed and epigrammatical that, at certain points, it is obscure. Unfamiliar historical illusions also at times perplex the modern reader. The text has suffered greatly in transmission. And yet throughout the book the great fundamental truths of all religion find constant and noble expression. Probably no prophecy is less studied and understood, and yet none rewards the careful reader more richly.

§ 14 This long superscription was evidently added by a later editor of the book. The original probably gave simply the name of the prophet and that of his father. The dating by the reigns of the kings of Judah is doubtless the work of a Judean editor. It makes Hosea an exact contemporary of Isaiah (cf. Is. 1<sup>1</sup>) and dates his work broadly between 782 and 686 B.C., a period of nearly a century. The dating of the reign of Jeroboam II of Northern Israel, 781-740 B.C., is, on the other hand, too restricted; for the evidence is conclusive that the second part of Hosea's sermons, 4-14, were delivered after the death of Jeroboam II. The exact date of the prophet's work, therefore, must be determined from the references in his sermons. It probably began not long before 740 and was completed before 735 B.C.

15. The Harlotry of Hosea's Wife and Her Punishment,

Hos. 1<sup>2-9</sup>, 2<sup>2b</sup>, c, 4, 5a, b, 3<sup>1-4</sup>

THE BEGINNING OF JEHOVAH'S REVELATION BY HOSEA

Hosea's
marriageHos. 1<sup>2b</sup> Now Jehovah said to Hosea:Go marry a wife with whorish instincts who will bear you children by her whoredom<sup>a</sup>,For the land<sup>b</sup> is continually going a-whoring from after Jehovah.<sup>c</sup><sup>3</sup> So he went and married Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim.Birth
and name
of his son
JezreelAnd when she conceived and bore him a son,<sup>d</sup> Jehovah said:Call his name 'Jezreel,'<sup>d</sup>

For yet a little while

And I will avenge the blood shed at Jezreel upon the house of Jehu,

And I will cause the kingdom of Israel to cease.

<sup>5</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day,That I will break the bow<sup>e</sup> of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.Of Lo-ruhamah<sup>6</sup> And when she conceived again and bore a daughter, he said to him:Call her name 'Unpitied,'<sup>f</sup>

For I will no longer

Have pity on the house of Israel.

That I should still spare them.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>§ 15</sup> As Hosea looked back upon his work and life he realized that his own tragic domestic experiences had opened his eyes to the appreciation of those supreme truths regarding Jehovah's character and will which constituted his message and made him a prophet. Cf. Introd., pp. 15, 16. This experience corresponds to the earlier visions of Isaiah and Jeremiah. Like these later prophets he also realized that a knowledge of the way in which God's revelation had come to him would help his disciples to understand himself and his teachings. His painful experiences with his unfaithful wife Gomer, not only opened his own eyes, but also vividly illustrated the inner significance of Jehovah's past and present relations with his chosen people Israel. Therefore, putting aside his natural feelings, Hosea, at the beginning of his prophecies, tells and at the same time interprets his own private experiences that he may forthwith, in 2, use it as an illustration of Jehovah's attitude and feeling toward Israel.

It is probable that in the original version Hosea himself told of his experiences, using the first person as in 3. The editor who rewrote the story in the light of Hosea's tragic experience apparently added the awkward explanatory passage<sup>2b</sup>. If so the original read: Jehovah said to me, Go marry a wife. So I went and married Gomer.

Chap. 3 completes the personal story begun in 1. It is told in the barest outline because the details were probably known to most of his hearers. Only those elements which were essential to the illustration are presented, and yet, like Isaiah's initial vision, they reveal the vital doctrines which reappear throughout all his sermons. In the light of his own heart tragedy, it is possible fully to understand Hosea's passionate denunciation of sin and the tender, burning love that at the same time suffuses all his sermons.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>12</sup> Lit., Go take a wife of whoredom and children of whoredoms, but the Heb. idiom is obscure and misleading unless it is interpreted as above.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>12</sup> The land, as frequently in the O.T., stands for the inhabitants.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>12</sup> These two lines, like the text in Am. 1<sup>2</sup>, are an epitome of the sermons that follow.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>13</sup> The name was a reminder of the murder of the sons of Ahab, by which act Jehu the founder of the reigning house came to the throne of Israel. Cf. II Kgs. 9, 10, Vol. II, § 93.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>15</sup> I. e., military strength. Cf. Gen. 49<sup>24</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>16</sup> Lit., She is not pitied or loved.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>16</sup> The following verse,

*But on the house of Judah will I have pity,
And I will deliver them by Jehovah their God,
But I will not deliver by bow nor by sword,
Nor by battle nor by horses nor by horsemen,*

interrupts the story of the prophet's private experiences. Furthermore, it not only concerns Judah, in which Hosea was not interested, but also refers to a later deliverance of Jerusalem. The expression, by Jehovah their God, is also one of the regular formulas of the post-exilic scribes. Cf., for the later hope of a miraculous deliverance, Ezek. 39<sup>1-10</sup>, Joel 2<sup>22</sup>, Zech. 14<sup>3-5</sup>.

<sup>s</sup>Then she weaned Unpitié; and when she conceived and bore a son, he said:

<sup>9</sup>Call his name, ‘Not-my-people,’<sup>h</sup>
For ye indeed are not my people,
And I indeed am not your God.<sup>i</sup>

Then Hosea said:

I will put away Gomer,

<sup>2</sup> <sup>2b, c</sup>For she is not my wife,<sup>j</sup>

And I will not be her husband;

<sup>4</sup>And on her children I will have no pity,

Since they are children of whoredom,

<sup>5a, b</sup>For their mother hath become a harlot,

She who conceived them hath behaved shamefully.

Hosea's divorce
of his unfaithful wife

<sup>3</sup> <sup>1</sup>But Jehovah said to me:

Still<sup>k</sup> go, love<sup>l</sup> [this] woman,
Who loves a paramour and is an adulteress,
As Jehovah loveth the Israelites,
Although they turn to other gods,
And love raisin-cakes.<sup>m</sup>

The divine promptings still to love
her

<sup>2</sup>So I bought her to me for fifteen pieces<sup>n</sup> of silver and eight bushels<sup>o</sup> of barley and a measure<sup>p</sup> of barley.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>3</sup>And I said to her:

Many days shalt thou abide for me,

Thou shall not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be any man's wife,

Yet, I, on my part will be thine.<sup>r</sup>

Her
restoration
and discipline

<sup>h</sup> 1<sup>s</sup> This name indicates the complete estrangement of Jehovah's people.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>s</sup> Heb., not yours, but 2<sup>2b</sup> and certain Gk. codices establish the reading given above.

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>2b, c</sup> Commentators have long recognized that vss. 2<sup>b, c, 4</sup> are not consistent with their immediate context, which is complete and consistent without them. By many scholars they have been regarded as secondary glosses, but Bewer (in Am. Jour. of Sem. Langs. and Lit., XXII, 120–130) has called attention to the fact that <sup>5a, b</sup> go naturally with <sup>1</sup> and not with the rest of the vs., and that these disconnected fragments furnish the data regarding Hosea's private history which are implied by 3. He would add <sup>10</sup>, but the evidence is not conclusive, and in view of 3 it is more satisfactory to regard it as in its original context. The thought of this fragmentary section as restored is strikingly parallel to Jehovah's attitude toward Israel, proclaimed in 1<sup>6, 9</sup>. The later promise in 1<sup>10, 11</sup>, 2<sup>1</sup> has taken the place of the original instruction, which may be restored from the context.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> From 3 it may be inferred that Gomer at last fled from her home to her paramour and finally fell into the position of a slave, from which Hosea bought her, prompted as he was by an impulse which, in the light of his life-experience, he recognized as of divine origin. That the woman is Gomer is further established by the close parallel drawn between Hosea's experience with his wife and that of Jehovah with faithless Israel.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> His motive was akin to that of the love which Jehovah felt for the guilty Israelites. The thought here, as in 1, is very elliptical. The memory of Jehovah's relation to Israel is prominent in the prophet's mind.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> A very common article of food among the Hebrews (cf. I Sam. 25<sup>18</sup>, II Sam. 6<sup>19</sup>), but probably here associated with Baal worship, since raisins were, like wine, a product of agriculture.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Fifteen shekels, probably about ten dollars.

<sup>o</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Heb., homer.

<sup>p</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Heb., lethech. Its exact value is unknown. According to the Mishna it was equal to half a homer, i. e., four bushels. Guided by the relative values in II Kgs. 7<sup>18</sup>, twelve bushels of barley were equal to about fifteen shekels, so that the total price paid would be approximately thirty shekels (or twenty dollars), the price of a slave. Cf. Ex. 21<sup>32</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Gk., wine.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> I. e., by stern discipline and restraint she shall learn to control her base passions. Most commentators insert a negative in the last sentence; but the present Heb. simply records the carrying out of the command in<sup>1</sup>.

Israel's similar experi-
ence

<sup>4</sup>For through many days
The Israelites shall abide<sup>s</sup>
Without king and without prince,
Without sacrifice and without pillar,<sup>t</sup>
Without ephod<sup>u</sup> and without teraphim.

<sup>5</sup>Afterward the Israelites shall return<sup>v</sup> and seek Jehovah their God and David their king<sup>w</sup> and they shall come trembling<sup>x</sup> to Jehovah and his goodness<sup>y</sup> at the end of days.

§ 16. Israel's Harlotry and Punishment, Hos. 2<sup>2a</sup>, d, e, 3, 5c-17, 18<sup>e</sup>, 23

Hos. 2 <sup>2a</sup>, d, e. Strive with your mother, strive,
That she put her acts of whoredom from her sight,
And her adulteries from between her breasts,
<sup>3</sup>Lest I strip her naked,
And set her as she was on the day of her birth,
And make her like the wilderness,
And let her become like a parched land,
And let her die of thirst.
<sup>5c-e</sup>For she hath said,
'I will go after my paramour
Who gave me my bread and my water,
My wool, my flax, my oil, and my drink.'

<sup>4</sup> Here the prophet applies Gomer's experience to that of apostate Israel as in 2. They are to be deprived of the political and religious institutions which they prized so highly. The prediction corresponds to Amos's repeated announcements of approaching exile.

<sup>v</sup> <sup>31</sup> Heb., magebah, the sacred pillar found beside all ancient Canaanite and Hebrew shrines.

<sup>u</sup> <sup>34</sup> From Judg. 8<sup>6</sup>, 27, 171-3, 18<sup>14</sup>, 17-20, and I Sam. 21<sup>9</sup> it is clear that in ancient times the ephod was an image, like the teraphim or family gods. They were also both employed in determining the divine will. Hosea apparently makes no protest against these symbols.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>34</sup> Like the appendix to Amos's sermons, this verse reflects a much later date and conditions. It voices the hopes of the restoration which are so prominent in the exilic and post-exilic prophecies.

<sup>w</sup> <sup>35</sup> The second David, the messianic king.

<sup>x</sup> <sup>35</sup> I. e., trembling because of joy or reverence in Jehovah's presence.

<sup>y</sup> <sup>34</sup> Gk., Lat., and Syr., altar.

<sup>§ 16</sup> In this section Hosea interprets Jehovah's relation to Israel in the light of his own private experience with Gomer. Corresponding to his marriage was the solemn covenant which first bound together Jehovah and Israel with mutual obligations to be loyal to each other. Jehovah, like the prophet, has been true and has spared no effort to win and hold the affection of his chosen people; but Israel, like Gomer, has been constantly unfaithful. The nation's apostasy was like Gomer's harlotry, and is so designated by the prophet. But Israel again, like Gomer, is foolish and obdurate, so that nothing remains for Jehovah but, by severe discipline, to endeavor to bring her to her senses and to arouse in her a true repentance. The nation as a whole is like Gomer, spoken of as mother, and the individual Israelites as children. The parallelism in language and thought between this and the preceding section is exceedingly close.

By recent commentators this chapter has been torn asunder and fully half of it attributed to another author. One basis of this analysis is the variation in metre. But while Hosea is one of the most poetic of all the prophets, his poetic feelings are too deep and overwhelming to be closely held in leash by the dictates of an arbitrary metre. The prevailing metre throughout this chapter is the three-beat measure, but, as elsewhere in his prophecy, the prophet frequently introduces longer and shorter lines. Therefore an analysis based purely on the metre is precarious and arbitrary. The main reasons urged against the unity and Hosean authorship of the chapter are the presence of certain minor inconsistencies. These appear, however, to be due in part to scribal additions. It is also dangerous to judge prophet like Hosea by the definite, clear-cut canons of western logic. There is scarcely an idea in the entire chapter which does not find its roots in Hosea's teachings and most of the figures and ideas are suggested by the close parallelism of his own private experience. The figures are, also, the unmistakable products of Hosea's brilliant poetic imagination.

Vss. <sup>14b</sup> may possibly come from a later disciple, but if so, one would anticipate more definite references to the exile and restoration. Rather the allusions are drawn from Israel's past with which Hosea shows remarkable familiarity, and the hopes are those which are implied in <sup>e</sup>Therefore I am going to hedge up her ways,

And build a wall about her,
So that she cannot find her paths.

<sup>7</sup>And she will pursue her paramours,<sup>z</sup>
But will not overtake them,
And she will seek and not find them.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But she herself did not know That it was I who gave her
The corn, the sweet wine, and the oil.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Therefore I will take back my corn in its time,
And my sweet wine in its season,
And I will withdraw my wool and my flax,
Given to cover her nakedness;

<sup>10</sup>And so I will uncover her shame,<sup>c</sup>
And none shall deliver her out of my hand.

<sup>12</sup>And I will lay waste her vines and her fig-trees,<sup>d</sup>
Of which she hath said, 'These are my rewards
Which my lovers have given me.'
And I will make them a thicket,
And the wild beasts shall devour them.

<sup>11</sup>And I will also cause all her mirth to cease,<sup>e</sup>
Her feasts, her new moon, and her sabbaths.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13</sup>And thus will I visit upon her the days of the Baalim,<sup>g</sup>
In which she made offerings<sup>h</sup> to them,
And decked herself with ear-rings and jewels,
And went after her paramours,
And forgot me, is the oracle of Jehovah.

Jeho-
vah's discipline of Israel
to make clear
the folly of apostasy

---

Hosea's treatment of his faithless wife. Even the more material picture in 21-23 is the complement of Hosea's picture of the land stripped of its fertility in punishment for its sins. Whether they be from Hosea's pen or not, the literary, ethical, and logical unity of these verses is so marked that it is almost a crime to separate them, and in view of the conflicting theories regarding the analysis which now hold the field such a step is exceedingly precarious.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> I. e., the Baalim, the local gods of Canaan. Baal was the God of agriculture and the agricultural civilization of Israel was closely connected with the native cults.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> The Hebrew adds the prose note, And will say, I will go and return to my first husband, for it was better for me than now! All recent commentators have recognized that these lines anticipate the repentance which comes naturally later in the passage. They are also inconsistent with the representation of 6, 7, for they assume that the unfaithful wife has deserted her husband, while in 6, 7 she is confined by her husband and not allowed to go away from his home. They were probably added by an editor who had in mind the restoration after the exile and who wished to emphasize the note of repentance.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> The awkward construction and the sudden change from the singular to the plural indicate that the lines, And that I multiplied silver for her, and gold which they used for Baal, were added by a scribe who was thinking of Israel's apostasy, possibly in connection with the golden calves set up by Jeroboam I. This conclusion is confirmed by the fact that Hosea himself speaks only of the Baalim, not Baal.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> The clause, in the sight of the paramours, is apparently an addition. The prophet gives no thought to the paramours.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Cf. 3<sup>4</sup> for the same idea.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> This vs. logically and in all probability originally followed 12, which describes the destruction of the natural products of the soil. Its immediate sequel is 13.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> The Hebrew also adds, and all her festal assemblies, but this is a late priestly expression, is a repetition of 11<sup>b</sup>, and destroys the metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> I. e., punish for the feast days which she celebrated in honor of the Baalim.

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Lit., in pre-exilic Heb., caused the savor of sacrifice to rise. Cf. Vol. II, 174, note k.

Divine
favor
and recon-cilia-
tion
for penitent
Israel

<sup>i</sup> Therefore I am going to allure her,
And bring her into the wilderness,
And speak endearingly to her.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup> And I will give her from there her vineyards,
And the valley of Achor<sup>j</sup> as a door of hope,
And there she shall respond as in the days of her youth,
As in the days when she came up from the land of Egypt.

<sup>16</sup> And it shall be in that day, is the oracle of Jehovah,
She shall call to her husband,
And shall call no more to the Baalim.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>17</sup> And I will remove the name of the Baalim from her mouth,
And they shall no more be mentioned by their names.

<sup>18e</sup> And I will betroth her to me forever,

<sup>19</sup> Yea, I will betroth her<sup>l</sup> to me in righteousness,
And in judgment, and in kindness, and in mercy,

<sup>20</sup> Yea, I will betroth her to me in faithfulness and she shall know Jehovah.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>21</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day,
That I will speak,<sup>n</sup>—it is the oracle of Jehovah,—
I will speak to the heavens,
And they will speak to the earth.

<sup>22</sup> And the earth will speak to the grain,
And the new wine and the oil;
And they shall speak to Jezreel,<sup>o</sup>
And I will sow her in the land.

<sup>23</sup> And I will have pity upon the unpitied,
And I will say to Not-my-people, ‘Thou art my people,’
And they will say, ‘Thou art my God.’<sup>p</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Cf. the same idiom in Gen. 34<sup>3</sup>, where Shechem speaks endearingly (lit., to the heart) of Dinah, as he woos her.

<sup>j</sup> Cf. Josh. 7<sup>25, 26</sup>. The valley which in Israel's early history led from the scene of trouble and punishment to the uplands of Canaan.

<sup>k</sup> This verse has always proved the stumbling block of translators and commentators. In its present form in the Hebrew <sup>16<sup>b</sup></sup>, Thou shalt call me Ish (my husband), and shalt call me no more Baals (my master), is not only inconsistent with its context, but also with Hosea's prevailing use of the plural Baalim. It is also doubtful whether even such a bold prophet as Hosea would represent the nation as addressing Jehovah as my husband. Even if this were possible, the account of the re-establishment of the close covenant between Jehovah and Israel is first introduced in a subsequent paragraph. Although the Greek version is almost unintelligible, it has retained the plural Baalim and suggests the translation given above. While this rendering is only hypothetical, it is at least consistent with Hosea's thought and with the subsequent vs. By many <sup>16</sup> is regarded as simply a scribal gloss.

<sup>l</sup> Restoring the third person as demanded by the context and the usage of the chapter as a whole. Apparently in these vss. some later scribe misread the third person, feminine, sing. of the verb for the very similar second person sing., and changed the corresponding pronouns in order to make the text consistent. His aim may also have been to make the style more vivid by introducing the direct address.

<sup>m</sup> Or, following a revised text, in the knowledge of Jehovah.

<sup>n</sup> Lit., answer, respond, but speak to or communicate with better expresses the meaning of the idiom. Jehovah's command to nature to withhold her products, <sup>9-12</sup>, will be revoked.

<sup>o</sup> Jezreel here stands for Israel. Possibly the two words were originally identical, and Jezreel, later identified with the town or plain of this name, is a local survival of the ancient form. Its meaning, God sows, was in the prophet's mind, as the next line indicates.

<sup>p</sup> Reversing the statements of Hos. in 1<sup>6-9</sup>.

§ 17. Later Predictions of Israel's Ultimate Restoration, Hos. 2<sup>18a-d</sup>, 1<sup>10-21</sup>

Hos. 2 <sup>18a-d</sup> And I will make for them a covenant in that day,

With the wild beasts, and the birds of the heavens and the creeping things of the earth,
And the bow and the sword and war I will completely destroy from out the land,
And I will make them lie down in safety.

1 <sup>10</sup> And the number of the Israelites shall be as the sand of the sea,
Which cannot be measured or numbered;
And instead of its being said of them, 'Ye are not my people,'
They shall be called, 'The sons of the living God.'

11 And the Judahites and the Israelites shall be gathered together,<sup>q</sup>
And they shall appoint for themselves one head, and they shall go up out of the land,
For great shall be the day of Jezreel.<sup>r</sup>

2 <sup>s</sup> Say ye to your brother, 'My people' and to your sister, 'Pitied'.<sup>t</sup>

Universal
peace

Prosperity
and divine
favor
for the Israelites

Union of all
Israel

§ 18. Jehovah's Charge against Israel and Her Guilty Priests and Princes, Hos. 4

Hos. 4 <sup>1</sup>Hear the word of Jehovah, O Israelites,
For Jehovah hath a charge against the inhabitants of the land,
For there is no fidelity, nor true love,
Nor knowledge of God in the land,
<sup>2</sup>But perjury, lying, and murder,
Stealing, committing adultery, and deeds of violence,<sup>t</sup>
And acts of bloodshed quickly follow each other.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>Therefore the land mourns,
And all its inhabitants languish,
Together with the wild beasts and the birds of the heavens,
While even the fish of the sea are swept away,

A general arraign-ment of the nation

§ 17 The opening chapters of Hosea, like those of most of the pre-exilic writers, have been supplemented by later editors who had in mind the glories of the ultimate restoration of the Jewish exiles. Chap. 2<sup>18a-d</sup> interrupts the context and introduces a vocabulary, phraseology, and the ideals of universal peace which are found elsewhere in the O.T. only in much later writings, e. g., Is. 4<sup>5</sup>, 6, 65<sup>25</sup>, Ezek. 34<sup>25-27</sup>. They are also cast in a rough five-beat movement in striking contrast to Hosea's prevailing metre.

In 1<sup>10-21</sup> is found another picture of the ultimate restoration of the Israelites. It is cast in the same five-beat measure, and if not from the same author is from the same age and point of view. It has long been recognized that their logical position is after rather than before chap. 2, for their message is one of promise rather than threat. Rom. 9<sup>25, 26</sup> also follows the same order. Together these three vss. constitute a complete literary unit, consisting of two strophes of four lines each. They are written from the point of view of the exile or post-exilic period and picture the final restoration and union of Judah and Israel under one ruler. Hosea himself, however, regarded the division at the death of Solomon as a mistake, 8<sup>1</sup>, 13<sup>10, 11</sup>. These appendices are so closely connected with Hosea's words and teachings that they are introduced here rather than with the other messianic prophecies.

<sup>q</sup> 1<sup>10</sup> I. e., from the land of exile.

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Probably another play on the word Jezreel.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> Cf. 2<sup>23</sup> for the same idea, when God sows Israel.

§ 18 With 4 Hosea's earliest recorded public sermons probably begin. Their background is the turbulent period that followed the death of Jeroboam II, about 740 B.C. Assassin rapidly succeeded assassin on the throne of Israel. Law and order were relaxed and anarchy prevailed, revealing clearly the inner corruption which Amos denounced. Hosea opens with a stern and sweeping arraignment of the nation as a whole, and then goes on to place the responsibility with the false prophets, who have failed to instruct the people regarding the will of Jehovah, and the degenerate rulers who have set the example in crime. One recognizes also in the prevailing low social morality the baneful effect of the licentious Canaanite cults which had long flourished in Northern Israel.

The usual three-beat movement is employed with an occasional two-beat variation. The contents of this section fall naturally into nine stanzas of originally eleven or twelve lines.

<sup>t</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> Heb., they break into, but this makes no sense, and a slight correction gives the above harmonious reading.

<sup>u</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> Heb., acts of bloodshed touch acts of bloodshed.

Re-sponsi-bility of the priests for the guilt of the people

Guilty priests and people to pay the penalty for their crimes

The sensu-ality of the popular relig-ion

Its de-moralizing, and fa-tal ef-fects

<sup>4</sup> Yet let none bring charges,
And let none reprove,
Since my people are but as their priestlings,<sup>v</sup>
<sup>5</sup> O priest, thou shalt stumble by day,<sup>w</sup>
And the prophet also shall stumble with thee,
By night I will destroy thy people.
<sup>6</sup> Thy people are being destroyed for lack of knowledge.
Because thou hast rejected knowledge,
I reject thee from being priest to me.
Since thou hast forgotten the instruction of thy God,
I also will forget thy children.

<sup>7</sup> The more they increased the more they sinned against me,
They<sup>x</sup> have changed their glory for shame.
<sup>8</sup> They feed on the sin of my people,
And they lust after their guilt.
<sup>9</sup> Thus it comes to be, like people, like priest,
But I will visit upon each punishment for his ways,
And their deeds I will requite to them.
<sup>10</sup> For they shall eat and not be satisfied,
They shall play the harlot and not find satisfaction,<sup>y</sup>
Because they have ceased to heed Jehovah.

<sup>11</sup> Harlotry and sweet wine take away the understanding;<sup>z</sup>
<sup>12</sup> My people ask counsel of their wood,
And their staff makes known to them their oracle!<sup>a</sup>
For a spirit of harlotry has led them astray,
So that they have played the harlot from after their God.
<sup>13</sup> On the heights of the mountains they sacrifice,
And on the hills they burn their offerings,<sup>b</sup>
Under oaks and poplars and terebinths,
For their shade is pleasant!
Therefore your daughters play the harlot,
And your brides commit adultery.

<sup>14</sup> I will not punish your<sup>c</sup> daughters because they play the harlot,
Nor your brides because they commit adultery,

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>4</sup> The text is evidently corrupt. Heb., thy people are as they who bring charges against a priest, but Gk. has, my people. A slight emendation gives the above reading. The original may have been simply, my people are like thee, O priest.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>5</sup> Following the Gk., which is supported by the metrical structure of the vs. The meaning of the last line is obscure. The above reading is based on a slightly revised text. The Heb. has another for people. For mother, as a designation of the nation, cf. 2<sup>2</sup>. A radical reconstruction of the line gives the reading, and I will turn your days into night.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>7</sup> So Syr. and Targ. Heb., I will change, but the above reading agrees best with the context. The judgment is not introduced until 9<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> So Syr., Theod., and the probable meaning of the Heb.

<sup>z</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> This is evidently one of the many wise maxims which he incorporates in his sermons. It is a fitting introduction to the stanza which follows and further expands and illustrates it.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> Probably the reference is to consulting the wooden teraphim. Cf. 8<sup>6</sup>, II Sam. 2<sup>1</sup>, 16<sup>23</sup>. Cf. Ezek. 21<sup>21</sup> for an example of divination with arrows and the teraphim.

<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>13</sup> Survivals of the ancient Canaanite cults, practiced on the heights because associated with the worship of the heavenly bodies, as in Babylon.

<sup>c</sup> 4<sup>14</sup> I. e., elders and priests or fathers and husbands.

And sacrificed with consecrated prostitutes;<sup>d</sup>
Thus the stupid people come to ruin!

<sup>e</sup>Though thou play the harlot, Israel, Let not Judah become guilty,
And do not come to Gilgal
And do not go up to Beth-aven,<sup>e</sup>
And do not swear [at Beersheba],<sup>f</sup> 'As Jehovah liveth.'<sup>g</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Yea, like a stubborn heifer,
Israel has behaved stubbornly,
Can Jehovah now feed him,
As he would a lamb in a broad pasture?<sup>h</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Ephraim<sup>i</sup> is wedded to idols;<sup>j</sup> leave him alone!

<sup>18</sup>A band of topers! They gave themselves up to harlotry;<sup>k</sup>
They love shame<sup>l</sup> more than honor.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>19</sup>A wind-storm shall envelop them in its wings,<sup>n</sup>
And they shall be ashamed of their altars.<sup>o</sup>

Israel
hopelessly
de-generate

§ 19. The Guilt of Priests and Princes, Hos. 5<sup>1-14</sup>

Hos. 5 <sup>1</sup>Hear this, O priests,
And hearken, O house of Israel,
And, O house of the king, give heed;
Since for you is the judgment.
A snare have you become at Mizpeh,
And a net spread out on Tabor,
<sup>2</sup>And a deep pit have they dug at Shittim,
And there is no correction for any of them.<sup>p</sup>
<sup>3</sup>I indeed know Ephraim,
And Israel is not hid from me,
For thou,<sup>q</sup> O Ephraim, hast played the harlot, Israel is defiled.

Princes
and
the priests betray-ers of
the
people

<sup>d</sup> 4<sup>14</sup> Those who had sacrificed their virtue as a religious rite. They were common in connection with all early Semitic religions.

<sup>e</sup> 4<sup>15</sup> Evidently, as in Am. 5<sup>6</sup>, Bethel is intended.

<sup>f</sup> 4<sup>15</sup> As in Am. 8<sup>14</sup>, Beersheba, the well of swearing, was originally in the author's mind, although it has fallen out of the Heb. text.

<sup>g</sup> 4<sup>15</sup> This vs. is clearly a later addition, for it breaks the close connection between <sup>14</sup> and <sup>16</sup>. The address to Judah also reflects the point of view of a later Judean prophet. The latter part of the vs. is a free reproduction of Am. 5<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 4<sup>16</sup> Possibly <sup>16c</sup>, d is a later addition and may be read, now Jehovah will feed them, etc, but the above translation is in accord with Hosea's declaration in 2 that discipline must now take the place of prosperity.

<sup>i</sup> 4<sup>17</sup> Ephraim is Hosea's favorite designation for Northern Israel.

<sup>j</sup> 4<sup>17</sup> I. e., is wedded to idols although Jehovah is the true husband.

<sup>k</sup> 4<sup>18</sup> Slightly revising the unintelligible Heb. text. Gk., He has set up stumbling blocks for himself.

<sup>l</sup> 4<sup>19</sup> I. e., idolatry.

<sup>m</sup> 4<sup>18</sup> So Gk., supported by the context. The Heb. text must be revised in any case. Another plausible revision gives, her rulers have fallen in love with shame.

<sup>n</sup> 4<sup>19</sup> Revising an exceedingly obscure and doubtful text in accord with the demands of the context. As in Is. 57<sup>13</sup>, the figure appears to be that of a tempest which will suddenly rush upon the guilty people.

<sup>o</sup> 4<sup>19</sup> Revising the Heb. in accord with the Gk. and Syr. Cf. 8<sup>11</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> Following a very plausible emendation of the text. Heb., And I am a scourge to them all.

<sup>q</sup> 5<sup>3</sup> Correcting a common mistake that has crept into the Heb., so that an original thou is mistaken for now.

Their
complete alienation
from Jeho-
vah

Judgment
imminent because of their crimes

Jeho-
vah
compelled to punish his sin-sick
people

<sup>4</sup>Their deeds do not permit them,
To return to their God,
For the spirit of harlotry is within them,
And Jehovah they do not know.
<sup>5</sup>Therefore Israel's pride shall testify to his face,
And Ephraim<sup>r</sup> shall stumble through his guilt.
Judah<sup>s</sup> also shall stumble with them.
<sup>6</sup>With their sheep and their cattle, they shall go about
To seek Jehovah, but shall not find him,<sup>t</sup>
<sup>7</sup>For they have been untrue to Jehovah,
Since they have begotten alien children;
A new moon<sup>u</sup> may destroy them with their portions.

<sup>8</sup>Blow the trumpet in Gibeah,
The clarion in Ramah,
Raise the alarm in Bethel,<sup>v</sup>
Make Benjamin tremble,<sup>w</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Ephraim shall become a desolation
In the day of punishment,
Concerning the tribes of Israel I make known what is certain.
<sup>10</sup>The princes of Israel<sup>x</sup> have become,
Like those who remove the landmarks;<sup>y</sup>
Upon them I will pour out my wrath like water.
<sup>11</sup>Ephraim practises oppression and crushes right,<sup>z</sup>
For he is determined to go after vanity.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup>But I am like a moth to Ephraim,
Like rottenness to the house of Israel;
<sup>13</sup>For when Ephraim saw his sickness;
And Israel<sup>b</sup> his sore,
Ephraim went to Assyria

<sup>r</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Present Heb. text, Israel and Ephraim, but this destroys the parallelism and the symmetry of the measure.

<sup>s</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> The reference to Judah possibly suggests a later hand, although the prediction is very different from that in 4<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>8</sup> The Heb. as usually translated reads, and shall not find him; he has drawn away from them. But the verb translated, has drawn away, is never elsewhere intransitive. Through a very common error the Heb. letters represented by the Gk. for they, appear to have been mistaken for the very similar words translated from them. The verb was probably then inserted to make the erroneous reading intelligible. The restored reading is consistent with its context and the three-beat measure which characterizes the section.

<sup>u</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> I. e., within a month they may be destroyed. The reading is doubtful, but none of the many possible reconstructions is entirely satisfactory.

<sup>v</sup> 5<sup>8</sup> Cf. 4<sup>15</sup> Heb., Beth-aven, but the reference is clearly to Bethel, which was originally found in this place.

<sup>w</sup> 5<sup>8</sup> The Heb. has the old battle cry of Judg. 5<sup>14</sup>, After thee O Benjamin. The Gk. seems to have read, Make Benjamin tremble, and this was probably in the original Heb., for it fits the context, while the present reading may well have arisen through a scribal error.

<sup>x</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Heb., Judah, but in <sup>9</sup> the synonymous terms are Ephraim and Israel. So also originally in <sup>13</sup>, for otherwise the prophecy must be dated after 734 B.C.

<sup>y</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Land-stealing was regarded as the most heinous of crimes. Cf. Dt. 19<sup>14</sup>, 27<sup>17</sup>, Job, 24<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> So Gk. and Old Lat. The Heb., Ephraim is oppressed and crushed as to right, is contrary to the implication of the context.

<sup>a</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Syr., Old Lat., Targ., and Lat. Heb., command, but this makes no sense and is clearly an error.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>13</sup> Heb., Judah. Cf. note <sup>c</sup>.

And Israel<sup>c</sup> to the great king;<sup>d</sup>
But he cannot heal you,
Nor relieve you of your wound.

<sup>14</sup>For I myself will be like a lion to Ephraim,
And like a young lion to the house of Israel.
I, even I, will rend and go my way,
I will carry off and none shall rescue.

§ 20. The Fatal Lack of True Repentance and Reform, Hos. 5<sup>15</sup>–7<sup>7</sup>

Hos. 5 <sup>15</sup>I will return to my place,<sup>e</sup>
Until they are confounded<sup>f</sup> and seek my presence.
When they are in distress they will quickly seek me,

6 <sup>1</sup>Saying, ‘Come let us return to Jehovah,
For he hath torn and he will heal us,
He hath smitten and he will bind us up,
<sup>2</sup>He will revive in a couple of days,
On the third day he will raise us up again,
That we may live in his presence.
<sup>3</sup>Yea, let us know, let us eagerly seek<sup>g</sup> to know Jehovah,
As soon as we quickly seek<sup>h</sup> him,
Then he will come to us as the winter rain,
As the spring rain that waters the earth.’

Israel's
fitful, superficial repentance

<sup>4</sup>What can I make of you, O Ephraim!
What can I make of you, O Israel!<sup>i</sup>
Since your love is like a morning cloud,
Yea, like the dew which early goes away.<sup>j</sup>
<sup>5</sup>Therefore I have hewn them by the prophets,

The fatal lack
of true love and a real knowledge of
God

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>13</sup> Making a slight correction which restores the parallelism absolutely demanded by the context. The change of Israel to a somewhat similar verb probably resulted from the many changes of Israel to Judah which have been made in this chapter by a Judean scribe. The correction is also confirmed by the structure of the vs. The reference is probably to the tribute sent by Menahem in 738 B.C. to Tiglath-Pileser IV.

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> Heb., Jarib, possibly an ironical reference to the King of Assyria and his reputation for fomenting local contentions to his own advantage. Probably the original simply read, the great king, a common title of all Assyrian kings. A change of one letter gives this reading, which is strongly supported by the parallelism here and in 10<sup>6</sup>. For the many different interpretations of the Heb., cf. Harper, Amos and Hosea, 277, 278.

§ 20 The brief, sententious, often epigrammatic utterances of Hosea were especially subject to corruption in the hands of scribes who did not fully understand them. This fact is well illustrated in the present section. The thought, however, is clear: Israel's conception of repentance is entirely inadequate. The crimes of years cannot be atoned for by a few half-hearted words. Above all, the conduct and life of the nation belies all professions of repentance. Crime is rampant on every side. The palace is filled with dissolute, unprincipled reprobates, who set up puppet kings and then plot to assassinate them. In all this God is completely forgotten.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> I. e., Jehovah's abode, in the early days conceived of as Mt. Sinai.

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> Following a slightly revised text. RV, acknowledge their offence.

<sup>g</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Lit., run after. The subsequent text suggests that this unusual verb was used ironically, implying that the Israelites thought that they could at once know Jehovah by suddenly setting out in hot pursuit of him.

<sup>h</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Following the Gk. The Heb., his going forth is as sure as the gray morning, makes little sense in the context and is evidently based on a corrupt text.

<sup>i</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> Heb., Judah.

<sup>j</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> Like the heavy dew of Palestine, which is, however, quickly dissipated by the hot Eastern sun.

I have slain them<sup>k</sup> by the words of my mouth.
 And my judgment is like the light that goes forth, <sup>6</sup>For it is love that I delight in and not sacrifice,
 And knowledge of God and not burnt-offerings.

Israel's hideous
crimes

<sup>7</sup>But they after the manner of men<sup>l</sup> have transgressed the covenant,
 There they have played me false.
<sup>8</sup>Gilead<sup>m</sup> is a city of evil-doers,
 Tracked with bloody footprints,
<sup>9</sup>And as bandits lie in wait for a man,
 So a band of priests murder on the way to Shechem;<sup>n</sup>
 Verily they commit deliberate crime.
<sup>10</sup>In Bethel<sup>o</sup> I have seen a horrible thing,<sup>p</sup>
 There Ephraim plays the harlot;
 Israel is defiled.
<sup>11</sup>Judah for thee also a harvest is set.<sup>q</sup>

Crimes
that preclude forgiveness

When I would turn,<sup>r</sup> <sup>7</sup> <sup>1</sup>when I would heal Israel,
 Then Ephraim's guilt is revealed,
 And Samaria's crimes [are seen];<sup>s</sup>
 How they practise fraud and the thief enters in,
 While abroad bandits plunder.
<sup>2</sup>But they never think in their hearts,
 That all their wickedness I remember.<sup>t</sup>
 Now their deeds have encompassed them,
 They are ever before my face.

The
cor-rup-
tion
and
con-spiracy
of
the court

<sup>3</sup>In their wickedness they anoint kings,<sup>u</sup>
 And in their falsehood princes,
<sup>4</sup>Since they are all of them adulterers.<sup>v</sup>
<sup>5</sup>By day<sup>w</sup> they make our king sick,
 And the princes with fever from wine,
 He stretches forth his hand with dissolute fellows,

<sup>k</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> I. e., by faithful warnings and sharp denunciations.

<sup>l</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Correcting the Heb., thy judgments are like a light that goes forth, in accordance with the Gk., Syr., and Old Lat., which read, like Adam. The next line calls forth the name of a place. Possibly the original read, in Adam, a town near the confluence of the Jabbok with the Jordan.

<sup>m</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> Probably the unidentified city east of the Jordan also mentioned in Judg. 10<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> This vs. has suffered much corruption. The above reading is based on a simple reconstruction.

<sup>o</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> Heb., in the house of Israel.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> Cf. for the hideous rites in Bethel, 4<sup>14</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> This line has all the characteristics of a gloss added by some scribe who recognized that Judah was equally guilty.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> A scribe who lived in the shadow of the captivity has added, the captivity of my people.

<sup>s</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> Supplying, as demanded by the parallelism and poetic structure of the verse, are seen.

<sup>t</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> I. e., punish.

<sup>u</sup> 7<sup>3</sup> Following a slight correction suggested by 8<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 7<sup>4</sup> Developing the figure of an oven in <sup>6</sup>, a later scribe has added in <sup>4b</sup>, following a slightly corrected text, They are like a glowing oven kindled by the baker; the kneader rests from kneading the dough until it is leavened. It reflects the oriental method of baking, but its connection and position in the original context is very doubtful.

<sup>w</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> Or, making a slight correction, they.

<sup>6</sup>For like an oven their heart burns with treachery,<sup>x</sup>
 All night their<sup>y</sup> anger slumbers,
 In the morning it blazes into a flame of fire.
<sup>7</sup>All of them glow like an oven,
 And they devour their rulers,
 All their kings have fallen.
 There is none among them who calls to me.

§ 21. Evidences of the Nation's Degeneracy and Approaching Dissolution, Hos. 7<sup>8</sup>-8<sup>3</sup>

Hos. 7 <sup>8</sup>Ephraim—he lets himself be mixed among the peoples, Ephraim—he has become a cake unturned.<sup>z</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Strangers<sup>a</sup> have devoured his strength, but he does not know it;
 Also gray hairs<sup>b</sup> are sprinkled upon him, but he knows it not, <sup>10</sup>And Israel's pride<sup>c</sup> has testified to his face;
 Yet they do not return to Jehovah their God,
 And in all this they seek him not.

Israel's sad de-gen-eracy and stupidity

<sup>11</sup>Ephraim is like a simple, silly dove:
 To Egypt they call, after Assyria they go,
<sup>12</sup>As often as they go away, I will spread over them my net,
 Like birds of the heavens I will bring them down;
 I will chastise them because of their wickedness;<sup>d</sup> <sup>13</sup>Woe to them, that they have strayed from me!
 Destruction to them, because they have been untrue to me.

Its foolish, faithless foreign policy

Although it was I who redeemed them, they spoke lies about me, <sup>14</sup>And they have never cried to me with their heart,
 But they are ever howling beside their altars for corn and new wine,
 They cut themselves,<sup>e</sup> they rebel<sup>f</sup> against me, <sup>15</sup>Although it was I who trained and strengthened their arms, Concerning me they plan only evil,<sup>16</sup>they turn to Baal,<sup>g</sup>
 They have become like a bow that swerves,<sup>h</sup>

Its
treach-ery and rebellion

<sup>x</sup>7<sup>6</sup> Following the Gk. The Heb. makes no sense.

<sup>y</sup>7<sup>6</sup> So Syr., Targ., and many Heb. manuscripts.

§ 21 Originally each strope appears to have contained seven lines. Throughout the major part of this section the four-beat measure is employed. With the warning note in 7<sup>16</sup> ff. the shorter three and two-beat movements appropriately reappear. The section graphically characterizes Israel's weak, vacillating policy in trying to secure foreign aid, unmindful of the true Deliverer.

<sup>z</sup>7<sup>8</sup> I. e., is dominated by foreign customs and ideas, so that it is lacking in natural character and strength.

<sup>a</sup>7<sup>9</sup> I. e., foreign nations, Aram, Philistia, and Assyria.

<sup>b</sup>7<sup>9</sup> Signs of premature old age.

<sup>c</sup>7<sup>10</sup> Cf. 5<sup>9</sup> and Am. 4<sup>6</sup>, 11. Their own arrogance and its consequences are evidence against them.

<sup>d</sup>7<sup>12</sup> Following a simple reconstruction suggested by the Gk. As their congregation has heard, is obviously a corruption.

<sup>e</sup>7<sup>14</sup> So Gk. and certain manuscripts.

<sup>f</sup>7<sup>14</sup> Making a slight correction of the text.

<sup>g</sup>7<sup>16</sup> Gk. and Syr., they turn to nothing. Probably this and the corrupt Heb. are due to the late scribal tendency to substitute some opprobrious word for this hated name.

<sup>h</sup>7<sup>16</sup> I. e., incapable of hitting the true mark, Jehovah. The word may also mean relaxed. Cf., for the two possible meanings, Ps. 10<sup>4</sup>, 120<sup>2</sup>, 3.

The
punish-
ment
of their
guilt

Their princes shall fall by the sword,
Because of the insolence of their tongues.<sup>i</sup>
In the land of Egypt, <sup>8</sup> they will lick the dust,<sup>j</sup>
For as an eagle I will swoop down upon my house,<sup>k</sup>
Because they have transgressed my covenant,
And trespassed against my law.<sup>l</sup> <sup>2</sup>To me they continually cry,
'My God, we Israel, know thee'
<sup>3</sup>Israel has spurned that which is good,
Let the foe pursue him.

§ 22. Jehovah's Repudiation of Israel's Rulers and Idols, Hos. 8<sup>1-14</sup>

Israel's
men-made kings
and idols

Hos. 8 <sup>4</sup>They themselves have made kings but without my consent,
They have made princes but without my knowledge,<sup>m</sup>
Out of their silver and gold, they have made idols to their destruction!<sup>n</sup>
<sup>5b, c</sup>Mine anger is kindled against them,
How long will they escape punishment?
<sup>5a</sup>Thy calf, O Samaria,<sup>o</sup> is distasteful,<sup>p</sup> <sup>6</sup>For from Israel it is also;
A workman made and it is not good;<sup>q</sup>
Like splinters<sup>r</sup> shall Samaria's calf become.

<sup>7</sup>For they sow the wind and reap a whirlwind;
A shoot which has no stalk and yields no fruit!<sup>s</sup>
If it should yield, strangers would devour it.

<sup>i</sup> 7<sup>16</sup> The meaning of this line is very doubtful. The above reading is obtained by regarding the clause, this their scorn, as a gloss.

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. in restoring the corrupt Heb., which reads, to thy mouth with the trumpet.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> Heb., House of Jehovah, but this is due to a common scribal error. Cf. 9<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> The language and thought are those of the late prophetic school of editors, and these two lines manifestly interrupt the close sequence of thought in the stanza.

<sup>§ 22</sup> Israel's government and religious cult are here pronounced entirely illegal. In the light of experience and in view of the character of the degenerates who in his day rapidly succeeded each other on the blood-stained throne of Israel, the kingship in the north was a sorry failure. Equally repulsive to a prophet, whose mind was filled with noble conceptions of Jehovah's power and love, were the loathsome religious practices of his countrymen. It is significant that Hosea, the prophet of the north, here first suggests two principles that were destined in the later Ephramite and late prophetic or Deuteronomic schools, which interpreted his teachings into the concrete terms of law and life, to become very prominent. The one was that the institution of kingship was contrary to the will of Jehovah. Cf. I Sam. 7, 8, 12; Vol. II, § 6, p. 13; the other that the northern cult and shrines were illegal. Cf. Dt. 12, I Kgs., 13<sup>33</sup>, 34 Vol. IV, p. 32. Later generations were so keenly interested in the themes here treated that they have supplemented the section at many points. It consisted of originally three strophes of eight lines. The three-beat movement prevails.

<sup>m</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> Primarily Hosea doubtless had in mind the schism between the north and the south which arose at the death of Solomon. Cf. Vol. II, § 59.

<sup>n</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> So Gk., and Syr. This last clause is loosely connected with its context, and may be a gloss added by a scribe who had in mind the Samaritans.

<sup>o</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> This line is demanded here and is entirely inconsistent in its Heb. context.

<sup>p</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> Lit., stinks. Samaria is probably, like Ephraim, used as a designation of the northern kingdom. The reference, then, is to the well-known calf of Bethel.

<sup>q</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> I. e., like the kings, a human not a divine creation.

<sup>r</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. The picture is that of the complete destruction of the wooden image made by man's hand.

<sup>s</sup> 8<sup>7</sup> A doubtful line. The Heb. evidently contains a play on the similar words, shoot and fruit (cémah and kémah).

<sup>8</sup>Israel is devoured; already it is among the nations,
As a vessel in which there is no pleasure.
<sup>9</sup>For by themselves they have gone up to Assyria,
As a wild-ass which goes apart by itself.<sup>t</sup>
Ephraim gives love-gifts;
<sup>10</sup>And if they give themselves among the nations,
I must now scatter them,<sup>u</sup>
That they may cease a little from anointing kings and princes.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For as many altars as Ephraim has erected,<sup>w</sup>
They are to him altars for sinning,
<sup>12</sup>Were I to write for him ever so many instructions,<sup>x</sup>
As those of a stranger would they be regarded.
<sup>13</sup>They love sacrifice,<sup>y</sup> and so they offer sacrifices, Flesh, and so they eat it,
Although Jehovah is not pleased with them,
Therefore he must now remember their guilt,
And punish their sins.
To Egypt must they return,<sup>z</sup>
<sup>14</sup>For Israel forgot his Maker,
And Judah built palaces,
Judah also multiplied fenced cities;
And so I will send fire upon her cities,
And it shall devour her palaces.<sup>a</sup>

Cor-
rup-
tion of the national worship

§ 23. The Horrors of the Coming Exile, Hos. 9<sup>1-9</sup>

Hos. 9 <sup>1</sup>Rejoice not too loudly,<sup>b</sup> O Israel, like the heathen, For thou hast played the harlot, being untrue to thy God,<sup>c</sup>
Thou hast loved a harlot's hire upon every threshing-floor.<sup>d</sup>
<sup>2</sup>Threshing-floor and wine-vat shall not know them,<sup>e</sup>
And the new wine shall disown them.
<sup>3</sup>They shall not dwell in Jehovah's land,

De-portation of
the
people

<sup>t</sup>8<sup>9</sup> So Gk., and probably Heb.

<sup>u</sup>8<sup>10</sup> Following a revised text, Heb., I will now restore.

<sup>v</sup>8<sup>10</sup> Following the Gk. Cf. also 7<sup>3</sup>. Heb., they shall involve themselves with tribute to the king of princes. This vs. may be secondary and exilic.

<sup>w</sup>8<sup>11</sup> Following the Gk. in omitting, to sin, which by mistake has been introduced twice in the Heb.

<sup>x</sup>8<sup>12</sup> Heb., by myriads, or, myriads of my instruction (or law).

<sup>y</sup>8<sup>13</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. in restoring the obviously corrupt Heb.

<sup>z</sup>8<sup>13</sup> This last line is probably secondary. The Gk. adds, from 9<sup>3</sup>, And in Assyria they shall eat the unclean thing.

<sup>8</sup>8<sup>14</sup> The reference to Judah, the thought of the passage and the fact that the section concludes naturally with <sup>16</sup>, indicate that this vs. was added by a later prophet who had in mind the striking idioms of Amos's introduction and of Is. 40-66.

§ 23 The occasion of the prophecy was doubtless some harvest feast. The wild, heathenish spirit of exultation and revelry, which characterized its celebration, are the background upon which the prophet projects the dark picture of coming exile. Then the religious institutions which they prized so dearly shall be impossible.

<sup>b</sup>9<sup>1</sup> Lit., to exultation; or Gk., do not exult. The clause may be an explanatory gloss.

<sup>c</sup>9<sup>1</sup> Lit., away from thy God.

<sup>d</sup>9<sup>1</sup> The threshing-floors were probably also the ancient high places upon which Baal, the god of fertility, was worshipped. Cf. II Sam. 24.

<sup>e</sup>9<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and the corrected Heb. text.

But Ephraim shall return to Egypt,
And in Assyria they shall eat what is unclean.

<sup>4</sup>They shall not pour out libations of wine to Jehovah,
Nor prepare for him their sacrifices,
Their<sup>f</sup> bread shall be like the bread of mourning;
All who eat it shall defile themselves,
For their bread shall be only for their hunger.
It shall not come into Jehovah's temple.
<sup>5</sup>What will ye do on the day of the festival?<sup>g</sup>
Or on the day of Jehovah's feast?

<sup>6</sup>For behold they will soon go to Assyria,<sup>h</sup>
Egypt shall gather them, Memphis<sup>i</sup> shall bury them, Nettles shall take possession of their treasure of silver, Thorns shall come up in their tents.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The days of visitation are come,
The days of recompense are at hand,
The Israelites<sup>k</sup> shall know,
[Who say], 'The prophet is a fool,
The inspired man is raving mad,'<sup>l</sup>
It is because of the greatness of thy iniquity and the greatness of thy sin.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Ephraim acts the spy with my God,
A prophet finds the snares of a fowler are in all his ways;
In the house of his God they lay hostile plots,<sup>n</sup>
<sup>9</sup>They commit crimes as in the days of Gibeah, [Jehovah] will remember their iniquity,
He will visit with punishment their sin.

<sup>f</sup> 9<sup>4</sup> So Gk. An obvious error has crept into the Heb. text.

<sup>g</sup> 9<sup>5</sup> Cf. I Kgs. 8<sup>2</sup>, 12<sup>2</sup>, Ezek. 45<sup>25</sup>. It was a great harvest feast to which the people made annual pilgrimages.

<sup>h</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Heb., from destruction, i. e., from the conquering hand of Assyria. Probably the original read, to Assyria. Cf. <sup>3</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Egypt was the place of refuge for many exiles in 722 and 586 B.C. Memphis was famous for its great cemeteries.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> A picture of the devastation that shall overtake the cities of Israel.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Heb., Israel; but the verb is in the plural, implying that the original read, children of Israel.

<sup>l</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> In the light of <sup>8</sup> these words appear to have been addressed by infatuated people to the true prophets like Hosea.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Correcting what is probably a scribal error. Heb., hostility.

<sup>n</sup> 9<sup>8</sup>, <sup>9</sup> The possible reconstructions and interpretations of these vss. are legion. The above follows the Heb. and Gk. very closely, simply dividing the vss. a little differently. It is also consistent with the rest of the passage. The idea appears to be that Israel's hostile attitude toward Jehovah finds expression in secret, treacherous persecution of his prophets, so that, like the Gibeathites of old (Judg. 18-20), the people disregarded the most sacred laws of piety and morality. Cf. 10. More radical reconstructions give the readings, There is hostility to the watchman in the house of his God; the prophet finds the snare of the fowler in all his ways. Or (Harper, Amos and Hosea, 333), Enmity exists toward Ephraim's watchman; the prophet [finds] the snares of the fowler in all his ways; in the [very] house of his God they dig for him a deep pit.

§ 24. Israel's Corrupt Religious Practices and the Inevitable Judgment, Hos. 9<sup>10</sup>-10<sup>s</sup>

Hos. 9 <sup>10</sup>Like grapes in the wilderness I found Israel;<sup>o</sup>
Like the first fruit on a fig-tree<sup>p</sup> I saw your fathers;
But as soon as they came to Baal-peor,<sup>q</sup> they consecrated themselves to Baal,<sup>r</sup>
And became as abominable as the object of their love.

Israel's
early contamina-
tion

<sup>11</sup>Ephraim—like a bird his glory flies away;
There shall be no more birth, no more motherhood, no more conception.
<sup>16<sup>b</sup></sup>Yea, if they do bear children, I will slay the darlings of their womb;<sup>s</sup>
<sup>12</sup>Even though they bring up their sons, I will bereave them until not a man is left.
Verily, woe to them when I look away from them.

The penalty of immorality

<sup>13</sup>Ephraim—as I have seen, his sons are destined to be a prey,<sup>t</sup>
Yea, Ephraim himself must lead forth his sons to slaughter.
<sup>14</sup>Give them, O Jehovah—what wilt thou give?
Give them<sup>u</sup> a miscarrying womb and dry breasts!<sup>v</sup>

Childless-
ness

<sup>15</sup>All their evil culminated in Gilgal,<sup>w</sup> yea, there I learned to hate them.
Because of the evil of their deeds I will drive them out of my house.
I will no longer love them, for all their nobles are rebels.
<sup>16<sup>a</sup></sup>Ephraim is blighted, their root withered,<sup>x</sup>
<sup>17<sup>b</sup></sup>And<sup>y</sup> they shall become wanderers among the nations.

Banish-
ment

10<sup>1</sup> A luxuriant vine was Israel,<sup>z</sup>
He bore fruit<sup>a</sup> lavishly;

Per-
ver-ted natural gifts

§ 24 Israel's early promise is here contrasted with the present demoralization due to the defiling, destroying influence of the Canaanite cults to which the northerners had yielded so readily. In 9<sup>10-11</sup> the four-beat movement prevails, but in the forceful picture of the ruin that will result the more energetic three-beat measure appears. While the theme throughout is the same, the course of thought frequently changes, forming short strophes of four lines each.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> I. e., the discovery brought unexpected joy and kindled fond hopes.

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> A scribe has added the gloss, in its first time, to make the statement still more explicit.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> The reference is to the tradition referred to in Num. 23<sup>28</sup>, 25<sup>1-5</sup>, Dt. 4<sup>46</sup>, which states that when the Israelites first came into contact with the Baal cult of Canaan they yielded to its attractions.

<sup>r</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> As in the names of Saul's sons, later scribes have here inserted the Heb. word shame for Baal. Cf. Vol. II, § 9, note.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>s</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> The figure is that of a tree smitten by the sun's heat or by worms. The line may be secondary.

<sup>t</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> Following the superior readings of the Gk., Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion. The Heb. is badly corrupted.

<sup>u</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> The Gk. omits give them, and it may be but a scribal repetition.

<sup>v</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> By some this vs. is interpreted as the prophet's prayer that the sentence may be ameliorated. Its meaning, however, appears to be: make even more severe the sentence so well merited. Possibly the entire vs. is secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> The allusion is evidently to the corrupt Baal rites practiced at the ancient sanctuary near Shiloh. Cf. 4<sup>15</sup>, 12<sup>11</sup>, Am. 4<sup>4</sup>, 5<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> Transferring<sup>16<sup>b</sup></sup>, to the position after<sup>11</sup> demanded by the context. A scribe has apparently added from<sup>11</sup> or 87, They shall bear no fruit.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>17<sup>a</sup></sup> The change of person, the language, and the comparative mildness of the charge indicate that the line, My God will cast them away, for they do not hearken to him, is secondary.

<sup>z</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> Carrying on the figure and thought of 9<sup>10, 16</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> The text and the meaning of the Heb. verb are doubtful. The above rendering is consistent with the context.

In proportion to the increase of his fruit he increased altars,
In proportion to the beauty of his land he made beautiful the pillars.

De-
struc-
tion
of the altars

<sup>2</sup>Their heart is false,<sup>b</sup>
Now must they be punished;
He<sup>c</sup> himself will break the neck of their altars,
He will destroy their pillars.

Over-
throw
of the king

<sup>3</sup>Yea, soon they will be saying,
'We have no king,<sup>d</sup>
For we have not revered Jehovah,
And the king, what can he do for us?'

The discrediting
of the calf of Samaria

<sup>4</sup>Speaking words, perjuring themselves, making agreements,
And litigation<sup>e</sup> springs up like poppy in a plowed field.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>5</sup>For the calf<sup>g</sup> of Beth-aven<sup>h</sup>
The inhabitants<sup>i</sup> of Samaria shall tremble, Yea, his people shall mourn for him,
And his priestlings<sup>j</sup> shall writhe for him,
For his glory, because it has departed from him.<sup>k</sup>

Its capture and deportation

<sup>6</sup>This also they will carry off to Assyria,
As a present to the great king.<sup>l</sup> Disgrace shall Ephraim bear.
And Israel shall be ashamed of his idol.<sup>m</sup>

Deporta-
tion of the king

<sup>7</sup>As for Samaria, her king is cut off,
He is like a ship on the face of the waters.<sup>n</sup>

Desolation of the local sanctuaries

<sup>8</sup>And the high places of Israel<sup>o</sup> shall be destroyed, Thorns and thistles shall come upon their altars,
And they shall say to the mountains, 'Cover us,'
And to the hills, 'Fall upon us.'

<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> Lit., slippery, Gk., divided.

<sup>c</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> I. e., Jehovah.

<sup>d</sup> 10<sup>3</sup> This vs., like the following, has no very clear connection with its context, which deals with the overthrow of the obnoxious Baal cult, and may be a later insertion. But cf. 71<sup>3</sup>, 10 for the same idea. The meaning appears to be, we have no legitimate king. The imposter who sits on the throne is useless to deliver us. Possibly king was a popular designation of the image worshipped at Samaria. Cf. also 7, where this interpretation well fits the context.

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> Lit., law.

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> Probably this vs. is from a later scribe who was not satisfied to leave the rhetorical question in <sup>3</sup> unanswered. It suggests the results of the kingly misrule. The metre is awkward and the exact meaning of the original not clear.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> So Gk., Heb., calves.

<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> Doubtless Bethel is intended and possibly was in the original.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb., inhabitant.

<sup>j</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> Used only by the heathen priests. II Kgs. 23<sup>5</sup>, Zeph. 1<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> Possibly this last line is secondary.

<sup>l</sup> 10<sup>6</sup> Heb. King Jarib. Cf. 51<sup>3</sup> and § 19, note.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>m</sup> 10<sup>6</sup> Heb., counsel, but a very slight correction gives the above consistent reading.

<sup>n</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> As in <sup>3</sup>, the reference to the king is awkwardly introduced and in its Heb. context destroys the unity of the section. Vs. 1, as well as <sup>3</sup>, <sup>4</sup>, may be from a later hand. The idea is that Israel's king is tossed about helpless in the hands of foreign conquerors—a powerful figure in keeping with Hosea's graphic style.

<sup>o</sup> 10<sup>8</sup> A scribe has added in the Heb., Aven, sin. The corrected text is evidently original.

§ 25. Whatsoever a Nation Soweth that Shall it also Reap, Hos. 10<sup>10-15</sup>

Hos. 10 <sup>9</sup>From the days of Gibeah is Israel's sin,
There they took their stand.
Shall not war overtake them in Gibeah?
Against the dastards<sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>I will come, and chastize them,<sup>q</sup>
And peoples shall be gathered against them,
To chastize them for their double crimes.<sup>r</sup>

The punishment of Israel's crimes

<sup>11</sup>Ephraim indeed was a trained<sup>s</sup> heifer that loved to thresh,
And I myself laid a yoke<sup>t</sup> upon his fair neck,
I made Ephraim draw; he must plow;
Jacob<sup>u</sup> must harrow for himself.
<sup>12</sup>Sow for yourselves righteousness,
Reap the fruits of love;
Break up your fallow ground;
For it is time to seek Jehovah,
To the end that the fruit of righteousness<sup>v</sup> may come to you.<sup>w</sup> <sup>13</sup>But ye have plowed wickedness, iniquity have ye reaped;
Ye have eaten the fruit of lies.

The perversion of its natural gifts

Because thou hast trusted in chariots,<sup>x</sup> in the multitude of thy warriors,
<sup>14</sup>Therefore the alarm of war shall sound in thy cities,<sup>y</sup>
And all thy fortresses shall be ruined,

The resulting national ruin and disaster

§ 25 This short section from a slightly different point of view reviews Israel's dark record. It begins with the crime at Gibeah, already alluded to in 9<sup>9</sup>. As noted there, the reference seems to be to the crime of the Gibeathites and their defiance of law and order recorded in the earlier version in Judg. 19-21, Vol. I, § 132. Others would connect it with the establishment of the kingdom in the days of Saul, who for a time made his camp at Gibeah, I Sam. 13<sup>2</sup>. This identification, however, does not satisfy all the implications of the context in Hos., nor is it clear that the prophet regarded the original establishment of the kingship as a crime.

<sup>p</sup> 10<sup>9</sup> Lit., sons of iniquity.

<sup>q</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> So Gk., and a slightly revised Heb. text. Present Heb., In my desire and I will chastise them; Syr., In my wrath. Many more radical reconstructions have been suggested but with this slight change the otherwise unintelligible vs. becomes clear. Just as at the beginning of Israel's history the Benjamites, defending their crime, resisted the rest of the tribes and so defied Jehovah. So now the whole nation, following the example of the Benjamites, is courting destruction. Possibly the original read, As in the days of Gibeah, war shall overtake the dastards.

<sup>r</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr. The text is doubtful and the exact meaning exceedingly uncertain. By many the line is regarded as an interpolated allusion to the two sanctuaries of Dan and Bethel. If original, the reference is probably to the early sins of the nation, of which the atrocity at Gibeah was an example, and to the present crimes, or else the allusion, may be to the double crimes: one class, political, symbolized by the kingship; the other, religious, symbolized by the heathenish sanctuaries and their cults.

<sup>s</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> Possibly, trained, is secondary.

<sup>t</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> Or, I spared.

<sup>u</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> A scribe has added, as often in Hos., Judah. He probably desired to identify Jacob with Judah, but in the original only the northern kingdom was in the mind of the prophet. The thought of these two vss. apparently is that Israel was well equipped for the national problems that confronted it on entering Canaan. Toil was necessary, but fidelity would have been rewarded, as the labors of the patient oxen in the springtime are crowned by the abundant harvest.

<sup>v</sup> 10<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Cf. fruit of lies in 13. Heb., until he come and rain righteousness.

<sup>w</sup> 10<sup>12</sup> This deeply spiritual passage was probably added by a later prophet familiar with Jer. 43, for 13 is the immediate sequel of 11, and 12 introduces the new and different figure of the sower. The thought also is not consonant with that of the context and it contains several words and phrases found only in later writings.

<sup>x</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as demanded by the context.

<sup>y</sup> 10<sup>14</sup> Again emending as required by the parallelism. Heb., people.

As Shalman<sup>z</sup> laid in ruins Beth-arbel in the day of battle,
The mother being dashed to pieces over her children.

<sup>15</sup>Thus will I<sup>a</sup> do to you, O house of Israel,<sup>b</sup>
Because of the enormity of your wickedness,
In the dawn<sup>c</sup> shall the king of Israel be utterly cut off.

§ 26. Jehovah's Fatherly Love and Care for His Faithless People, Hos. 11<sup>1-11</sup>

Jeho-
vah's love and Israel's infidelity

His tender care
and guidance of
the race

The punishment
that Israel deserves

Hos. 11 <sup>1</sup>When Israel was young, then I began to love him,
And out of Egypt<sup>d</sup> I called his sons.<sup>e</sup> <sup>2</sup>The more I<sup>f</sup> called them,
The further they went away from me.
They kept sacrificing to Baalim
And making offerings to images.

<sup>3</sup>Yet it was I<sup>g</sup> who taught Ephraim to walk, Taking them up in my arms;<sup>h</sup>
But they did not know that I healed them;<sup>i</sup>
<sup>4</sup>With humane cords<sup>j</sup> I ever drew them,
With bands of love.
And I was to them as one who lifts up the yoke from off their jaws,<sup>k</sup>
And bending toward<sup>l</sup> him, I gave him food to eat.

<sup>5</sup>He must return to the land of Egypt,<sup>m</sup>
Or Assyria will be their king;
For they have refused to return<sup>n</sup> to me.

<sup>z</sup> 10<sup>14</sup> Shalman has been identified with the Assyrian king Shalmaneser III, who made a campaign against Damascus in 773-2 B.C. and possibly invaded the east-Jordan country; and with Shalmaneser IV, who besieged Samaria in 722. Beth-arbel may be the Arbel west of the Sea of Galilee, 1 Mac. 9<sup>2</sup>, or Arbel near Pella. If the reference is to Shalmaneser IV, the line is a later addition. The identifications, however, are so uncertain that a definite conclusion is impossible.

<sup>a</sup> 10<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb., he.

<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Bethel.

<sup>c</sup> 10<sup>15</sup> I. e., as suddenly as comes the break of day; or revising the text, in the storm.

<sup>§ 26</sup> Here under the figure of a father teaching his son the first lessons of life the prophet presents Jehovah's love for Israel with supreme beauty and tenderness. To the oriental the relationship between father and son was even closer than that existing between husband and wife. Cf. 2. The obligation of the son to his father was also greater than that of a wife. It is, therefore, in this classic passage that Hosea's two antithetic themes—the infinite love of God and the sad contrast, Israel's base ingratitude—find most dramatic expression. The central ideas, the figure of the fatherhood of God, and the spirit of the entire section are most closely related to the gospel of the N.T. It only remained for Jesus to apply them to God's relation to the individual as well as to the nation.

<sup>d</sup> 11<sup>1</sup> Or, from the time they were in Egypt.

<sup>e</sup> 11<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Targ., supported by the following vs. The current translation, I called my son, does not do justice to the Heb.

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>2</sup> Again following the superior Gk. text.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> Following the Gk.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> I. e., when they were weary.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> I. e., when they fell and were bruised. Theirs was the old popular mistake of attributing their prosperity to the Baalim.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> Lit., cords of a man, the figure in this vs. is that of a kind ox-driver who tenderly and effectively aids the struggling, weary animals in drawing their heavy load.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> I. e., to relieve them when the strain was over.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and slightly correcting the Heb. The text of this vs. is, however, uncertain.

Marti (Dodekapropeten, 87), following a fundamentally revised text, finds here not the further portrayal of Jehovah's love, but the transition to righteous judgment which is developed in 5<sup>ff</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Hosea regarded both Egypt and Assyria as the possible land of exile. Cf. 8<sup>13</sup>, 9<sup>3-6</sup>, also 11<sup>11</sup>. The subsequent history demonstrated the truth of his predictions.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Note the play on the word return.

<sup>6</sup>Therefore the swords shall whirl in their cities,<sup>o</sup>
And shall devour in their<sup>p</sup> fortresses, <sup>7</sup>For my people are bent in rebelling against me,
And upon the Baalim they call with one accord.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>8</sup>How can I give thee up, O Ephraim! give thee over, O Israel!<sup>r</sup>
How am I to give thee up as Admah!<sup>s</sup> make thee like Zeboim!

My heart asserts itself.<sup>t</sup>

My sympathies are all aglow,<sup>u</sup>

<sup>9</sup>I will not carry into effect the fierceness of my anger,

I will not turn to destroy Ephraim,

For God am I, and not man,

Holy in the midst of thee, therefore I will not consume.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>10</sup>They will follow after Jehovah;
Like a lion he will roar;
When he shall roar,
Sons from the west shall come hurriedly;
<sup>11</sup>They shall come hurriedly like the birds from Egypt,
And like doves from the land of Assyria.
And he will bring them back to their houses,
It is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>w</sup>

The promptings of the divine heart of love

§ 27. Israel's Faithlessness from the First, Hos. 11<sup>12</sup>–12<sup>14</sup>

Hos. 11 <sup>12</sup>Ephraim has encompassed me with falsehood,
And the house of Israel with deceit,
But Judah is still known with God,
And faithful with the Holy One.<sup>x</sup>

Israel's treacherous, faithless record

12 <sup>1</sup>Ephraim herds the wind and hunts the sirocco,
All day long they heap up falsehood and fraud,<sup>y</sup>
And make a league with Assyria,

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>6</sup> The next two words in the Heb. are probably a corrupt variant reading of the preceding.

<sup>p</sup> 11<sup>6</sup> Correcting the Heb. text.

<sup>q</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> This vs. is almost hopelessly corrupt. For the many different readings that have been suggested, cf. Harper, Amos and Hosea, 368. The above reading is perhaps as simple and satisfactory as any, and is in harmony with the context.

<sup>r</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> The great prophet of God's love here voices in language, both human and divine, the supreme love and regret and compassion that fill the heart of the Infinite Father as he regards his guilty, unrepentant children. The elegiac measure, with its alternating three and two beats, adds to the beauty and force of the passage.

<sup>s</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> These places correspond in Hos. (and Dt. 29<sup>23</sup>) to Sodom and Gomorah in Am. and Is. as classic examples of divine judgment.

<sup>t</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> Lit., turns upon me.

<sup>u</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> Lit., are made to boil.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>9</sup> Heb., enter into the city. But this corrupt text is probably due to a common scribal error.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>10, 11</sup> These two vss. assume the background of the Bab. exile and echo the hopes and promises of the exilic prophets. Cf. Jer. 51<sup>38</sup>, Is. 27<sup>13</sup>, and Am. 1<sup>2</sup>. They represent the later concrete interpretation of the divine compassion which Hosea so nobly expresses in the preceding vss.

<sup>x</sup> 27 Originally this section appears to have contained three strophes of ten lines each, with the three-beat movement, occasionally passing into the elegy. It is a review of Israel's black record. Starting with the reference to Jacob, a later prophet has added a long supplement.

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>12</sup> The meaning of these last two lines is very doubtful. The above reading is based on a suggestion contained in the Gk. It is clearly a later addition. Another possible reading is, Judah is still wayward with God, and with the Holy One, who is faithful!

<sup>z</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> So Gk.

And carry oil<sup>2</sup> to Egypt.
<sup>2</sup>Jehovah hath a charge against Israel,<sup>a</sup>
 To punish Jacob for his acts,
 According to his deeds will he requite him,
<sup>3a</sup>In the womb he supplanted<sup>b</sup> his brother.

The example of Jacob, perfected through discipline

<sup>12</sup>And Jacob fled to the territory of Aram,<sup>c</sup>
 And Israel served for a wife,
 Yea, for a wife he herded sheep.
<sup>3b</sup>In a man's strength he contended with God,<sup>d</sup>
<sup>4</sup>He contended<sup>e</sup> with the angel and prevailed,
 He wept and besought mercy of him.
 At Bethel Jehovah found him,<sup>f</sup>
 And there he spoke with him.<sup>g</sup>
<sup>5</sup>And Jehovah is the God of hosts, Jehovah is his name,
 Thus thou shouldest by the help of thy God return.<sup>h</sup>
<sup>6</sup>Keep true love and justice, Wait on thy God without ceasing.<sup>i</sup>

Israel's ill-gotten gains no protection from exile

<sup>7</sup>Canaanite!<sup>j</sup> In his hand are false balances; he loves to defraud;
<sup>8</sup>For Ephraim says, 'Yes, I have become rich; I have secured wealth for myself,'<sup>k</sup>
 All his gains<sup>l</sup> will not secure for him exemption for the guilt that he has incurred, <sup>9</sup>For I, Jehovah thy God, from the land of Egypt<sup>m</sup>
 Will make thee again dwell in tents,<sup>n</sup> as in the days of old.<sup>o</sup>

Jehovah's constant guidance of his people

<sup>10</sup>Yet I spoke continually by the prophets,
 And it was I who multiplied visions,
 And spoke in parables through the prophets.

<sup>a</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> Oil being the most valuable product of the land, Dt. 8<sup>8</sup>, Ezek. 16<sup>19</sup>, was taken as a present to insure an alliance.

<sup>a</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> Heb., Judah, but note that Israel is demanded in the next two verses.

<sup>b</sup> 12<sup>3a</sup> A play on the word Jacob, supplanter.

<sup>c</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> This vs. has no place in its context, for <sup>13</sup> is the immediate sequel of <sup>10</sup>. It clearly belongs between <sup>3a</sup> and <sup>3b</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 12<sup>3</sup> Cf., Gen. 32 <sup>24-28</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> This vs. contains a play on the word, Israel, El contends.

<sup>f</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> Cf. Gen. 28<sup>16</sup>. The author of this vs. evidently had a different tradition in mind, which, like the late priestly version in Gen. 35<sup>6, 7</sup>, placed the revelation at Bethel on Jacob's return from Aram.

<sup>g</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> So Aquila, Syr., and Theod. Heb., us.

<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> This vs. is probably a very late addition.

<sup>i</sup> 12<sup>2</sup>, <sup>3b-6</sup> In <sup>3a</sup> the reference to Jacob as the deceitful supplanter is consistent with the preceding context, and is doubtless original. The later traditions illustrate the tendency to idealize the character of Jacob. Vss. 12, <sup>3b-6</sup> were clearly added by a later editor, familiar with them, for they present a very different portrait of the patriarch. The aim of the later editor was to encourage his fellow-exiles that, like Jacob, they would, if true, be brought back to Canaan.

<sup>j</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> Lit., Canaan, a contemptuous designation of the tricky, trafficking Northern Israelites, who, like their forefather Jacob, were ready to barter their integrity of character for material gains.

<sup>k</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> The metre is here elegiac.

<sup>l</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> So Gk.

<sup>m</sup> 12<sup>9</sup> Cf. 13<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 12<sup>9</sup> If this is intended as a promise of restoration, the vs. is secondary; if it is a threat that all their material civilization will soon come to an end, it is original. The latter appears to be the true interpretation.

<sup>o</sup> 12<sup>9</sup> Making a correction in the text. Heb., of the feast.

<sup>13</sup>And by a prophet Jehovah brought Israel up from Egypt,
And by a prophet he was guarded.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Ephraim has given bitter provocation
His guilt of bloodshed his Lord<sup>q</sup> will leave upon<sup>r</sup> him,
And for his reproach he will repay him.
<sup>11</sup>In Gilead<sup>s</sup> is iniquity, yea they have wrought vanity,
In Gilgal they sacrifice<sup>t</sup> to demons;<sup>u</sup>
So their altars shall be as stone-heaps,
Among the furrows of the field.

Punish-
ment
of their iniquity

§ 28. Jehovah's Final and Complete Destruction of the Guilty Nation, Hos. 13

Hos. 13 <sup>1</sup>When Ephraim used to speak there was trembling;<sup>u</sup>
A prince was he in Israel.
But he incurred guilt through Baal and died.
<sup>2</sup>And now they go on sinning;
They make for themselves molten gods—
From their silver, idols according to their own model;<sup>v</sup>
Smiths' work all of it!
To such they speak!<sup>w</sup>
Men who sacrifice<sup>x</sup> kiss calves!

Early
nobility and later idolatry of the Israelites

<sup>3</sup>Therefore they shall be like the morning cloud,
Like the dew that early disappears,
Like the chaff which blows away from the threshing-floor,
And like the smoke from the window.

Sudden
fate
impending

<sup>4</sup>Yet it was I, Jehovah, thy God,
Who brought<sup>y</sup> thee up from the land of Egypt,
And a God beside me thou knowest not,
Nor has there been any saviour except me.

Their forgetfulness
of Je-ovah's
care

<sup>p</sup> 12<sup>13</sup> The reference is to Moses. Cf. Dt. 18<sup>15</sup>, 34<sup>10</sup>, where he is also properly designated as a prophet. This vs. may be secondary, as the change of person suggests, but its logical position is immediately after <sup>10</sup>. Vss. <sup>11</sup>, <sup>12</sup>, have for some reason been transferred from their natural setting. Vs. <sup>11</sup> is the logical conclusion of the section.

<sup>q</sup> 12<sup>14</sup> Transferring his Lord from the next line to make the meaning clear.

<sup>r</sup> 12<sup>14</sup> Gk., pour upon.

<sup>s</sup> 12<sup>15</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. text.

<sup>t</sup> 12<sup>16</sup> Again making the necessary correction in the Heb. text.

<sup>u</sup> 28 The same cycle of thought here reappears: Israel's early promise, Jehovah's tender care, the heinous crimes of the people that had undermined their character, the necessity of a sweeping judgment. The guilt of the nation is so enormous and the attitude of the people so defiant that Jehovah has no opportunity to reveal his fatherly love in blessings. The situation admits only of the severest discipline. Therefore the prophet of love proclaims in relentless terms the final, complete destruction of the nation.

<sup>v</sup> 13<sup>1</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. This line contains the description of Israel's former prestige.

<sup>w</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk., Syr., Lat., and Targ.

<sup>x</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> Or supplementing the present text, Say, 'O God.'

<sup>y</sup> 13<sup>3</sup> The Heb. of this line is very awkward, sacrificers of man. The reference can hardly be to human sacrifices, because this was not associated with calf-worship and was only later introduced among the Hebrews.

<sup>y</sup> 13<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. omits, who brought.

<sup>5</sup>It was I who shepherded<sup>z</sup> thee in the wilderness,
In the land of burning heat.

<sup>6</sup>As they fed, they were filled to the full,
They were filled to the full so that their heart was lifted up;
Therefore they forgot me!

Jeho-
vah's vengeance

None
to deliver
them

Unfitted to meet
the coming crisis

Left by Jehovah to
their fate

The prey of foreign invaders

<sup>7</sup>And so I will be to them like a lion,
Like a leopard will I lay in wait<sup>x</sup> by the way, <sup>8</sup>I will fall upon them like a bear robbed of its young,
And will tear open that which encloses their hearts,
And there the lions of the forest shall devour them,<sup>b</sup>
And the wild beasts shall tear them in pieces.

<sup>9</sup>In the time of destruction, O Israel, who will help thee?<sup>y</sup>
<sup>10</sup>Where is thy king now that he may deliver thee?

And all thy princes that they may secure for thee justice?<sup>z</sup>
Those of whom thou hast said,
'Give me kings and princes.'

<sup>11</sup>I give thee kings in my anger,
And take them away in my wrath.

<sup>12</sup>Ephraim's iniquity is gathered up; his sin is laid by in store.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>13</sup>The pangs of childbirth come upon him, but he is an unwise child;
For this is no time to stand in the mouth of the womb.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Shall I deliver them from the power of Sheol?
Shall I redeem them from death?
Come on with thy plagues,<sup>g</sup> O death!
On with thy pestilence, O Sheol!
Relenting<sup>h</sup> is forever hid from mine eyes.

<sup>15</sup>Though he is flourishing in the midst of the reedgrass,<sup>i</sup>
There shall come an east wind, Jehovah's wind,

<sup>z</sup> 13<sup>5</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. and Syr. in correcting a common error in the Heb. This correction is supported by<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> 13<sup>7</sup> A scribe has mistaken the Heb. verb for the similar word Assyria.

<sup>b</sup> 13<sup>8</sup> Following the Gk. which is supported by the parallelism of the vs. Heb., And there I will devour them like a lion.

<sup>c</sup> 13<sup>9</sup> Here also the Gk. and Syr. have a superior reading and aid in the true reconstruction of the Heb.

<sup>d</sup> 13<sup>10</sup> Making a necessary correction in the Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 13<sup>12</sup> I. e., it shall not be forgotten in the day of judgment. The metre suddenly and effectively changes to the five-beat measure used in lamentations for the dead.

<sup>f</sup> 13<sup>13</sup> The thought in this vs. is clear: Israel has reached a great crisis in its history which is comparable to the birth of a child; but the nation, weakened by its sins and unconscious of its opportunity and responsibility to co-operate with God in bringing about its new birth, stands inert. Like that of a still-born babe, its soul must go back to Sheol, the abode of the dead.

<sup>g</sup> 13<sup>14</sup> Lit., Where are thy plagues; but this is a common form of command. The context leaves no doubt regarding the meaning of this much-misinterpreted passage.

<sup>h</sup> 13<sup>14</sup> I. e., the revoking of his decision, for it was conditioned upon the character and attitude of the people. The English unfortunately has no equivalent for this word. Repentance and repent are both misleading, for they imply regret for mistakes or wrong-doing on the part of God. Jon. 3<sup>9, 10</sup> well illustrate the meaning of this Heb. word.

<sup>i</sup> 13<sup>15</sup> An Egyptian loan word. Cf. Gen. 41<sup>2</sup>. The Heb. through an error joins the first letter of the next word to the end of this giving rise to the corrupt, impossible translations.

DESTRUCTION OF THE GUILTY NATION [Hos. 13<sup>15</sup>

Coming up from the wilderness;
 And his fountain shall dry up,
 And his spring shall be parched;
 While the foe<sup>j</sup> shall strip the treasure,
 Consisting of all precious things.

<sup>16</sup>Samaria shall bear her guilt;<sup>k</sup>
 For she has rebelled against her God.
 They shall fall by the sword,
 Their children shall be dashed to pieces,
 And their women with child shall be ripped up.

Guilty
Sama-ria's
fate

§ 29. Later Words of Exhortation and Promise, Hos. 14<sup>1-8</sup>

Hos. 14 <sup>1</sup>Return, O Israel, to Jehovah thy God;
 For thou has stumbled through thine iniquity.
<sup>2</sup>Take words<sup>l</sup> with thee,
 And return to Jehovah thy God.

Proph-
et's exhorta-
tion

Say to him:
 Do thou wholly pardon iniquity and let us receive favor,<sup>m</sup>
 And thus we will pay the fruit<sup>n</sup> of our lips;
<sup>o</sup>For in thee the orphan finds mercy.<sup>o</sup>

People's prayer
for pardon

<sup>i</sup> 13<sup>15</sup> Here the figure changes, possibly indicating a later addition. The spoiler is clearly Assyria, the east wind of the second line.

<sup>k</sup> 13<sup>16</sup> Or, be laid waste.

§ 29 The ideas, the spiritual fervor, and the highly poetical figures and expressions of Hosea suffice this wonderful section. It is a supremely appropriate conclusion to the book which presents most clearly and sublimely the necessity of deep, true penitence for sin, the intimate relationship between the nation and Jehovah, the greatness of the divine love, and God's eagerness to pardon and restore; but, if it is from Hosea, it must come from the earlier part of his ministry or else, more probably, after the wave of Assyrian conquest had engulfed Northern Israel, for the seemingly irrevocable doom pronounced in the preceding chapter and the record of Israel's closing years leave no place for it elsewhere. By many scholars it is now regarded as the addition of a later spiritual disciple of Hosea, possibly the same who added the kindred passages in 10<sup>2</sup> and 13<sup>4-6</sup>. The reasons for this conclusion are briefly: (1) That it destroys the force of his previous warning and implies an entirely different historical background; (2) it assumes that the punishment has been inflicted; (3) its emphasis upon words and physical blessing is unlike Hosea who emphasized deeds and spiritual blessings; (4) the language and literary style is that of a later school. These reasons, however, are far from decisive, especially if the passage be assigned to the latest stage of Hosea's activity. The marks of later authorship are also at the best very indistinct.

The poetic structure is carefully developed. The three-beat movement is regularly followed and the whole consists of six short strophes. In these the prophet introduces a balanced dialogue between penitent Israel and Jehovah, in which he sets forth with powerful dramatic force the spirit in which the nation should come and what would be the divine response.

<sup>l</sup> 14<sup>2</sup> I. e., words like the following, indicative of true repentance.

<sup>m</sup> 14<sup>2</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr. in restoring the last two words. Heb., Do thou wholly remove iniquity and accept that which is good. A slight change gives the above harmonious reading.

<sup>n</sup> 14<sup>2</sup> So Gk. The Heb. is corrupt. The meaning is, songs of thanksgiving and vows of obedience.

<sup>o</sup> 14<sup>30</sup> Transferring this line to the position where it alone finds its true setting and interpretation. Otherwise it must be regarded as a later gloss.

Profession
of faith

<sup>3a-d</sup> Assyria will not save us;
We will not ride upon horses [to Egypt];<sup>p</sup>
And we will no more say, 'Our God,'
To the work of our hands.

Jeho-
vah's
response:
full pardon

<sup>4</sup>I will heal their apostasy,
I will love them freely,<sup>q</sup>
Now that my anger is turned away from them, <sup>5</sup>I will be as dew to Israel.

Super-
lative
prosperity

He shall blossom as the lily,
And he shall strike in his roots like Lebanon.<sup>r</sup>
And his saplings shall spread out,
<sup>6</sup>And his beauty shall be like that of the olive tree.<sup>s</sup>

Recon-
cilia-
tion
and renown

<sup>7</sup>They shall return and dwell<sup>t</sup> in my shadow,
And they shall live well-watered like<sup>u</sup> a garden.
And they shall sprout like the vine;
Their renown shall be like that of the wine of Lebanon.

Provision
for every need

<sup>8</sup>Ephraim—what more has he<sup>v</sup> to do with idols!
It is I [Jehovah] who respond to him and look after him,
I am like an ever green cypress;<sup>w</sup>
From me is thy fruit found.

The lesson
of the
prophecy

Whoever is wise, let him discern these things,
Prudent, let him perceive them;
For Jehovah's ways are straight,
And the righteous walk in them,
But the wicked stumble in them.*

<sup>p</sup> 14<sup>3d</sup> I. e., to make an alliance. Cf Is. 30<sup>16</sup>, I Kgs. 10<sup>28</sup>, Ezek. 17<sup>18</sup>. The horses in Israel appear to have been usually imported from Egypt and were always associated in the minds of the Hebrews with the land of the Nile. The parallelism strongly supports the above interpretation.

<sup>q</sup> 14<sup>4</sup> I. e., of my own free will.

<sup>r</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> Like the luxuriant vegetation on Mt. Lebanon, of which the noble, sturdy cedars, able to defy all storms because their roots were struck deep in the rocks, were the most prominent illustrations.

<sup>s</sup> 14<sup>6</sup> A scribe, who was reminded by the preceding reference to Lebanon, has added, And his odor like Lebanon. The sudden change in <sup>5a-b</sup> from the direct to the indirect discourse is perhaps also because they are later editorial additions.

<sup>t</sup> 14<sup>7</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. Heb., they will raise again, is entirely incongruous with the highly poetical context.

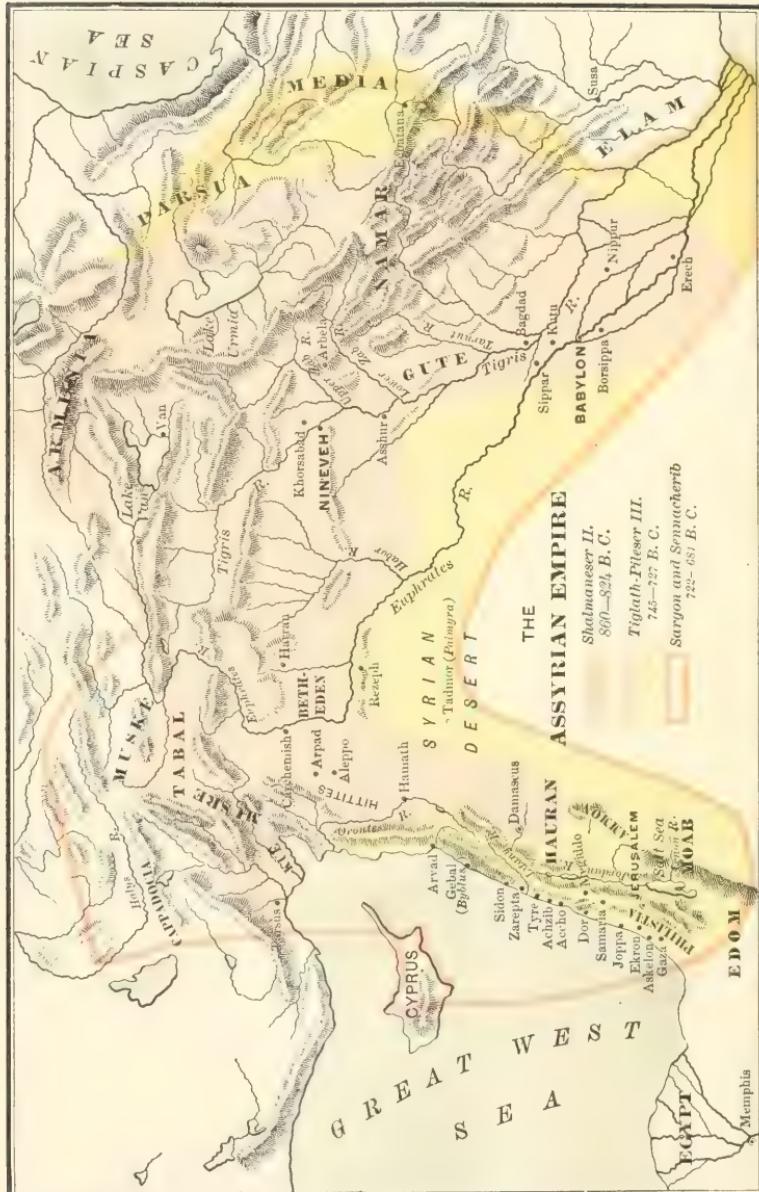

<sup>u</sup> 14<sup>8</sup> The Gk. has preserved the original text of this vs.

<sup>v</sup> 14<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., to me.

<sup>w</sup> 14<sup>8</sup> By many this line is put in the mouth of Israel, but there are no indications of the change of antecedent, and while the figure of Jehovah as a tree is without precedent, it is the simplest interpretation, i. e., Jehovah will ever give to his penitent people shade and protection.

<sup>x</sup> The very late book of Ecc. (12<sup>13</sup>, 14) is the only other O.T. book which has a similar epilogue. The wisdom coloring indicates that it is from some later wise man who, like the authors of Pr., divided humanity into two classes, the righteous and the wicked or deliberate transgressors. Cf. Pr. 11<sup>5</sup>, 15<sup>19</sup>. He evidently felt that the importance of the truths presented in the book—and possibly its obscurities which required careful study—called for some such index hand, directing the attention of all to it. It has been mankind's loss that the suggestion has been so little heeded.

III

EARLIER PROPHECIES OF ISAIAH THE SON OF AMOZ

Is. 2<sup>1</sup>, 6–4<sup>1</sup>, 5, 6, 9<sup>8</sup>–10<sup>4</sup>

§ 30. Isaiah's Call and Commission, Is. 6

Is. 6 <sup>a</sup>It was in the year that King Uzziah died that I saw the Lord sitting upon a lofty and exalted throne; and the skirts of his robe filled the temple. <sup>b</sup>Seraphim were standing attendant<sup>a</sup> before him. Each had six wings; with two he covered his face, with two he covered his loins<sup>b</sup> and with two he flew. <sup>c</sup>And they kept calling to each other, saying:

Holy, holy, holy,<sup>c</sup> is Jehovah of hosts,
The whole earth is full of his glory.

<sup>d</sup>And the foundations of the thresholds shook at the sound of their calling, and the temple was filling with smoke.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>e</sup>Then I said:

Woe to me! I am undone,
For I myself am a man with unclean lips,
And I am dwelling in the midst of a people of unclean lips,
Yet mine eyes have seen the King, Jehovah of hosts.

The vision
of Jehovah's
true
majesty
and holiness

Its effect
upon
Isaiah

<sup>e</sup>Then one of the seraphim flew to me with a live coal<sup>e</sup> in his hand that he had taken with tongs from off the altar. <sup>f</sup>And with it he touched my mouth and said:

See, this has touched thy lips,
Therefore thine iniquity is gone and thy sin forgiven.

His moral cleans-
ing

<sup>§ 30</sup> As has been already noted, Isaiah's activity falls into four distinct periods (Introd.). The account of his call was probably written about 735 B.C., when his counsel has been rejected by king and people and he turned to his few faithful disciples as the sole guardians of the truth which he had proclaimed. It is a part of the instruction which he sealed among his disciples (8<sup>16</sup>). The closing paragraphs reflect the sense of discouragement which he inevitably felt when his earnest warnings had been so openly spurned by his nation (§§ 35, 37). Isaiah's object in telling of the supreme experience which marked the beginning of his active prophetic ministry was evidently to make clear to his faithful disciples the influences that determined his life-work. He sought thus to encourage them in the time of their despondency by giving them also a vision of Jehovah's majesty and of the inevitable obstacles that beset the path of the true prophet.

The date of Isaiah's call was the memorable year about 740 B.C., when the startling news came of the death of the great King Uzziah who for nearly half a century had brought to Judah strength and increasing prestige. It was an occasion to make every true patriot pause and think. With wealth and power had come social and moral evils and a national spirit of pride and materialism. Assyrian war-clouds were also approaching from the north (cf. Introd., p. 13). Judah was on the eve of a period of great danger and distress, and the direction of affairs fell on weak shoulders.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> Cf. I Sam. 16<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> Lit., feet, but this is evidently used here as in I Sam. 24<sup>3</sup> and elsewhere euphemistically for the private parts.

<sup>c</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> The Hebrew means separate, unique. The context indicates that this uniqueness was, (1) in power, and therefore it might be translated, almighty; and (2) in moral character, in striking contrast to that of the people, therefore, holy.

<sup>d</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> The symbol of Jehovah's displeasure because of the impurity of his people.

<sup>e</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> The reference seems to be to a hot stone, such as was heated and then used for cooking bread. Cf. I Kgs. 19<sup>6</sup>.

His response to the divine care

The reception of his message

Nature of his message

<sup>8</sup>Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying:

Whom shall I send,
And who will go for us?

And I said:

Here am I; send me.

<sup>9</sup>And he said:

Go and say to this people:
Keep on hearing, but have no comprehension;
Keep on seeing, but have no perception.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Make fat the heart of this people,
And their ears dull and besmear their eyes,<sup>g</sup>
Lest they see with their eyes and hear with their ears,
And their heart perceive, and their health be restored!

<sup>11</sup>And I said: How long, O Lord? And he said:

Until the cities are in ruins without an inhabitant,
And the houses without a human occupant, and the land is left<sup>h</sup> in utter desolation.

<sup>12</sup>And Jehovah have sent the men far away, and in the midst of the land the deserted territory be great.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>13</sup>And should there still be a tenth in it, it must in turn be fuel for the flame,
Like the terebinth and the oak of which after felling but a stump remains.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>f</sup> 6<sup>0</sup> Clearly an ironical description of the attitude of the cynical, self-satisfied, morally dull hearers of Isaiah's words.

<sup>g</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> These words voice the prophet's later experiences which were fresh in his mind when he wrote down the account of his call.

<sup>h</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> Following the Gk. and Lat.

<sup>i</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> The seeming reference to the experiences of the exile and the introduction of Jehovah in the third person, although from the context he is evidently the speaker, suggest that possibly this verse was added by a later scribe.

<sup>j</sup> 6<sup>13</sup> The last line, The holy seed is its stump. is lacking in Gk. It corresponds to the many brighter messianic appendices which later scribes have added elsewhere to the original predictions of doom. Holy seed is a late term. Cf. Ezra 9<sup>2</sup>. The metre is also entirely different from that employed in the rest of the verse. The fact that it is not found in the Gk. confirms the other evidence that it is a very late addition.

§ 31. Jehovah's Vineyard and its Evil Fruits, Is. 5<sup>1-24</sup>

Is. 5 <sup>1</sup>Let me sing a song of my friend,
A love song regarding his vineyard.

Prologue

A vineyard belongs to my friend on a hill that is fruitful.
<sup>2</sup>He digged it and cleared it of stones, and choice vines he planted.
 A tower<sup>k</sup> he built in its midst and hewed out a wine-press.
 He looked to find grapes that were good, but wild<sup>l</sup> grapes it yielded.

<sup>3</sup>And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, ye people of Judah, Judge yourselves, I pray, between me and my vineyard.<sup>m</sup> <sup>4</sup>What more could be done to my vineyard than that which I have done?
 When I looked to find grapes that were good, why yielded it wild grapes?

The well-nurtured but unfruitful vineyard Appeal for a decision

<sup>5</sup>And now let me tell you what I purpose to do to my vineyard.
 For I will remove its hedge that it be devoured,
 And I will break through its wall that it be down-trodden;
<sup>6</sup>Yea, I will make it a waste, not pruned nor weeded.
 Then shall it put forth thorns, and brambles;<sup>n</sup>
 And to the clouds will I give command that they rain not upon it.

Destruction of the vineyard

<sup>7</sup>For the vineyard of Jehovah of hosts is the House of Israel,
 And the men of Judah—they are his cherished plantation.
 He looked for justice, but, behold! bloodshed;
 For redress, but, behold! a cry of distress.<sup>o</sup>

Jehovah's vineyard

<sup>§ 31</sup> The close parallelism to the remarkable opening address of Amos suggests that it represents the first that the youthful Isaiah delivered before his countrymen. The occasion may have been some public assembly, one of the great feast days at which the people were entertained by story and song. Like his predecessor, Amos, Isaiah reveals superlative tact and skill in gaining the hearing of his audience and in preparing a way for the effective presentation of his unpleasant message. He asked permission to sing a song on a theme of greatest interest to the people of Judah whose chief source of revenue were the fruitful vineyards which crowned the rocky hills about Jerusalem. In his opening words there was no suggestion of the application of his story. The metre was the dramatic five-beat measure which was used by the Hebrew poets to express deep emotion, whether of sorrow or of joy. An attempt has been made in the translation to reproduce something of the wonderful lilt of the original.

While his hearers are nodding assent to Isaiah's question comes the sudden application, and they and their nation stand condemned by the very laws which they followed in their occupation as vineyard keepers. The connection between the first seven verses and the rest of the chapter is not close. Possibly the different woes represent extracts from various addresses delivered by Isaiah in his earlier days. Many of them are but fragmentary and the text has not been well preserved, but they are placed in their logical position, for they represent the typical wild grapes which Jehovah's vineyard, Judah, was bearing.

Isaiah's analysis of the crimes of the different classes in the nation is only equalled by that of Amos, the great social prophet of Northern Israel. Isaiah was doubtless influenced, especially in these opening years of his work, by his older contemporary, both in theme and method of presenting his message. Possibly not less than five and certainly not more than ten years intervened between the memorable occasion when the shepherd prophet stood up before the nobles of Bethel and when the youthful Isaiah sang his wonderful parable of the vineyard before the nobles and landholders of Jerusalem.

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> I. e., for the watchman who would guard the vineyard against marauders.

<sup>l</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> I. e., sour, unpalatable, and useless.

<sup>m</sup> 5<sup>3</sup> This verse marks the transition. Isaiah identifies himself with his friend Jehovah and passes from the third to the first person.

<sup>n</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> A picture of utter desolation.

<sup>o</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> In the English translation an attempt has been made to bring out by assonance the corresponding play in the Heb. on the words for redress (qedâkâh) and distress (ge'âkâh). The reference is clearly to the injustice of the judges in the public tribunals, and the protest of their victims against the iniquitous decisions.

Its evil fruits;
and monopoly

Debauch-ery and disregard of responsibility

Foolish, impious, skepticism

<sup>8</sup>Woe to those who join house to house,
Who add field to field
Until there is no space left,
And ye dwell alone in the midst of the land.
<sup>9</sup>In mine ears Jehovah of hosts hath sworn,<sup>p</sup>
Surely many houses shall become a desolation,
Though great and fair, they shall be without inhabitants;
<sup>10</sup>For ten acres<sup>q</sup> of vineyard will yield but one bushel,<sup>r</sup>
And ten bushels<sup>s</sup> of seed but one bushel of grain.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Woe to those who rise at dawn<sup>u</sup>
To pursue strong drink,
Who tarry late in the evening
Until wine inflames them,
<sup>12</sup>And lyre, and harp and timbrel
And flute and wine are at their banquets;
But they regard not the work of Jehovah,
And see not what his hands have made.
<sup>13</sup>Therefore my people go into captivity unprepared,
And their men of wealth are famished,<sup>v</sup>
And their noisy revellers are parched with thirst.
<sup>14</sup>Therefore Sheol<sup>w</sup> yawns greedily
And to the widest extent opens its mouth;
And Zion's nobles and her noisy revellers<sup>x</sup> shall go down into it, Together with her careless throng and all who rejoice within her.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>17</sup>And lambs graze as in a wilderness,
And fatlings<sup>z</sup> feed amid the ruins.

<sup>18</sup>Woe to those who draw guilt upon themselves with cords of folly!
And punishment as with a cart rope;

<sup>p</sup> 5<sup>9</sup> The verb has been lost in the Heb., but with the aid of the Gk. it may be restored conjecturally. For a similar idiom cf. Am. 4<sup>2</sup>, 6<sup>8</sup>, 8<sup>7</sup>. Others would supply from the analogy of Is. 22<sup>14</sup> the verb, revealed himself, but the conjunction which introduces the following line in the Heb. demands the verb of swearing.

<sup>q</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Lit., yokes. A yoke apparently represented the land which a team of cattle could plough in a day.

<sup>r</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Heb., bath, equivalent to the ephah.

<sup>s</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Heb., homer, a measure ten times as large as the bath or ephah.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>10</sup> Lit., ephah.

<sup>u</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> Lit., rise early; a characteristic Heb. idiom to express great zeal.

<sup>v</sup> 5<sup>13</sup> Heb., lit., dead of hunger. Possibly the text should be slightly changed in accordance with Dt. 32<sup>24</sup> so as to read, pinched with hunger. The Heb. has the abstract terms, their honor of wealth and their multitude, but these terms evidently stand for the different classes in the community.

<sup>w</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> I.e. Sheol, the abode of the dead, stands eagerly waiting to receive these guilty offenders. Sheol is here pictured as a great monster with open mouth.

<sup>x</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> Again abstract words are used in the Heb. to describe the different elements in the nation. The antecedent, Zion, which is clearly implied by the context, has been supplied.

<sup>y</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> The vss. which follow 15, 16 read And mankind is bowed down, and man is brought low, and the eyes of the haughty ones are brought low, but Jehovah of hosts is high through judgment and the holy God shows himself holy through righteousness. These vss. are almost universally recognized as a later scribal addition, based upon 23, 11. They have no connection with the preceding and immediately following context and deal with the haughty rather than the careless, pleasure-loving crowd whom Isaiah was denouncing. The conclusion of the original woe is found in 17.

<sup>z</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> After fatlings a Hebrew scribe has added an explanatory word. In its present form it means, wolves; but the Gk. suggests that the original word was lambs or kids.

<sup>19</sup>Who say: Let what he would do hasten,
Let it come speedily that we may see it,
Let the purpose of Israel's Holy One draw near,
And come, that we may perceive it.

<sup>20</sup>Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil,
Who put darkness for light and light for darkness,
Who put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter!<sup>a</sup>

Vicious sophis-
try

<sup>21</sup>Woe to those who are wise in their own eyes!
And prudent in their own conceit!

Pride
and egoism

<sup>22</sup>Woe to those who are heroic in drinking wine,
And valiant in mixing strong drink!

Shameless injustice

<sup>23</sup>Who for a bribe vindicate the wicked,
And strip the innocent man of his innocence.

<sup>24</sup>Therefore as a tongue of fire devours stubble,
And as hay shrivels in a flame;
So their root shall be as rottenness,
And their blossom go up like dust,
Because they have rejected the instruction of Jehovah of hosts,
And despised the word of Israel's Holy One.

Sudden
and
complete
de-struc-
tion
imminent

<sup>25a-d</sup>Therefore Jehovah's wrath is kindled against his people
And his hand is stretched out against them.
He smiteth them until the mountains tremble,
And their corpses are as refuse in the midst of the street.<sup>b</sup>

§ 32. The Revelation that Isaiah, the Son of Amoz, Saw Concerning Judah and Israel, Is. 2<sup>1</sup>, 6-4<sup>1</sup>

Is. 2 <sup>c</sup>Jehovah hath renounced his people, the house of Israel,<sup>c</sup>
For they are full of divination<sup>d</sup> from the East,
And they practice magic like the Philistines.
With foreigners they make compacts.

Jeho-
vah's attitude toward prevailing
crimes

<sup>a</sup> 5<sup>20</sup> The language is highly figurative and abrupt. The reference is evidently to the presumptuous, defiant sinners in the nation, who by their acts and attitude openly court Jehovah's judgment. This passage contains the first reference to arrogant scepticism in Heb. life.

<sup>b</sup> Vs<sup>25a-d</sup> appears to be a scribal appendix to the original Isaiah oracles which close with <sup>24</sup>. Vs.<sup>25</sup> introduces new figures, The wrath of Jehovah directed against his people is a characteristic Deuteronomic motive. The figure of the outstretched arms is taken from the recurring refrain in 9<sup>12</sup>, 17, 2<sup>1</sup>, 10<sup>4</sup>, 5<sup>25 e,f</sup>. The pictures of the earthquake and the corpses on the streets are favorite figures with later or post-exilic writers, e.g., Joel 4<sup>16</sup>, Jer. 9<sup>21</sup>, 16<sup>4</sup>, 25<sup>33</sup>. The tenses also look backward rather than forward to the exile.

§ 32 This sermon, like that found in 5<sup>1-24</sup>, probably represents one of Isaiah's earliest recorded addresses. It shows clearly why in the presence of Jehovah's holiness he cried out, "I am dwelling among a people with unclean lips." In the first chapter, 2<sup>8-20</sup>, the pride and heathenism of the nation as a whole are denounced. The contrast between Jehovah's peerless majesty and the vainglory of his nation is constantly in the prophet's mind. In the second general division, 3<sup>1-4</sup>, he points more definitely to existing evils and the incapacity and guilt of the

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> Following the Gk. and Lat. and supplying the subject. The Heb. reads, For thou hast renounced thy people, the house of Israel.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> Restoring a word evidently left out; the scribe overlooked it owing to its similarity to the preceding Heb. word.

<sup>7</sup>Their<sup>e</sup> land is full of silver and gold,
And endless are their treasures.
Their land is full of horses,
And countless are their chariots.
<sup>8</sup>And their land is full of idols;
The work of their own hands they worship,
That which their own fingers have made.

<sup>10</sup>Go in among the rocks,<sup>f</sup>
And hide thyself in the dust
From before the terror of Jehovah,
And the splendor of his majesty,
When he arises to inspire awe throughout the earth.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Human pride shall be brought low,
And the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down,
And in that day shall Jehovah alone be exalted.

<sup>12</sup>For a day of judgment hath Jehovah of hosts
Upon all that is proud and haughty.
And upon all that is lifted up and high.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Upon all the cedars of Lebanon, the haughty,
And upon all the oaks of Bashan, the lifted up, <sup>14</sup>And upon all the mountains, the proud,

Jeho-
vah's vindication
of his majesty

Jeho-
vah's
judgment
day

national leaders and of those who, like the rich women of Jerusalem, were squandering their wealth simply to satisfy their vanity.

The original passages clearly come from the years 740-735 B.C. The references in 3<sup>1</sup> to youths ruling over the nation and to social anarchy point to the opening years of the reign of the weak Ahaz. The grim predictions of coming disaster were also perhaps suggested by the advance of Assyria.

The superscription in 2<sup>1</sup> furnishes a fitting title to the section as a whole. Possibly the section represents extracts from three independent addresses, but all deal with certain aspects of the same theme and together make a closely knit unit. 2<sup>2-4</sup> is found again in Mi. 4<sup>1-4</sup>. Vs.<sup>5</sup> is apparently an abbreviation of Mi. 4<sup>5</sup>, suggesting that the passage in Is. was taken from the shorter book. Its ideas and point of view are those of the Babylonian exile and Is. 40-55 rather than of the Isaiah who preached in the presence of conditions in Judah under the rule of Jotham and Ahaz. Like the appendix to the book of Am., it was probably added originally to Is. 1 to offset the grim prophecy which that chapter contains.

In the same way 4<sup>2-6</sup> was evidently appended to the sermon in 2<sup>6-4<sup>1</sup></sup>. It contains allusions to the events of Manasseh's reign, but its language and ideas are those of the post-exilic period and especially of the days following the reforms of Nehemiah.

The original form of the prophecy has been much obscured in transmission. Many lines of two-beats are found, but the prevailing measure is the ordinary three-beat line.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Heb. his, and so throughout <sup>7, 8</sup> referring to the collective in <sup>6</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>9, 10</sup> Vs.<sup>3</sup> lacks the metrical structure of the rest of the chapter and is out of harmony with its context. Either it is a marginal gloss like <sup>22</sup>, which has crept into the context, or else it is a shortened form of the refrain in <sup>11, 17</sup>. In its present form it reads, Mankind is bowed down, and man is brought low, and thou canst not forgive them. Its tone is not that of Isaiah, but of the later wisdom school. The antecedent of thou in the last line must be Jehovah, but Jehovah cannot be the one addressed in vs. <sup>10</sup>. Possibly from the analogy in <sup>11, 17</sup> the vs. originally read,

*Mankind shall be bowed down
And man shall be brought low
And Jehovah alone shall be exalted.*

It, however, simply anticipates the characteristically Isaian putting of this thought in <sup>11</sup>. In any case the text is far more logical and complete without it. Vs. <sup>10</sup> may have originally read the same as <sup>19</sup>, and the singular rather than the plural may be due to the influence of <sup>9</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost this line but has retained it in the corresponding refrain in <sup>19</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has, brought low, which is evidently due to a scribal error (dittography).

And upon all the hills, the lifted up,
<sup>15</sup> And upon every high tower,
 And upon every fortified wall,
<sup>16</sup> And upon all the Tarshish-ships,
 And upon all costly vessels.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>17</sup> And human pride shall be bowed down,
 And the haughtiness of men brought low,
 And in that day shall Jehovah alone be exalted,
<sup>18</sup> And the idols—completely shall they pass away.
<sup>19</sup> And men will go into the caverns of the rocks,
 And into the holes in the ground;<sup>j</sup>
 From before the terror of Jehovah,
 And from the splendor of his majesty,
 When he arises to inspire awe throughout the earth.<sup>k</sup>

3 <sup>1</sup>For behold the Lord Jehovah of hosts is removing From Jerusalem and Judah every stay and support,<sup>l</sup> <sup>2</sup>The hero and the man skilled in war,
 The judge and the prophet, the diviner and elder,<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>The commander of fifty and the man of eminence and the counsellor,
 The one skilled in magical arts and the expert in charms.

The
overthrow of human pomp
and vanity

National dissolu-
tion

<sup>4</sup>I will make youths their princes,
 And capricious men shall rule over them.
<sup>5</sup> And the people shall oppress one another,
 Each man his neighbor;
 They shall be insolent, the boy to his elder,
 And the contemptible to the honorable man.

Social
dissolu-
tion

<sup>6</sup>When a man takes hold of another, [saying],
 ‘There is a mantle in your<sup>n</sup> father’s house,’<sup>o</sup>
 Be a chief over us,
 And let this heap of ruins be under your rule,’

Complete collapse
of the government

<sup>i</sup> <sup>216</sup> Or, works of art. The exact meaning of the Heb. word is not known.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>219</sup> Heb., dust.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>219</sup> A scribe has added the following repetitious prose note: <sup>20</sup> In that day men shall cast their idols of silver and gold which they have made to worship, to the moles and the bats, <sup>21</sup> that they may enter into the clefts of the rocks and into the crevices of the cliffs, because of the terror of Jehovah and the splendor of his majesty when he arises to inspire awe throughout the earth. Although <sup>21</sup> is clearly modeled after the refrain in <sup>19</sup>, new and entirely different synonyms are used from those employed by Isaiah in <sup>10, 19</sup>. The Heb. also adds a further note, <sup>22</sup> O cease trusting in man in whose nostrils is a breath! For at what is he to be valued? This observation of a pious scribe was not found in the text followed by the Gk. translators and was clearly added by a scribe in the spirit of Jer. 17<sup>5</sup>, Job 7<sup>16</sup>, Ps. 118<sup>8, 9</sup>, 146<sup>3, 4</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>31</sup> All stay of bread and stay of water was clearly later added by a scribe who misunderstood the original.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>32</sup> The metre here is not regular and the vs. is regarded by many as an interpolation.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>36</sup> Changing his to your. The error was very natural.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>36</sup> I. e., you are distinguished from the rest of us in this hour of our extreme poverty in that you possess a mantle which can be used as a symbol of authority. The language, of course, is hyperbolical and is intended to emphasize the extremities to which the nation is reduced.

<sup>7</sup>In that day he will cry out saying,
 'I am not your physician,
 For in my house there is no food nor mantle,
 You shall not make me the chief of the people.'

<sup>8</sup>For Jerusalem tumbles in ruins and Judah falls, Because their words and deeds are against Jehovah
 To defy his majestic eyes.

<sup>9</sup>The appearance of their faces<sup>p</sup> testifies against them,
 And their sin they proclaim, like Sodom,<sup>q</sup> without concealment.
 Woe to them! for they have wrought their own misfortune.

<sup>12</sup>My people—a boy is their leader,
 And women rule over them!
 My people—thy guides lead thee astray,
 And thy highways they have brought to ruin.

<sup>13</sup>Jehovah standeth forth to present his case,
 And he standeth up to judge his people.

<sup>14</sup>Jehovah entereth into judgment
 With the elders of his people and their princes:
 'You yourselves have devoured the vineyard,
 The spoils of the needy are in your houses.

<sup>15</sup>What do you mean by crushing my people,
 And by grinding the face of the needy?
 Is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah of hosts.

<sup>16</sup>And Jehovah saith: Because Zion's daughters are haughty
 And walk with heads held high, and wanton glances,<sup>r</sup>
 Tripping along as they go and jingling with their ankles,<sup>s</sup> <sup>17</sup>Therefore, the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion,
 And Jehovah will expose their shame.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>24</sup>And instead of perfume there shall be rottenness;
 And instead of a girdle, a rope; instead of carefully arranged hair, baldness;
 And instead of the beautiful garment, sackcloth; branding instead of beauty.

<sup>p</sup>3<sup>9</sup> Or, partial decisions, i. e., influenced by favoritism.

<sup>q</sup>3<sup>9</sup> Possibly this word was added by a scribe.

<sup>r</sup>3<sup>16</sup> Lit., with out-stretched necks and leering eyes.

<sup>s</sup>3<sup>16</sup> I. e., taking short, mincing steps and making a tinkling noise with the rings on their ankles in order to attract attention.

<sup>t</sup>3<sup>17</sup> A later editor, with more interest in detail than poetic or prophetic instinct, has added a long note describing the different articles of apparel worn by Hebrew women. It adds nothing to the direct, powerful arraignment of Isaiah, but is of great archaeological interest. It opens with the formula frequently used by the later editors to introduce their supplements;

<sup>18</sup>In that day Jehovah will put away the beauty of their anklets and the little suns and the crescents; the pendants, the arm-chains, and the veils; <sup>20</sup>the head-dresses, the ankle-chains, the girdles, the perfume boxes, and the amulets; <sup>21</sup>the signet rings, the nose rings; <sup>22</sup>the festal robes, the mantles, the shawls and the purses; <sup>23</sup>the mirrors, the linen garments, the turbans and the large veils.

Guilt
of the people
and its effect

Inefficiency
of the present
rulers

Jeho-
vah's charge against
the elders
and princes

Judgment awaiting the proud, vain women
of Jerusalem

<sup>25</sup>Thy men shall fall by the sword and thy warriors in battle.

<sup>26</sup>And her gates shall sigh and lament, and she shall sit on the ground despoiled.<sup>u</sup>

4 <sup>1</sup>And seven women shall take hold of one man in that day,<sup>v</sup>

Saying, 'Our own bread will we eat, and our own garments will we wear, Only let us bear thy name; take thou away our disgrace!'

§ 33. Jehovah Successive Judgments upon Lawless Israel,
Is 9<sup>8</sup>-10<sup>4</sup>, 5<sup>26-30</sup>, 25 c

Is. 9 <sup>8</sup>A message the Lord sends against Jacob,
And it smites<sup>w</sup> Israel,
<sup>9</sup>So that the entire people shall know it,
Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria,
Who are so lifted up<sup>x</sup> with pride and haughtiness of heart that they say, <sup>10</sup>Bricks have fallen down, but we will rebuild with hewn stone;
Sycamores have been cut down, but we will set cedars in their place.
<sup>11</sup>Therefore Jehovah hath stirred<sup>y</sup> up their oppressor,<sup>z</sup>

The calamities at the hands of Israel's foes

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>25</sup>, 26 These vss. interrupt the close connection between <sup>24</sup> and 4<sup>1</sup> and introduce the picture of a city whose defenders have been slain and which sits bewailing its fate. The change from the first to the third person in <sup>26</sup> is also unusual. By most commentators these vss. are regarded as secondary, although the evidence is not entirely decisive.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> Being unmarried and without children was the greatest disgrace which could befall an oriental woman. In this graphic passage Isaiah declares that the guilty land should be completely stripped of its defenders that the proud, wanton women to whom he spoke would be husbandless or else forced to marry on the most humiliating terms. It furnishes the natural and fitting conclusion to Isaiah's bold denunciations of the pride and false ambition of the different classes in Judah. The very different picture which follows in chap. 4 reflects the hopes and conditions of a far later age and therefore can best be studied in conjunction with other similar messianic predictions.

§ 33 This section is one of the few in which Isaiah refers to conditions in Northern Israel as well as in Judah. He uses the same designation, Ephraim, for the northern kingdom as did his contemporary Hosea. There is no reference to the alliance in 735 B.C. between Northern Israel and Damascus against Judah. Instead, Aram is the foe of Northern Israel as well as of Judah. Cf. 9<sup>12</sup>. The first stanza reveals that pride and self-confidence in the face of impending calamity which characterize the Northern Israelites in the years immediately following the death of Jeroboam II. This section therefore comes from between the years 740 and 735 B.C., and probably not long after the beginning of Isaiah's ministry.

The strophic structure is remarkably regular and a definite progress is discernible throughout the entire section. The three-beat measure prevails, although some of the lines pass over into the longer four-beat measure. The awful refrain:

*For all this his anger is not turned away,
And his hand is outstretched still,*

marks the close of each strophe, which, with the exception of the last, contains exactly fourteen lines. The section as a whole is a powerful analysis and arraignment of the crimes of the two Hebrew kingdoms. In describing the guilt of the nation and the calamities which have already befallen it, the prophet employs his most powerful figures. In succession the nation has already experienced the loss of territory to the Arameans and the Philistines, the decimating of its population, bloody civil strife and the cruel oppression of the weak by the strong. All these calamities are but the precursors of that greater judgment which Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah each saw rapidly approaching—Assyria.

In its present order, the poem in 9<sup>8</sup>-10<sup>4</sup> is incomplete. By some mischance in the transmission of the text its conclusion and climax have fallen from their original place and are now found at the end of chapter 5, where they are superfluous and ill fit their context. Restoring this stanza, which describes in most powerful imagery the coming judgment, the poem is complete.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> Heb., falls into; i.e., like a thunderbolt.

<sup>x</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> Supplying two words which have evidently dropped out as the result of a common scribal error, and which are demanded by the context.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., brought near.

<sup>z</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> Resin has been inserted in the Heb. by a later scribe.

And spurred on their enemies against them,<sup>a</sup>
<sup>12</sup>Aram on the east and the Philistines on the west,
 To devour Israel greedily.<sup>b</sup>
 For all this his anger is not turned away,
 And his hand is outstretched still.

De-
struc-
tion of
the leaders
and those led

<sup>13</sup>But to him who smites them the people turn not,
 And Jehovah of hosts<sup>c</sup> they do not seek.
<sup>14</sup>So Jehovah hath cut off from Israel head and tail, Palm-branch and rush in one day;<sup>d</sup>
<sup>15</sup>The elder and the prominent man—he is the head,
 The prophet who gives false oracles—he is the tail.<sup>e</sup>
<sup>16</sup>Thus the guides of this people proved misleaders
 And those who were led by them were devoured.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>17</sup>Therefore the Lord spareth<sup>g</sup> not their stalwart youths,
 And on their orphans and widows he hath no pity,
 For each of them is godless and an evil-doer,
 And every mouth speaks impious folly.
 For all this his anger is not turned away,
 And his hand is outstretched still.

Cruel
oppression of class
by class

<sup>18</sup>For unrighteousness burns like a fire
 Which consumes thorns and briars;
 And kindles in the thickets of the forest,
 And they roll up columns of smoke.
<sup>19</sup>By the fury<sup>h</sup> of Jehovah<sup>i</sup> the land is consumed,
 And the people become food for the flames.<sup>j</sup>
 No one has pity on his fellows;
<sup>20</sup>They cut off slices on the right, yet are hungry,
 They devour on the left, yet are unsatisfied.
 Each devours his neighbor's flesh.<sup>k</sup>
<sup>21</sup>Manasseh Ephraim and Ephraim Manasseh;
 And both together are against Judah.
 For all this his anger is not turned away,
 And his hand is outstretched still.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> In the Heb., against them (lit., him, Israel) goes with the preceding line, but the poetic parallelism favors the above and the Heb. order is apparently due to the mistaken repetition of a letter.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>12</sup> Heb., with full mouth.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> Gk. omits, of hosts, as in 19. Possibly this is secondary.

<sup>d</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> Symbols of the high and lowly. Cf. 19<sup>6</sup>, Dt. 28<sup>13, 14</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> This is perhaps an explanatory note added by the same scribe who had in mind 3<sup>2</sup>. f 9<sup>16</sup> This vs. appears to be a later addition reflecting 3<sup>12</sup>. The people naturally refers to Judah, while the original context concerns only Northern Israel.

<sup>g</sup> 9<sup>17</sup> Emending as the parallelism of the vs. absolutely demands. Received Heb., rejoices.

<sup>h</sup> 9<sup>18</sup> Making a slight correction in the otherwise impossible text.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>19</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, of hosts. The latter destroys the metrical structure.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>19</sup> Or, are like canibals. This would be parallel to the following context.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and the corrected Heb.

10   <sup>1</sup>Woe to those who set up iniquitous decrees,
      And the scribes who devote themselves to writing oppression,
<sup>2</sup>To turn aside the dependent from securing justice,
      To despoil the afflicted of my people of their right,
      That widows may be their prey,
      And that they may spoil orphans!
<sup>3</sup>What, then, will you do in the day of punishment,
      And of the driving tempest which shall come from afar?
      To whom will you flee for aid,
      And where will you leave your wealth?
<sup>4</sup>Only as they crouch under the captives,<sup>1</sup>
      And fall under the slain.
      For all this his anger is not turned away,
      And his hand is outstretched still.

5   <sup>26</sup>Therefore he will raise a signal to a distant nation,
      And will hiss to it to come from the end of the earth.
      And behold, quickly, swiftly it will come.
<sup>27</sup>There will be none weary nor any who stumble;<sup>m</sup>
      The girdle of their loins is not loosened,
      And the thong of their sandals does not tear, <sup>28</sup>Whose arrows are sharpened,
      And whose bows are all bent.
      The hoofs of their horses are counted as flint,
      And their wheels are counted as a whirlwind.
<sup>29</sup>Their roaring is like that of a lion,
      Like young lions they roar and growl;
      They seize their prey and escape, and none rescues it.<sup>n</sup> <sup>25e,f</sup>For all this his anger is not turned away,
      And his hand is outstretched still.<sup>o</sup>

Perver-
sion of law and justice

The
coming
judgment at
the hand of an invincible foreign foe

<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> The Heb. text is very uncertain. Duhm, Cheyne, and Marti radically reconstruct so as to read:

*Beltis is bowed down, Osiris is broken
      And under the strain they fall.*

Beltis (the female deity equivalent to Isis) and Osiris represent the gods of the Egyptians whose alliance and help the Israelites were seeking. Cf. 17<sup>10, 11</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 5<sup>27</sup> The Heb. adds, probably from Ps. 121<sup>4</sup>, he neither slumbers nor sleeps, but this does not fit the present context and must apply to Jehovah.

<sup>n</sup> 5<sup>29</sup> With <sup>29</sup> and the refrain in <sup>25e, f</sup> the remarkable series of stanzas in which Isaiah pictures the fate about to overtake the two Heb. kingdoms is complete. To this has been added, however, the following vs.:

*And there shall be over it in that day a roaring like the roaring of the sea,
      And if one looks to the earth, behold, distressing darkness,
      And light has become darkness because of his distress.*

The above translation is in part based upon the Gk.; the last word in the Heb. is unintelligible and the entire vs. is exceedingly obscure. That it is a later addition is generally recognized. The figure is entirely different from Isaiah's vivid picture of the advancing conqueror. The exile appears to be in the mind of the scribe. The obscurities of text and meaning reflect a literary style far inferior to that of Isaiah.

<sup>o</sup> 5<sup>28e, f</sup> These lines are usually regarded as the conclusion of an incomplete stanza in <sup>25</sup>. They are, however, loosely connected with their context (cf. § 31 note<sup>c</sup>) and furnish the refrain lacking at the close of <sup>29</sup>. The transposition may well have been made when the entire passage, 5<sup>25-29</sup>, was separated from its original context.

IV

ISAIAH'S COUNSELS IN THE CRISIS OF 735 B.C.

Is. 7, 8, 17<sup>1-14</sup>, 28<sup>1-6</sup>§ 34. The Approaching Overthrow of Damascus and Israel, Is. 17<sup>1-14</sup>Ruin of Damascus

Is. 17 <sup>1</sup>Soon shall Damascus cease to be a city,
And shall lie in ruins forever.

<sup>2</sup>Its cities shall be given up to flocks,<sup>a</sup>
And they shall lie down there with none to disturb.
<sup>3</sup>Ephraim shall lose her bulwark,<sup>b</sup>
And Damascus her sovereignty;
And the rest of Aram shall perish,
Like the Israelites shall they be,<sup>c</sup>
Is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts.

Sweep-
ing disaster
for
Israel

<sup>4</sup>And in that day shall the glory of Jacob grow dim,
And the fatness of his flesh disappear;
<sup>5</sup>And it shall be as when a harvester gathers standing grain,
And his arm reaps the ears.
Yea, it shall be as when he gleans in the Valley of Rephaim,<sup>d</sup> <sup>6</sup>And the gleanings from it shall be left as at the beating of an olive tree:
Two or three berries on the topmost branch,
Four or five on the boughs of a fruit tree,—<sup>e</sup>
It is the oracle of the God of Israel.<sup>f</sup>

Future
conversion of mankind

<sup>7</sup>In that day mankind shall look to its Maker
And its eyes shall turn to Israel's Holy One.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>1</sup> As its superscription, Utterance concerning Damascus, indicates, this address of Isaiah owes its position among the foreign prophecies to its theme. Its contents clearly show that it comes from the period preceding the fall of Damascus in 732 B.C., and not long before that event. As is recorded in the introduction to chap. 7 (§ 35), the kings of Damascus and Northern Israel formed, about 735 B.C., a coalition of Palestinian states to resist the victorious advance of Assyria under Tiglath-Pileser IV. Judah under Ahaz refused to join with them, and to compel her to do so they advanced against Jerusalem. Vss. 12-14<sup>1</sup> are usually assigned to a later age, but no period in Hebrew history furnishes a better setting than this critical time, when these northern confederates were beginning to move toward Jerusalem. From 7-8<sup>4</sup> we know that the certainty of their overthrow was the central theme of Isaiah's predictions at this crisis. His announcement of the speedy and complete destruction of these northern kingdoms was therefore intended to allay the fears of the king and people of Judah and to prevent unwise entanglements. It was delivered about 735 B.C., probably a short time before the similar messages to Ahaz and the people recorded in 7 and 8. Together these chapters give a remarkably vivid picture of the activity of Isaiah in the great crisis of Judah's history.

<sup>a</sup> 17<sup>1, 2</sup> Reconstructing the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. Heb., The cities of Aroer are forsaken, but Damascus is clearly the subject here.

<sup>b</sup> 17<sup>3</sup> So Gk., which has evidently preserved the original.

<sup>c</sup> 17<sup>3</sup> I. e., both peoples shall share the same fate.

<sup>d</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> The valley to the southwest of Jerusalem. These words are not found in the Gk. and may be secondary.

<sup>e</sup> 17<sup>6</sup> The closing word contains a play on the word Ephraim.

<sup>f</sup> 17<sup>6</sup> The original may have read, Jehovah of hosts, as in <sup>3</sup> and elsewhere in Isaiah.

<sup>g</sup> 17<sup>7, 8</sup> These vss. introduce a different metre and entirely different theme, and destroy the close connection between <sup>6</sup> and <sup>9</sup>. Several un-Isaian phrases are also found, and the theme is one which first became of primary interest to the post-Assyrian prophets.

OVERTHROW OF DAMASCUS AND ISRAEL [Is. 17<sup>8</sup>

<sup>8</sup>It shall not look to the altars, the work of its hands,
And it shall not have regard for those things which its fingers have made.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>In that day shall thy cities be deserted<sup>i</sup>
Like the ruins<sup>j</sup> of the Hivites and Amorites,<sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup>Because thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation,
And hast not remembered the Rock which is thy defence.<sup>l</sup>
Therefore, though thou plantest shoots for Adonis,
And settest out twigs from a strange god,<sup>m</sup> <sup>11</sup>And in the same day when thou plantest thou fencest them in,
And on the next day bringest thy shoots to blossom,
The harvest shall vanish in the day of sickness and incurable pain.<sup>n</sup>

The
folly of apostasy and of the popular heathen
cults

<sup>12</sup>Woe to the tumult of many peoples
Like the tumult of the seas when they are tumultuous,
And the uproar of mighty<sup>o</sup> nations
Is like the roaring of waters when they roar.
<sup>13</sup>But when he rebukes them,<sup>p</sup> they flee far away,
And they are driven like chaff on the mountain before the wind,
Like whirling dust before the whirlwind.
<sup>14</sup>At eventide behold, terror!
Before morning they are no more.
This shall be the fate of our plunderers
And the lot of those who despoil us.

The sudden
de-struc-
tion of these threatening northern
powers

<sup>h</sup> 17<sup>8</sup> A scribe has added the explanatory gloss, the asheras and the sun-pillars.

<sup>i</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. The Heb. text is badly corrupted.

<sup>j</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> Again following the Gk. in reconstructing the Heb. The Hivites were the village dwellers. Amorites is one of the general terms describing the early inhabitants of Palestine.

<sup>k</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> A scribe has added the prose explanatory note, which they deserted before the Israelites; and it has become a desolation.

<sup>l</sup> 17<sup>10</sup> The language in these two lines is that of the later Deuteronomic school and they may therefore be later editorial additions. Cf. Dt. 6<sup>12</sup>, 8<sup>11</sup>, 14, 18, 19, 32<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 17<sup>10</sup> The text and allusions in these lines are obscure. The reference evidently is to the worship of Adonis, which was widely practised in southern Syria and Phœnicia. Northern Israel's alliance with Damascus had undoubtedly given a new emphasis to this worship among the people of Northern Israel. Gardens and certain kinds of plants were closely connected with this cult. Isaiah here evidently condemns ironically the zeal of the Northern Israelites in worshipping this foreign god and declares that in the coming hour of national distress it will be of no avail to deliver them from the sickness which will overtake them.

<sup>n</sup> 17<sup>11</sup> The last part of this vs. has become hopelessly corrupt so that even the Gk. translators failed completely to understand it.

<sup>o</sup> 17<sup>12</sup> Following the Gk., which connects the adjective with nations, preserving the original metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>p</sup> 17<sup>13</sup> A scribe, by mistake, has repeated the last five words of the preceding verse at the beginning of <sup>13</sup>. They possibly took the place of an original line of the Heb. which has been lost, for the transition is exceedingly abrupt.

§ 35. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz in the Crisis of 735 B.C., Is. 7

Attack
of Aram
and Israel
and its effect
upon Ahaz

Isaiah's advice not to fear
the northern foes

Their real weakness

Is. 7<sup>1</sup> In the days of Ahaz, the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, Rezin, king of Aram and Pekah, son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up to attack Jerusalem, but they were not able to take it. <sup>2</sup> And when it was reported to the house of David that Aram had settled down<sup>q</sup> upon Ephraim, Ahaz's heart and the heart of his people shook as the trees of the forest shake before the wind.

<sup>3</sup> The Jehovah said to Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, together with thy son Shear-jashub,<sup>r</sup> at the end of the conduit of the upper pool<sup>s</sup> on the highway by the fuller's field, and say to him, <sup>4</sup> Take heed and keep calm; fear not, neither be faint-hearted because of these two fag-ends<sup>t</sup> of smoking firebrands, because of the fierce anger of Rezin and Aram, and the son of Remaliah. <sup>5</sup> For Aram has been planning evil against thee with Ephraim and the son of Remaliah, saying, <sup>6</sup> "Let us go up against Judah and terrify and overpower it<sup>u</sup> and appoint the son of Tabeal<sup>v</sup> king in its midst."

"Thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
It shall not stand nor come to pass.
<sup>8</sup> For the head of Aram is Damascus,

§ 35 The date of the prophet's activity recorded in this chapter was about 735 b.c. The main facts are given in the introductory vss., which come from a later editor of the prophecies. Terror had evidently seized king and people at the prospect of the joint attack of Damascus and Northern Israel. That the attack was imminent is suggested by the fact that Ahaz was apparently examining the defences of Jerusalem in the prospect of a siege. In the light of the later development it would seem that the king had already taken steps to conclude a foolish and treasonable alliance with the common foe, Assyria, although this fact was probably not known to Isaiah. He is well aware, however, of the selfish, cowardly character of Ahaz and has no patience with his mock humility. The refusal of Ahaz to ask a sign or to be convinced of the truth of Isaiah's advice simply to stand fast and trust Jehovah to deliver them evidently convinced the prophet of the king's treasonable purpose.

Possibly the chapter represents two different addresses, but the close-knit unity would suggest that it was all delivered on the same day. The traditional translation and interpretation of the account of the sign in <sup>4</sup> has been unfortunately influenced by the mistake of the Gk. translators in rendering the Heb. word, virgin, and by the use of this translation in Mt. 1<sup>22</sup>. An exact translation removes many of the difficulties that have gathered about it. The young woman would seem from the form of the Heb. to be some definite person well known to the prophet and king, and therefore either the wife of Isaiah or Ahaz. Since the son soon after born to the prophet receives another name, it is more probable that the young woman was the queen. If the child to be born was the prince, who ultimately received the name Hezekiah, the implication of the narrative would be fully satisfied. The date was about 735 b.c., and Hezekiah came to the throne about 715 b.c. The only difficulty in accepting this identification is the statement of the later editor in II Kgs. 18<sup>2</sup> that Hezekiah was twenty-five years old when he became king. If this difficulty be considered insuperable, it is possible to regard Isaiah's statement as general and applicable at this crisis to any young mother who should then bear a child. Cf. further note <sup>1</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>72</sup> I. e., they were so numerous that in joining their forces with those of Northern Israel they settled down like a great swarm of bees.

<sup>r</sup> <sup>73</sup> The name of Isaiah's son, A Remnant shall Return, evidently like the names given to Hosea's sons, embodied and illustrated one of the prophet's earliest messages. It implied that foreign conquest would sweep over the land, but that a portion of the people would survive. It therefore embodies the same teaching as is found in the closing words of Isaiah's call, which come from the same period. The meaning of this strange name was doubtless known to the king and people, and it was probably to impress this message upon the king that Isaiah took with him his little son.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>74</sup> The site of the upper pool has not yet been absolutely identified. It may have been the pool to the north of the temple area, but more probably it was the pool in the lower Tyropean Valley, just inside the ancient city walls and near the main street which led down through the city to a point where the Kidron and Hinnom valleys met.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>74</sup> I. e., almost burnt out and therefore not to be feared even though they may blaze high for the moment.

<sup>u</sup> <sup>75</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. text.

<sup>v</sup> <sup>76</sup> The form of the name suggests that the nominee of these northern powers was himself an Aramean.

And the head<sup>w</sup> of Damascus is Rezin,<sup>x</sup>

<sup>9</sup>And the head of Ephraim is Samaria,

And the head of Samaria is the son of Remaliah.

If ye will not hold fast,

Verily ye shall not stand fast.

The only way of deliv-
erance

<sup>10</sup>And Jehovah spoke further to Ahaz, saying: <sup>11</sup>Ask thee a sign of Jehovah, thy God; ask it either in the depth of Sheol or in the height above.<sup>y</sup> <sup>12</sup>But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I put Jehovah to the test.

<sup>13</sup>Then Isaiah said, Hear now, O house of David: is it too small a thing for you to weary men that ye must weary my God also? <sup>14</sup>Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: Behold! a young woman<sup>z</sup> will conceive and bear a son and call his name Immanuel.<sup>a</sup> <sup>15</sup>Curds and honey<sup>b</sup> will be his food when he knows how to refuse the evil and choose the good. <sup>16</sup>For before the child shall know how to refuse the evil and choose the good, those two kings thou dreadest shall be forsaken. <sup>17</sup>Jehovah will bring upon thee, and upon thy people and upon thy father's house days such as have not been since the day Ephraim separated from Judah.<sup>c</sup>

Ahaz's
refusal to be convinced

The sign of the early overthrow
of Aram,
Israel,
and
Judah

<sup>18</sup>And in that day Jehovah will hiss to the flies and the bees,<sup>d</sup>

<sup>19</sup>And they will all come and settle down

Completeness of the de-
struc-
tion

<sup>w</sup> 7<sup>8</sup> I. e., these upstart kings of Northern Israel and Damascus determined the policy of the kingdoms over which they played the tyrant.

<sup>x</sup> 7<sup>8</sup> A scribe who probably had in mind Ashurbanipal's transfer of certain colonists to Samaria, alluded to in Ezra 4<sup>8-10</sup>, has added the note, And within sixty-five years shall Ephraim be broken so that it shall be no longer a people. It disturbs the close connection of the context, is not in the literary style of Isaiah, and contradicts the statement of the prophet in <sup>16</sup> and <sup>8<sup>i</sup></sup> that the calamity will come quickly.

<sup>y</sup> 7<sup>11</sup> Revising the Heb. text as the context requires. The meaning of this vs. evidently is, ask any sign whatsoever. Cf. II Kgs. 20<sup>9-11</sup>. It is difficult to conceive what Isaiah would have done had Ahaz interpreted his words literally and asked as a sign either an earthquake or an eclipse. In the light of Isaiah's work and method as a whole, it seems probable that this expression was used figuratively and hyperbolically to impress upon the king the prophet's conviction that his message was true. The fact that the sign which follows has nothing of the supernatural tends to confirm this conclusion.

<sup>z</sup> 7<sup>14</sup> Lit., the young woman. The Gk. in translating this word virgin, is entirely unjustified, for the Heb. has a different and definite word to express the idea of virginity. The present Heb. word simply means a young woman of marriageable age, whether married or unmarried. The use of the definite article would imply that the prophet had in mind a definite young woman, either his own wife, or the king's, or some member of the court known to be pregnant. The entire emphasis in the sign is placed, however, not on the character of the mother or the child, or even his name, but on the fact that before he is able to distinguish between food that is palatable and that which is not, the northern firebrands, which Anaz fears will be burnt out and their lands will be overrun by the Assyrian conqueror. Hence it is improbable that, as Gressmann urges (Ursprung der Isr.-jud. Eschatologie, 272-3), Isaiah here subscribes to a popular hope of a national Deliverer.

<sup>a</sup> 7<sup>14</sup> I. e., God with us. This name forcibly voiced that faith which filled the heart of the prophet and which he was trying to impress upon his king and people. It is also in striking contrast to that fatal lack of faith which at the moment was influencing Ahaz to seek deliverance from the passing danger by throwing himself into the arms of the dreaded foe, Assyria.

<sup>b</sup> 7<sup>15</sup> In the light of <sup>21</sup>, <sup>22</sup> it is clear that curds and honey here symbolize the effects of conquest, for they are the food of the refugees who have been driven from their homes and in concealment subsist upon the meagre food which the wilderness affords. It also reveals Isaiah's well-founded suspicion of Ahaz's purpose and implies what is stated later, that not only Damascus and Northern Israel, but also Judah, shall suffer from the blind, selfish policy of their rulers.

<sup>c</sup> 7<sup>17</sup> To aid the reader in identifying the foe which will execute Jehovah's judgment a scribe has added the explanatory gloss, the king of Assyria. It has no syntactical connection with the context.

<sup>d</sup> 7<sup>18</sup> The metrical structure, the parallelism, and Isaiah's teaching at this period all indicate that the above represents the prophet's original oracle. The figure evidently refers, as in the succeeding parable, to the advance of Assyria. They will come at Jehovah's signal and

In the ravines between the heights and in the clefts of the rocks,
And on all thorn-hedges and on all pastures.

<sup>20</sup>In that day the Lord will shave,
With a razor that is hired beyond the River,<sup>e</sup>
The head and the hidden hair,
And the beard also will it take away.

The
povery-stricken remnant

<sup>21</sup>And in that day a man will keep alive a young cow and two sheep, <sup>22</sup>And out of the abundance of milk which they shall produce, he shall live on curds;
For curds and honey shall be the food of all who are left in the midst of the land.

Land
a desolation

<sup>23</sup>And in that day, wherever there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand pieces of silver,
That place shall be but thorns and briars.
<sup>24</sup>With arrows and with bow will men come thither,
For all the land will become thorns and briars.
<sup>25</sup>And, as for all the mountains which used to be hoed,
None<sup>f</sup> will go thither for fear of thorns and briars;
And it shall be a place where cattle shall be sent and sheep shall trample.

§ 36. The Certainty of the Conquest of Damascus and Samaria by Assyria, Is. 8<sup>1-4</sup>

The public tablet

Is. 8 <sup>1</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, Take thee a large tablet and write upon it in plain characters:<sup>g</sup>

SWIFT BOOTY, SPEEDY PREY

<sup>2</sup>And take for me, as trusty witnesses, Uriah<sup>h</sup> the priest and Zechariah, the son of Jeberechiah.

settle down like a swarm of flies or bees upon the three lands which are the objects of the divine wrath. The same figure has already been used by Isaiah in <sup>2</sup> in describing the advance of the Arameans. A later scribe, seeking to interpret the text and guided by the allusion to the Egyptians in 18<sup>1</sup>, has added the awkward prose gloss, which are at the end of the streams of Egypt, after the word fly (collective for flies), and, which is in the land of Assyria, after bee (collective for bees). These explanatory glosses are exactly parallel to those in <sup>8</sup> and <sup>17</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>720</sup> Again a scribe has added the note, with the king of Assyria, which aids the reader but cuts right across the sentence in which it has been inserted, and reveals at a glance its secondary character. The razor from beyond the River Euphrates is of course the Assyrian army.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>735</sup> Heb., thou; but this is evidently a mistake for the third person with the indefinite or general antecedent.

<sup>§ 36</sup> The acts recorded in this short historical section evidently followed soon after the address in 7. They represent an appeal to the people. Their aim is to allay the popular fear aroused by the approach of the northern powers. Among the great Semitic nations the inscribed monument or tablet had long been the recognized method of making a permanent record. The size of Isaiah's tablet and the clear letters with which he was to inscribe it indicate that it was probably to be set up in the temple to be read by the people. In giving a name to his new-born son, which would arouse curiosity and impress his message upon the public mind, he was but following the example of Hosea. Cf. § 16. Thus, in the most definite terms, Isaiah declared that within two or three years Damascus and Samaria would fall a prey to Assyria. In the case of Damascus his prediction was literally true, for less than three years later, in 732 B.C., the city was conquered and plundered by Tiglath-Pileser IV. Samaria was also captured at the same time, but its ultimate overthrow did not come until 722 B.C.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>81</sup> Lit., with the stylus of a man.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>82</sup> Evidently Uriah was the head of the Jerusalem priesthood again referred to in II Kgs. 16<sup>10-12</sup>.

<sup>3</sup>And I went in unto the prophetess and she conceived and bore a son. And Jehovah said: Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz [Swift booty, speedy prey]; for before the boy knows how to cry, 'My father' and 'My mother,' they will carry off the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria before the king of Assyria.

Name
of Isaiah's
son

§ 37. Judah's Fate because She Lost Faith in Jehovah, Is. 8<sup>5-22</sup>

Is. 8 <sup>5</sup>Then Jehovah spoke yet further to me saying:
<sup>6</sup>Because this people have rejected the waters of Shiloah which flow softly,
 And are dismayed<sup>i</sup> because of Rezin and the son of Remaliah, <sup>7</sup>Therefore the Lord is about to bring upon them the waters of the River,<sup>j</sup> the mighty and great.
 And it shall rise above all its channels and overflow all its banks.
<sup>8</sup>And it shall sweep onward into Judah, shall overflow and pass over it, reaching even to the neck,
 And its outstretching wings shall cover the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel.
<sup>9</sup>Know ye peoples<sup>k</sup> and be terror-stricken and give ear all ye distant lands.
 Gird yourselves, yet ye shall be terror-stricken; gird yourselves, yet ye shall be terror-stricken!
<sup>10</sup>Take counsel together,—but it shall come to nought; make a plan, but it shall not stand.<sup>l</sup>

As-syria's irresistible advance under Jeho-
vah's direction

<sup>11</sup>For thus Jehovah saith to me, forcibly restraining me<sup>m</sup> and instructing me not to walk in the way of this people:

The
only sufficient cause
for Judah's
fear

<sup>12</sup>Call ye not conspiracy<sup>n</sup> all that this people calls conspiracy.
 What they fear, do not fear nor be filled with dread.

§ 37 This section records the fact that Isaiah's appeal to the people of Judah fell on deaf ears. A doubly pathetic note runs through it; the sorrow of the patriot over the suicidal folly of his nation and the heart-break of the prophet rejected by his king and people. It contains mingled prediction, denunciation, pity, and personal reflection. Like the latter part of 7, it presents the inevitable consequences of Judah's rejection of Jehovah and the counsels of his prophet. To have trusted in Jehovah's care—symbolized by the gently flowing waters that came from the pool of Siloam below the temple mount—would have saved Judah from the yoke of Assyria which Ahaz's hasty alliance brought upon the nation. Like the Euphrates at flood time, Isaiah predicts, Assyrian armies directed by Jehovah shall sweep on, overflowing and engulfing, into Judah. Vss. <sup>9, 10</sup> resemble in language certain passages in later prophecies such as Ezek. 38 and Joel 3, but the virility of the style suggests Isaiah, and the reference may well be to the overthrow of the other nations which, like Damascus, Israel and Judah, stood in the way of the Assyrian flood.

Vs. <sup>16</sup> reveals not only Isaiah's discouragement but his hope for the future. It was a hope destined to be fully realized, for the prophetic teaching committed to his faithful disciples was

<sup>i</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> The Heb., rejoice in Rezin, is ungrammatical and contrary to 7<sup>1</sup> and the historical situation. The correction of an obvious error in the text restores the original play on the Heb. words, reject and be dismayed (lit., melt).

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>7</sup> The river is clearly the Euphrates. A later scribe, to interpret the evident allusion, has added, even the king of Assyria and all his glory. It interrupts, however, the original structure of the prophecy.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. and Lat., and a slightly corrected Heb. text.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>10</sup> Apparently a later scribe, who failed to recognize that Isaiah included Judah, <sup>8</sup> among the nations which would be powerless before the Assyrian flood, added the words found in the Heb., for God is with us. The only other tenable explanation of this phrase is to regard as do many scholars—<sup>9, 10</sup> as later additions, in the spirit of Ps. 17<sup>8</sup>, 36<sup>8</sup>, and as referring to Jehovah's protection of his people.

<sup>m</sup> 8<sup>11</sup> Lit., by the hand.

<sup>n</sup> 8<sup>12</sup> The reference is evidently to the popular interpretation of the alliance between Rezin and Pekah.

<sup>13</sup>Jehovah of hosts, him regard as the conspirator,<sup>o</sup>
Let him be your fear and your dread!

<sup>14</sup>For he will be a stumbling block<sup>p</sup> and a stone to strike against,
And a rock of stumbling to both the houses of Israel,<sup>q</sup>
A trap and a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

<sup>15</sup>Many among them shall stumble and fall,
And they shall be broken and snared and taken.

Isaiah's disciples the one hope for the future

<sup>16</sup>Binding up<sup>r</sup> the testimony and sealing the instruction among my disciples,<sup>17</sup>I will wait for Jehovah who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob, and in him will I trust.<sup>18</sup>Behold, I and the children whom Jehovah hath given me are signs and symbols in Israel from Jehovah of hosts who dwells in Mount Zion.

The
prophetic teaching the true guide
for the
people

<sup>19</sup>But when they say to you, 'Consult the mediums
And the wizards who chirp and mutter,'<sup>s</sup> [Say], 'Should not a people rather consult its God;
On behalf of the living should men consult the dead?
<sup>20</sup>To the instruction and the testimony!'
Unless they speak thus, they shall have no daybreak.<sup>t</sup>

The result of rejecting
it

<sup>21</sup>But they shall pass through it hard pressed and famishing,
And it shall come to pass that when they are famished, they will be enraged,
And will curse their king and their God;
And whether they direct their gaze upward<sup>22</sup>or look to the earth,
Behold, only distress and darkness, the gloom of anguish,
Into thick darkness shall they be driven away.<sup>u</sup> treasured until in the days of Manasseh and Josiah, it was made in part the basis of the new code and reformation promulgated in 621 b.c. For the contemporaries of Isaiah, who resorted in their terror to the ancient forms of divination, the crisis of 735-4 b.c. presented gloom and anguish.

<sup>o</sup>8<sup>13</sup> Heb., regard him as holy. But a slight change gives the above reading. As in <sup>7</sup> and <sup>14</sup> he is the source of all your trouble.

<sup>p</sup>8<sup>14</sup> Heb., for a sanctuary. This is entirely out of accord with the context and is probably due to the error of a scribe who mistook it for the very similar Heb. word translated above. It is usually regarded as an addition, but the metrical structure and the parallelism both demand it.

<sup>q</sup>8<sup>14</sup> Cf. Mt. 21<sup>4</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>4</sup>, Rom. 9<sup>23</sup>, I Pet. 2<sup>8</sup>, where the passage is interpreted as referring to the Messiah, but in the original context the reference is evidently to Jehovah.

<sup>r</sup>8<sup>15</sup> Lit., bind up, but the Heb. construction in <sup>17</sup> demands the first person. Possibly the prophet lays the command upon himself. The testimony and the instruction are obviously the prophet's teachings during this and preceding crises.

<sup>s</sup>8<sup>19</sup> The vs. is variously interpreted. Apparently Isaiah here describes the attitude of the people in rejecting Jehovah and the counsel of his prophet and in resorting to the representatives of the old heathenism.

<sup>t</sup>8<sup>20</sup> I. e., true comfort in distress and hope for the future. The Heb., as frequently in this context and in the following verses, apparently employs the singular, referring to the members of the nation collectively. The singular should therefore be interpreted in English as a plural.

<sup>u</sup>8<sup>21</sup>, 22 The reference here, as elsewhere in the chapter, is evidently to the period of distress and doubt through which Isaiah saw that the nation, having rejected the counsels of Jehovah and blindly led by its selfish king, Ahaz, was destined to pass. The language is general and at times vague and not in keeping with the vigorous style of Isaiah. The passage may be from a later editor.

§ 38. The Imminent Fall of Samaria, Is. 28<sup>1-6</sup>

Is. 28 <sup>1</sup>Woe to the proud crown of the drunkards of Ephraim,
And the fading flower of their splendid adornment,
Which crowns the fertile valley of those overcome with wine!
<sup>2</sup>See, even now the Lord hath ready one mighty and strong,
One like a storm of hail, a destructive tempest,
One like a storm of mighty, overflowing waters,
One who casts down to the earth with violence.

As-syria's ad-vance against proud
Sa-maria

<sup>3</sup>Trampled down shall be the proud crown of the drunkards of Ephraim,
<sup>4</sup>And the fading flower of their splendid adornment,
Which crowns the fertile valley.
And it shall be like an early fig before the harvest,
Which as soon as one sees it—
Yea, even before it is in his hand, he swallows it.<sup>v</sup>

Fate
of the fair
city

§ 38 Isaiah regarded himself as more than the prophet of little Judah. From the frequent references in his early prophecy it is evident that he watched with deepest concern the fall of the northern kingdom, and found in the overwhelming calamity which ultimately overtook it the most striking illustration of the universal truths which he proclaimed. The present oracle is closely connected with the corresponding denunciation of the crimes of the rulers of Jerusalem, in the days immediately preceding the approach of Sennacherib in the year 701 b.c. Cf. § 41. This prophecy, however, comes from the days immediately preceding the siege and conquest of Samaria. It may therefore be dated with assurance about 725 b.c. The Assyrian armies are rapidly advancing and Samaria's ultimate fall is definitely assured. Samaria, with its fair gardens crowning the brow of the hill on which it stood, Isaiah likens to a chaplet of flowers on the brow of the drunken revellers. This intimate familiarity with the topography of Samaria suggests at least that Isaiah had at some time beheld the city with his own eyes.

Vss. 5, 6:

<sup>5</sup>In that day will Jehovah of hosts be a crown of beauty
And a diadem of adornment to the remnant of his people, <sup>6</sup>And a spirit of judgment to him who sits on the judgment seat,
And of might to those who turn back war from the gates.

are clearly a much later appendix to this oracle. They are closely related to the similar appendix in 4<sup>2-6</sup>, and are uttered from a very different age and point of view than the original oracle. For Isaiah to have asserted at this time that the people of Samaria or Jerusalem would be given divine strength to conquer and drive back the armies of Assyria would have been to contradict all his other utterances and to have destroyed the moral impression made by his earnest warning.

<sup>v</sup> 28<sup>1</sup> The Heb. text of this line is obscure, but the above rendering evidently brings out the prophet's meaning.

V

ISAIAH'S SERMONS BETWEEN 711 AND 701 B.C.

Is. 1, 20, 22, 28<sup>r</sup>, 29<sup>16</sup>, 30<sup>1-17</sup>, 31<sup>1-4</sup>, 32<sup>9-14</sup>, 39

§ 39. The Coming Captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia, Is. 20

Is. 20 <sup>1</sup>In the year that the Tartan came to Ashdod sent by Sargon, king of Assyria, and attacked Ashdod and captured it,<sup>2</sup> at that time Jehovah spoke through Isaiah, the son of Amoz, saying, Go and loose the sackcloth from off thy loins and thy sandal from off thy foot.<sup>a</sup> And he did so, going naked and barefoot.

<sup>3</sup>And Jehovah said, Just as my servant Isaiah hath gone naked and barefoot three years as a sign and a warning to Egypt and Ethiopia, <sup>4</sup>so shall the king of Assyria lead away the captives of Egypt and the exiles of Ethiopia, youths and old men, naked and barefoot, with their bodies exposed,<sup>b</sup> <sup>5</sup>and they who look to Ethiopia and boast of Egypt shall be dismayed and put to shame. <sup>6</sup>And the inhabitants of this coast-land shall say in that day, ‘Behold, if such is the fate of those to whom we looked and<sup>c</sup> to whom we fled for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria, how can we ourselves escape?’

§ 40. The Embassy of Merodach-baladan, Is. 39

Is. 39 <sup>1</sup>At that time Merodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent eunuchs with a present to Hezekiah; for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick. <sup>2</sup>And Hezekiah was glad because of them, and showed them all his treasure-house, the silver, the gold, the spices, the precious <sup>a</sup> 39 The middle years of Isaiah's life were largely devoted to the task of keeping his nation loyal to Assyria. In the earlier days he had opposed the Assyrian alliance; but when once the foreign yoke was on the neck of Judah, he realized and clearly taught that rebellion was suicidal. To the little states of Palestine the heavy tribute exacted by the Assyrian king was exceedingly odious. Every uprising in the great empire was watched with keenest expectation. When, therefore, in 711 B.C. the Philistine town of Ashdod rose in rebellion against Sargon and endeavored to enlist the co-operation of the other states of southern Palestine, Judah was in great danger of becoming involved in the plot.

The present section is apparently from the Isaiah history quoted elsewhere in the prophecy, and tells of the dramatic methods which Isaiah employed in order to impress his countrymen with the danger of rebelling. Throwing off his prophet's mantle, he went barefoot, clad only in his under tunic, the garb of a captive, summer and winter, for three years, to show them the fate that would overtake the people of Judah, if they were foolish enough to defy Assyria. In this endeavor the prophet appears to have succeeded, although Sargon accuses Judah of having sent presents about this time, together with Edom, Moab and Philistia, in order to secure the help of the Pharaoh of Egypt. Ashdod and Gath were conquered by an army under the leadership of the Assyrian military commander or turtanu referred to by his Assyrian official title in the present section. The chief offenders in the Philistine cities were deported and peace was for the time being restored in Palestine.

<sup>b</sup> 20<sup>r</sup> This vs. is loosely connected with the context and has the characteristics of a later editorial note. In the original history of Isaiah<sup>3</sup> probably followed<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 20<sup>1</sup> Lit., with buttock exposed. A scribe has added the awkward gloss, the shame of Egypt. Winerklar's identification of the lands referred to in<sup>3, 4</sup> with an Arabian Muγri and Cush is very doubtful. Cf.<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 20<sup>6</sup> Supplying the and required by the context.

<sup>e</sup> 40 After an independent reign of ten years, Merodach-baladan, a scion of the reigning house of Babylon, was driven from his throne by Sargon in 710 B.C. The death of Sargon encouraged Merodach-baladan to make another strong attempt to recover his throne and to shake off the rule of Assyria. To weaken his rival he sent emissaries among the other states subject to Assyria, urging them to rebellion. His attempt, however, in the end failed, for in the year 701 B.C. he was conquered and driven from his kingdom. The incident, therefore,

Isaiah's symbolic prophecy

Its meaning: captivity
the penalty of defying
Assyria

Hezekiah's attitude toward the Babylonian rebel oil, and his armory and all that was found among his treasures; there was nothing in his palace nor in all his dominion that Hezekiah did not show them.

<sup>3</sup>Then Isaiah the prophet came to King Hezekiah and said to him, What did these men say? and whence, pray, do they come to you? And Hezekiah said, They have come from a far country, from Babylon. <sup>4</sup>And he said, What have they seen in your palace? And Hezekiah answered, They have seen all that is in my palace; there is nothing among my treasures that I did not show them. <sup>5</sup>Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, Hear the word of Jehovah, <sup>6</sup>The days are quickly coming, when all that is in your palace and that which your fathers have stored up to this day shall be carried to Babylon—nothing shall be left,' saith Jehovah. <sup>7</sup>And of your sons who shall issue from you, whom you shall beget, they shall take away some to be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. <sup>8</sup>Then Hezekiah said to Isaiah, Good is the word of Jehovah which you have spoken. For he thought, As long as I live there shall be peace and stability.

Isaiah's condemnation of Hezekiah's action

§ 41. Warnings to the Rulers of Jerusalem, Is. 28<sup>7-22</sup>

Is. 28 <sup>7</sup>These also in Jerusalem stagger with wine and reel with strong drink;

Corruption of Judah's guides

Priest and prophet stagger with strong drink,

They reel when they have a vision and totter when they render a decision.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>All tables are full of vomit—filth in every place.

<sup>9</sup>Whom [they say] would he teach knowledge and to whom make clear a revelation?

Their contempt for Isaiah's reiterated warnings

To those who are just weaned from the milk and drawn from the breast?

<sup>10</sup>For precept upon precept, and precept upon precept,<sup>e</sup>

Line upon line, and line upon line, here a little and there a little.

recorded in the present section is probably to be dated early in 704 B.C. The narrative is taken from the late Isaiah stories, and the prediction that Babylon should be the ultimate land of the captivity reflects the point of view and knowledge of the later narrator. It is clear, however, that the narrative is on the whole historical. Hezekiah doubtless received the messengers in a friendly way, and his action, which favored an alliance against Assyria, was strongly condemned by Isaiah.

§ 41 In its present place in the book of Isaiah this section is the immediate sequel of the warnings against the rulers of Northern Israel found in § 38. The references to the treaty in <sup>15</sup> and the bitter denunciations of the foolish policy of the leaders of Judah, indicate that the date of this prophecy was sometime after the death of Sargon in 705 B.C. and probably about 703 B.C., when the states of Palestine were on the eve of rebelling against Assyria. It reveals the bitter contempt and opposition with which the wise counsels of Isaiah were met by the civil and religious leaders of the nation. He quotes their ironical words. In the Hebrew they are much more expressive and euphonious than in the English, Gav la-qav, qav la-qav; qav la-qav, qav la qav. In this section the prophet denounces the leaders not so much for their contempt of his word as for their folly in trusting to an Egyptian alliance to save them from Assyria. Again he proclaims that an overwhelming flood shall pass through the land, carrying away these corrupt rulers of the people.

<sup>d</sup> 28<sup>7</sup> The Heb. word refers especially to a decision rendered by a priest.

<sup>e</sup> 28<sup>10</sup> The exact meaning of these words is not clear. Possibly they were intended to be simply a parody of the balanced measure and parallelism in which the prophet cast his prophetic message. Perhaps they are an imitation of the measured cadence so effective in teaching little children. The point of the charge against the prophet seems to be that he keeps ever reiterating the same teachings and treating his hearers as little children. Isaiah replies that Jehovah will teach them in very different language the lessons which they have failed to learn when simply presented. The only true source of rest and deliverance for the weary people of Judah was to be found in a wise, consistent policy whose inspiration was a strong, simple faith in Jehovah. Having failed to learn this lesson, the rulers of Judah must learn it in the hard school of experience as they stagger under the cruel blows which Assyria was about to inflict.

As-syria to teach them

<sup>11</sup>Yea, through a gibbering speech and a foreign tongue
[Jehovah] will surely speak to this people—<sup>12</sup>he who said to them,
This is the true rest; give ye rest to the weary;
And this is the true refreshing! but they are not willing to hear.

Harsh experience to impress
the lesson

<sup>13</sup>Therefore Jehovah's words shall be to them, precept upon precept, and precept upon precept,
Line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little,
So that, as they go, they shall stumble backward,
And they shall be broken, and ensnared and taken.

The
future
to prove
the futility
of alliances
and the value
of
faith

<sup>14</sup>Therefore hear the word of Jehovah, ye scornful men,
Ye rulers of this people which is in Jerusalem:
<sup>15</sup>Because ye have said, 'We have entered into a treaty with death,
And with Sheol we have made a compact,<sup>f</sup>
When the overwhelming scourge<sup>g</sup> comes on it shall not reach us,
For we have made a lie our trust and in falsehood we have taken refuge.'

<sup>16</sup>Therefore, thus saith the Lord Jehovah,

Behold, I lay<sup>h</sup> in Zion a tried stone,
A precious corner stone as a sure foundation,
He who believes shall not be moved.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>17</sup>And I will make justice the measuring line and righteousness the plummet,
But hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and water shall overflow the hiding place.

<sup>18</sup>And your covenant with death shall be broken,
And your compact<sup>j</sup> with Sheol shall not stand;
When the overwhelming scourge passes over you, ye shall be trampled down thereby.

Jeho-
hovah's sweeping
judgment
upon
his guilty
people

<sup>19</sup>As often as it passes over, it shall take you away.
For morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night,
Then shall it be sheer terror to understand the revelation.

<sup>20</sup>For the bed is too short to stretch oneself out,
And the coverlet too small to wrap oneself in it.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>21</sup>For Jehovah shall arise as on Mount Perazim,<sup>l</sup>
He will be wroth as in the Vale of Gibeon,

<sup>f</sup> 28<sup>15</sup> Following the Gk. and Lat. and the parallelism in interpreting the meaning of this doubtful Heb. word.

<sup>g</sup> 28<sup>15</sup> The scornful reference is evidently to the figure frequently used by Isaiah, as, for example, in 8<sup>7-10</sup> and in 17 of the present chapter.

<sup>h</sup> 28<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk., Targ. and Syr. in slightly correcting the Heb. text.

<sup>i</sup> 28<sup>16</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context demands. Gr., shall not be ashamed. Heb., make haste. The sure corner-stone was that firm faith in Jehovah's care and guidance which the rulers of Judah completely lacked.

<sup>j</sup> 28<sup>18</sup> The exact meaning of the Heb. word is not known and the present form is probably due to a scribal error. The above reading is based on a slightly corrected text. In this and the following vs. the prophet replies to the sneering words of the rulers in 9, 10.

<sup>k</sup> 28<sup>20</sup> Evidently Isaiah here quotes a proverb to illustrate the fact that in their extremity the rulers shall be unable to find anything to save them from Jehovah's judgment which is to be meted out by Assyria.

<sup>l</sup> 28<sup>21</sup> The reference evidently is to David's great victory over the Philistines at Baal-perazim and the second reference is to a subsequent victory over the same foe near Gibeon. II Sam. 5<sup>25</sup>.

To do his work—alien is his work!

And to carry out his task—strange is his task!<sup>m</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Now, therefore, be not scornful, lest your bands be made tight,<sup>n</sup>

For a fixed decree of destruction have I heard from Jehovah of hosts.

<sup>23</sup>Listen, and hear ye my voice,<sup>o</sup>

Give heed and hear my word:

<sup>24</sup>Is the plowman ever plowing?<sup>p</sup>

Is he ever breaking up and harrowing his ground?

<sup>25</sup>Does he not when he has levelled its surface,

Scatter fennel and sow cummin?

And plant there wheat and barley?<sup>q</sup>

And spelt as its border?

<sup>26</sup>For Jehovah<sup>r</sup> hath taught him the right way;

It is his God who has instructed him.

<sup>27</sup>For fennel is not threshed with sledges,

Nor is a cart wheel rolled over cummin,

But fennel is threshed with a staff,

And cummin with the flail.

<sup>28</sup>Is grain for bread crushed to pieces?

Nay, one does not thresh it forever,

But when he has driven his cart wheel over it,

He spreads<sup>s</sup> it out so that it is not crushed fine.

<sup>29</sup>This also proceeds from Jehovah of hosts,

Wonderful counsel, great wisdom hath he.

Even
the knowledge of how to sow seed is
from Jeho-
vah

Also how to prepare
the grain
for food

§ 42. Jehovah's Purpose for His Guilty City and People, Is. 29<sup>1-14</sup>

Is. 29 <sup>1</sup>Woe, Arial, Arial, city which David besieged,

Add year to year, let the feasts run their cycle,

<sup>2</sup>Then will I distress Arial, and there will be lament and lamentation.

And thou wilt be to me as an altar of sacrifice,<sup>3</sup>for I will besiege thee,<sup>t</sup>

And I will encircle thee with entrenchments, and raise forts against thee;

The certain humiliation
and judgment awaiting Jerusalem

<sup>m</sup> 28<sup>21</sup> I. e., the un congenial task of meting out judgment upon his people.

<sup>n</sup> 28<sup>22</sup> Following the Syr. and certain Gk. MSS. in omitting the Lord. A scribe has also added at the end, over all the earth; but this destroys the force of Isaiah's oracle which was directed simply against the rulers of Judah.

<sup>o</sup> 28<sup>23-29</sup> This poem is probably from some later sage. It lacks the fire or literary characteristics of Isaiah. Its thought seems to be that even in the routine of agricultural life the knowledge of the right methods to be followed comes from Jehovah; how much more should the men, who guide the policies of Jehovah's people, seek counsel from Israel's divine king.

<sup>p</sup> 28<sup>24</sup> A scribe has added the explanatory note, which destroys the balanced metrical structure of the vs., in order to sow.

<sup>q</sup> 28<sup>25</sup> The vs. has suffered through scribal repetition.

<sup>r</sup> 28<sup>26</sup> The word, Jehovah, has evidently fallen out of the Heb. text.

<sup>s</sup> 28<sup>28</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>§ 42</sup> This section contains one of the impressive woes which Isaiah delivered against Jerusalem at the moment when its rulers were courting destruction through their foreign alliances. Unlike most of the addresses of this period, it begins rather than closes with a picture of the impending destruction. A certain mystery and obscurity lend force to the doom which he thus pronounces. The title Arial, meaning sacrificial altar or altar-hearth, was probably intended by the prophet as a play upon the ancient name, Urusalamu, from which was derived the Hebrew form Jerusalem. Even Jerusalem, the city of the temple, consecrated by thousands of offerings, would not escape the overwhelming scourge of which Isaiah spoke so often. The prophet's repeated declarations in these passages that Jerusalem should be destroyed are in striking contrast to the assertion of the inviolability of Jerusalem which have been added, even to the present addresses, by later scribes. In the light of the attitude of the rulers of the city, any other message than that of condemnation and warning would have been impossible on the lips of a fearless, truth-speaking prophet like Isaiah. The latter part of the section contains a recapitulation of those crimes of the leaders which were the ultimate basis of the prophet's stern warning.

<sup>t</sup> 29<sup>5</sup> The Heb. adds, as a ball; Gk., as David. The Gk. probably has the older reading. It was apparently a scribal note added by one who recalled the reference in the parallel passage in <sup>1</sup>. The Heb. reading arose through a common error in transcription.

<sup>4</sup>Then thou shalt be laid low, speaking from the earth,
And from the dust wilt thy speech come submissively,
And thy voice shalt be like that of a ghost from the ground,
And from the dust thy speech shalt come as a whisper.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5d</sup>And then, suddenly, in an instant,<sup>v</sup> <sup>6</sup>thou shalt be punished by Jehovah of hosts,
With thunder and with earthquake and with a great din,
With whirlwind and tempest and devouring flames of fire.

The appalling judgment upon the hypocritical people

<sup>9</sup>Stupify yourselves<sup>w</sup> and be ye stupid! Blind yourselves and be ye blind!
Be drunken but not with wine! Stagger but not with strong drink!

<sup>10</sup>For Jehovah hath poured out upon you a spirit of deep sleep,
And hath closed your eyes<sup>x</sup> and covered your heads.

<sup>13</sup>And Jehovah saith,<sup>y</sup> Because this people draw near with their mouth,<sup>z</sup>
And honor me with their lips, while their heart is far from me,

So that their fear of me is nothing more than a precept taught by men.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a thing so wonderful<sup>b</sup> and astonishing,

That the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, the discernment of their discerning ones shall be eclipsed.

<sup>u</sup> 29<sup>4</sup> These last two lines may be simply a scribal amplification, for they are almost identical repetitions of the first and second lines of the same vs.

<sup>v</sup> 29<sup>4</sup> Vs. <sup>5d</sup> is the immediate sequel of <sup>4</sup>. A post-exilic scribe interested primarily in the overthrow of Israel's heathen foes has added in <sup>5</sup> the prediction that, Then will the horde of thine enemies become as fine dust, and the hordes of the oppressors like passing chaff. The same motive is continued in vss. <sup>7</sup> and <sup>8</sup>. Like a dream, a vision of the night shall it be with the hordes of all the nations drawn up in battle array against Arial, even all that fight against her and her stronghold, and that distress her. <sup>8</sup>Yea, as when a hungry man dreams that he is eating but awakes and his appetite is unsatisfied. Or as when a thirsty man dreams he is drinking but awakes faint and consumed with thirst, so let it be with the hordes of all the nations that fight against Mount Zion. The vocabulary, the prose form, and the thought leave no doubt that these lines are later additions.

<sup>w</sup> 29<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. and the parallelism of the vs. in reading these verbs as imperatives rather than in the third person plural.

<sup>x</sup> 29<sup>10</sup> A scribe, failing to appreciate the real meaning of this vs., has inserted, prophets, after your eyes, and, seers, after your heads. These insertions destroy both the metre and the thought of the vs. The same scribe in <sup>11</sup>, <sup>12</sup> has expanded his own interpretation in a prose note very different in style and theme from that of Isaiah; <sup>11</sup>So that the vision of all this has become to you as the words of a sealed book which, if one delivers to a man who is learned, saying, Read this I pray thee, he says, I cannot for it is sealed. <sup>12</sup>And should the book be delivered to one who is not learned with the command, Read this, I pray thee, he says, I am not learned.

<sup>y</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> Possibly the introductory words, the Lord saith (Gk., Jehovah) are secondary.

<sup>z</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> Dividing the text somewhat differently from the Heb.

<sup>a</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> Restoring the Heb. in accordance with the suggestion of the Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 29<sup>14</sup> The Heb. adds, with this people. This is probably a scribal addition from <sup>13</sup>.

§ 43. The Folly of Making an Alliance with Egypt, Is. 29<sup>15, 16</sup>, 30<sup>1-17</sup>

Is. 29 <sup>15</sup>Woe to those who hide their purpose so deeply from Jehovah
That their deeds are done in the dark,
And who say, Who sees us and who perceives us?<sup>c</sup>

God-
less statesman-
ship

30 <sup>1</sup>Woe to the rebellious sons, is Jehovah's oracle, Carrying out a plan which is not mine,
Establishing a treaty<sup>d</sup> contrary to my spirit,
That they may heap sin upon sin.

<sup>2</sup>Who would set out for Egypt without asking my advice,<sup>e</sup>
To flee to the shelter of Pharaoh,
And to seek refuge in the shadow of Egypt.
<sup>4</sup>The shelter of Pharaoh<sup>f</sup> will be your shame,
And the refuge in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.

The crime of disregarding Je-ovah's
will

<sup>4</sup>For though the princes are in Zoan,
And his messengers reach Hanes,<sup>g</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They shall all be put to shame by a people<sup>h</sup> that can avail them nothing,

A people<sup>i</sup> which brings no help,<sup>j</sup> but only shame and disgrace.

<sup>6</sup>Among<sup>k</sup> the beasts of the south country, in the land of trouble and distress,

Of the roaring lion and lioness,<sup>l</sup> the viper and flying dragon,<sup>m</sup>
They carry their wealth on the backs of young asses,
And their treasures upon the humps of camels

Egypt
no help but a snare

§ 43 As in most of Isaiah's addresses of this period, he strenuously attacks the policy of the leaders of Judah in making an alliance with Egypt. Instead of putting their trust in Israel's Holy One, they were busily sending embassies to the Egyptian king. A certain Ethiopian Shabaka, about 712 B.C., conquered lower Egypt and founded the twenty-fifth Egyptian dynasty. Ambitious to extend his influence into Asia, he sent representatives to the different states of southern Palestine in order to stir them up to rebellion against Assyria. Encouraged by the death of Sargon and by the emissaries of Merodach-baladan, the rebel king of Babylon, the leaders of Judah listened to the promises of the Egyptians. Isaiah alone of all the statesmen of Judah, fully appreciated the insincerity and insignificance of Egypt's promises. In the face of overwhelming public opinion he pointed out the insane folly of these alliances and the overwhelming fate that would inevitably overtake Judah. In these strong poetic passages one is impressed by the concreteness of the figures and Isaiah's wonderful grasp of the political situation.

<sup>c</sup> 29<sup>15</sup> A scribe, familiar with II Is., has added the exclamatory note,
O your perversity; Is the potter no better than the clay?

Shall the thing made say of its maker, He made me not?

Or a thing formed say of him who formed it, He has no insight?

<sup>d</sup> 30<sup>1</sup> Lit., pouring out a libation, i.e., in connection with the concluding of a treaty.

<sup>e</sup> 30<sup>2</sup> Lit., who are setting out to go down to Egypt without asking my mouth, i.e., the decision by Jehovah's oracle.

<sup>f</sup> 30<sup>3</sup> It is quite possible that, of Pharaoh and in the shadow of Egypt, were added by a later scribe.

<sup>g</sup> 30<sup>4</sup> I. e., the princes of Judah go as far as Zoan and Taphanes on the eastern border of Egypt.

<sup>h</sup> 30<sup>5</sup> Or, following the marginal reading and making certain minor changes. They have all brought presents to a people.

<sup>i</sup> 30<sup>6</sup> Slightly reconstructing the impossible Heb.

<sup>j</sup> 30<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb. the tautological phrase, nor for profit.

<sup>k</sup> 30<sup>8</sup> A later scribe not understanding the unusual beginning has added the late word, Burden.

<sup>l</sup> 30<sup>9</sup> Correcting the impossible Heb., from them.

<sup>m</sup> 30<sup>6</sup> Cf. 14<sup>29</sup>.

To a people that can be of no avail,<sup>7</sup> even Egypt,<sup>n</sup>
 Whose help is only vanity and nothingness.
 Therefore I name that nation, 'The Quelled Monster.'<sup>o</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Now go in, write it down and on a book inscribe it,<sup>p</sup>
 That it may serve for a future day as a witness<sup>q</sup> forever, <sup>9</sup>For it is a rebellious people, lying children,
 Children who will not heed Jehovah's instruction, <sup>10</sup>Who say to the seers, See not!
 And to those who have visions, Give us no vision of what is right!
 Speak to us what is agreeable, give us false visions!
<sup>11</sup>Turn from the way, go aside from the path, Trouble us no more with Israel's Holy One!

<sup>12</sup>Therefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye reject this word,
 And trust in perverseness<sup>r</sup> and crookedness and rely thereon, <sup>13</sup>Therefore this guilty act shall be to you
 Like a bulging breach in a high wall ready to tumble.
 Suddenly, in an instant will come its destruction,
<sup>14</sup>Yea, its destruction shall be as when one dashes an earthen vessel in pieces, Shattering it ruthlessly, so that not a potsherd is found among the broken pieces
 With which to take up fire from the hearth or to draw water from a cistern!

<sup>15</sup>For thus the Lord Jehovah, Israel's Holy One saith,
 By sitting still and remaining quiet ye shall be delivered,
 In resting and trusting shall your strength consist.<sup>s</sup>
 But ye refused,<sup>t</sup> and said, Nay,
 On steeds will we speed; therefore ye shall speed in flight!
 And, On swift steeds will we ride. Therefore your pursuers shall be swift!
<sup>17</sup>Each thousand shall flee<sup>t</sup> at the war-cry<sup>u</sup> of one,
 From the war-cry of five ye shall flee, till ye are but a remnant,
 Like a pole on the top of a mountain and like a signal on a hill.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>n</sup> 30<sup>7</sup> Probably an explanatory note.

<sup>o</sup> 30<sup>7</sup> Dividing the Heb. letters a little differently from the received text.

<sup>p</sup> 30<sup>8</sup> A scribe has added, on a tablet with them.

<sup>q</sup> 30<sup>8</sup> Following what was evidently the original vowel pointing.

<sup>r</sup> 30<sup>12</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>s</sup> 30<sup>15</sup> These closing vss. contain a forceful résumé of Isaiah's preceding teaching. The opening verb is usually rendered, by repenting, but the Heb. may be translated as above.

<sup>t</sup> 30<sup>17</sup> Supplying the verb from the context. It is possible that this line is a gloss based on Dt. 32<sup>30</sup>, Josh. 23<sup>10</sup> and Lev. 26<sup>8</sup>. It expresses in epigrammatic proverbial form the thought that one should put a thousand to flight. The same thought is repeated in the succeeding line.

<sup>u</sup> 30<sup>17</sup> Lit., rebuke.

<sup>v</sup> 30<sup>17</sup> I. e., only one or two here and there shall remain like a lone signal on a high mountain, for the rest of the nation will have fled before the foreign conquerors.

Defiant, obdurately attitude of the people

Its inevitable consequences

Judah's true policy contrasted with its fatal folly

CONSEQUENCES OF THE EGYPTIAN ALLIANCE [Is. 31<sup>1</sup>]

§ 44. The Inevitable Consequences of an Alliance with Egypt, Is. 31<sup>1-4</sup>

Is. 31 <sup>1</sup>Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help,
Who rely on horses and<sup>w</sup> on chariots because they are many,
And who trust in horsemen because they are numerous,
But look not to Israel's Holy One nor consult Jehovah!

<sup>2</sup>But he too is wise and brings calamity and does not recall his words,
He will arise against the house of evil-doers and against the helper of transgressors,

<sup>3</sup>Yea, the Egyptians are men and not God and their horses are flesh, not spirit,
Jehovah will stretch out his hand so that the helper will stumble,
And the one helped will also fall, and they shall all go down together.

<sup>4</sup>For this hath Jehovah said to me,
As a lion or a young lion growls over his prey,
When all the shepherds are summoned against him,
But at their shouting is not terrified and at their noise not daunted,
So will Jehovah of hosts come down to battle against the mount and hill of Zion.

Egypt helpless to deliver the Hebrews from their
fate

§ 45. Warning to the Self-Confident Women of Jerusalem, Is. 32<sup>9-14</sup>

Is. 32 <sup>9</sup>Ye women who are at ease, rise up, hear my voice!
Ye self-confident daughters, give ear to my speech.

<sup>10</sup>Add some days to a year, and ye shall shudder, ye self-confident women,
For the vintage shall fail and the ingathering shall not come.

<sup>11</sup>Tremble, ye who are at ease, and shudder ye confident women, Strip you, make you bare, and gird on sackcloth,<sup>x</sup> <sup>12</sup>and mourn

<sup>12</sup>For the pleasant fields, for the fruitful vine!

<sup>13</sup>For the land of my people which shall send up thorns and briars!
Yea, for all houses of mirth in the joyous city!

<sup>14</sup>Because the palace is forsaken, the populous city is deserted;
Ophel and the watch-tower have become but caves<sup>y</sup> forever,
A joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks.

The horrors of foreign
conquest imminent

§ 44 In this brief oracle the prophet deals with the same theme as in the preceding sections. It is evidently an extract from one of the many sermons which he preached during the strenuous period when the question of Egyptian alliance either hung in the balance or was already decided.

<sup>w</sup> 31<sup>1</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has a second verb, who trust, which a scribe seems to have transformed from the third line, where it is required. This correction restores the sense as well as the metre of the vs.

<sup>x</sup> 32<sup>11</sup> Restoring the Heb. which is corrupt, for, although the section is addressed to the women, the traditional text reads, gird upon your loins. They (masculine) shall smite their breasts.

<sup>y</sup> 32<sup>14</sup> Or revising the Heb., a bare spot.

§ 45 This short oracle has no connection with its immediate setting. By many scholars it is regarded as simply a later imitation of Isaiah's spirited attack upon the women of Jerusalem recorded in chap. 3. It certainly lacks much of the fierce vigor of that earlier passage. The present section is embedded in what is clearly a post-exilic context and may come from some of the later imitators of Isaiah. If it is from Isaiah, it is difficult to determine its exact historical setting. Its general position, following Isaiah's sermon in connection with the crisis of 701 B.C., furnishes, on the whole, the most satisfactory background. It is possible that he again denounced the wives of the nobles, as well as their husbands, because he realized that their overconfidence at this great crisis was one of the leading causes why the nation was rushing on to certain disaster. Instead of their false confidence, the prophet declares, they shall soon have abundant cause for terror and lamentation, as they shall see their city and land devastated and left desolate after the foreign invader has swept over it.

§ 46. Jerusalem's Deep-Seated Guilt, Is. 22<sup>1-14</sup>

Joy
inap-
propriate
in the hour of national afflic-
tion

Is. 22 <sup>1</sup>What<sup>z</sup> aileth thee now that all thy people have gone up to the house-tops, <sup>2</sup>Thou that art full of uproar, tumultuous city, joyful town?

Thy slain are not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle.

<sup>3</sup>All thy leaders have fled away together, they who bear the bow<sup>a</sup> are taken prisoners;

All thy strong defenders<sup>b</sup> are taken prisoners together, they who have fled far away.

<sup>4</sup>Therefore I say, Look away from me; let me weep bitterly!
Labor not to comfort me for the destruction of my people.

<sup>5</sup>For a day of tumult, of trampling and of confusion hath the Lord, Jehovah of hosts,

In the Valley of Vision a breaking down of the walls and a crying to the mountains.

<sup>6</sup>When Elam took up the quiver<sup>c</sup> and Kir uncovered the shield.

<sup>7</sup>And thy choicest valleys were full of chariots,

And the horsemen set themselves in strong array against the gate, <sup>d</sup>and the covering of Judah was taken away,<sup>d</sup>

Then ye looked in that day to the armor in the House of the Forest,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>9</sup>And ye saw that the breaches in the city of David were many,

And ye collected the waters of the lower pool,

<sup>10</sup>And ye numbered the houses of Jerusalem and broke down the houses to fortify the wall;

<sup>11</sup>Ye also made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool,<sup>f</sup>

But ye looked not to him who had done all this, nor regarded him who fashioned it.<sup>g</sup>

---

§ 46 The background of this address was evidently the hour of Judah's distress when Assyrian hordes were overrunning its cities and had advanced to the siege of Jerusalem. The wild, unnatural rejoicing which Isaiah condemned may have been occasioned by the hopes aroused by the advance of the Egyptian army, which, however, was quickly defeated by the Assyrians at Eltekah on the Philistine plain. In their extremity the people of Jerusalem welcomed even a temporary relief with frenzied rejoicing which only revealed the terrible reign of terror through which they were passing.

With his calmer, broader outlook, Isaiah realized that it was not the moment for such an outburst, but that instead lamentation and deep repentance were alone appropriate. The detailed allusions to the siege of Jerusalem in <sup>9b-11a</sup> may be later additions. The reference also to the Edomites and to the northern Arameans represented by their native city, Kir, would suggest that perhaps the entire section <sup>6-11a</sup>, was from a later scribe who did not know that the Edomites at this time were also in rebellion against Assyria. The literary style and thought of the passage, however, strongly point to Isaiah as the author.

* 22<sup>1</sup> This address is introduced by the superscription, Oracle of the Valley of Vision. This was probably added by a later scribe on the basis of the reference in <sup>5</sup> to the Valley of Vision. Possibly the Valley of Vision is a confused reading for the Valley of Hinnom to the west and south of Jerusalem.

<sup>a</sup> 22<sup>3</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., from a bow.

<sup>b</sup> 22<sup>4</sup> Again reconstructing the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>c</sup> 22<sup>5</sup> The Heb. adds the unintelligible clause, with the chariot of men, horsemen. This may well be a confused scribal note based on 21<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 22<sup>6</sup> Lit., And he took away the covering of Judah. It is not clear whether the antecedent is Jehovah or the enemy. Possibly the prophet intentionally left it indefinite.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>8</sup> I. e., the royal armory mentioned in I Kgs. 7<sup>2-4</sup>, 10<sup>16, 17</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 22<sup>9</sup> Probably a pool in the lower part of the Tyropœan Valley.

<sup>g</sup> 22<sup>11</sup> Following certain Gk. texts the Heb. adds, from of old; but this is not in harmony with the metrical structure of the vs. nor in close connection with the context.

<sup>12</sup>And the Lord Jehovah of hosts called in that day
To weeping and to mourning, to baldness and to girding with sackcloth;
<sup>13</sup>But behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen and slaughtering sheep, Eating flesh and drinking wine—
Eating and drinking; for, ‘To-morrow we die.’
<sup>14</sup>But Jehovah of hosts hath revealed himself to my inner vision, Never can this your iniquity be forgiven until ye die.<sup>h</sup>

Judah's
unpardon-able sin

§ 47. Infidelity and Punishment of Judah and Jerusalem, Is. 1

Is. 1 <sup>2</sup>Hear, O heavens, and give heed, O earth, for Jehovah speaketh:
Sons have I reared and placed on high, but they have proved false to me.
<sup>3</sup>The ox knoweth its owner and the ass its master's crib,
But Israel has no knowledge, my people no insight!
<sup>4</sup>Ah! sinful nation, people deep-laden with guilt,
Race of evil-doers, perverse children! They have forsaken Jehovah,
They have spurned Israel's Holy One, they have become rebellious.

The
folly
and in-gratitude of Jeho-
vah's
people

<sup>5</sup>On what place can ye still be smitten, since you still go on rebelling?
The whole head is sick, and the whole heart diseased, <sup>6</sup>From sole of foot to head<sup>i</sup> there are only wounds and bruises and fresh blows,

Judah's pitiable condition

<sup>b</sup> 22<sup>14</sup> A Heb. scribe added, Saith the Lord, Jehovah of hosts. This line is omitted in certain Gk. texts and in all probability was not original with Isaiah.

§ 47 The first chapter of Isaiah furnishes a fitting introduction to the book as a whole. It is introduced by the suggestive superscription, Vision of Isaiah, son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, Ahaz, Jotham and Hezekiah, kings of Judah. The first chapter was given this commanding position not because it represented the first sermons of Isaiah, but rather because it presents clearly and forcibly the key-note of all his prophetic addresses. It has been fittingly described as, “The Great Arraignment,” for the notes of denunciation and warning are prominent.

Recent scholars are inclined to find in it a series of extracts from addresses delivered on several different occasions. It falls naturally into four great divisions; (1) Vss. 2-17, which present the pitiable condition of Judah and Jerusalem and the crimes and false trust in ritual on the part of the rulers, which are the underlying causes of these disasters. (2) A brief section, 18-19, in which the prophet emphasizes the necessity of acts rather than of formal worship. (3) Vss. 21-26, a denunciation and warning addressed to the leaders of the nation, which in vocabulary and theme recall the similar sermons in the years 704-1 B.C. (4) Vss. 27-31, which contain the same references to overwhelming judgment; but the crime chiefly emphasized is that of apostasy and a tendency to turn to the old Canaanitish cults. Even though there is evidence that these different sections were originally different units, it is not entirely conclusive. The same note of denunciation and warning binds them all together; those addressed throughout are the corrupt leaders of the nation, and the historical background in sections 1 to 3, and possibly in 4, is the troublesome years which culminated in the invasion of Sennacherib in 701 B.C.

The picture in the opening verses is one of national disaster. The cities of Judah have been burnt and pillaged by a foreign invader and Jerusalem itself alone is left. With mad frenzy the rulers and people are resorting to the temple with offerings in order to supplicate Jehovah's help in their time of extremity. The situation is in accord with the description of Sennacherib's invasion in II Kgs. 18<sup>13</sup> and especially with Sennacherib's own more detailed description of the event: Forty-six of the fortified towns of Hezekiah of Judah who had not submitted to my yoke, together with innumerable fortresses and small towns in their neighborhood, with assault and battering rams, and the approach of siege engines . . . I besieged and captured. I shut him up like a bird in a cage in the midst of Jerusalem, his royal city.

In the presence of these conditions Isaiah was at least assured of a hearing, and he was not slow to improve the opportunity. With true prophetic insight, like his predecessors, Amos and Hosea, he defines religion as an attitude toward God and man which finds expression in faith and life and in deeds of justice and mercy. The forgiveness of their sins was not to be accomplished by miracle but by submission to the divine will and by bringing forth fruits meet for repentance.

<sup>i</sup> 16 So Gk. The Heb. adds, probably from Ps. 38<sup>4, 5</sup>, there is no sound part.

Which have not been pressed nor bound up nor softened with oil.
 7 Your land is a desolation, your cities are burned with fire,
 Your tilled land before your eyes—aliens are devouring it;
 8 And the daughter of Zion<sup>k</sup> is left like a booth in a vineyard,
 Like a lodge in a field of cucumbers, like a watch-tower.<sup>l</sup>
 9 Unless Jehovah of hosts had left us a remnant,<sup>m</sup>
 We should have been just as Sodom, we should have been like Gomorrah!

Uselessness of the various forms of ceremonial offerings

10 Hear Jehovah's message, ye chieftains of Sodom, Give heed to the instruction of your God, ye people of Gomorrah:
 11 What care I for the vast number of your sacrifices? saith Jehovah.
 'I am sated with burnt-offerings of rams and the fat of fed beasts,
 And in the blood of bullocks and lambs and he-goats I take no pleasure.
 12 When ye appear before me<sup>n</sup>—who has required this of you?
 To trample my courts, <sup>o</sup>bring no more vain offerings.
 The sweet odor of the sacrifice is an abomination to me;
 New moon and sabbath, the calling of assemblies I cannot endure,
 Fast<sup>p</sup> and a solemn meeting <sup>q</sup>my soul hateth;
 They are a burden to me; I am tired of bearing it.

Justice and mercy alone acceptable to Jehovah

15 When ye spread forth your hands I will hide mine eyes from you.
 Also, though ye make many prayers, I will not hear.
 Your hands are stained with blood; <sup>r</sup>wash, that ye may be clean.<sup>p</sup>
 Remove the evil of your deeds from before mine eyes.
 Cease to do evil; <sup>s</sup>learn to do good;
 Seek justice; relieve the oppressed;<sup>q</sup>
 Vindicate the orphan; plead for the widow.<sup>t</sup>

Contrition and obedience the only basis of forgiveness

18 Come now, let us agree together, saith Jehovah
 Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall become white as snow;<sup>r</sup>
 Though they be as red as crimson, they shall become as wool;
 19 If ye willingly yield and are obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land,
 But if ye refuse and resist, ye shall be eaten by the sword;
 For the mouth of Jehovah hath spoken it!

<sup>j</sup> 17 A scribe has added, and there is a desolation as a ruin made by aliens. Probably the last word once read, Sodom.

<sup>k</sup> 18 A poetic designation of Jerusalem, which is left deserted like a fragile temporary hut once used for a season by the one appointed to guard a vineyard or a field of cucumbers.

<sup>l</sup> 18 Or, besieged city.

<sup>m</sup> 19 So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The Heb. adds, nearly.

<sup>n</sup> 12 One Heb. MS. and the original probably read, see my face. The idiom is a survival from the primitive period when the people laid their offerings before the image of the deity.

<sup>o</sup> 13 So Gk. In the Heb. a very similar word has been substituted, meaning iniquity. But cf. I Sam. 15<sup>23</sup>. The Heb. expands by adding the explanatory words, new moons and appointed feasts.

<sup>p</sup> 16d. 17a This line may be secondary.

<sup>q</sup> 17 Or, revising the text, chastize those who oppress.

<sup>r</sup> 18 Or,

If your sins are as scarlet, will they become white as snow?

If they are red as crimson, will they become as wool?

This is consistent with Isaiah's declaration in 22<sup>14</sup>, Never can your iniquity be forgiven until you die; although the parallelism of the context rather favors the traditional rendering followed above.

<sup>21</sup>O how hath she become an harlot, the once faithful city!

Degeneracy
of rulers
and
people

Zion<sup>s</sup> which was full of justice, where righteousness abode!<sup>t</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Thy silver is changed to dross, thy wine is mixed with water,<sup>u</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Thy rulers are unruly<sup>v</sup> and in league with thieves,

All of them love bribes and are running after fees,

They do not vindicate the orphan, and the cause of the widow does not affect them.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Therefore this is the oracle of the Lord, Jehovah of hosts:<sup>x</sup>

Ha! I will vent my displeasure on my foes and take vengeance on mine enemies.

<sup>25</sup>I will turn my hand against thee and burn away thy dross in the furnace,<sup>y</sup>
And I will take away all thine alloy,<sup>z</sup>

<sup>26</sup>I will make again thy rulers as at the first and thy counsellors as at the beginning;

Afterwards thou shalt be called 'Citadel of Righteousness, Faithful City.'

<sup>27</sup>Zion shall be set free through judgment and her converts<sup>a</sup> through righteousness.

<sup>28</sup>But there shall be a common destruction of transgressors and of sinners, and the apostates<sup>b</sup> shall perish,

<sup>29</sup>For ye shall be ashamed because of the terebinths in which ye have had pleasure,
And ye shall blush for the gardens which ye have chosen.

<sup>30</sup>For ye will be like a terebinth whose leaves are withered,
And like a garden that hath no water;

<sup>1</sup> And the strong man shall be as tow, and his work as a spark,

<sup>3</sup> And they shall both burn together and none shall quench them.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>21</sup> So Gk. Zion is lacking in the Heb.

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>21</sup> The Heb. adds, but now murders. This clause destroys the regular metrical structure of the vs., and introduces the theme developed in 15-17 rather than in the present context.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>22</sup> I. e., the old simplicity and purity of the earlier days are gone. The Heb. text is uncertain.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>23</sup> This rendering, suggested by Cheyne, brings out the assonance in the Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>23</sup> Lit., come to them. A revision of the Heb. text gives the possible reading, nor plead the widow's cause.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>24</sup> The Heb. adds, the Hero of Israel; but this clause is introduced by the Gk. in the next line, indicating that it was originally a marginal gloss that has crept into the text. The title is characteristic of the post-exilic writers rather than the original Isaiah (cf. Is. 49<sup>26</sup>, 60<sup>16</sup>) and destroys the metrical structure of the present passage.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>25</sup> Transposing two Heb. letters. The present Heb. text reads, as lye; but lye was not used in the smelting process except for preliminary cleansing.

<sup>z</sup> 1<sup>25</sup> Apparently the last clause of this vs. has been lost.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>27-31</sup> Or, those of her who return; VSS., captives. The language and ideas in these vss. strongly suggest that they are the additions of a later editor. Most of the O. T. references to the survival of the old Canaanitish cults practiced under the trees and in the gardens are found in post-exilic writings and especially in passages which appear to refer to the religious practices of the Samaritans (cf. Is. 57<sup>4</sup>, 65<sup>6</sup>, 66<sup>17</sup>); but it is evident that these evils existed throughout the pre-exilic period (cf. Jer. 2<sup>27</sup>, Ezek. 6<sup>18</sup>). Isaiah does not refer to these evils elsewhere in his writings. The evidence is, however, not absolutely conclusive, and it is possible that the present passage is from his hand.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>28</sup> Lit., those who forsake Jehovah. If the passage is from Isaiah the original probably read, forsake me.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>29</sup> Correcting the Heb. (which reads, they) as the context demands and as the Targ. and certain MSS. suggest.

§ 48. The Denunciation of Shebna and the Promises to Eliakim, Is. 22<sup>15-25</sup>

The future degradation and deportation of Shebna

Elevation of Eliakim

Is. 22 <sup>15</sup>Thus saith<sup>d</sup> Jehovah of hosts:
 Go into this prefect [and say]—
 Even to Shebna who is over the palace,<sup>e</sup>
<sup>16c.</sup> <sup>d</sup>Who is hewing out a sepulchre on high,<sup>f</sup>
 And cutting for himself a habitation in the rock, <sup>16a. b.</sup> What hast thou here and whom hast thou here,
 That thou hewest out for thyself a sepulchre here?
<sup>17</sup>Behold, Jehovah shall hurl thee far,
 O strong man, he will wrap thee up tightly;<sup>g</sup>
<sup>18</sup>He will surely wind thee round and round,
 And toss<sup>h</sup> thee like a ball into a far reaching land.
 There thou shalt die,
 And thither shall go thy splendid chariots,
 Thou disgrace to the house of thy Lord!
<sup>19</sup>And I will thrust thee from thine office,
 And from thy station will I pull thee down.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>20</sup>And it shall be in that day that I will call my servant
 Even Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, <sup>21</sup>And I will clothe him with thy robe,
 And I will bind thy girdle about him,
 And I will give thy authority into his hand.
 And he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the house of Judah.

§ 48 This section has proved the perplexity of commentators because it assumes facts of which there is no reference elsewhere in the biblical history. The name Shebna is an unusual one and probably is of foreign, possibly Syrian, origin; while Eliakim is a familiar Hebrew name. Both of these characters are mentioned in the historical narrative of Is. 36<sup>3-11</sup>, as the messengers sent by Hezekiah to receive the message from Sennacherib and later to solicit the advice of Isaiah the prophet (37<sup>2</sup>). It is practically certain that the men referred to in each case are the same. In Is. 36 and 37, however, Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah, is in charge of the palace while Shebna is spoken of as simply a scribe or a secretary. If this identification is correct it would appear that Eliakim had been advanced to the position of prefect, as Isaiah had predicted in 22<sup>19-22</sup>. Although Shebna had not as yet been degraded and carried into exile by the Assyrians, as the prophet in his zeal had predicted. As will be shown later (§ 58), the incidents in chaps. 36 and 37 apparently belong to the closing years of Isaiah's life. While it is not impossible, as has been strongly urged by a recent writer (Prof. Fullerton in the American Journal of Theology, vol. IX, 621 ff.), that Isaiah's denunciation of Shebna came at the very close of his activity, it seems on the whole more probable that the date was somewhere about 701 B.C. It is possible that Shebna was the leader of the anti-Assyrian party, which had contracted the Egyptian alliances and involved Judah in its disastrous rebellion against Sennacherib, and that Isaiah's denunciation of his ambitious designs was because he had proved a misleader of the people. The fact that Isaiah predicts that Shebna is to be carried away into captivity favors this conclusion.

Vss. <sup>24, 25</sup> completely reverse the promises held out to Eliakim in 19<sup>20-22</sup>. The language is also purposely contemptuous. The only satisfactory explanation of these vss. is that they represent the addition either of some later scribe who was hostile to the house of Eliakim or possibly by Isaiah himself because Eliakim had later misused his power.

<sup>d</sup> 22<sup>15</sup> Following the Gk., Syr. and several MSS. in omitting, the Lord. The passage is introduced by the title, Against Shebna prefect of the palace.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>16</sup> Possibly this line which is loosely connected with its context was originally a superscription to this short prophecy, and read, Concerning Shebna who was over the palace.

<sup>f</sup> 22<sup>16a, d</sup> Evidently these two lines have slipped their mooring. Their original position was evidently immediately after <sup>15</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 22<sup>17</sup> The meaning of this line is doubtful.

<sup>h</sup> 22<sup>18</sup> Supplying the verb demanded by the context.

<sup>i</sup> 22<sup>19</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb., thou shalt be pulled down.

<sup>22</sup>And I will lay the key of the house of David upon his shoulder,
 And he shall open and none shall shut,
 And he shall shut and none shall open.
<sup>23</sup>And I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place,
 And he shall be a seat of honor to his family.<sup>i</sup>

VI

THE SERMONS OF MICAH

§ 49. The Superscription to Micah's Sermons, Mi. 1<sup>1</sup>

THE MESSAGE OF JEHOVAH WHICH CAME TO MICAH
 IN THE DAYS OF JOTHAM, AHAZ AND HEZEKIAH, KINGS OF JUDAH, WHICH HE BEHELD CONCERNING SAMARIA AND JERUSALEM

The summons
 to judgment

§ 50. Jehovah's Judgment upon Guilty Samaria and Judah, Mi. 1<sup>2-16</sup>

Mi. 1 <sup>2</sup>Hear ye peoples all;
 Give heed, O earth, and all its inhabitants,<sup>a</sup>
 For<sup>b</sup> Jehovah hath become a witness against you,
 The Lord from his holy temple!<sup>c</sup>

<sup>i</sup> 22<sup>23</sup> To this prediction regarding Eliakim a later hand has appended the scornful note, And the whole weight of his family shall hang upon him, and the offspring and the issue, every insignificant vessel, be they cups or be they pitchers! In that day, saith Jehovah of hosts, the nail that is stuck into a firm place will give way. It shall be cut down and fall, and that which hangs upon it shall be utterly destroyed, for Jehovah hath spoken.

§ 49 Like all the superscriptions to each of the early prophetic books, this was evidently added by a later editor. It represents a period of over half a century. Hence the exact date of Micah's work must be determined from the historical allusions. From the references to the fall of Samaria in 1<sup>5</sup>, <sup>6</sup> it is evident that none of the sermons contained in the book is earlier than about 725 B.C. The notes of alarm in the latter part of the first chapter suggest that an Assyrian army was on the eve of invading Judah from the west. A danger of this nature first threatened Judah in 711 B.C. and was actually realized in 701 B.C. It is probable, therefore, that Micah's prophetic activity lies between the years 710 B.C. and 700 B.C. This conclusion is confirmed by the statement in Jer. 26<sup>18</sup> that Micah's preaching led to the reformation of Hezekiah which appears to have followed the catastrophe of 701 B.C.

Micah's home was evidently among the western foothills of Judah in the vicinity of Gath, which had been destroyed by Hazael, the Aramean king. Moresheth was one of the outposts of western Judah, most exposed to the Assyrian attack. It was appropriate, therefore, that Micah the watchman on the western frontier should sound the alarm among the neighboring towns and carry his message of warning to Jerusalem and seek to correct, by his earnest protests, those national evils which threatened the life of Judah.

§ 50 The unity of this section has been questioned; but the grounds are not decisive. The solemn paronomasias, suggested by the names of the different towns on the Palestine plain near Micah's home, are paralleled by many passages in the sermons of his contemporaries, Amos and Hosea. It was one way in which the early prophets made their messages of warning dramatic and impressive. The section opens with a proclamation of judgment and concludes with the prophet's lamentation over the fate about to overtake Jerusalem and the western towns which lay in the path of the Assyrian conqueror. Vs. <sup>8</sup> introduces the lament which is concluded in <sup>16</sup>.

As an inevitable result of the epigrammatic, obscure style of the paronomasia, the text has suffered in transmission. Enough has been preserved, however, to reveal the deep feeling, the strong patriotism, and the burning zeal of the rustic prophet from Moresheth-gath.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> Heb., her fulness.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> A scribe has also here introduced Lord from the latter part of the vs. The metre is complete without it.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> I. e., heaven. Cf. <sup>3</sup>. In the later literature heaven takes the place of Sinai or Mt. Seir. Cf. Judg. 5<sup>4-5</sup>.

Jeho-
vah's adventGuilt of
the capitalsSamaria's
de-struc-
tionFate of her heathen
symbolsThe
proph-
et's lamentationThe invasion of JudahWarn-
ings
and lamenta-
tions

<sup>3</sup>For behold, Jehovah is going forth from his place,
He descendeth and treadeth upon the heights of the earth
<sup>4</sup>So that the mountains melt beneath,
Like wax<sup>d</sup> in the presence of the fire,
And the valleys break apart,
Like water poured down a steep descent.

<sup>5</sup>For the transgression of Jacob is all this,
And for the sin of the house of Judah?<sup>e</sup>
What was the transgression of Jacob? Was it not Samaria?
What is the sin<sup>f</sup> of Judah? Is it not Jerusalem?<sup>g</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Therefore I have made Samaria a ruin that is tilled,<sup>h</sup>
And a place where a vineyard is planted,<sup>i</sup>
I have poured down her stones into the valley,
And I have laid bare her foundations.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>7</sup>All her images are shattered,
And all her asherahs<sup>k</sup> are burned with fire,
And all her idols I am laying in ruins,
For from the hire of a harlot were they acquired,<sup>l</sup>
And to the hire of a harlot have they returned.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>8</sup>For this I will mourn and wail,
I will go barefoot and naked,<sup>n</sup>
I will make lamentation like the jackals,
And mourning like the ostriches.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>9</sup>For the blow<sup>p</sup> that she has received is incurable, Indeed, it has come even to Judah!
It extends even to the gate of my people!<sup>q</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Tell it not<sup>r</sup> in Gath [Tell-town]!
In Giloh [Exult-town] exult not!<sup>s</sup>

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> Restoring what was clearly the original order of the verse.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> Heb., Israel; but the parallelism absolutely demands Judah.

<sup>f</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> The Heb., high places, is clearly an error for the similar word sin as demanded by the context and retained by the other vss.

<sup>g</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> I. e., Does not the guilt of the two nations centre in their capitals?

<sup>h</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> Heb., heap of a field.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> Heb., plantings of a vineyard.

<sup>j</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> For the prediction of a similar fate for Jerusalem, cf. 3<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> Heb., hires, but these would not be burned. The context and all the parallels support the above. Cf. Is. 17<sup>1</sup>, 8, 27<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> So Syr., Lat., and Targ.

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> There is a strong possibility that this vs. is secondary. Cf. 5<sup>14</sup>. In 2 and elsewhere in Mi. the sins condemned are social not religious.

<sup>n</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Cf. Is. 20<sup>2</sup>, 3.

<sup>o</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Heb., daughters of the desert. The arabs to-day call the ostrich the father of the desert.

Cf. Job 30<sup>28, 29</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., wounds.

<sup>q</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> The gate is the centre of the commercial and civil life of the nation. I. e., the capital, and a scribe has added, to Jerusalem.

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>10</sup> Modelled after II Sam. 1<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>10</sup> Restoring after the Gk.

In Bochim [Weep-town] weep!<sup>t</sup>

In Beth-le-aphrah [House of Dust] roll in the dust!<sup>u</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Pass away, O inhabitants of Shaphir<sup>v</sup> [Fair-town] naked!<sup>w</sup>

The inhabitants<sup>x</sup> of Zaanan<sup>y</sup> [March-town] shall not march forth.

Beth-ezel [Nearby-house] shall be taken from its standing-place.

<sup>12</sup>How<sup>z</sup> do the inhabitants of Maroth [Bitterness] wait and wail for good?<sup>a</sup>

For evil hath come down from Jehovah to the gates<sup>b</sup> of Jerusalem.

<sup>13</sup>Harness the horse to the chariot,<sup>c</sup> O inhabitants of Lachish<sup>d</sup> [Horse-town],<sup>e</sup>

For in thee are found the crimes of Israel:

<sup>14</sup>Therefore thou shalt give parting gifts to Moresheth-gath.<sup>f</sup>

Beth-achzib<sup>g</sup> [House of Deception] is a deception to the kings of Israel,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Again<sup>i</sup> I will bring to you the conqueror,<sup>j</sup> O inhabitants of Mareshah,<sup>k</sup>

The glory of Israel is perished forever!<sup>l</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Make thee bald and shave thee for thy darlings,<sup>m</sup>

Make broad thy baldness like the vultures, for they go into captivity from thee.

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>10</sup> Again following the superior Gk.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>10</sup> Cf. Jer. 25<sup>34</sup>; II Sam. 13<sup>19</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> Shaphir is probably to be identified with Suaffer, about five miles southeast of Ashdod.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> Heb. adds shame, but the construction is impossible and the Gk. omits this scribal gloss.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> The meaning of this vs. is exceedingly obscure. Heb., lit., inhabitress, is evidently as a collective noun representing the inhabitants of the city as a whole.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> Possibly identical with Zenan of Josh. 15<sup>37</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. and the demands of the context. A scribe has mistaken a Heb. letter so that the standard text reads, for.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> From this point on the prophet uses the five-beat lamentation metre.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb., gate.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> I. e., for flight, not for defence.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> Probably to be identified in the light of modern excavations with Tell-el-Hesy, thirty-three miles southwest of Jerusalem, out on the Philistine plain. The meaning of the word is unknown but the above rendering suggests the assonance in the Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> A scribe who had in mind the reference in Hos. 14<sup>3</sup> to Israel's crime in trusting in horses to save them, has added, That has been the beginning of sin to the daughter of Zion. This note breaks the close connection of thought and is inconsistent with <sup>d</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> I. e., Jerusalem's control over this outlying western town, the birthplace of Micah, shall cease. The parting gifts were, lit., the gifts given by the parents when a daughter left her home to become the wife of her newly married husband. Cf. I Kgs. 9<sup>16</sup>. Moresheth suggested the very similar Heb. word moreseh, betrothed. Cf. Dt. 22<sup>23</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> A city of southwestern Judah. Josh. 15<sup>44</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> I. e., disappoints them in the hour of invasion.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Slightly correcting the corrupt Heb.

<sup>j</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Lit., possessor. The play is on ḥāyyōrēš, possessor, and Mareshah, which suggested the Heb., betrothed or possessed by another.

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Cf. Josh. 15<sup>44</sup>; a town one mile south of Beth-jibrin.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Heb., To Adullam shall come the glory of Israel; but this makes no sense. The above consistent rendering is based on a transposition of certain letters, as suggested by Professor Cheyne (Jewish Quarterly Review, X, 577).

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>16</sup> Conclusion of the prophet's lamentation. Cf. Am. 8<sup>10</sup>.

Rapacity of Ju-dah's rulers

The
judgment awaiting
them

Their reply
to the
proph-
et's warnings

§ 51. The Oppression of the Poor, Micah 2<sup>1-11</sup>

Mi. 2 <sup>1</sup>Woe to those who devise mischief on their beds,<sup>n</sup>
Which in the light of morning they accomplish, for it is in their power to do it.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>2</sup>They covet fields and seize them, houses and they take them;
So they crush a strong man and his household, a man and his heritage.

<sup>3</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah:

Behold, I am planning evil<sup>p</sup> from which ye shall not withdraw your necks,
Nor walk upright, for it is an evil time.

<sup>4</sup>In that day they shall take up a taunt-song against you,<sup>q</sup>
And one shall sing this dirge:<sup>r</sup>

'My people's estate is being measured off with a rod and there is no one to restore it,<sup>s</sup>

Our captors are dividing our fields;<sup>t</sup> we are completely undone.'<sup>u</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Prophesy not,'<sup>v</sup> they urge, 'of such things one does not prophesy;
The reproaches of him who speaketh will not overtake the house of Jacob.

<sup>7</sup>Is Jehovah impatient, or are such his doings?

Are not his<sup>w</sup> words favorable to his people Israel?<sup>x</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Yea, if a man walking in wine and falsehood were to deceive thee [saying],
'I will prophesy to thee of wine and strong drink,'
Then he would be the prophet of this people!<sup>y</sup>

§ 51 In this and the following section the prophet analyzes the reasons for the overwhelming calamity which he sees overtaking his nation. Unlike his contemporary, Isaiah, he says nothing about the political follies of the rulers. Like Amos, he saw in the legalized oppression of the poor by the rich and those in authority, and in the defiant attitude of the powerful oppressors, the reasons why Judah's doom was sealed.

The text has suffered greatly, possibly because this part of an ancient manuscript had been injured or because the impassioned epigrammatic style of Micah was not understood by the scribes who copied it. The reconstruction, therefore, is often only conjectural. The five-beat measure prevails.

<sup>n</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> A scribe has added, and work evil, but only the planning could be done on their beds. The clause also destroys the metre of the vs.

<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> Lit., in the power of their hands.

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> A scribe has added, against this race. It destroys the metre and weakens the prophet's direct address.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> Possibly the text is not complete for the taunt-song is not given, but only the lament of the afflicted people.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> A scribe has rewritten the preceding letters with a slight variation so that the text reads, It is done.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. as suggested by the Gk. and the demands of the context and metre.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> I. e., the foreign conquerors have sold or allotted the territory of Judah to others.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> A scribe who probably had in mind the later institution of the year of Jubilee, has added the prose note, And there shall be none to cast the line by lot in the congregation of Jehovah.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> The same verb, prophesy, lit., drop words, i. e., speak earnestly and insistently, is here used as in <sup>11</sup> and Am. 7<sup>6</sup>, Ezek. 21<sup>2, 7</sup>. The exact meaning of <sup>6, 7</sup> is not assured. The accepted text is corrupt and makes no sense. The paragraph evidently reproduces the scornful words of the oppressors whom Micah was condemning. The above rendering is based upon what seems to be the most probable reconstruction of the corrupt text.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb., my.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Heb., to him who walketh uprightly; but it is improbable that the corrupt rulers would make this claim for themselves and this reading may well be a corruption of the Heb. followed above.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> This vs. may be a scribal comment on <sup>6</sup>. In any case it logically belongs after <sup>6</sup> and has no connection with <sup>10</sup>, which concludes the address.

<sup>8</sup>But ye, ye stand up as a foe against those who are peaceful;<sup>z</sup>
 Ye strip the mantle from those who pass by quietly,<sup>a</sup> averse to conflict.
<sup>9</sup>Women of my people ye drive out from their happy homes,
 From their young children<sup>b</sup> ye take away my honor forever.<sup>c</sup> <sup>10</sup>Rise and begone, for this is no place to rest, Because of uncleanness which brings destruction,<sup>d</sup> even destruction inevitable.<sup>e</sup>

Their brutal plundering
of the helpless and its inevi-
table consequences

§ 52. The Crimes of Judah's Civil and Spiritual Leaders, Mi. 3

Mi. 3 <sup>1</sup>I also said:

Hear now, O heads of Jacob,
 And ye judges of the house of Israel.
 Is it not your duty to know what is the right?
<sup>2</sup>Haters of that which is good and lovers of evil!<sup>f</sup>

Prophet's appeal to
the rulers

<sup>3</sup>They devour the flesh of my people,
 And their hide they strip from off them,
 And break in pieces and serve up their bones,
 As in a pot or as meat in the cooking-pan!

Their
pitiless
greed

<sup>4</sup>Then they will cry out to Jehovah,
 But he will not pay heed to them,
 And he will hide his face from them at that time,
 Because they have committed such crimes.

Their
false
faith

<sup>5</sup>Therefore Jehovah saith to the prophets who lead my people astray,
 Who when they have anything between their teeth declare peace,
 But against one who puts nothing in their mouths, they proclaim a holy war!

The false mercenary
proph-
ets

<sup>6</sup>Therefore, night shall overtake you so that you shall have no vision,
 And darkness<sup>g</sup> so that there shall be no divination,
 And the sun shall go down on the prophets,
 And the day shall be dark<sup>g</sup> over them.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Dividing the Heb. letters as the context clearly demands.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Again restoring what was evidently the original Heb.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Or, following the analogy of 1<sup>16</sup>, from their darlings.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> I. e., by enslaving them.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> Or, following the Gk., ye shall be destroyed.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> The meaning of this word is uncertain. The vs., however, reveals clearly the process of thought in the mind of the prophet. At the close of the chapter an editor has inserted a post-exile stanza describing the restoration of Jehovah's people. Cf. § 230.

§ 52 In severest terms Micah arraigns the rulers, judges, priests, and prophets of Judah and declares in plainest terms that the inevitable consequences of their acts is complete national ruin. The section is a close-knit unit with three general divisions. It is one of the memorable passages of the O.T., for Jer. 26<sup>18</sup> states that these words of Micah made such a deep impression upon Hezekiah and his people that they heeded and instituted a reformation. The nature of that reform may perhaps be best inferred from Micah's sermon than from the brief reference in II Kgs. 18<sup>4</sup>, which attributes to Hezekiah simply ceremonial reforms that would by no means have satisfied Micah.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> The second part of this vs., tearing their hide from upon them and their flesh from their bones, is apparently but a scribal variation of <sup>a</sup>a, b.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb., it shall become dark.

Fate of
of seers
and diviners

Micah's
divine assurance

The guilty be-trayers
of the public trust

Their blind confidence

Fate they bring upon
the
nation

<sup>7</sup>The seers will be ashamed,
And the diviners will turn pale,
All of them shall cover the beard,
For there is no answer from God.

<sup>8</sup>But I, on the contrary<sup>h</sup> am full of power,<sup>i</sup>
And the sense of justice and strength,
To make known to Jacob his crime,
And to Israel his sin.

<sup>9</sup>Hear this ye heads of the house of Jacob,
And ye judges of the house of Israel,
Ye who spurn justice,
And make all that is straight crooked,
<sup>10</sup>Who build Zion with acts of bloodshed,
And Jerusalem with crime.

<sup>11</sup>The heads render judgment for a bribe,
And her priests give oracles for a reward,
And her prophets divine for silver;
Yet they lean upon<sup>j</sup> Jehovah and think,
Jehovah is indeed in our midst,
Evil cannot overtake us.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Therefore for your sakes
Zion shall be plowed as a field,<sup>l</sup>
And Jerusalem shall become a heap of ruins,<sup>m</sup>
And the temple mount a wooded<sup>n</sup> height.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> The contrast is with the uncertain, slavish spirit of the mercenary false prophets.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> The Heb. adds, by the spirit of Jehovah; but the awkwardness of the construction indicates that it was added by a scribe who desired to indicate, by word as well as implication, the source of the true prophet's power.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> I. e., rely, trust in.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> The Heb. is in the form of a question which expresses firm conviction.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> I. e., shall become a complete ruin.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the aid of the quotation in Jer. 26<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Heb., high places.

§ 53. Israel's False Conception of Jehovah's Character and Demands, Mi. 6<sup>1-8</sup>

Mi. 6 <sup>1</sup>Hear ye now what Jehovah is saying:

Arise, present the complaint<sup>o</sup> before the mountains,
And let the hills hear thy voice!

<sup>2</sup>Hear, O mountains, Jehovah's complaint,
And give ear,<sup>p</sup> ye foundations of the earth.
For Jehovah hath a complaint against his people,
And he is entering into judgment with Israel,

Jeho-vah's
contro-versy with
his
people

<sup>3</sup>[Saying], My people, what have I done to thee,
And wherein have I displeased thee? Answer me!

<sup>4</sup>For I brought thee up from the land of Egypt
And from the house of bondage I redeemed thee.<sup>q</sup>
I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>5</sup>My people, what did Balak, king of Moab counsel?
And how did Balaam, the son of Beor, answer him?<sup>s</sup>
Remember now<sup>t</sup> from Shittim to Gilgal,
That thou mayest know the righteous deeds of Jehovah.

Their
failure to ap-pre-ciate his tender
care

<sup>6</sup>With what shall I come before Jehovah, Bow myself before the God on high?<sup>u</sup>
Shall I come before him with burnt-offerings,
With calves a year old?

<sup>7</sup>Will Jehovah be pleased with thousands of rams,
With myriads of streams of oil?
Shall I give him my first-born for my guilt,
The fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?

The popu-lar idea of how to win his fa-vor

§ 53 Chap. 6, which follows the later messianic pictures in 4, 5 (that were intended to correct the dark prediction of Jerusalem's desolation in 3), apparently contains extracts from Micah's sermons. In the opening vss. his characteristic Hear ye is used. Cf. 1<sup>2</sup>, 3<sup>1</sup>, 9. The mountains and nature are also involved in Jehovah's controversy with his people (as in 1<sup>1</sup>). The note is also one of condemnation rather than of promise (as in 4, 5). The reference in 3-5 to Jehovah's care and guidance of his people recalls Amos' opening address, 2<sup>9</sup>, 10. Vss. 1-5 and 6-8 are usually treated as independent sections, but while the connection is not close, the first is only a torso without the second, and together they present a teaching characteristic of Micah and of the prophets of this period. If the later words and phrases (e. g., O man, in 8<sup>2</sup>) be regarded as decisive evidence of later authorship, it must at least be acknowledged that the teaching thus nobly expressed is characteristic of the prophet of Moresheth-gath.

The prophecy may well come from the disastrous days of 701 B.C., when the Assyrians had overrun Judah and pillaged Jerusalem and stirred in the hearts of the people that note of penitence which finds expression in 6<sup>1</sup>, 7, and led to the reformation attributed by Jer. 26<sup>1-8</sup> to the work of Micah.

<sup>o</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> Lit., a legal case or charge.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> The present Heb., usually translated, enduring, is ungrammatical and probably due to a scribal error, which when corrected gives the above harmonious reading.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> Cf. Ex. 15<sup>20</sup>, 21.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> The mention of Aaron and Miriam, as well as the very different and irregular metre of this passage, possibly indicate that this line is a later interpolation.

<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> Cf. Nu. 22-24.

<sup>t</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Transferring the clause, remember now, from 5<sup>b</sup> to 5<sup>c</sup>, as the context and metre suggest. Possibly 5 is a later scribal addition or has been expanded, as its lines are longer than the metre requires.

<sup>u</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Lit., the God of the height. It is probably equivalent to the God of the heavens.

The content of true religion

Fraud
and deceit in Jerusalem

The
consequences

Judah
as corrupt
and guilty
as was Northern Israel

<sup>8</sup>It hath been shown thee,<sup>v</sup> O man, what is good;
And what Jehovah ever demands of thee:
Only to do justice and love mercy,
And to walk humbly<sup>w</sup> with thy God.

§ 54. Guilt and Punishment of Jerusalem, Mi. 6<sup>9-16</sup>

Mi. 6 <sup>9</sup>Hark! Jehovah crieth to the city!<sup>x</sup>

Hear, O tribe and assembly of the city:<sup>y</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Can I forget the treasures<sup>z</sup> of the house of the wicked,
And the accursed scant measure?

<sup>11</sup>Can I leave her unpunished<sup>a</sup> because of evil balances,
And the bag of false weights.

<sup>12</sup>Whose riches are full of violence,
And her inhabitants speak falsehood,
And their tongue is deceit in their mouth?

<sup>13</sup>But I indeed, have begun to smite thee,
To lay thee in ruins because of thy sins.

<sup>14</sup>Thou shalt eat and not be satisfied, Thou shalt put away but not save,<sup>b</sup>
It shall be dark within thee,
For whatever thou savest I will give to the sword.

<sup>15</sup>Thou shalt sow but not reap,
Thou shalt tread the olives, but never anoint thyself with oil,
And make sweet wine, but thou shalt drink no wine!

<sup>16</sup>For thou hast followed<sup>c</sup> the statutes of Omri,
And all the deeds of the house of Ahab,
And hast acted in accord<sup>d</sup> with their counsels,
That I may give thee up to ruin,
And her inhabitants to derision;
Yea, the reproach of the nations<sup>e</sup> shall ye bear!

<sup>v</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb., he hath shown thee.

<sup>w</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> Gk., Lat., and Syr., be ready to walk. Theodotion, be diligent.

§ 54 The date and authorship of this and the following section are not certain. The theme is one in which Micah was especially interested. The attributing of the coming overthrow of the nation to the social crimes rampant in Jerusalem is also characteristic to him. Cf. 1<sup>5</sup>. The same vigorous literary style and fearless spirit appear in these chapters as in Micah's opening sermons. Vs. <sup>13</sup> may be an illusion to the early stages of Sennacherib's invasion.

It is true that these same evils flourished in Jerusalem in later days, as the Ps. testify; but the position of these prophecies, their theme and spirit, all favor the conclusion that Micah was the author.

<sup>x</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> The line, And it is wisdom to fear thy name, is evidently a pious interjection from a later scribe who recalled Ps. 86<sup>11</sup>. Gk. has his name. Each refers to Jehovah.

<sup>y</sup> 6<sup>9</sup> Following the Gk. in joining the first word of the text verse to <sup>9</sup> and in reconstructing the present impossible Heb.

<sup>a</sup> 6<sup>10</sup> Omitting wicked, which is probably due to scribal repetition.

<sup>b</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> Lit., can I make her pure. The her probably refers to the unrighteous city or possibly to the implied crimes. Gk., can she be pure or guiltless.

<sup>c</sup> 6<sup>14</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., and thy famine shall be in thy midst

<sup>d</sup> 6<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk., Lat., and slightly correcting the clearly corrupt Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 6<sup>16</sup> Heb., ye have walked in.

<sup>f</sup> 6<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk. In the Heb. a scribe has written by mistake, my people.

§ 55. The Utter Degeneracy of the People, Mi. 7<sup>1-6</sup>

<sup>7</sup> <sup>1</sup>Woe, woe is me, for I have become Like the gatherings of harvest,<sup>f</sup> like the gleanings of the vintage;
Not a cluster to eat,
Not a fig that anyone desires.<sup>g</sup>

The lack of upright men

<sup>2</sup>The pious have perished from the land,
Of the upright among men there is none;
All of them lie in wait to shed blood,
They hunt one another with the net.<sup>h</sup>

Crime rampant

<sup>3</sup>Their hands know well how to do evil,<sup>i</sup>
The officer<sup>j</sup> demands a reward,
And the high official decides as he pleases,
And they pervert justice.

Official injustice

<sup>4</sup>The best of them are like a thorn thicket,<sup>k</sup>
Their most upright<sup>l</sup> like a prickly hedge.
The day<sup>m</sup> of their<sup>n</sup> visitation has come,<sup>o</sup>
Now will be their confusion!

Constant contention

<sup>5</sup>Trust not thy neighbor,
Rely not on a friend;
From the wife who lies in thy bosom<sup>p</sup>
Guard the gates of thy mouth.

None to be trusted

<sup>6</sup>For son insults father,
Daughter rises up against mother,
Daughter-in-law against mother-in-law,
A man's enemies are the people of his own household.

Disregard of the most sacred obligations

§ 55 It is not entirely clear who is the speaker in <sup>1</sup>. If it is the Judean community, or the party of the pious within it, the passage is closely parallel to certain of the post-exilic Ps., and is one of the later appendices to the book of Micah. If it is the prophet, it may possibly voice Micah's own bitter experience in the crisis of 701 B.C. (cf. <sup>4</sup>) or else in the reactionary reign of Manasseh. In any case the picture is one of the blackest found in all Heb. literature.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>71</sup> Gk., as one who gathers in the harvest.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>71</sup> So Gk. Heb., my soul lusts for.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>72</sup> Or, They hunt one another without cause.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>73</sup> This vs. has suffered greatly in transmission. The corrected text, which has been followed, without much doubt represents the original. It also is in accord with the prevailing metrical structure of the section.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>73</sup> Heb., judge, but a scribe has evidently introduced it by mistake earlier in the vs. and made a slight change to harmonize it with its new context.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>74</sup> Cf. Prov. 15<sup>19</sup> and II Sam. 23<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>74</sup> Joining the consonants of the Heb. a little differently.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>74</sup> Or, alas.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>74</sup> Heb., thy, but the context demands the above reading.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>74</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. in restoring the unintelligible and clearly corrupt Heb. which reads, the day of thy sentinels, thy visitation comes.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>75</sup> Note the climax: neighbor, friend, trusted wife.

VII

ISAIAH'S LATER PROPHETIC ACTIVITY

§ 56. Jehovah's Overthrow of Proud Assyria, Is. 10<sup>5-15, 27-34</sup>

As-syria
formerly
Jeho-
vah's agent of judgment

As-syria's base designs against
Judah

Is. 10<sup>5</sup>Woe, Asshur, rod of mine anger,
The staff in whose hand<sup>a</sup> is mine indignation.
<sup>6</sup>Against an impious nation am I wont to send<sup>b</sup> him,
And against the people of my wrath I give him a charge,
To take spoil and gather booty,
And to tread them down like the mire in the streets.

<sup>7</sup>But he—not so doth he plan,
And his heart—not so doth it purpose;
For destruction is in his heart
And to cut off nations not a few.
<sup>8</sup>For he saith, Are not my princes all of them kings?
<sup>9</sup>Is not Calno's fate that of Carchemish?<sup>c</sup>
Is not Hamath's that of Arpad?
Is not Samaria's that of Damascus?
<sup>10</sup>As mine hand hath found these<sup>d</sup> kingdoms,

---

§ 56 The earlier part of Isaiah's activity furnishes no satisfactory background for this stirring section which has the characteristic literary vigor and fire of the great prophet. In the earlier days Jehovah's judgment was visited on guilty Judah. The false popular prophets were encouraging the people to believe that Jehovah would surely overthrow Assyria, but for Isaiah to have echoed their misleading predictions would have been to have destroyed the effect of all his early preaching. Possibly this sermon came from the period after 701 B.C. when Sennacherib had overrun and devastated Judah. But according to Isaiah's clear and repeated predictions, this judgment was well deserved by his countrymen and was a direct result of their foolish, faithless policy. In the light of the historical traditions considered in the following section it is evident that Isaiah's attitude toward the people of Judah and the Assyrians was fundamentally different at the time of Sennacherib's second invasion. The reason was obvious: it was because the demands of Sennacherib were unjust and the people of Judah were at last in the right. These closing years, therefore, of Isaiah's activity, when the Assyrians were advancing toward Jerusalem, furnish by far the most satisfactory setting for this prophecy.

The graphic description in the closing vss. of the advance of the enemy illustrates an important prophetic principle. The line of march through Central Samaria and the hills of Northern Judah was impracticable for an Assyrian army; in fact, it never seems to have been thus used. In every case the armies of Sennacherib advanced into Judah from the broad western coast plain. It is clear, therefore, that neither Isaiah nor his hearers anticipated that the advance would actually be from the north as portrayed. The description is figurative, well calculated to describe the seemingly invincible advance of the Assyrians, who were not turned back by rugged hills or narrow passes. Its aim was to describe concretely and in fitting imagery the certain overthrow of this proud, impious foe.

<sup>a</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> Lit., by their hands. Possibly this clause is secondary and the original simply read, He is the rod of mine indignation.

<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>6</sup> The verb expresses not only repeated action in the present but also in the past, and may well have referred to the series of Assyrian invasions which had taken place during Isaiah's lifetime.

<sup>c</sup> 10<sup>9</sup> Calno is probably to be identified with Kullani in Northern Syria which was conquered by Tiglath-Pileser in 738 B.C. Carchemish was the old Hittite capital on the Euphrates, which was conquered by Sargon, in 717 B.C. Arpad, in Northern Syria, fell into the hands of Tiglath-Pileser IV in 740 B.C. Hamath, on the river Orontes, was conquered in 720 B.C. by Sargon, while Damascus was conquered in 732 by Tiglath-Pileser IV.

<sup>d</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> Correcting the Heb., which reads, idol-kingsdoms.

Though their images outnumbered those of Jerusalem and Samaria,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Shall I not, as I have done to Samaria and her idols,
Do likewise to Jerusalem and her images?<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13b</sup>By the strength of my hand have I done it,
And by my wisdom, for I have discerned it,
And I have removed the bounds of the peoples,
And I have stolen their treasures,
And like a mighty man I have brought down those who sit enthroned;<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup>And my hand hath seized, as on a nest,
The riches of the peoples.
And as one gathers eggs that are unguarded,
I indeed have gathered up all the earth,
And there was none that fluttered the wing,
Or opened the mouth and chirped.

<sup>15</sup>Shall the ax vaunt itself over him who hews therewith?
Or shall the saw magnify itself over him who yields it?
As if a rod could sway him who lifts it,
As if a staff could lift up him who is not wood.

<sup>27</sup>His burden<sup>h</sup> shall be removed from thy shoulder,<sup>i</sup>
And his yoke shall cease from thy neck.<sup>j</sup>

His boastful
pride

He has gone up from Rimmon, <sup>28</sup>He has arrived at Aiath,
He has passed through Migron,
At Michmash<sup>k</sup> he stores his baggage;
<sup>29</sup>They have gone over the pass;
At Giba they halt for the night;
Ramah is panic-stricken,
Gibeah of Saul flees.

The rapid advance
of the
Assyrian army

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> This vs. awkwardly interrupts the sequence of thought and may be secondary.

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> The immediate continuation of <sup>11</sup> is found in <sup>13b</sup>. This close sequence of thought is interrupted by a prose note which has all the characteristics of the work of a later redactor. Moreover when the Lord shall have performed all his work upon Mount Zion and Jerusalem, he will punish the fruit of the stoutness of heart of the king of Assyria and the vainglory of his high looks, for he hath said.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> The Gk. and Lat. suggest the reading, cities and their inhabitants, and this may represent the original.

<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>27</sup> The preceding vss. <sup>16-26</sup> are in the five-beat rather than in the characteristic three-beat of this passage and anticipate the climatic description of the overthrow of the Assyrians in <sup>33-34</sup>. They also introduce different themes. If they contain an Isaian nucleus, they at least represent a distinct address. Cf. § 57. In order to again resume the original address in <sup>27b</sup> a scribe has inserted the familiar formula, and it shall be in that day.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>27</sup> Restoring the Heb. as the parallelism demands.

<sup>j</sup> 10<sup>27</sup> Heb., lit., and the yoke shall be destroyed by reason of oil. The present text gives no intelligible meaning but may be reconstructed as above with slight changes of the text. Rimmon is mentioned in Judg. 20<sup>45-47</sup> and was situated east of Bethel. In the description which follows the different towns to the north of Jerusalem are mentioned as the enemy reaches them in turn in his irresistible advance. The metre is the short, insistent, two-beat alternating with the three-beat, and was well calculated to strike terror to the hearts of all those who heard.

<sup>k</sup> 10<sup>28</sup> The pass of Michmash, famous in the Saul narratives as the place where Jonathan vanquished the garrison of the Philistines.

<sup>30</sup>Shriek aloud, O people of Gallim,<sup>1</sup>
 Harken, O Laishah,
 Answer her, Anathoth,
<sup>31</sup>Madmenah flees,
 Gebim's inhabitants seek refuge in flight.

Utter
de-struc-
tion before
the walls
of Je-rusa-
lem

<sup>32</sup>This very day he will halt at Nob;<sup>m</sup>
 He shakes his fist against Mount Zion, Against the hill of Jerusalem.
<sup>33</sup>Behold, the Lord, Jehovah of hosts,<sup>n</sup>
 Is lopping the boughs with a crash,<sup>o</sup>
 And the high of stature are being hewn down,
 The lofty are being brought low,
<sup>34</sup>And the thickets of the forest are being cut down with an ax,
 And Lebanon with its mighty cedars<sup>p</sup> is falling.

§ 57. Later Echoes of Jehovah's Judgment upon Assyria, Is. 14<sup>24-27</sup>, 10<sup>16-26</sup>.

Jeho-
vah's ultimate
purpose to destroy Assyria

Is. 14 <sup>24</sup>Jehovah of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have planned so shall it be,
 And as I have purposed so shall it stand, <sup>25</sup>To break in pieces Asshur in my land,
 And on my mountains to tread him under foot,
 And his yoke shall be removed from off them,<sup>q</sup>
 And his burden shall be removed from their shoulder.
<sup>26</sup>This is the purpose formed against the whole earth,
 And this is the hand stretched out over all the nations;

<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>30</sup> This vs. contains a play on the names of the two places mentioned.

<sup>m</sup> 10<sup>32</sup> Nob, just over the Mount of Olives and therefore within less than a mile of Jerusalem.

<sup>n</sup> 10<sup>33</sup> Recent scholars have questioned the Isaian authorship of <sup>33, 34</sup> on the ground that the picture is general and apocalyptic. The preceding picture is, however, incomplete without it and the imagery is strong and impressive and quite in keeping with Isaiah's other pictures of the overwhelming flood. As the Assyrians stand like mighty cedars about the walls of Jerusalem, Jehovah is represented as hewing them down, since their task is done and their pride and boasting have brought upon them merited judgment. The figure of the ax was one which Isaiah had already used in his description of Assyria as Jehovah's agent.

<sup>o</sup> 10<sup>33</sup> Or, revising the text, with an ax.

<sup>p</sup> 10<sup>34</sup> Lit., by a mighty one. This would, of course, refer to Jehovah. But Jehovah has already been introduced in <sup>33</sup> and is the antecedent of <sup>34</sup>. It is probable, therefore, as Cheyne has suggested, that the reference is to the mighty cedars of Lebanon which represent the Assyrian.

§ 57 In 14<sup>24-27</sup> and 10<sup>16-26</sup> are found certain passages which contain references to Assyria as the conquering world power and reflect Isaiah's confident assertions that this proud, impious nation would soon be completely overthrown by Jehovah. The theme and teachings are those of Isaiah in the closing years of his activity. Their present literary setting also connects them with this period. It is probable that they contain some of Isaiah's original words, but the broadened outlook, which is not limited to Judah or Assyria, but includes all the world powers, and the figures and language on the whole point to the conclusion that in their present form these passages are from post-exilic, apocalyptic writers who were careful students of the writings of the original Isaiah, but who sought to adapt them to the broader outlook of the later day, identifying Asshur with the later Syrian empire which succeeded ultimately to the territory and prestige of the Assyrians. This later point of view is especially prominent in 10<sup>23-26</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 14<sup>25</sup> c. d. Possibly these two lines are secondary and based on 10<sup>27</sup>. They break the close logical connection between <sup>25b</sup> and <sup>26</sup>.

<sup>27</sup>For when Jehovah of hosts hath purposed, who can thwart it,
And when his hand is stretched out, who can turn it back?

10 <sup>16</sup>Therefore the Lord Jehovah of hosts will send among his fat ones leanness,

Completeness of that destruction

And under his glory shall be kindled a burning like the burning of fire, <sup>17</sup>And the Light of Israel shall be the fire, and his Holy One the flame.

And it will burn and devour his thorns and briars in a single day;

<sup>18</sup>And will consume the glory of his forest and of his fruitful field both soul and body,

And he shall be as when a sick man pines away;

<sup>19</sup>And the remnant of his forest trees shall be so few that a child might write them down.

<sup>24</sup>Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah of hosts,<sup>r</sup>

Consolation for Jehovah's people

O my people, that dwell in Zion, be not afraid of Asshur,

Though he smite you with a rod and lift up his staff against you as did Egypt of old.

<sup>25</sup>For yet a little while and my indignation will end and my anger will turn to his destruction.

<sup>26</sup>For Jehovah of hosts will stir up against him a scourge as in the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb,

And his rod over the sea he will lift up as against Egypt of old.

<sup>r</sup> 10<sup>24</sup> This vs. is the logical sequel of <sup>19</sup>. A long note has been inserted in vss. 20-23 which reflects a still later point of view. The reference in <sup>19</sup> to the remnant of the Assyrians is made the occasion for the repetition of the familiar promises regarding the remnant of Israel. It is introduced by the phrase, in that day, often used by the later scribes. Its post-exilic origin is obvious. With slight revisions, the text may be translated as follows: <sup>20</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day that the remnant of Israel and they who are escaped of the house of Jacob shall no more lean upon him who smote them, but lean in faithfulness on Jehovah, the Holy One of Israel. <sup>21</sup> A remnant shall return the remnant of Jacob, to the Mighty God. <sup>22</sup> For though my people Israel were as the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them shall return. <sup>23</sup> A destruction is determined, overflowing with righteousness. For a complete and decreed destruction will Jehovah make in the midst of all the earth.

§ 58. Sennacherib's Demand and Isaiah's Prophetic Counsel, Is. 36, 37

Hezekiah History

Sen-nach-e-rib's ar-ro-gant de-mand that Jeru-salem be sur-rendered

Is. 36 <sup>2</sup>Then the king of Assyria sent the commander-in-chief from La-chish to Jerusalem with a great army to King Hezekiah. He came and stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is on the way to the fuller's field. <sup>3</sup>And Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, who was prefect of the palace, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the chancellor came out to him. <sup>4</sup>And the high official said to them, Say now to Hezekiah, 'Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, "What confidence is this which you cherish?"' <sup>5</sup>You indeed think, "A simple word of the lips is counsel and strength for the war!" Now on whom do you trust, that you have rebelled against me? <sup>6</sup>Indeed you trust on the staff of this bruised reed, even upon Egypt which, if a man lean on it, will go into his hand and pierce it. Such is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all who trust in him. <sup>7</sup>But if you say to me, "We trust in Jehovah our God," is not he the one

Isaiah Stories

Is. 37 <sup>9b</sup>Then Sennacherib sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, <sup>10</sup>Thus shall you speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, 'Let not your God in whom you trust deceive you with the thought, "Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria."' <sup>11</sup>You have already heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands in destroying them completely, and shall you be delivered? <sup>12</sup>Did the gods of the nations which my fathers destroyed deliver them—Gozan, Haran, Re-zeph, and the people of Eden who were in Telassar? <sup>13</sup>Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivvah?' <sup>14</sup>And Heze-kiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it. Then Hezekiah went up to the temple of Jehovah and spread it out before Jehovah<sup>15</sup> and said, <sup>16</sup>O Jehovah the God of Israel who § 58 The reasons for the analysis of this composite narrative have already been given in Vol. II, § 124. The reasons for concluding that they represent Isaiah's activity in connection with the later campaign of Sennacherib, about 690 B.C., have also been presented in Vol. II, pp. 501-2. Briefly recapitulated they are: (1) The difficulty of assigning these events to the critical years of 703-1. (2) The fact that Isaiah here asserts that Jerusalem shall surely be delivered, while in all his sermons which gather about the earlier crisis he had repeatedly declared that the city and nation should suffer the inevitable consequences of their folly. Only in the additions of later editors is the inviolability of Jerusalem maintained. (3) The changed attitude of Hezekiah and the rulers of Jerusalem toward Isaiah. While in the earlier crisis they had refused to heed his advice, in the present narrative they turn to him as to an absolute authority. (4) The absence in Isaiah's reply of any reference to the crimes and mistakes of Judah's rulers and the implication that they were at last living in accord with Jehovah's demands as formulated by his prophet. (5) The independent references in the Assyrian inscriptions which point to a second, later campaign of Sennacherib, the aim of which was the conquest of Arabia and the invasion of Egypt. (6) The references in Herodotus to the great calamity, probably a pestilence, which overtook the Assyrian army on the borders of Egypt and which is referred to in the Hebrew narrative as a divine visitation.

While the biblical traditions vary regarding details and reveal the influence of transmission, they mutually confirm the underlying facts presented by each of them, and record the great service and triumph of the prophet in his closing years. The basis of his definite prediction was clearly the conviction that at last Hezekiah and the people were in the right, and that the demands of Sennacherib were unjust and therefore would not meet with Jehovah's approval and support. The prophet also doubtless appreciated the fact that Sennacherib was eager to advance to the conquest of Egypt and would be very loath to wait as long as would be required to capture a strong fortress like Jerusalem. For a half-century after this event Judah continued to pay tribute to Assyria, but in saving Jerusalem from being destroyed and looted Isaiah also gave to Judah another century of national life, which proved one of the most important periods in the religious history of the Israelitish race.

Textual and other notes in connection with this section will be found in Vol. II under § 124.

Hezekiah History

whose high places and altars Hezekiah has taken away and has said to Judah and Jerusalem, "You shall worship before this altar?" <sup>8</sup>Now therefore give pledges to my master the king of Assyria and I will give you two thousand horses, if you are able on your part to provide riders for them. <sup>9</sup>How then can you repulse one of the least of my master's servants? And yet you trust in Egypt for chariots and for horsemen! <sup>10</sup>Have I now come up against this place to destroy it without Jehovah's approval? Jehovah it was who said to me, "Go up against this land and destroy it."

Further threats of Sennacherib's official

<sup>11</sup>Then Eliakim and Shebna and Joah said to the high official, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Aramaic language, for we understand it; but do not speak with us in the Jewish language in the hearing of the people who are on the wall. <sup>12</sup>But the high official said to them, Has my master sent me to speak these words to your master and to you? Is it not rather to the men who sit on the wall, that they shall eat their own dung and drink their own water together with you? <sup>13</sup>Then the high official stood and cried with a loud voice in the Jewish language and spoke, saying, Hear the message of the great king, the king of Assyria: <sup>14</sup>Thus saith the king, 'Let not Hezekiah deceive you for he will not be able to deliver you. <sup>15</sup>Neither let Hezekiah induce you to trust in Jehovah, saying, "Jehovah will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be given into the power of the king of Assyria."'<sup>16</sup>Hearken not to Hezekiah, for thus says the king of Assyria, 'Make your peace with me and come over to me; thus shall each one of you eat from dwelllest above the cherubim, thou art the God, even thou alone, over all the kingdoms of the earth.<sup>17</sup>Incline thine ear, O Jehovah, and hear; open thine eyes, O Jehovah, and see and hear the words of Sennacherib, which he has sent to defy the living God. <sup>18</sup>It is true, O Jehovah, the kings of Assyria have laid waste the nations and their lands <sup>19</sup>and have cast their gods into the fire; for they were no gods, but the works of men's hands, wood and stone; therefore they have destroyed them. <sup>20</sup>But now, O Jehovah our God, save thou us, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou Jehovah art God alone.

Isaiah Stories

<sup>21</sup>Then said Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah saying, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, 'What thou hast asked of me regarding Sennacherib king of Assyria, I have heard.'<sup>22</sup>This is the word that Jehovah hath spoken concerning him:

Jeho-vah's mes-sage con-cerning Assyria

'Thee she despises, at thee is laughing—the virgin, daughter of Zion!

Behind thee she is wagging her head—the daughter of Jerusalem!

<sup>23</sup>Whom hast thou reviled and blasphemed? Against whom raised thy voice?

Yea, and lifted up thine eyes on high? Against Israel's Holy One!

<sup>24</sup>By thy minions hast thou reviled the Lord;

And hast said, "With my many chariots,

I, even I, ascended the mountain heights, the ravines of Lebanon;

And I have cut down its tallest cedars, its choice cypresses.

<sup>a</sup> 37<sup>21</sup> Restoring by the aid of the parallel in II Kgs.

Hezekiah History

his own vine and his own fig-tree and drink the waters of his own cistern,<sup>17</sup>until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land full of grain and new wine, a land full of bread and vineyards.<sup>18</sup>But hearken not to Hezekiah, when he misleads you, saying, "Jehovah will deliver us." Has any of the gods of the nations ever delivered his land out of the power of the king of Assyria?<sup>19</sup>Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the gods of the land of Samaria that they have delivered Samaria out of my power?<sup>20</sup>Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of my power, that Jehovah should deliver Jerusalem out of my power?<sup>21</sup>

Heze-kiah's
message to Isaiah
and the
proph-
et's
assurance of deliver-
ance

Isaiah Stories

And I press into its farthest halting-place, into its densest thickets.
<sup>25</sup>I, even I, dig wells [in the desert], And drink strange waters, And with the soles of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of Egypt."
<sup>26</sup>Hast thou not heard, I prepared it long ago, In the days of old I formed it; now I have brought it to pass; Hence thy task is to turn fortified cities into ruined heaps,
<sup>27</sup>And their inhabitants, helpless, are terrified and put to shame, They are like the wild plants, the tender grass, and the blades on the roofs and the uplands, Before me is thy rising up<sup>28</sup> and thy lying down, thy going out and thy coming in, I know thine raging against me<sup>29</sup> and thy arrogance has come to my ears. Therefore I will put my ring through thy nose, and my bridle between thy lips, And will make thee return by the way in which thou hast come.

<sup>21</sup>Then they were silent and answered him not a word; for the king's command was, Answer him not.<sup>22</sup>But Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, the prefect of the palace, and Shebna, the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph, the chancellor, came to Hezekiah with torn clothes and told him the words of the high official.<sup>37</sup> <sup>1</sup>And as soon as King Hezekiah heard it, he tore his clothes and covered himself with sackcloth and went into the temple of Jehovah.<sup>2</sup>And he sent Eliakim, who was prefect of the palace, and Shebna the scribe and the eldest of the priests, covered with sack-cloth, to Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz.<sup>3</sup>And they said to him, Thus saith Hezekiah, 'This is a day of trouble and of discipline and of contumely; for the children are come to birth and there is no strength to her who is in travail.<sup>4</sup>It may be Jehovah thy God will hear all the words of the high official, whom his master the king of Assyria has sent to defy the living God, and will

<sup>30</sup>And this shall be your sign: you shall eat this year that which grows of itself, and in the second year that which springs from the same, but in the third year you can sow and reap and plant vineyards and eat the fruit.<sup>31</sup>And the remnant that escapes of the house of Judah shall again take root downward and bear fruit upward.<sup>32</sup>For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant and from Mount Zion a band who shall escape; the zeal of Jehovah of hosts shall

The divine assurance that Jerusalem would be delivered and Assyria overthrown

Hezekiah History

rebuke the words which Jehovah your God has heard; therefore lift up your prayer for the remnant that is left.' <sup>5</sup>And when the servants of King Hezekiah came to Isaiah, <sup>6</sup>Isaiah said to them, The following answer shall you take to your master, 'Thus saith Jehovah, "Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. <sup>7</sup>Behold I will put a spirit in him so that he shall hear tidings and shall return to his own land, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.'" <sup>8</sup>So the high official returned and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah, for he had heard that he had departed from Lachish. <sup>9</sup>But that one had heard regarding Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he has come out to fight against you. . . .

The
overthrow
of Sennacherib

<sup>37</sup>Then Sennacherib king of Assyria went away and returned and dwelt at Nineveh. <sup>38</sup>And once while he was worshipping in the temple of Nisroch his god, his sons, Adrammelek and Sharezer, smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of Ararat. And Esarhaddon his son became king in his place.

Isiah Stories

accomplish this.<sup>33</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning the king of Assyria, 'He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow therein; neither shall be come before it with shield nor cast up a mound against it. <sup>34</sup>By the same way that he came shall he return, but he shall not come into this city,' saith Jehovah. <sup>35</sup>'For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for the sake of David my servant.'<sup>t</sup>

<sup>36</sup>Now that night the Messenger of Jehovah went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians, a hundred and eighty thousand. And when people arose early the next morning, there were only dead bodies.

VIII

THE PROPHECY OF NAHUM

§ 59. Jehovah's Just Rule, Nah. 1<sup>a</sup>, 3<sup>c</sup>, d, 4-9, 3<sup>b</sup>, 2<sup>c</sup>, d, 10, 12, 13, 15, 2<sup>e</sup>

Nah. 1<sup>2a,b(8)</sup> A jealous God is Jehovah,<sup>a</sup>
Vengeful is Jehovah and full of wrath.<sup>b</sup>
3<sup>c,d(2)</sup> In storm and tempest is his path,
And cloud is the dust of his feet.

<sup>t</sup> 37<sup>31-35</sup> The post-exilic point of view is clearly reflected in these vss.

§ 59 The original prophecy of Nahum dealt with but one theme—the approaching downfall of Nineveh. A later editor, desiring for didactic purposes to emphasize Jehovah's part in the overthrow of the ancient empire, has prefixed, as a fitting introduction, a powerful little psalm describing Jehovah's just rule and especially his zeal in taking vengeance upon his foes. The psalm is closely parallel in thought to many of the psalms of the Psalter. Like several of

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>2a</sup> So Gk. The Heb. repeats avenging. The metre, however, supports the reading given above.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>2a</sup> Vs. <sup>2c</sup> which begins with the Heb. letter n, has been displaced.

<sup>4</sup> (ɔ) He rebuketh the sea and drieth it up,
And parcheth all the streams.

(׀) Bashan<sup>c</sup> and Carmel are languishing,
And the bloom of Lebanon is withered.

<sup>5</sup> (׀) The<sup>d</sup> mountains tremble before him
And the hills dissolve,

(׀) And the earth heaves before him
The habitable world-and all that dwell therein.

<sup>6</sup> (׀) Before his indignation who can stand,
Or who abide in the heat of his anger?

(׀) His wrath pours forth like fire,
And rocks are shattered by him.

<sup>7</sup> (׀) Good is Jehovah to those who hope in him,<sup>e</sup>
A place of refuge in the day of trouble.<sup>f</sup>

(׀) Jehovah<sup>g</sup> knoweth those whose trust in him, <sup>8</sup> In the midst of the overwhelming flood he rescueth them.<sup>h</sup>

(׀) An end he maketh of those who rise up against him,<sup>i</sup>
And driveth his enemies with darkness.

<sup>9</sup> (׀) He doth not take vengeance<sup>j</sup> a second time<sup>k</sup> upon his adversary,
He maketh a complete destruction.

(׀) What think ye of Jehovah?<sup>l</sup>

the psalms and the first three chapters of the book of Lam. it is an acrostic; that is, each succeeding verse originally began with a succeeding letter of the Heb. alphabet. Each vs. contained two lines. It would appear from the present state of the text that the editor who quoted the psalm was either ignorant of the acrostic order or else had before him a disarranged text, or more probable still quoted from memory, for several of the verses are not in the regular alphabetical order. Many attempts have been made to restore the order of the closing verses but without success. Apparently the editor either quoted very freely or more probably substituted the divine promises to Judah, found in 1<sup>13</sup>, 1<sup>15</sup> and 2<sup>2</sup>, with the aim of making Nahum's original prophecy of Nineveh's overthrow applicable to Judah.

The point of view of this later editor is clearly the post-exilic period; in thought he was closely related to the author of Is. 40-66. At last Judah's punishment is complete and Jehovah will no longer afflict his people, but rather he will release them from captivity and restore them to the land of Palestine, where they may again celebrate their religious rites and develop into a prosperous nation. The date of this editor is probably the age of Nehemiah, somewhere about the middle of the Persian period.

The introductory psalm, like the kindred psalms of the Psalter, probably comes from the troublesome days of the Judean community during the earlier part of the Persian period. It forms a fitting introduction to the original prophecy of Nahum, whose theme is the vindication of Jehovah's righteousness and the overthrow of guilty Nineveh, which represents the Assyrian empire.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>14</sup> The Heb. has simply a repetition of the verb at the end of the vs., but the Gk. has a different verb, and the structure of the poem calls for a verb beginning with the Heb. letter d. Following the analogy of Jer. 31<sup>12</sup>, 25, of Is. 38<sup>14</sup>, the original may be restored with the consistent meaning given above.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>15</sup> So, Gk. The Heb. omits the article.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>17</sup> Following the Gk.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>17</sup> Cf. Jer. 16<sup>19</sup>, Ps. 37<sup>39</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> Supplying Jehovah. Arnold (3f., ATW, 1901, p. 260) reads <sup>7</sup> as one stanza and introduces <sup>3</sup> here:

*Jehovah is long-suffering,
But doth not fail to punish.*

<sup>h</sup> <sup>18</sup> Supplying the verb implied and demanded by the context.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>18</sup> Following the Gk. The Heb. must be slightly corrected to make any sense.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>19b</sup> This vs. has been greatly disarranged. The initial clause is found at the end and the second immediately before it, while the first part of the first stanza is at the beginning of the vs.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>19b</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. and a slightly revised Heb. text. I. e., a second act of vengeance is unnecessary. Cf. I Sam. 31<sup>2</sup>, 26<sup>8</sup>, II Sam. 20<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>13b</sup> The second member of 9<sup>a</sup> appears, with the next couplet, to have been transferred to the beginning of the chapter, where they are plainly out of place. Restored to the setting demanded by the alphabetical order, they fit their context completely.

<sup>2c, d</sup> Jehovah doth not fail to punish.<sup>m</sup>
<sup>2c(2)</sup> Vengeful is Jehovah toward his adversaries,
     And watchful is he of his enemies:
<sup>12(3)</sup> Thorns, tangled and drenched,<sup>n</sup>
     They are consumed like dry stubble.

<sup>12</sup>For thus saith Jehovah:

The days of my contention are at an end, past and gone.
     Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more,<sup>o</sup>

<sup>13</sup>And now I will break his yoke from off thee and will burst thy bonds, <sup>15</sup>Behold on the mountains the feet of the messenger of good news,<sup>p</sup> who announces peace!

Assurance
that Judah shall be delivered
from
the foreign yoke

Celebrate the feasts, O Judah, pay the vows,
     For the wicked one will never again pass through thee,<sup>q</sup>
     He is destroyed, cut off!

2 <sup>2</sup>For Jehovah restoreth the vine<sup>r</sup> Jacob as the vine<sup>r</sup> Israel, Since the devastators have devastated them and destroyed their shoots.

§ 60. The Oracle Concerning Nineveh, 1<sup>1</sup>, 11, 11, 2<sup>1</sup>, 3-13, 31-19

THE<sup>s</sup> VISION OF NAHUM THE ELKOSHITE

Nah. 1 <sup>11</sup>Came he<sup>t</sup> not forth from thee
     Who planned evil against Jehovah,
     Who counselled villany?

Jeho-
vah's
condemna-
tion of
Assyria

<sup>14</sup>Thus hath Jehovah given command concerning thee:

<sup>m</sup> 12b Vs. 3a, which reads, Jehovah is long-suffering and great in might, does not fit the context or the metrical or alphabetical structure of the poem. It is generally regarded as a later gloss intended to mitigate the severity of <sup>2b</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> In both the Heb. and Gk. the text is badly confused. No satisfactory reconstruction has been suggested. The above is based upon the Heb. text after a case of dittoigraphy has been corrected.

<sup>o</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> Reconstructing the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and the parallel in Is. 60<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 15 Cf. Is. 52<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 15 Cf. Joel 3<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> Restoring the Heb. in accord with <sup>2b</sup>, which reads, lit., vine-shoots.

§ 60 Of the two superscriptions which are found in the opening vs. the second, The vision of Nahum the Elkoshite, was evidently the original; while the first, The Oracle (or Burden) concerning Ninereh, contains the late Heb. word burden and was evidently added by a late editor—not improbably the one who appended the introductory psalm to the prophecy.

Regarding the prophet Nahum and his date tradition furnishes no authentic information. His point of view is clearly that of Judah, Cf. 1<sup>1</sup>. Elkosh, his native town, was probably one of the otherwise unknown little villages of Judah. The date of his activity is also uncertain. The reference, 3<sup>12, 13</sup>, to the fall of Thebes indicates that it must have been after the power of that great Egyptian capital was finally broken by Ashurbanipal about 660 B.C. On the other hand it clearly precedes the conquest of Nineveh by the combined forces of the Medes and Chaldeans in 607-6 B.C. Herodotus states that Cyaxares, the Mede, first besieged Nineveh in 625 B.C. It is unfortunate that this statement is not confirmed by any of the contemporary writers, for it furnishes the most satisfactory date for Nahum's prediction. The death, in 626 B.C. of the great Assyrian king Ashurbanipal, who had ruled southwestern Asia and Egypt with a strong hand, was in itself an event well calculated to inspire hope in the minds of the Judeans. Possibly he is the Assyrian king referred to in 1<sup>1</sup>. It was also about this time that the Assyrian rule of Palestine was relaxed and that the great empire began to fall into decay, although the external evidences of Nineveh's downfall did not become clearly apparent until a decade later. The prophecy, therefore, may be dated with assurance somewhere between 626 and 610 B.C., with the strong probability in favor of the earlier date. It forms a fitting and

<sup>s</sup> 11 A later editor has added book of before the older superscription.

<sup>t</sup> 11 Making a slight correction in the last word of <sup>10</sup> and joining it with <sup>11</sup>.

Thy name shall no longer be remembered;<sup>u</sup>
 From the house of thy God will I cut off idol and molten image,
 I will make thy grave a stench.<sup>v</sup>

The battle
alarm

2   1He that breaketh in pieces has come up against thee.
 Keep careful watch!
 Guard the way!
 Gird up the loins!
 Gather all thy strength!<sup>w</sup>

The approach-
ing foe

3The shield of his heroes is colored red.
 The warriors are clad in scarlet.
 The steel<sup>x</sup> of the chariots gleams like fire,<sup>y</sup>
4In the day of preparation the horses<sup>z</sup> are prancing.<sup>a</sup>
4On the streets the chariots rattle;
 They go galloping across the squares.

The
attack

Their appearance is like torches,
 Like lightnings they dart to and fro.
5He musters<sup>b</sup> his nobles,
 They succeed<sup>c</sup> in their onset,
 They rush to the wall,
 They set up<sup>d</sup> the covering.<sup>e</sup>

The
downfall of Nineveh

6The water-gates<sup>f</sup> are opened,
 And the palace goes down in ruins.
7The queen<sup>g</sup> is uncovered, she is carried off, powerful conclusion to the noble prophecies which come from the Assyrian period of Judah's history. At last the enlightened eye of the prophet discerns the signs of the coming overthrow of the great power which had brought untold woe to the people of Judah, and which for over a century had powerfully influenced the development of Judah's political, social, and religious life. For fully a half-century the great empire had been ruled by a small group of officials, and owed its strength not to the patriotism of the Assyrian people themselves, nor to any lofty ideals or ambition, but to the personal ability and energy of the ruling king, the thoroughness of his military organization, and to the hired mercenaries who fought under his banners. The personal ambitions of individual kings had led its armies over miles of burning desert, through broad rivers, and over snow-clad mountain passes in the lust for conquest and spoil, until Assyria had indeed, as the prophet declares, filled its capital Nineveh with the plunder of countless peoples, and reared its palaces and battlements by the forced labor of its captives. Nahum voices, in language of surpassing literary beauty and vigor, the universal cry of exultation which burst from the lips of a great family of nations, when at last the news came that Nineveh was falling.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Heb., There shall no more of thy name be sown. An extremely probable emendation of the text gives the above rendering which also reproduces the idea of the present Heb.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Again correcting certain obvious scribal errors.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> Lit., strengthen thy power exceedingly.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> The meaning of this word is very doubtful.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> Making a slight correction. Heb., with fire.

<sup>z</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> Correcting an obvious error in the Heb. by the aid of the Gk.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> Or, held back.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Heb., he remembers. The antecedent as in <sup>3</sup> is probably the invader.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Transferring one Heb. letter. The present Heb. reads, they stumble, which does not fit the context.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> So Gk., Heb., is set up.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Probably the protecting covering under which the battering-rams were brought up against the walls.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> I. e., the gates that opened from the Tigris, surrounding the walls with water. When opened the outer defences were down.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> The Heb. is untranslatable and is in all probability a corruption for the word queen demanded by the context.

And her maids moan like doves,
They are beating upon their breasts.<sup>h</sup>
<sup>8</sup>But Nineveh is like a pool of water,
Her waters<sup>i</sup> are flowing away.
'Stand, stand' [one cries], but not one turns back.

<sup>9</sup>Loot the silver, loot the gold;
For there is no end to the store,
The wealth of all precious things.<sup>j</sup>
<sup>10</sup>She is empty and desolate and waste;
And the heart faints,<sup>k</sup> the knees smite together,<sup>l</sup>
Anguish is in all the loins,
And the faces of all are flushed.

Plunder of the city

<sup>11</sup>Where is the den of the lions,
The lair<sup>m</sup> of the young lions,
Where the lion was wont to withdraw,<sup>n</sup>
The whelps also, with none to startle them?
<sup>12</sup>The lion tore in pieces enough for his whelps,
And strangled for his mates,
He filled his caves with prey,
And his lairs with plunder.

Nineveh
the den of
Assyrian lions

<sup>13</sup>Behold, I am against thee, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts,
And I will burn thy dwelling<sup>o</sup> in smoke;
The sword shall devour thy young lions;
Yea, I will cut off thy prey from the earth,
The voice of thy messengers<sup>p</sup> shall be heard no more.

To be stroyed
by Je-
hovah

3      <sup>1</sup>Woe to the bloody city,<sup>q</sup>
Full of lies and plunder!
There is no limit to the spoil,
<sup>2</sup>The noise<sup>r</sup> of the whip and of rattling wheels!
The prancing horses and bounding chariots, <sup>3</sup>The horseman charging with flashing sword and glittering spear!
Many are the slain and the dead are in heaps,<sup>s</sup>

Because
of its many
crimes

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Lit., hearts, in grief.

<sup>i</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Again correcting a scribal error

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Or, fine furniture

<sup>k</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> I. e., in terror.

<sup>l</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> Following the Gk. in interpreting the Heb.

<sup>m</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> Slightly correcting the text.

<sup>n</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of certain early texts.

<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Heb., chariots. Gk. and Syr., thy many or multitude. Both readings are probably corruptions for the corresponding Heb. word dwelling demanded by the context.

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Gk. your works shall be heard of no longer; but the Heb. reading is preferable, the reference being to the many embassies sent out by Assyria to extend the influence and prestige of the empire.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> Lit., city of acts of bloodshed.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Or, Hark, the whip!

Hark, the noise of rattling wheels!

<sup>s</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> Lit., and the mass of slain, and a great heap of dead bodies.

And there<sup>t</sup> are corpses without number!
They stumble over the bodies!
<sup>4</sup>It is because of the many crimes of the harlot,<sup>u</sup>
The alluring mistress of magic,
She who hath sold<sup>v</sup> nations through her harlotries,
And peoples<sup>w</sup> through her black art.

<sup>5</sup>Behold, I am against thee, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts;
Yea, I will uncover thy skirts before thy face,
For I will show the nations thy nakedness,
And the kingdoms thy disgrace.
<sup>6</sup>And I will cast loathsome filth upon thee,
And make thee vile, and set thee up as a gazing stock.
<sup>7</sup>And all who look upon thee shall flee from thee,<sup>x</sup>
And say, ‘Nineveh is wasted; who will bewail her?
Whence shall I seek comfort<sup>y</sup> for thee?’<sup>z</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Are you better than No-ammon [Thebes],<sup>a</sup>
Which lay in the midst of the streams,
With waters around about her,
Whose bulwark was the sea,
Whose wall was the waters?
<sup>9</sup>Her<sup>b</sup> strength was Ethiopia and Egypt,
And Put,<sup>c</sup> with countless people,
The Libians also were her<sup>d</sup> support.

<sup>10</sup>But she also was carried away, she went into captivity;<sup>e</sup>
Her little ones also were dashed to pieces at the head of every street;
They cast lots for her honored men, while all her great ones were bound in fetters.
<sup>11</sup>So too, thou shalt become drunken, thou shalt be overcome,<sup>f</sup>
Thou also shalt seek a refuge from before thine enemy.
<sup>12</sup>All thy fortresses shall be like fig trees, thy people<sup>g</sup> like the first-ripe fruit;
If they are shaken they drop into the mouth of the eater.

<sup>t</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> Heb., their, but the context clearly indicates that the original reading was as above.

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> I. e., Nineveh, thus designated because through her intrigues she had drawn the nations of Southwestern Asia under her influence and tyrannical sway.

<sup>v</sup> 3<sup>4</sup> Or, intoxicates, revising the text.

<sup>w</sup> 3<sup>5</sup> Lit., families.

<sup>x</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> The metre in this vs., as frequently in this prophecy, suggests the five-beat measure of the dirge.

<sup>y</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb., comforters.

<sup>z</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> Gk., her.

<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Thebes, the strong capital of Upper Egypt, repeatedly conquered by the Assyrians, but finally completely subjugated about 660 B.C. It was surrounded by the waters of the Nile which thus constituted a natural and effective defence.

<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb., strength.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> The land of Put was probably situated along the southern shores of the Red Sea.

<sup>d</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Again following the Gk. and Syr. Heb., thy.

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>10</sup> Here the five-beat lamentation metre is introduced and continues throughout the remainder of the prophecy.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Lit., thou shalt be hid, i. e., overcome with terror.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Slightly correcting the text as the metre and context require.

Disgraced
in the eyes of all the nations

Far
from invincible

Ripe
for conquest

<sup>13</sup>See, thy people<sup>h</sup> are women; fire has consumed thy defences,<sup>i</sup>
The gates of thy land are wide open to thine enemies.

<sup>14</sup>Draw thy water for the siege, strengthen thy fortresses;
Go to the clay pits and tread the clay; take up the brick moulds.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>15</sup>There the fire will consume thee, the sword will cut thee down;
It will devour thee, though thou increase thyself like the devouring worm or a swarm of locusts.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Make thy merchants more than the stars of heaven,<sup>l</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Thy watchmen<sup>m</sup> as the locusts and thy scribes<sup>n</sup> as the grasshoppers,
Which swarm in the hedges on a cold day,
But when the sun shines they fly away and their place is unknown.

<sup>18</sup>Woe to thee,<sup>o</sup> thy shepherds slumber,<sup>p</sup> thy nobles are sleeping, Thy people are scattered on the mountains and there is no one to assemble
them,

The futility
of resistance

Fatal weakness revealed

<sup>19</sup>There is no healing for thy hurt, thy wound is fatal.<sup>q</sup>

All who hear the news about thee clap their hands over thee,
For upon whom hath thy wickedness not fallen continually?<sup>r</sup>

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>13</sup> The Heb. adds, in your midst; but this is not supported by the metre and weakens the line which expresses forcibly the thought that all the men have been slain and only helpless women remain.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>13</sup> Transferring the clause, the fire hath consumed your defences (lit., bars), from the end of the vs. in accordance with the demands of the sense and metre.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>14</sup> I. e., prepare bricks to build high the walls.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> The meaning of this vs. is obscure. The clause, as a devouring worm, has evidently been repeated through a scribal error. The two classes of insects here referred to are apparently (1) the larvæ of the locust and (2) the locust when it has developed wings and is able to fly in great swarms.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> The Heb. adds, introducing another figure, the devouring worm will consume it and fly away. It would seem, however, to be an addition by a later scribe who failed to appreciate Nahum's figure in which the locusts and devouring worms simply mean great numbers.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>17</sup> This word is commonly translated princes, but the meaning is doubtful and the above translation, based on a close analogy to the Assyrian word meaning watchmen, gives on the whole a more probable rendering.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>17</sup> The current translation, marshalls, is exceedingly doubtful. The Heb. has probably taken over here the Assyrian word for scribe.

<sup>o</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>p</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> A scribe has here added, O king of Assyria, and changed the pronominal suffixes from the feminine to the masculine. It is evident, however, that in the original context Nineveh was the one addressed throughout the entire prophecy.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>19</sup> Gk., swollen.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>19</sup> This last line lacks the vigor of the preceding and may possibly be a later addition.

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE
ZEPHANIAH, JEREMIAH, HABAKKUK, AND EZEKIEL

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

I

ZEPHANIAH'S REFORM SERMONS

§ 61. Superscription, Zeph. 1<sup>1</sup>

THE WORD OF JEHOVAH, WHICH CAME TO ZEPHANIAH
THE SON OF CUSHI, THE SON OF GEDALIAH, THE SON OF AMARIAH, THE SON OF HEZEKIAH,
IN THE DAYS OF JOSIAH THE SON OF AMON KING OF JUDAH.

§ 62. Jehovah's Day of Judgment upon Judah, Zeph. 1<sup>7, 2-6, 8-18</sup>

Zeph. 1 <sup>7</sup>Bow before the Lord Jehovah, for near is the day of Jehovah, For Jehovah hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath sanctified his guests.<sup>a</sup> The day of Jehovah

---

§ 61 The sermons of Zeph. are of deep interest because he himself was, in all probability, as the superscription implies, a great-great-grandson of the reforming king, Hezekiah, and because he was apparently the first to raise the standard of reform after the long reactionary reign of Manasseh. The prevailing apostasy, which is the background of his powerful denunciations, was clearly the fruit of that earlier reaction against the teachings of Isaiah and Micah and the reformation of Hezekiah. That reaction had brought back many of the old Canaanite cults and superstitions which had been placed under the ban and only cherished in secret by the people. It also opened wide the door for the introduction of foreign religions, and especially that attractive type of Baby. worship which was introduced by the Assyrian conquerors and which, during the reign of Manasseh, became widely prevalent in the land of Judah. The worship on the house-tops, to which Zeph. refers, was clearly the Baby. worship of the heavenly bodies.

It is more than possible that Zeph. was the companion of the young Josiah and the one who influenced the king to abandon the policy of his father and grandfather and to follow the guidance of the disciples of Isaiah and Micah. The prophet reiterates, in the light of the changed conditions, the principles nobly set forth by the great Isaiah. Judah is evidently threatened by some great danger. From the contemporary sermons of Jer. and from the reference in Herodotus, it would appear that this foe was none other than the dread Scythians, of whom a detachment about 626 B.C. swept down the great highway along the Eastern Mediterranean, pitilessly pillaging and slaying the peoples whose territory lay in their course. While Judah was not in the direct line of the invaders, fears of this terrible, mysterious foe doubtless filled the minds of Zeph.'s hearers. The ominous note of doom, with scarcely a rift of hope, reveals the spirit and earnestness of Zeph. The famous mediæval hymn, Dies Irae, which is based upon the Latin version of the first chapter, reproduces with marvellous fidelity the notes of alarm and warning which characterize the prophecy as a whole. The prophet's aim was to arrest the attention of his hearers and to arouse them that they might institute a fundamental reform. The great reformation under Josiah was clearly one of the fruits of Zeph.'s preaching.

The prophecy naturally falls into four divisions: the first chapter has suffered greatly in transmission, but in its restored form clearly represents Zeph.'s interpretation of the day of Jehovah. The second section, chap. 2<sup>1-3, 12-16</sup>, traces the effect of Jehovah's judgment upon Judah's heathen neighbors. The third section, chap. 3<sup>1-7</sup>, deals in detail with the sins of the leaders of Jerusalem. The remainder of the book, chaps. 2<sup>8-11</sup>, 3<sup>8-20</sup>, consists of later supplements from the point of view of the exile.

<sup>a</sup> 17 This vs. interrupts the words of Jehovah in 2<sup>18</sup>, and at the same time furnishes the natural introduction to the oracle as a whole. The guests of Jehovah are the apostates mentioned in the following vss.

Jeho-
yah's
judgment
upon all the earth

Upon
the apostates
in Judah

Upon
the faith-
less rulers

Upon
the rich, selfsatisfied merchants

<sup>2</sup>I will completely take away everything from off the face of the earth, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>3</sup>I will take away<sup>b</sup> man and beast, the birds of the heavens and the fish of the sea;<sup>c</sup>

I will cause the wicked to stumble, and I will cut off mankind from the face of the earth.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>4</sup>And I will stretch out my hand over Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem,

And I will cut off from this place the surviving Baalism<sup>e</sup> and the name of the heathen priestlings,<sup>f</sup>

<sup>5</sup>And those who worship on the housetops the host of heaven.<sup>g</sup>

And those worshippers<sup>h</sup> of Jehovah who also pay homage to Milcom,<sup>i</sup>

<sup>6</sup>And those who turn back from following Jehovah,

And those who do not seek Jehovah nor strive to find him.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>8</sup>And<sup>k</sup> I will punish the officers and the royal princes,<sup>l</sup>

And all those who clothe themselves in foreign apparel;<sup>m</sup>

<sup>9</sup>And<sup>n</sup> I will punish all who leap over the threshold,<sup>o</sup>

Who fill the house of their lord with violence and deceit.

<sup>10</sup>Hark!<sup>p</sup> a cry from the Fish Gate,<sup>q</sup> and a wailing from the New Quarter,

And a great din from the hills,<sup>r</sup> and a wailing from the inhabitants of the Makkesh,<sup>r</sup>

For all the merchants<sup>s</sup> are destroyed, all those laden with money are cut off,

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Apparently through a scribal error the Heb. repeats, I will take away.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Heb., stumbling-blocks with the wicked, but the sense and parallelism call for the slight emendation followed above.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> The Heb. adds, destroying the metre and interrupting the passage, the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> Lit., remnant of Baal. Gk., name of Baal, but the latter is probably due to Hos. 2<sup>16</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> The metre and awkward, repetitious construction suggest that the added words, with the priests, is the work of a scribe. The original reference was probably simply to the priests of Baal.

<sup>g</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> A reference to the Assy. star worship which was introduced in the days of Manasseh.

<sup>h</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> A scribe has added by mistake from the last of the vs., who swear to.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> So certain Gk. codices and Luc. Milcom was the god of the Ammonites. Cf. I Kgs. 11<sup>5</sup>, 33 II Kgs. 23<sup>13</sup>; Jer. 7<sup>30</sup>, 31.

<sup>j</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> Possibly this vs. is secondary, as it lacks the metrical structure and the fiery reform zeal of the preceding vss.

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> A scribe who recognized that <sup>7</sup> interrupted the words of Jehovah has sought to reconcile it to its context by adding the awkward gloss, And it shall come to pass in the day of Jehovah's sacrifice.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Gk., household of the king.

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> I. e., adopt foreign customs.

<sup>n</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> From its context this line would appear to refer simply to the deliberate disregard of established laws of law and order. It may possibly refer to a heathen custom adopted by the official class in Jerusalem. Cf. I Sam. 5<sup>6</sup>, Is. 57.

<sup>o</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> The Heb. adds the awkward gloss, in that day.

<sup>p</sup> 1<sup>0</sup> A scribe has added, destroying the metre and the force of the original, and it shall come to pass in that day, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>q</sup> 1<sup>0</sup> The Fish Gate was at the northern end of the Tyropœan Valley. Cf. Neh. 3<sup>3</sup>, 12<sup>39</sup>, and west of the temple area, and led into the New Quarter. Cf. II Kgs. 22<sup>14</sup>, Neh. 11<sup>39</sup>. The attack of a foe coming from the north would therefore first affect the city at this point.

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> Lit., mortar; possibly the low depression of the central Tyropœan Valley, between the temple and the western hill.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> Lit., sons of Canaan. The Canaanites were the traders of ancient Israel. In the central Tyropœan Valley they probably plied their trade.

<sup>12</sup>And<sup>t</sup> I will search Jerusalem with a lamp<sup>u</sup> and I will punish those who are at ease,<sup>v</sup>

Who are thickened upon their lees,<sup>w</sup> who are saying to themselves, Jehovah brings neither prosperity nor calamity.

<sup>13</sup>Their wealth shall become a prey and their houses a desolation.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Near is the day of Jehovah! near and rapidly approaching!

Near is the bitter day of Jehovah,<sup>y</sup> and strong men will then cry out;

<sup>15</sup>That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress,
A day of destruction and desolation, a day of darkness and gloom,
A day of clouds and thick darkness, <sup>16</sup>a day of the trumpet and battle-cry,
Against the fortified cities and against the high battlements.

<sup>17</sup>And I will bring distress upon men and they shall walk as the blind,<sup>z</sup>

And their blood shall be poured out as dust and their flesh as dung.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Neither their silver nor their gold will be able to deliver them,

For in the day<sup>b</sup> of the wrath of Jehovah and in the fire of his jealousy the whole earth shall be devoured,

For he will make an end, yea, a speedy<sup>c</sup> end of all the inhabitants of the earth.<sup>d</sup>

Nature of Jehovah's judgment day

§ 63. Jehovah's Imminent Judgment upon the Nations, Zeph. 2<sup>1-8, 12-15</sup>

Zeph. 2 <sup>1</sup>Be ashamed within yourselves,<sup>e</sup> yea, be ashamed,<sup>f</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Before ye become as the drifting chaff,<sup>g</sup>

Before the day of Jehovah comes upon you,

Humble faith in Jehovah alone will deliver

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> A scribe has again added, and it shall come to pass at that time.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb., lamps.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the aid of the analogy in Am. 6<sup>1</sup>, Is. 37<sup>29</sup>, Jer. 48<sup>11</sup>, and the parallelism.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> I. e., confirmed in their false convictions because they had been so long disturbed.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> Cf. the proverbial expression, They shall build houses but not inhabit and plant vineyards but not drink the wine thereof (cf. Am. 5<sup>1</sup>, Mi. 6<sup>10</sup>, Dt. 28<sup>30, 39</sup>), lacks the metre of the context and ill accords with the next line, which states* that the day of judgment is near, and it must be regarded as secondary.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Correcting the text as the context requires. The traditional text has no meaning.

<sup>z</sup> 1<sup>17</sup> The added clause, because they have sinned against Jehovah, is clearly a didactic gloss which destroys the close parallelism of the vs.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>17</sup> So Gk. The meaning of the Heb. word is unknown.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> The prediction of the destruction of all the inhabitants of the earth is aside from Zeph.'s purpose, which was to condemn the guilty Judahites. It is also a characteristic idea of the later apocalyptic writers. The same reasoning applies to the preceding line, so that it is probable that these lines are both secondary. Cf. 3<sup>3</sup>, Ezek. 7<sup>19</sup>, Jer. 13<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 63 By many scholars 1-3 are connected with the preceding chap. The latter, however, is complete as it stands. Vss. 1-3 mark the transition to the other nations which will share the common judgment with Judah. They are the Philistines and Ethiopians on the west and the Assyrians on the east, who were in the line of advance of the two Scythian hordes.

The section in 8-11, which includes the Moabites and Ammonites, appears to be a later addition from an exilic editor, for (1) 1<sup>2</sup> is the immediate sequel of 7<sup>2</sup>; (2) these peoples were not in the line of the march of the Scythians; (3) there is no reason why Zeph. should mention them; (4) the reference seems to be to the events of the early exile; vss. 8, 10 refer to the acts of these heathen peoples when Jerusalem was destroyed in 586 B.C.; (5) the five-beat lamentation metre, which prevails throughout the rest of the section, is lacking here. Vss. 8-11 are probably from the same exilic writer who appended the psalm at the end of the prophecy, 35<sup>20</sup>. Cf. § 236.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> The meaning of these verbs is in this case not entirely certain nor clear. They may mean assemble yourselves. The idea of assembling the people in view of a great national danger is prominent in Jer. 36 and in Joel.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> Following the Gk. The Heb. is evidently corrupt and untranslatable.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> Again following the Gk.

Before the day of Jehovah's wrath comes upon you.

<sup>3</sup>Seek Jehovah all ye meek of the earth, ye who execute his law;

Seek righteousness, seek meekness; perhaps ye may be hidden in the day of Jehovah's wrath.<sup>h</sup>

The-
judgment
to fall on the Phlis-
tines
and Ethiopians

<sup>4</sup>For Gaza shall be forsaken; Ashkelon a desolation;<sup>i</sup>

Ashdod—by noon shall they rout her<sup>j</sup> and Ekron be torn up!

<sup>5</sup>Woe to the dwellers by the seashore; people of the Cherethites!<sup>k</sup>

The word of Jehovah is against thee,<sup>l</sup> O Canaan,<sup>m</sup> land of the Philistines!

I will destroy thee so that thou shalt be without inhabitant,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>6</sup>And thou shalt become<sup>o</sup> shepherds' cots and folds for flocks.

<sup>7</sup>In the house of Ashkelon will they lie down at evening, by the sea will they feed.<sup>p</sup>

Proud
Nineveh's
fate

<sup>12</sup>Ye, also, O Ethiopians, slain by his<sup>q</sup> sword are ye!

<sup>13</sup>And I<sup>r</sup> will stretch out my hand against the north and destroy Assyria;
And I will make Nineveh a desolation, dry as the wilderness,

<sup>14</sup>And herds will lie down in her, amidst every beast of the earth,<sup>s</sup>

Both pelican and porcupine shall lodge in its capitals,

The owl<sup>t</sup> shall hoot in the window; the raven<sup>u</sup> on the doorstep, for the city is destroyed.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>15</sup>This is the exultant city which sat secure,

She who said to herself, I am and there is none else!

How has she become a desolation! A lair of beasts!

Every passerby hisses at her, shakes his hand.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>2</sup>ed. <sup>3</sup> The defective metre in these lines, the lack of close connection with the context, and thehortatory tone strongly suggest that they are secondary.

<sup>i</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> The measure throughout is elegiac: a long line of three beats and a rising cadence followed by a short line of two beats and a falling cadence. As in Mi. 1<sup>10-14</sup>, there is also a play on the proper names.

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> Evidently a figure for sudden capture. Cf. Jer. 15<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Cf. I Sam. 30<sup>4</sup>; Ezek. 25<sup>16</sup>. It is a designation of the Philistines.

<sup>l</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Heb., you, but the plural is probably due to a scribal error.

<sup>m</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> Canaan may be a scribal addition. In the Egyptian inscriptions it is used, however, as a designation of all Palestine. Canaan was also a synonym for merchant and may well have been applied to the commercial Philistines.

<sup>n</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> The last line is lacking, while <sup>6a</sup> is overcrowded. The secondary passage <sup>6b</sup> was probably based on the reference to the seashore now found in <sup>6a</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> So Gk. The Heb. introduces, probably from the next line, the explanatory word seashore.

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Restoring what appears to have been the original structure of the vs. 7<sup>a,c</sup>:

And the coast shall belong to the remnant of the house of Judah,

For Jehovah their God will visit them and turn their captivity, is clearly a later note from a post-exilic editor.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Heb., my, but the context demands his.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Correcting the Heb. (which has the third person) as the context requires.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb., nation.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> Correcting the Heb. text, which has, voice.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> Heb. adds a doubtful clause which may be translated, for he hath laid bare the cedar work, or correcting the text, for the city is destroyed. These unintelligible words may be simply a confused scribal repetition of the opening words of the next line.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>15</sup> This vs. has many parallels in later prophecies (cf. Is. 23<sup>7</sup>, 47<sup>8</sup>, Jer. 50<sup>23</sup>, 51<sup>11</sup>, 19<sup>3</sup>) and is by many regarded as secondary. The evidence, however, is not decisive and the metre and thought accord well with the context.

§ 64. Jerusalem's Deep-seated Corruption, Zeph. 3<sup>1-7</sup>

Zeph. 3 <sup>1</sup>Woe to the rebellious and unclean city of oppression, <sup>2</sup>She hath not obeyed the voice, she hath not accepted instruction,
 In Jehovah she hath not trusted, to her God she hath not drawn near.<sup>x</sup>

Guilt of Jerusalem

<sup>3</sup>Her rulers in her midst are roaring lions,
 Her judges are evening wolves, who leave nothing over<sup>y</sup> until the morning, <sup>4</sup>Her prophets are braggarts, faithless men,
 Her priests profane what is holy and do violence to the law.

Of her
rulers
and teachers

<sup>5</sup>Jehovah is righteous in her midst, he doeth no wrong, Morning by morning he establisheth his decree,<sup>z</sup>
 Light is not lacking,<sup>a</sup> an oversight is unknown.
<sup>6</sup>I have cut off nations, their turrets are destroyed;
 I have laid waste their broad streets, so that none passes over them.
 Desolate are their cities without a man, without inhabitant.

Jeho-
vah's faithful instruc-
tion by precept and example

<sup>7</sup>I said, 'Surely she will fear me, she will accept instruction, Nothing shall vanish from her eyes<sup>b</sup> that I have impressed<sup>c</sup> upon her';
 But the more zealously have they made all their deeds corrupt.

Jeru-salem's
failure to learn

II

THE EARLIER SERMONS OF JEREMIAH

§ 65. The Superscription to Jeremiah's Sermons, Jer. 1<sup>1-3</sup>

<sup>1</sup>THE WORDS<sup>a</sup> OF JEREMIAH THE SON OF HILKIAH, ONE OF THE PRIESTS WHO WERE AT ANATHOTH IN THE LAND OF BENJAMIN. <sup>2</sup>TO WHOM THE WORD OF JEHOVAH CAME IN THE DAYS OF JOSIAH THE SON OF AMON KING OF JUDAH, IN THE THIRTEENTH YEAR OF HIS REIGN.

§ 64 This section is, by many scholars, regarded as a later addition to the book. The chief reason urged is the presence of four or five late Hebrew words or usages, but this evidence is far from conclusive, for they may have crept in through transmission. The moral tone of the passage is that of Zeph.; the crimes are those of pre-exilic Jerusalem and especially during the days preceding the reformation of Josiah. Its statements are also closely parallel to those of Jer. during the same period and are in marked contrast to those of the later passage which follows. In the absence of any convincing evidence to the contrary, there is every reason for regarding Zeph. as the author.

<sup>x</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Cf. the close parallel to Jer. 7<sup>28</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> So Gk. and one possible meaning of the Heb. verb. The figure is also in accord with well-known habits of the wolves who consume all their prey.

<sup>z</sup> 3<sup>5</sup> I. e., makes clear the law that should prevail in the land.

<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>6</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the context.

<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has corrupted the original into, her dwelling.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> Lit., visit—i. e., commanded and enforced by discipline.

§ 65 Like the other superscriptions to the prophetic books, this was evidently added by an editor. The familiarity with details suggests that it was Baruch. Vss. 1, 2 may have been the original superscription to a small collection of Jer.'s sermons, delivered about 626 B.C., and <sup>3</sup> a subsequent addition intended to include the later collections; at least the last clause must be regarded as a later detailed note, based on II Kgs. 25<sup>8</sup>. The complete superscription, however, antedates the time when the narrative sections in 40-52 were added, for the events therein recorded are subsequent to the fifth month, when the people of Jerusalem were carried into captivity.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> This may be interpreted, history, as in Kgs., but more probably it refers to the spoken addresses rather than the historical narrative in the book.

<sup>3</sup>IT ALSO CAME IN THE DAYS OF JEHOIAKIM THE SON OF JOSIAH KING OF JUDAH UNTIL THE END OF THE ELEVENTH YEAR OF ZEDEKIAH THE SON OF JOSIAH KING OF JUDAH, UNTIL JERUSALEM WENT INTO EXILE IN THE FIFTH MONTH.

§ 66. Jeremiah's Call, Jer. 1<sup>4-19</sup>

The call to divine service

Jeremiah's hesitation

The divine assurance

The divine commission

Jer. 1 <sup>4</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to me<sup>b</sup>:

<sup>5</sup>Before I formed thee in thy mother's womb, I knew<sup>c</sup> thee,
And before thou camest forth from the womb, I consecrated thee.
To be a prophet to the nations I have appointed thee.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>6</sup>But I said:

Alas, O Lord Jehovah!
Behold, I do not know how to speak;<sup>e</sup>
For I am only a youth.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Then Jehovah said to me:

Do not say, 'I am only a youth';
For to all to whom I shall send<sup>g</sup> thee, thou shalt go,
And whatever I command thee, thou shalt speak.

<sup>8</sup>Be not afraid of them,
For I am with thee to deliver thee.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Thereupon Jehovah stretched out his hand and touched my mouth, and Jehovah said to me:

Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth,

<sup>10</sup>See, I have set thee this day over the nations and kingdoms,<sup>i</sup>

To tear up, to break down and to destroy<sup>j</sup>—to build and to plant.

§ 66 The correspondence between the call of Jer., as here recorded, and that of Isaiah § 32, is very close. The needs of their day and their recognition that some one must warn their nation, are the essential elements in each. In the case of Jer. the immediate cause appears to have been the advance of the dread Scythians, the foe from the north (cf. <sup>13, 14</sup>) to which he refers frequently in his earliest sermons. This chap. concretely and vividly suggests that inner struggle between the sense of duty and inclination which was going on in the mind of the youthful Jer. The responsibility resulting from his priestly inheritance and youthful training, the consciousness of Jehovah's power and the imminence of the danger that threatened, conquered his natural shrinking from publicity and his feeling of immaturity. Probably this chap., like the account of Isaiah's call, was written after years of experience had demonstrated the real nature of his task. It is prevailingly prose, but the longer speeches have a marked poetic structure. In the first part the three-beat metre is employed; but the longer passage which begins in <sup>k</sup> was originally cast in the five-beat measure.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>14</sup> Gk., to him. This may be original, but the analogy of <sup>11, 13</sup> favors the Heb.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>15</sup> I. e., in the sense of an intimate acquaintance. Cf. Am. 3<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>16</sup> This line, with its reference to the foreign nations, may be secondary, for the mission and message of the Jeremiah of history was to his own countrymen. Cf. <sup>18</sup>. Both Amos and Isaiah, however, uttered prophecies concerning foreign nations. Cf. also Jer. 28<sup>8</sup>, 36<sup>2</sup>, 25<sup>16, 16</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>16</sup> I. e., to proclaim Jehovah's message clearly and effectively.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>16</sup> The Heb. word was applied to any one from infancy to a marriageable or older age. Cf. Gen. 34<sup>19</sup>, II Sam. 18<sup>9, 12</sup>. It simply emphasized youth in contrast to maturity.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>17</sup> So Gk. supported by <sup>8</sup>. A common error has crept into the Heb. so that it reads, on whatsoever errand.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>18</sup> A later scribe has added the favorite formula, It is the oracle of Jehovah, although it does not fit naturally in the context.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>10</sup> Gk., nations and kingdoms.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>10</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, pull down.

<sup>11</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: What<sup>k</sup> dost thou see? And I answered, A branch<sup>l</sup> of an almond tree. <sup>12</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, Thou hast seen well; for I am ever watching over<sup>m</sup> my words to perform them.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Again the word of Jehovah came to me: What dost thou see? And I answered,<sup>o</sup> A caldron brewing hot and it faces from the north.<sup>p</sup> <sup>14</sup>Then Jehovah said to me,

From the north disaster is brewing<sup>q</sup> for<sup>r</sup> all the inhabitants of the land.

<sup>15</sup>For behold, I will summon all the kingdoms from the north,

And they shall come and set up each his throne before the gates of Jerusalem,

And around about all its walls and against the cities of Judah.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>16</sup>And I will pass judgment upon them because of all their wickedness,

In that they have forsaken me and offered sacrifices to other gods,

And have worshipped the works of their own hands.<sup>t</sup>

A symbol of divine protection
Of the foes advance from the north

<sup>17</sup>Therefore do thou gird up thy loins and arise,

Speak to them all that I command thee,

Do not be terrified before them, lest I terrify<sup>u</sup> thee in their presence.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>18</sup>But behold, I myself make thee this day a fortified city,<sup>w</sup>

And a brazen wall<sup>x</sup> against the kings of Judah, its princes,<sup>y</sup> and the common people.

<sup>19</sup>And they shall fight against thee, but they will not overcome thee,

For I am with thee to deliver thee, saith Jehovah.

Encouragement to be brave in the face of bitter opposition

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, Jeremiah.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>11</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, I see.

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> There is here a play on the Heb. shâkēd, almond tree, and shôkēd, I am watching. As in winter, when all other trees are asleep, the almond tree appears to be ever wakeful, so Jehovah at all times is watching over his prophets.

<sup>n</sup> 1<sup>12</sup> So Gk. supported by <sup>10</sup>. Heb., my word to perform it.

<sup>o</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> So Gk. The Heb., as in <sup>11</sup>, repeats the I see.

<sup>p</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> Lit., its face is from the face toward the north.

<sup>q</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb., shall be opened. The Gk. is strongly supported by the fact that the same verb, to heat hot with a flame, is used as in <sup>13</sup>, thus carrying on the figure which is that, as in a huge caldron, disaster is brewing in the north and will soon be poured out upon the people of Judah. The reference is apparently to the Scythians, whose dread advent called forth the earliest sermons of Zeph. and Jer.

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Lit., upon.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah; but this is incongruous with the context and the metrical structure of the verse.

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>16</sup> The late prophetic terms suggest that possibly this vs. has been expanded by an editor who regarded the pre-exilic history from the same point of view as the editor of Kgs.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>17</sup> Another of the striking plays on the same word.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>17</sup> The Gk. omits, in their presence.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, an iron pillar, after city, but this introduces an incongruous figure.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, anticipating that which follows, the whole land.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>18</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb. adds, priests.

§ 67. Appeal to the Nation to Turn from its Heathenism and Faithfully Serve Jehovah, Jer. 2<sup>2</sup>-3<sup>5</sup> 19-4<sup>4</sup>

Innocence of Ju-
dah's earlier days

The sad
fate

Jer. 2 <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>z</sup>

I remember<sup>a</sup> the devotion of thy youth, the love of thy bridal time;
How thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in the land that was not sown.

<sup>3</sup>Israel was Jehovah's holy possession, the first fruit of his increase,
All who devoured him had to pay the penalty, calamity always overtook them.

<sup>4</sup>Hear the word of Jehovah, O house of Jacob, and all the family of the house of Israel:

<sup>5</sup>What<sup>b</sup> did your fathers find in me that was wrong, that they went far from me,

And followed vanity<sup>c</sup> so that they have become vain,<sup>d</sup> and did not say, 'Where is Jehovah, he who brought us up from the land of Egypt, He who led us through the wilderness through a land of steppes and ravines,<sup>d</sup>

Through a land of drought and gloom, through which no one passes and where no man dwells.

<sup>7</sup>And I brought you into a fertile<sup>e</sup> land to eat of its fruit and its good things;

But when ye entered, ye defiled my land and made my heritage an abomination.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Since the priests did not ask, 'Where is Jehovah?'<sup>g</sup>

<sup>§ 67</sup> In 2<sup>2</sup>-4<sup>4</sup> is found probably the earliest recorded sermon of Jer. As in most of his early addresses, the original order has been interrupted by later insertions or popular reports of the prophet's words. The antithesis to the picture of Israel's early promise, 2<sup>3</sup>, is found in 15, 16. Both stanzas share Jer.'s characteristic 3+2-beat measure, which runs through the sermon with remarkable regularity. The passage 4<sup>4</sup> opens abruptly with a fresh introduction and interrupts the sequence of the thought and is addressed to the individual members of the nation, not to the nation collectively as is the rest of the sermon. The literary style and ideas are also different, suggesting that possibly this was not their original setting or else that they are not from Jer. It is also equally obvious that the prose passages, 3<sup>6</sup>-12<sup>a</sup>, 14-18, and probably also 12<sup>b</sup>, 13, which are introduced by a new superscription were later inserted from another discourse. Israel in this passage refers not to the entire race, as in the original sermon, but to Northern Israel, which is directly addressed as in 31, with which this section is evidently related. Cf. note, § 70. Removing this addition, the original sermon remains in its pristine strength and beauty. Many of the prominent figures and ideas are drawn from Hosea, e. g., Israel, as the faithless wife running after her paramours and the designation of the heathen cults as whoredom. Jehovah's great love and eagerness to pardon, if the nation will only repent, are the dominant chords.

<sup>z</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> The Heb. recension has a much longer superscription, And the word of Jehovah came to me, saying, 'Go and cry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying,' etc. This, however, is repetitious and cumbersome and was probably added by a later scribe to connect it with the preceding chapter, the idiom of which it employs.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Arab. Heb. adds, for thee or concerning thee.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> Possibly the preceding vs. is a later addition. If it is original, however, the words, thus saith Jehovah, with which 5 opens are unnecessary and probably from a later scribe.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>5</sup> I. e., have followed heathen gods. Cf. 8, 11.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> Gk., desolate.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Heb., the land of Carmel, but the omission of land in the Gk. is supported by the metre. Carmel, covered with its fruitful fields, was a favorite illustration of superlative fertility. Cf. Am., 1<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> By their heathen religious practices, as the next vs. clearly indicates.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Developing Hosea's charge, 4<sup>6</sup>.

And those who devote themselves to the law<sup>h</sup> knew me not, and the shepherds<sup>i</sup> of the people transgressed against me,
And the prophets prophesied by Baal, and went after gods that help not;<sup>j</sup>

Jeho-
vah's dreadful charge against his
people

<sup>9</sup>Therefore I must still bring a charge<sup>k</sup> against you,<sup>l</sup> against your children's children must I bring a charge.

<sup>10</sup>For pass over to the islands of the Kittites<sup>m</sup> and see,
Send to the Kedarenes and take careful note and see if anything like this has ever happened:

<sup>11</sup>Hath a nation changed its gods<sup>n</sup> although these are no-gods?

Yet my people have changed their glory<sup>o</sup> for that which helps not.

<sup>12</sup>Be astonished,<sup>p</sup> O heavens, because of this; yea, shudder and be transfixed<sup>q</sup> with horror,<sup>r</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For my people have committed two crimes, is the oracle of Jehovah,
They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters,
And they have hewed out for themselves broken<sup>s</sup> cisterns that can hold no water!

<sup>14</sup>Is Israel a servant,<sup>t</sup> or is he a home-born slave?

Why hath he become an object of plunder,<sup>u</sup> his cities burnt up?<sup>v</sup>

<sup>15a,b,d</sup>Over him the young lions have kept roaring, have raised their cry,
And have made the land a waste, without inhabitant.

<sup>16</sup>The people also of Memphis and Tahpanhes<sup>w</sup> have broken the crown of thy head.

<sup>17</sup>Hast thou not brought this upon thee, because thou hast forsaken me?<sup>x</sup>

<sup>18</sup>And now what occasion hadst thou to go to Egypt to drink the waters of Sihor?<sup>y</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> I. e., the scribes and priestly interpreters of the law, whose duty it was to see that it was executed.

<sup>i</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> The rulers. Cf. 23<sup>1-4</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Heb., things that profit not. The reference as in Is. 30<sup>6</sup> is to the heathen gods.

<sup>k</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> As in Hos. 4<sup>1</sup>. Lit., bring a suit as in the courts.

<sup>l</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> So Gk. The Heb. again adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>m</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> Lit., the inhabitants of Cyprus, but they here stand for the western coast peoples of the Mediterranean, as the Kedarenes, the Arabian tribes between Palestine and Babylonia, represent the eastern races.

<sup>n</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> Gk., Have nations changed their gods? The Gk. is certainly right in preserving the personal pronoun that has been lost in the Heb.

<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> I. e., Jehovah and his religion.

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Gk., The heavens are astonished and shudder. Possibly this is the original reading.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Lit., be exceedingly astonished.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Here both Heb. and Gk. add, it is the oracle of Jehovah, but this was probably displaced from 1<sup>3a</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> So Gk., O. Lat. and Vulg. Heb., to hew out. The Heb. also repeats cisterns, but this is not supported by the metre. The contrast is between the living spiritual life that comes from Jehovah as its fountain source and the abominable heathen cults that are likened to stagnant water stored in cisterns which do not hold it.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>15</sup> Lit., to be freed after six years of service. Cf. Ex. 21<sup>2, 3</sup>. Dt. 15<sup>12, 13</sup>. The climax is represented by the home-born slave, who always belonged to his master.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>15</sup> This clause is demanded here by the sense and metre and is out of place in its setting in the Heb.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> Or, shorn—i. e., enslaved. Memphis and Tahpanhes (Gk., Daphne, near Pelusium) were two important cities of Northern Egypt and the asylum of Jewish refugees, Jer. 44. Possibly this line is secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>17</sup> A scribe has by mistake in the Heb. introduced the opening words of 1<sup>8</sup> also at the end of 1<sup>7</sup>. The Gk. does not have this error and also reads, me, instead of the fuller form, Jehovah thy God, of the Heb. In both instances the Gk. is supported by the context, 1<sup>9</sup>, and metre.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>18</sup> The Egyptian, Si-hur, probably the eastern branch of the Nile delta, therefore the one nearest Palestine. It represented the strength and fertility of Egypt.

And what occasion hadst thou to go to Assyria, to drink the water of the Euphrates?<sup>y</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Thine own apostasy<sup>z</sup> shall discipline thee, thy wickedness shall reprove thee.

Know and see that it is bitter<sup>a</sup> for thee to have forsaken me,<sup>b</sup>
And thou hast no awe for me? is the oracle of Jehovah thy God.<sup>c</sup>

Destroyed
by idolatry

<sup>20</sup>For from of old thou hast broken thy yoke, thou hast burst thy bonds,
And thou hast said, 'I will not serve thee,<sup>d</sup> but I will go upon every height,' Yea, under every green tree thou hast stretched<sup>e</sup> thyself as a harlot.

Under-mining effects of Ju-
dah's persistent
guilt

<sup>21</sup>Yet I had planted thee as a noble vine, altogether from good seed;
But, alas, how thou hast turned into<sup>f</sup> the degenerate shoots of a wild vine!

<sup>22</sup>For though thou wash thyself with lye and use much soap, Thy guilt has left its stain before me,<sup>g</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>23</sup>How canst thou say, 'I am not defiled, after the Baalim I have not gone.'<sup>i</sup>
Observe thy course<sup>j</sup> in the valley,<sup>k</sup> know what thou hast done.

Thou art a swift young camel rushing here and there in her course,

<sup>24</sup>A young cow, accustomed to the wilderness, in the heat of her passion;<sup>l</sup>
She snuffeth up the wind in her desire; who can bring her back?

All who seek her need not weary themselves, in her month they can find her.

<sup>25</sup>Save thy foot from being unshod and thy throat from thirst,

But thou saidst, 'It is hopeless, no, for I love strangers, after them I will go.'<sup>m</sup>

Its remorse without true
contrition

<sup>26</sup>As a thief is ashamed when he is caught, so shall the house of Israel be ashamed—

They, their kings, their nobles, their priests and their prophets—<sup>n</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Who say to a tree, 'Thou art my father,' and to a stone, 'Thou hast brought me forth,'<sup>o</sup>

y 218 Heb., the River, but this the regular O. T. designation of the Euphrates.

z 219 So Gk., supported by the context. Heb., misfortune.

a 219 So Gk. and O. Lat., supported by the metre. Heb. adds, evil and.

b 219 Following again the suggestion of the Gk. which appears to have retained the original side by side with a conflate reading. Heb., Jehovah thy God.

c 219 So Gk. The Heb. scribes, as frequently elsewhere, have changed this reading, which accords with the metre and usage of the section, so that it reads, it is the oracle of the Lord, Jehovah of hosts.

d 220 So Gk.

e 220 Again the Gk. has retained the verb required by the context.

f 221 Slightly correcting the Heb. text.

g 222 Gk., thou wilt be stained with crimes.

h 222 So Gk. The Heb. adds, Lord, but this is not supported by the metre.

i 223 Possibly I have not gone was added by a scribe.

j 223 Lit., way, but here, as frequently in the framework of the book of Kgs., it is equivalent to conduct or acts.

k 223 Gk., place where many men are burned, as in 19<sup>o</sup>, referring to the Valley of Hinnom where children were sacrificed.

l 224 Judah is here likened to a she-camel or cow driven by animal passion.

m 225 The last clause was perhaps added by a scribe, for it destroys the metre and adds nothing.

n 226 This interjected line was possibly added by a scribe, from 1<sup>18</sup>, for the sins are only those of the common people. Chap. 5 recounts the sins of the city.

o 227 An ironical reference to the ancient popular belief that spirits dwelt in trees and stones. Among the common peasants these old cults and superstitions appear to have survived.

For they have turned to me their<sup>p</sup> back, but not their faces,
Yet in the time of their trouble they say, 'Arise and save us.'

<sup>28</sup>But where are thy gods which thou hast made for thyself?
Let them arise, if they can save thee in thy time of trouble,
For thy gods are as many as thy cities, O Judah.

<sup>29</sup>Why do ye contend against me? Ye are all godless,<sup>q</sup>
Yea, ye have all transgressed against me, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>30</sup>In vain I smote your children,<sup>r</sup> they received no correction,
A sword<sup>s</sup> destroyed your prophets, like a destroying lion,
Yet ye have not feared,<sup>t</sup> nor heeded the word of Jehovah.<sup>t</sup>
Have I been a wilderness to Israel, or a land of darkness?
Why do my people say, 'We will be our own master, we will come no more to thee?'

Failure
to listen
to Jeho-
vah's teach-
ing

<sup>32</sup>Can a maiden forget her ornaments, or a bride her girdle?
Yet my people have forgotten me, days without number.

<sup>33</sup>How well thou has directed thy way to seek love!<sup>u</sup>
Therefore thou hast inclined thy ways to evil.<sup>v</sup>

In-credible infidelity

<sup>34</sup>Also on thy hands<sup>w</sup> is found the blood of innocent<sup>x</sup> persons,<sup>y</sup>
I have found it not upon house-breakers<sup>z</sup> but upon all these!

<sup>35</sup>Yet thou sayest, 'I am innocent; surely his anger is turned away from me.'
Behold, I will condemn thee because thou sayest, 'I have not sinned.'

Shame-
lessly
guilty

<sup>36</sup>Why dost thou make so light of changing thy policy?<sup>z</sup>
Through Egypt shalt thou be disgraced as thou wast through Assyria.

<sup>37</sup>Also from there shalt thou go forth with thy hands upon thy head,<sup>b</sup>
For Jehovah hath rejected those in whom thou trustest and thou shalt have no success with them.

Foreign
alliances
and
their consequences

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>27</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost the possessive pronouns.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>29</sup> Following the Gk., which has retained the balanced parallelism of the original. Because of the similarity of two words a Heb. scribe omitted a part of the vs.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>30</sup> I. e., the individual members of the nation. Cf. Mt. 12<sup>27</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>30</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has, your sword, but the context speaks of a certain definite judgment from Jehovah, and if the reference was to the slaughter of the prophets in the days of Manasseh, it would have read not your, but my prophets.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>31</sup> The Gk. has preserved at the end of <sup>30</sup> and at the beginning of <sup>31</sup> the above reading, which is in perfect keeping with the context, indeed is demanded by it. Restoring the original Heb. of the Gk., it is possible to see how, either owing to a scribal error or an imperfect text, the present corruption of the Heb. arose. Its current translation, O generation, see ye the word of Jehovah, reveals how impossible it is.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>33</sup> I. e., illicit love in connection with the heathen rites.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>33</sup> Lit., taught or accustomed to make thy ways evil.

<sup>w</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr. Heb., skirts.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>34</sup> So Gk., supported by the metre. Heb. adds poor.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>34</sup> Heb., souls.

<sup>z</sup> 2<sup>34</sup> The meaning is not altogether certain. It appears to be that not only is the criminal class stained with acts of bloodshed, but also the leaders of the nation whom the prophet indicates with a gesture.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>36</sup> Heb., way. The incidents alluded to are unknown. They may belong to the reign of Manasseh.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>37</sup> I. e., as one disappointed and disgraced. Cf. II Sam. 13<sup>19</sup>.

Res-
toration to Jeho-
vah's favor unprecedented

Un-speak-able crimes

Utter lack of true penitence

Frustra-
tion of Jehovah's
purpose

Israel's better
conscience

3 <sup>1</sup>If<sup>c</sup> a man put away his wife and she go from him,
And she become another man's wife, can she return to him<sup>d</sup> again?
Would not such a woman<sup>e</sup> be completely polluted?
Yet thou hast played the harlot with many lovers, and wouldst return to me!<sup>f</sup>

2 Lift up thine eyes to the bare heights and see; where hast thou not been lain with?
By the ways thou hast sat for them, like an Arab<sup>g</sup> in the wilderness,
And thou hast polluted the land with thine acts of whoredom and thy
crimes,

3 And through thy many lovers thou hast ensnared thyself.<sup>h</sup>

Yet thou hast a harlot's forehead, thou refusedst to blush.

4 Dost thou not even now call me father,<sup>i</sup> the friend of thy youth?

5 Should he then retain his anger forever or keep it to the end?

Behold, thus thou speakest and yet thou has committed crimes and had thy way.<sup>j</sup>

19 But I had thought, 'How I will make thee like sons,<sup>k</sup>
And will give thee a pleasant land, a noble<sup>l</sup> inheritance!'
I also had thought, 'You will call me, "Father," and will not turn away from me.'

20 But verily as a woman is faithless to her paramour,<sup>m</sup> so ye have been faithless to me, O house of Israel, is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>n</sup>

21 A voice is heard in the bare heights, the mournful cries of supplication of the Israelites.<sup>o</sup>

Because they have perverted their way, have forgotten Jehovah their God.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>c</sup> <sup>31</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has the word saying. Possibly this is a remnant of an original formula: And the word of Jehovah came to me, saying. Vss. 1-5, however, carry on the thought of the preceding chapter. Cf. 12<sup>b</sup>, 3.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>31</sup> So Gk. I. e., to the first husband. The law of Dt. 24<sup>1-4</sup> forbids it and probably formulates the customary law of Jer.'s day.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>31</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb., such a land. The latter is clearly due to a scribe who had in mind the application and possibly the law of Dt. 24<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>31</sup> A scribe has added, destroying the metre, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>32</sup> The Arabs are here evidently regarded as robbers, as in Job 24<sup>5-12</sup>, 30<sup>2-8</sup>. Israel is likened to a sacred prostitute waiting by the highways for victims. Cf. Gen. 36<sup>14</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>33</sup> Following the obviously superior reading of the Gk. and O. Lat. The Heb. has a widely variant reading, so that the rain drops are withheld and the latter rain came not. This was evidently added by a scribe who had in mind II Sam. 1<sup>a</sup>, I Kgs. 17, and Am. 4<sup>7, 8</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>31</sup> The Heb. adds, my father, but this is inconsistent with the prevailing figure and the metre.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>35</sup> Heb., been able. For <sup>6-18</sup>, which are clearly a later addition, cf. § 70.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>31</sup> I. e., give to the wife an equal position and inheritance with the sons. Cf. Job 42<sup>15</sup> and Num. 27 for the late usage. In the earlier times the daughters appear to have had no right of inheritance.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>31</sup> Restoring the text as suggested by the simpler Syr. and as demanded by the metrical structure and the style of Jer. A scribe has expanded it so that it reads, the noblest inheritance of the nations.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>320</sup> Heb., friend. Gk., turns to her friend.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>320</sup> The last clause may be a later addition, as frequently.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>321</sup> Possibly Israelites is a scribal explanatory gloss.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>321</sup> With marvellous force and delicacy the prophet here voices the better sense, the aroused conscience of the nation. Jehovah's encouraging response is found in 2<sup>2a</sup>, and in 22<sup>b-25</sup> the nation is represented as speaking the words that Jer. longed to hear, the words that alone would bring deliverance and healing. Cf. Hos. 14.

<sup>22</sup>Return, O apostate sons, and I will heal your apostasy.<sup>q</sup>

Jeho-vah's
response

'Behold we come to thee, for thou art Jehovah our God.

<sup>23</sup>Surely but a delusion are the hills, the tumult on the mountain,<sup>r</sup>
Only in Jehovah our God is Israel's salvation.

The
nation's confession of
guilt

<sup>24</sup>But Baal<sup>s</sup> has devoured from our youth the fruits of our fathers' labor.
Their flocks, their herds, their sons and their daughters.

<sup>25</sup>We would lie down in our shame and let confusion cover us,
For we and our fathers have sinned against our God<sup>t</sup> from our youth even to this day,

And we have not heeded the voice of Jehovah, our God.'<sup>u</sup>

4 <sup>1</sup>If thou wilt return, O Israel, thou mayest return<sup>v</sup> to me,<sup>w</sup>

And if thou wilt put away thy vileness,<sup>x</sup> thou shalt not be banished from my presence,

Jeho-
vah's call to full
and
complete
reform

<sup>2</sup>And thou shalt swear by the life of Jehovah,<sup>y</sup> in truth, in justice, and in righteousness,

And in him shall the nations bless themselves, and in him shall they glory.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, to the men of Judah and Jerusalem:

Break up the fallow ground and do not sow among thorns.

<sup>4</sup>Circumcise yourselves to Jehovah,<sup>a</sup> and take away the foreskins of your heart,<sup>b</sup>

Lest thy wrath go forth like a fire and burn,

And there be no quenching it because of the wickedness of your deeds.

§ 68. The Judgment Approaching from the North, Jer. 4<sup>5</sup>-6<sup>30</sup>

The foe
from
the north

Jer. 4 <sup>5</sup>Declare ye in Judah and announce in Jerusalem, and say:

<sup>6</sup>Blow ye the trumpet in the land, cry aloud,

And say, 'Assemble and let us go into the fortified cities,'

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>22</sup> Here the prophet introduces a treble play on the Heb. word, turn; Turn, O sons, that have turned (away) and I will heal your turning (away).

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>23</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The meaning is, At last we realize that all the ancient cults practised on the hilltops with noisy orgies and carousels were but empty forms. Cf. I Sam. 9<sup>11</sup>, 12, Is. 22<sup>13</sup>, 28<sup>7</sup>, Am. 5<sup>21</sup>, 22.

<sup>s</sup> 3<sup>24</sup> Heb., shame, but this is the regular late scribal substitute for Baal which they were averse to repeating. Cf. Ishboseth for Ishbaal and many similar changes. Vol. II, § 22, note <sup>i</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> 3<sup>25</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, Jehovah.

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>26</sup> This vs. has evidently been worked over by a later editor. It probably preserves, however, an original utterance of Jer.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> Again the prophet introduces his favorite play on the word turn.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds, is the oracle of Jehovah, but this is awkwardly injected into the original text.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk.

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> An indication of complete allegiance.

<sup>z</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> Cf. Gen. 22<sup>18</sup>, 26<sup>1</sup>. This thought that the heathen nations shall glory in an alliance with Israel is possibly from the later editor. It interrupts the speech of Jehovah which is concluded in <sup>3b</sup>, 4.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>3</sup> Here, as in Josh. 5<sup>9</sup>, ordinary circumcision seems to be regarded simply as a hygienic measure or else as a mark of the older Canaanite civilization. The meaning of the vs. is, thoroughly purify your hearts and consecrate yourselves to Jehovah.

<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>4</sup> The Heb. adds, men of Judah and Jerusalem, but it seems to be a later addition from <sup>3b</sup>.

§ 68 This section contains the longest of Jer.'s discourses. It best illustrates the beauty and strength of his literary style. Warning, invective, exhortation, and tender entreaty are blended with rare effectiveness. Its wealth of strong and powerful figures are equalled only by those of Hos. and Isaiah. Occasionally the poetic metre changes according to the theme, but

<sup>6</sup>Lift up a signal toward Zion, flee, stay not!
For calamity<sup>c</sup> is coming from the north and a great destruction!

Like a fierce lion

<sup>7</sup>A lion has gone up from his thicket, yea, a destroyer of nations,
He has departed, he has gone forth from his place to lay waste the earth.<sup>d</sup> <sup>8</sup>For this gird yourselves with sackcloth, lament and wail,
For the fierce anger of Jehovah is not turned away from us.

Effect
upon people of Judah

<sup>9</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day, is the oracle of Jehovah,
That the king and his princes shall lose heart.<sup>e</sup>
And the priests shall be appalled and the prophets amazed.
<sup>10</sup>Then they shall say,<sup>f</sup> "Alas, O Lord Jehovah!
Surely thou hast greatly deceived this people and Jerusalem Saying, 'Ye shall have peace.'
Whereas the sword taketh<sup>g</sup> life.<sup>h</sup>

Like a fierce whirlwind

<sup>11</sup>At that time it shall be said to this people and to Jerusalem.
A hot wind, from the bare heights in the wilderness, comes toward my
people,
Not to winnow and not to cleanse—<sup>12</sup>a strong,<sup>i</sup> powerful<sup>j</sup> wind<sup>k</sup> <sup>13</sup>See, like thunder clouds, it mounts up and like the whirlwind its chariots,
Its horses are swifter than eagles; woe to us! for we are ruined!<sup>l</sup> <sup>15</sup>For hark! someone is bringing news from Dan and announcing evil from Mount Ephraim.<sup>m</sup>

for the most part the five-beat measure impresses by its fervid, measured lilt, as powerfully as the words themselves, the prophet's earnest message.

The prophecy, as a whole, has also been remarkably well preserved. Apparently its strength and literary unity have protected it against scribal errors. The prophet's aim is to arouse the people from their heathenism and abominable practices to a sense of their responsibility to Jehovah. This sermon is the immediate sequel of the preceding, and probably comes from the year 626 B.C. The occasion is the advance of the Scythians, who are evidently the foe from the north, repeatedly referred to in these chapters.

Apparently this sermon was not committed to writing until about 604 B.C., when Jer. made the first collection of his prophecies. Then the Chaldeans were beginning to advance from the north, and the words of this earlier prophecy are equally applicable to this later situation and the new foe. It would also seem that in recording the earlier prophecies Jer. was influenced, as was natural, by this later situation. At many points one may recognize the influence of the problems, peculiar to the reign of Jehoiakim, upon the form of the later sermon. As a whole, however, it reveals the powerful appeal that Jer. made to his nation—an appeal which bore fruit in the great reformation of 621 B.C. Cf. vol. IV, pp. 31–35.

The present text has two introductions. The first is inconsistent with the fact that in <sup>6</sup> Jerusalem is the place to which the people are urged to flee. It is clearly from the later hands who added the specific references to Judah and Jerusalem in <sup>3, 4</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> The Heb. adds I, but the prophet, not Jehovah, is speaking. Cf. <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 4<sup>7</sup> Probably the Gk. has retained the original, earth, and a scribe has added, so that cities shall be left desolate without inhabitants.

<sup>e</sup> 4<sup>9</sup> Heb., the heart of the king and the heart of the princes shall perish.

<sup>f</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and a slightly corrected text. Heb., I said.

<sup>g</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> Heb., reacheth unto the life.

<sup>h</sup> 4<sup>9–11a</sup> The change of the metre from Jer.'s regular five beats to four, occasionally passing into prose, the introductory formula which is characteristic of later scribes, the specific references to Jerusalem and the lack of connection with the preceding and subsequent context strongly suggest that this passage is a later explanatory gloss. Vs. <sup>11a</sup> seems to be intended to gather up and continue the interrupted original.

<sup>i</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> Heb., full, i. e., a destructive tempest, not a beneficent wind.

<sup>j</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has been corrupted as the result of dittoigraphy so that it adds, from these.

<sup>k</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> The clause, Now I also will utter judgments against them, interrupts the dramatic description of the advent of the northern foes, who advance like storm clouds, and was evidently added, probably from a marginal gloss, by a scribe who had in mind <sup>11c</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 4<sup>13</sup> Vs. <sup>14</sup>, if original, finds its natural setting after <sup>18</sup>. Cf. note <sup>9</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 4<sup>15</sup> From distant Dan at the foot of Mt. Hermon and then from nearer Ephraim come the reports of the advance of the relentless northern invaders.

<sup>16</sup>Make it known among the nations: ‘There they are!’<sup>n</sup> Announce in Jerusalem,
Their approach

‘Robber bands<sup>o</sup> are coming from a far distant land,’

Yea, they are raising their cry against the cities of Judah,

<sup>17</sup>Lying in wait in the field, they are against her on every side, Because she hath rebelled against me, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>18</sup>Thy conduct and thy acts have procured these things for thee;
This is the cause of thy calamity, verily it is bitter, for it toucheth thy heart.

<sup>14</sup>Cleanse thy heart, O Jerusalem, from wickedness, that thou mayest be delivered.

How long shall thine evil thoughts stay within thee?<sup>p</sup>

All because of Jerusalem's guilt

<sup>19</sup>My anguish, my anguish! I am pained to the very depths of my heart.<sup>q</sup>
My heart is in a tumult within me, I cannot keep silent,

For I<sup>r</sup> have heard the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war.

<sup>20</sup>Destruction succeeds<sup>s</sup> destruction, for the whole land is laid waste, Suddenly are my tents destroyed, in an instant my curtains.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>21</sup>How long must I see the signal, hear the sound of the trumpet!

<sup>22</sup>For my people are senseless, they know me not,
They are foolish children, and they have no understanding;
They are skilled in doing evil, but they know not how to do right.<sup>u</sup>

The prophet's anguish

<sup>23</sup>I look at the earth<sup>v</sup> and behold, it is chaos,<sup>w</sup> at the heavens and their light is gone!

The universal desolation

<sup>24</sup>I look at the mountains and behold, they are quaking, and all the hills sway to and fro!

<sup>25</sup>I look and behold, there is no man, and all the birds of the heavens have fled,

<sup>26</sup>I look at the fruitful land<sup>x</sup> and behold it is a wilderness,

<sup>n</sup> 4<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk. which amplifies the curt Heb. so that it reads, Behold, they have come! These appear to be the breathless words of the messengers who come to announce the advance of the foe.

<sup>o</sup> 4<sup>16</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., watchers of the field, i. e. guardians of the vineyards. But a slight emendation gives the above rendering, which is in harmony with the context.

<sup>p</sup> 4<sup>14</sup> This vs. evidently has no place after <sup>13</sup>, for it introduces a new motif and separates <sup>13</sup> and <sup>15</sup> which stand in closest relation to each other. Like <sup>17</sup>, <sup>18</sup>, and possibly <sup>17a</sup>, it may be from a later prophetic editor who, in his zeal to make the practical spiritual application of Jer.'s sermon, failed to appreciate its aim, which was solemn warning in the face of a great danger. He again addresses Jerusalem rather than the nation to whom Jeremiah was speaking. The charge also is very general; evil thoughts are nowhere referred to by Jer. in this connection.

<sup>q</sup> 4<sup>19</sup> Heb., lit., my vitals, my vitals! I am in pain; O the walls of my heart! The line is expressive of the prophet's excitement and agony at the prospect of the awful fate threatening his beloved nation.

<sup>r</sup> 4<sup>19</sup> Heb., my soul. Possibly this word is secondary.

<sup>s</sup> 4<sup>20</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., which reads, is proclaimed.

<sup>t</sup> 4<sup>20</sup> The prophet here speaks in behalf of the nation, using a figure drawn from its early nomadic life.

<sup>u</sup> 4<sup>22</sup> This vs. may be from the same prophetic editor who added the preceding didactic passages. It assumes a different point of view from that of the preceding vss. and anticipates <sup>5<sup>21</sup></sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>23</sup> The prophet here dramatically contrasts the preceding peace and prosperity as he looked forth from his home at Anathoth with the vision of disorder and chaos introduced by the appearance of the Scythians.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>23</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. a scribe has expanded to read, waste and devastate, after Gen.1<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>26</sup> Following the order of the Gk.

And all the cities are destroyed before Jehovah, before his fierce wrath.<sup>y</sup>
<sup>27</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, the whole land shall be desolate;<sup>z</sup>
<sup>28</sup>Because of this the land shall mourn, and the heavens above be black,
 For I have spoken and repent not,<sup>a</sup> I have purposed and I will not turn back from it.<sup>b</sup> <sup>29</sup>From the noise of the horsemen and bowmen the whole land<sup>c</sup> is fleeing,
 They enter the thickets and caves<sup>d</sup> and climb up on the rocks;
 Every city is abandoned and no man dwells therein.

Ju-
dah's pitiable
fate

<sup>30</sup>And thou art a ruined woman,<sup>e</sup> what wilt thou do?
 Though thou clothe thyself with scarlet, though thou deckest thyself with ornaments of gold,
 Though thou enlargest thine eyes with paint,<sup>f</sup> in vain dost thou beautify thyself;
 Thy paramours despise thee, they seek thy life.
<sup>31</sup>For I have heard a cry as of a woman in travail, shrieking<sup>g</sup> as of one bringing forth her first child.
 Hark! the daughter of Zion gasps, she spreads out her hands;<sup>h</sup>
 'O woe is me, for my life is given up as a prey to murderers!'

Cor-
rup-
tion everywhere

<sup>5</sup> <sup>1</sup>Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem and see now and know,
 And seek in its open spaces, if ye can find a man,
 If there is any who does right and seeks after the truth!<sup>i</sup>
<sup>2</sup>And though they say, 'As Jehovah liveth,' surely they swear to a falsehood.
<sup>3</sup>O Jehovah, do not thine eyes look upon truth?
 Thou smitest them, but they are not pained,<sup>j</sup> they refuse to receive correction.

High
and low alike

<sup>4</sup>Then I thought, 'Surely these are the common people,<sup>k</sup> they are without understanding,
 For they know not the way of Jehovah, and the law of their God, <sup>5</sup>Therefore I will go to the nobles and speak to them,

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>26</sup> Possibly this line is an explanatory gloss.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>27</sup> A scribe has added, to mitigate the harshness of the sentence, But I will not make a complete end.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>28</sup> Following the superior order of the Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>27, 28</sup> The different point of view and theme suggest that possibly these vss. are later additions.

<sup>c</sup> 4<sup>29</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. for land, referring to the inhabitants as frequently, city has been substituted. The error is common because of the similarity of the Heb. words.

<sup>d</sup> 4<sup>29</sup> The Gk. adds, they enter into the caves. It has probably preserved words lost in the Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 4<sup>30</sup> Joining the last word of <sup>29</sup> to <sup>30</sup> and making a slight correction.

<sup>f</sup> 4<sup>30</sup> I. e., painting black lines about the eyes with stibium in order to make them look larger.

<sup>g</sup> 4<sup>31</sup> So Gk.

<sup>h</sup> 4<sup>31</sup> The Heb. contains a suggestion of a prayer for help which it is impossible to reproduce in Eng.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> A scribe has added in the Heb., And I will pardon her, which the Gk. expands by adding, said Jehovah. Like many similar additions, it assumes that Jehovah is speaking directly and also disregards the context.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> The Heb. adds, thou hast consumed them, but this is too strong a verb for the context and is not supported by the metre. It is probably a scribal variation of the initial verb.

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> Lit., the dependent, the uneducated laboring classes.

For they know the way of Jehovah and the law<sup>l</sup> of their God.
But these have all broken the yoke and burst the bonds.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Therefore a lion from the forest shall slay them, a wolf of the evening,<sup>n</sup>
A leopard shall destroy them, lying in wait against their cities.
Every one who goeth out from them shall be torn in pieces,
For many are their transgressions, numerous are their acts of apostasy.

Their
punishment

<sup>7</sup>How then can I pardon thee?<sup>o</sup>
Thy children have forsaken me and sworn<sup>p</sup> by those who are no gods;
Though I fed them to the full, they committed adultery and made themselves at home<sup>q</sup> at harlots' houses.
<sup>8</sup>Well-fed<sup>r</sup> horses, they are inflamed with lust. Each neighs after his neighbor's wife.
<sup>9</sup>Shall I not visit these with punishment? is the oracle of Jehovah,
And shall I not myself<sup>s</sup> be avenged on such a nation as this?

Judah's
guilt
precludes
pardon

<sup>10</sup>Go ye up against her outposts and destroy;<sup>t</sup>
Take away her branches, for they are not Jehovah's.<sup>u</sup> <sup>11</sup>For they have dealt very treacherously with me, is the oracle of Jehovah.
<sup>12</sup>They have denied Jehovah and said, It is not he;<sup>v</sup> Evil shall not come upon us, neither shall we see sword nor famine.
<sup>13a</sup>But the prophets shall become wind, having no word in them.<sup>w</sup>
<sup>14</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, the God of hosts:
Because they<sup>x</sup> speak this word, <sup>13b</sup>thus shall it be done to them:
<sup>14b</sup>Behold I will make my words in thy mouth fire,
And this people wood, and it shall devour them.

The
divine
con-dem-
nation

<sup>15</sup>See, I am bringing a nation upon you from afar,<sup>y</sup>
It is a mighty nation; it is an ancient nation;
A nation whose language thou knowest not, nor canst thou understand what they say.

The greedy
invaders

<sup>1</sup> 55 Heb., judgment. As in Ex. 21<sup>1ff.</sup>, it refers collectively to the regulations laid down especially for the guidance of the civil and humanitarian life of the people.

<sup>m</sup> 56 Cf. 2<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 56 Cf. 47, 10 for the same figures in description of the ravenous foe approaching.

<sup>o</sup> 57 This line is metrically incomplete. Possibly the phrase, said Jehovah, has been lost.

<sup>p</sup> 57 The Heb. contains a play on the words shaba, to swear, and saba, to be sated. The original may have read, they sated themselves.

<sup>q</sup> 57 Gk., sojourned. The Heb. is ordinarily translated, gathered in bands.

<sup>r</sup> 58 This adjective is lacking in the Gk. and is not supported by the metre.

<sup>s</sup> 58 Heb., my soul. This vs. recurs as a refrain in 2<sup>9</sup> and 9<sup>1</sup>. It may be secondary here.

<sup>t</sup> 59 As in 4<sup>27</sup> and 5<sup>18</sup> the words, but not make a complete end, are probably secondary.

<sup>u</sup> 510 A scribe has added, to make the antecedent of the verb explicit, the house of Israel and the house of Judah.

<sup>v</sup> 512 Gk., These things are not so.

<sup>w</sup> 513 So. Gk. In the Heb. a scribe has added, Thus shall it be done to them, but this has no parallel and adds nothing to the thought of the vs. On the other hand, it finds its true setting after 14<sup>a</sup>, from which place it has probably been transferred through a scribal error. Possibly the scribe originally omitted it because he thought this clause beginning with Thus was a repetition of 14<sup>a</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 514 Changing the ye of the Heb. to they, as demanded by the context.

<sup>y</sup> 515 The Heb. adds the secondary clause, O house of Israel, is the oracle of Jehovah. Cf. 10.

<sup>16</sup>Their quiver is an open sepulchre;<sup>z</sup> they are all mighty warriors;

<sup>17</sup>And they shall eat up<sup>a</sup> thy harvest,<sup>b</sup> thy bread, thy flocks and thy herds.
They shall eat up thy vines and thine olives<sup>c</sup> and thy fig-trees,
They shall beat down<sup>d</sup> thy fortified cities in which thou trusted.<sup>e</sup>

Just
reti-bution

<sup>19</sup>And it shall be thus, when they shall say, ‘Why is it
That Jehovah our God hath done all these things to us?’
Thou shalt say to them, As ye have forsaken me,
And served alien gods in your land,
So shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.<sup>f</sup>

Not a spark of true repent-
ance

<sup>21</sup>Hear this now, O people, foolish and without understanding,
Who have eyes and see not, and ears but hear not:
<sup>22</sup>Will ye not fear me<sup>g</sup> or tremble at my presence?<sup>h</sup>
<sup>23</sup>But this people have a stubborn and defiant heart,<sup>i</sup>
<sup>24</sup>For they do not say in their heart, ‘Let us fear Jehovah our God.
Who gives the rain, both the early rain and the later rain in its season,<sup>j</sup>
Who reserves for us the weeks appointed for harvest.

<sup>25</sup>Our crimes have destroyed this order and our sins have taken from us that which is good.<sup>k</sup>

Only
injustice and corruption

<sup>26</sup>For among my people are found wicked men.
They set snares, with traps they catch men,<sup>l</sup>

* 5<sup>16</sup> Gk. omits the first part of this vs. Its meaning, however, is clear: the dread Scythians by their destructive warfare bring death to all whom they attack.

<sup>a</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> Following the superior Gk. and Arab.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> A scribe, having in mind 3<sup>24</sup>, has added the incongruous clause, They shall eat up thy sons and thy daughters. Heb. also repeats the verb.

<sup>c</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> So Gk., Heb. has lost, and thine olives.

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> Or, revising the Heb., take possession of.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> A scribe has apparently added, by the sword. Its position at the end of the sentence and the fact that it destroys the metre of the vs. support the conclusion that it is a scribal expansion. To this has been added vs. 18, which is obviously a later supplement like 3<sup>16</sup>. It reads: But even in those days, is Jehovah's oracle, I will not make a full end.

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>19</sup> The metrical structure of this vs. is irregular. Its thought and loose connection with the context suggest that it may be from a later editor or else was added by Jeremiah when he dictated his earlier prophecies to Baruch in the reign of Jehoiakim. Many of the vss. in the latter part of this chap. fit best the later point of view. Vs. 20 certainly belongs to this class. It reads,

*Declare this in the house of Jacob,
And announce it in Judah, saying.*

<sup>g</sup> 5<sup>22</sup> Heb. adds, It is the oracle of Jehovah; but this interrupts the thought and destroys the metrical structure of the line.

<sup>h</sup> 5<sup>22</sup> The four following three-beat lines, like the very similar refrains in Am. 4<sup>13</sup>, 5<sup>8</sup>, 9<sup>5</sup>, 6 (Cf. §§ 6, 7, 13), interrupt Jeremiah's direct discourse and are uttered from the point of view of the author of Is. 40–55 and the post-exilic Pss. They read:

*I who have placed the sand as a bound for the sea,
As an everlasting barrier over which it cannot pass;
Though it toss itself it cannot prevail,
And though its waves roar they cannot pass over it.*

Vs. 23 is also the immediate sequel to 2<sup>2a</sup>, completing the parallelism of the vs.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>23</sup> A scribe has added the comment They have turned and gone. It breaks, however, the close poetic parallelism of the vs.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>24</sup> By many this and the next two lines are regarded as secondary, but the evidence is not conclusive.

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>25</sup> Lit., turned away these things, i. e., the regular succession of the harvests. Cf. chap. 14, § 81, for the same idea.

<sup>l</sup> 5<sup>26</sup> The Heb. text is clearly corrupt. The reconstruction of this difficult vs. is made with the aid of the Gk. and O. Lat.

<sup>27</sup>As a cage full of birds, so their houses are full of deceit, Therefore they have become great and rich, <sup>28</sup>they have grown fat.
They plan wicked things and succeed;<sup>m</sup> they violate justice;
The cause of the fatherless and the rights of the needy<sup>n</sup> they do not defend.
<sup>29</sup>Shall I not punish such as these? is Jehovah's oracle,
Or on such a nation as this shall not I be avenged?

<sup>30</sup>Frightful and horrible things have taken place in the land.

<sup>31</sup>The prophets prophesy falsely,
And the priests teach<sup>o</sup> according to their directions,<sup>p</sup>
And my people love to have it so;
But what will ye do at the end<sup>q</sup> thereof?

Even
the spiritual guides
mislead

<sup>31</sup>Flee for safety, ye children of Benjamin, out of themidst of Jerusalem,
And blow<sup>r</sup> the trumpet and raise up a signal on Beth-haccherem;
For evil looks forth from the north and great destruction.

Jerusa-
lem's hour
of doom at hand

<sup>2</sup>The comely and pampered one, the daughter of Zion! her height shall be destroyed;<sup>s</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Shepherds shall come to her with their flocks;
They shall pitch their tents round about her, they shall feed<sup>t</sup> each in his place.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Prepare<sup>v</sup> war against her; arise, and let us go up at noon.
Woe to us! for the day declines, for the shadows<sup>w</sup> are lengthening.
<sup>5</sup>Arise, and let us go by night, and let us destroy her foundations!<sup>x</sup>

Preparations
of the foe

<sup>6</sup>For thus hath Jehovah of hosts said:

Hew down trees and cast up a mound against Jerusalem.

This is the faithless<sup>y</sup> city; there is only oppression in her midst.

<sup>7</sup>As a fountain keepeth fresh its waters, so she keepeth fresh her wickedness;
Acts of violence and oppression are heard in her;

Jeho-
vah's agents
of judgment
upon
the guilty
city

<sup>m</sup> 5<sup>28</sup> Following a reconstruction suggested by Brown (Bk. of Jer., 69). These words, distributed through the Heb., are not found in the Gk. The remaining text (so Gk.) is consistent in thought and metre.

<sup>n</sup> 5<sup>28</sup> Or Gk., widow.

<sup>o</sup> 5<sup>31</sup> Revising the Heb. as the context and the parallel in Mi. 3<sup>11</sup> and Mal. 2<sup>6</sup>. 7 suggests. The primary duty of the pre-exilic priests was to teach.

<sup>p</sup> 5<sup>31</sup> Lit., at their hands, i. e., as the prophets direct.

<sup>q</sup> 5<sup>31</sup> I. e., Jehovah's judgment instead of the fulfilment of your false hopes.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds, in Tekoa. Tekoa was in the south and the enemy is advancing from the north. The word is probably due to dittography, since it is practically identical with the following word.

<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> Gk., thy height shall be destroyed; Heb., I have likened. The text in both versions has evidently suffered in transmission, but with the aid of both and the indications of the metre it can be tentatively restored. Others read, Is it a refreshing pasture—the height of the daughter of Zion?

<sup>t</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Like shepherds, the Scythians shall devastate all the surrounding country, and then they shall advance against Jerusalem.

<sup>u</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> Or, each according to his might.

<sup>v</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> Heb., consecrate. The prophet graphically assumes the point of view of the invaders.

<sup>w</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> Heb., shadows of evening; Gk., shadows of day. The simple shadows best satisfies the metre. The idea is, the time for a mid-day attack is past but let us now wait until the return of another day.

<sup>x</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb., palaces.

<sup>y</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., to be visited, but this is evidently due to a scribal error.

Before me continually are wounds<sup>z</sup> and blows.

<sup>8</sup>Receive instruction, O Jerusalem, lest I be alienated from thee;
Lest I make thee a desolation, an uninhabited land.

<sup>9</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:

Glean thoroughly,<sup>a</sup> as a vine, the remnant of Israel,
Put forth again your hand as a grape-gatherer toward the young vines.

Utter
degeneracy of the
people

<sup>10</sup>To whom shall I speak and testify that they may hear?

Behold, their ear is uncircumcised and they cannot hearken;

Behold, the word of Jehovah has become to them a reproach, they have no pleasure in it.

<sup>11</sup>Therefore I am full of the wrath of Jehovah; I am weary of restraining myself.

I must pour it out upon the children<sup>b</sup> in the street and upon the assembly of young men,

For both the husband and the wife shall be taken, the aged and him that is advanced in years.

<sup>12</sup>And their houses shall be turned over to others, their fields<sup>c</sup> to robbers;<sup>d</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For from the least even to the greatest of them, each greedily robs,
And from the prophet even to the priest each deals deceitfully.

Of priest
and prophet

<sup>14</sup>They have also healed the hurt of my people as though it were slight,
Saying, Peace,<sup>e</sup> peace, when there is no peace.

<sup>15</sup>Were they ashamed when they had committed an abominable act ?

Nay, they were not at all ashamed nor did they know enough to blush.
Therefore they shall fall among those who fall,<sup>f</sup>

At the time that I visit them they shall fall down, saith Jehovah.

Deaf to Jeho-
vah's warn-
ing

<sup>16</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Stand ye in the ways,

And see, and ask for my paths, the paths of the past,<sup>g</sup>

And see<sup>h</sup> where is the good way and walk therein,

Thus ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, 'We will not go.'

<sup>17</sup>And I set watchmen over them<sup>i</sup> with the command, 'Hark for the sound of the trumpet.'

But they said, 'We will not hearken.'

<sup>z</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Heb., lit., sickness.

<sup>a</sup> 6<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., Let them glean.

<sup>b</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> Righteous indignation has so taken possession of the prophet that he can hardly restrain himself from pouring it out upon even the innocent infants on the street.

<sup>c</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> Restoring the text as the context suggests and the parallel in 8<sup>10</sup> supports. Heb., fields and wives together.

<sup>d</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> The line, For I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith Jehovah, is evidently an addition for it is not from the point of view of the rest of the passage, where the prophet is the speaker. Its thought also makes an anti-climax. Furthermore it is not found in 8<sup>1-12</sup>, where these vss. are repeated.

<sup>e</sup> 6<sup>14</sup> Lit., It is well.

<sup>f</sup> 6<sup>15c,d</sup> These lines are in an irregular metre and anticipate the judgment pronounced in 16<sup>17</sup>, so that possibly they are secondary. They are repeated, however, in 8<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 6<sup>16</sup> Reconstructing with the aid of the Gk. The reference is evidently to the past experiencies of the nation and the lessons that these taught.

<sup>h</sup> 6<sup>16</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost, and see.

<sup>i</sup> 6<sup>17</sup> So the demands of the context. A scribe, influenced by 16, has written you for them.

<sup>18</sup>Therefore hear, ye nations, and the shepherds of their flocks.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Behold,<sup>k</sup> I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their apostasy,<sup>l</sup>
Because they have not heeded my words, and my instruction—even that they have rejected.

<sup>20</sup>Why then does incense from Sheba come to me, and the sweet cane from a far country?

Your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices pleasing to me.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: Behold, I will lay stumbling-blocks before this people;

And the fathers and the sons both shall stumble against them;

The neighbor and his fellow shall perish.

The inevitable
consequences

<sup>22</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: Behold a people is coming from the north land,
And a great nation is arousing itself from the uttermost parts of the earth.

The
advancing agents
of judgment

<sup>23</sup>They lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel and merciless;
Their din is like the roaring of the sea, and they ride upon horses;
Everyone is arrayed against thee, as a man for battle, O daughter of Zion.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>24</sup>We have heard the report of it; our hands become feeble;
Anguish takes hold of us, pangs as of a woman in travail.

Effect
upon
the people
of
Judah

<sup>25</sup>Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the highway,
For there is the sword of the enemy, terror on every side.

<sup>26</sup>O my people,<sup>o</sup> gird thee with sackcloth, and sprinkle thyself with ashes;
Take up mourning as for an only son, bitter lamentation;
For the destroyer shall suddenly come upon us.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>27</sup>I have made thee a tester<sup>q</sup> of metal<sup>r</sup> among my people that thou mayest know and test their way,

Tested,
they are found worth-
less

<sup>28</sup>For they are all refractory, going about with slanders;
They are all of them brass and iron;<sup>s</sup> they are thoroughly corrupt.

<sup>29</sup>The bellows blow fiercely, only the lead is consumed<sup>t</sup> by the fire;
In vain does the smelter go on smelting, for the base elements are not taken away;

<sup>30</sup>Refuse silver they shall be called,<sup>u</sup> because Jehovah hath rejected them.

<sup>j</sup> 6<sup>18</sup> Following the Gk. which is clearly superior to the corrupt and meaningless Heb. The shepherds are, of course, the leaders of the nations.

<sup>k</sup> 6<sup>19</sup> The Heb. adds, Hear, O earth. Possibly this is to be retained as original and both <sup>18</sup> and <sup>20</sup> regarded as secondary. The metre is irregular, the ideas may well be later, and their connection with the context is not clear.

<sup>l</sup> 6<sup>19</sup> So Gk. A Heb. scribe has evidently mistaken the original for the similar word, thoughts.

<sup>m</sup> 6<sup>20</sup> This line and the next verse have certain phrases and ideas suggestive of a later hand.

<sup>n</sup> 6<sup>23</sup> This vs. is repeated with slight textual errors in 50<sup>11-43</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 6<sup>26</sup> Heb., Daughter of my people.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>26</sup> This last line is perhaps secondary.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>27</sup> Interpreting the Heb. consistently with the demands of the context. The meaning is that the prophet is appointed to be the one to determine the moral quality of his people.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>27</sup> Omitting a word in the Heb. which is probably due to dittoigraphy. The text of the vs. is uncertain.

<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>28</sup> I. e., are of base metal.

<sup>t</sup> 6<sup>29</sup> Following the marginal reading of the Heb.

<sup>u</sup> 6<sup>30</sup> Heb., they shall call them.

§ 69. Later Tradition Regarding Jeremiah's Part in the Deuteronomic Reformation, Jer. 11<sup>1-8</sup>

Command to em-pha-size
the impor-tance
of the law

To preach throughout
Judah

Jer. 11. <sup>1</sup>This word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah: <sup>2</sup>Speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem; <sup>3</sup>and say thou to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah the God of Israel: <sup>2a</sup>'Hear ye the words of this covenant: <sup>3b</sup>Cursed be the man who heareth not the words of this covenant,<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the iron furnace,<sup>w</sup> saying, Obey my voice, and do<sup>x</sup> all which I commanded you; so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God; <sup>5</sup>that I may establish the oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey,<sup>y</sup> as at this day.'"<sup>z</sup> Then I answered, and said, Amen, O Jehovah.

<sup>e</sup>Jehovah also said to me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, 'Hear ye the words of this covenant, and do them. <sup>f</sup>For I solemnly adjured your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, even to this day, saying, "Obey my voice." <sup>g</sup>Yet they obeyed not, but walked in the stubbornness of their evil heart. Therefore I brought upon them all the words of this evil covenant, which I commanded them to do,<sup>s</sup> but they did them not.'

§ 70. Call to the Scattered Remnants of Northern Israel, Jer. 3<sup>6-16</sup>

The
apostasy
of Israel
and
Judah

Jer. 3 <sup>6</sup>Jehovah said to me in the days of Josiah the king. Hast thou seen what apostate Israel hath done? She hath gone upon every high mountain, and under every leafy tree, and hath played the harlot. <sup>7</sup>And I said, 'After she hath done all these things, she will return to me.' But she § 69 Jer.'s relations to the Deuteronomic reformation is one of the problems of this period. The present section purports to solve it beyond doubt. It makes the prophet a zealous champion of the terms of the covenant contained in Josiah's law-book. It is evidently later tradition's answer to this fundamental question. That the section is not from the lips of Jer. is shown by the literary style which is far inferior to that of the great prophet and by the peculiar phrases and idioms, most of which are taken from the book of Dt. itself. The emphasis on keeping the written law is very different from Jer.'s teachings. In 3<sup>10</sup> he declares very definitely, in speaking of the reformation of Josiah, that Judah did not return to me with all her heart, but only feignedly. In 8<sup>8</sup> he also denounces those who declare, we are wise and the law of Jehovah is with us, but behold, the deceptive pen of the scribes hath rendered it deceptive. From such a clear statement as this it is evident that Jer. was by no means satisfied with the work of those who endeavored to present the whole duty of the nation and individual in the form of written laws. The Deuteronomic law embodied many of the principles which Jer. and his predecessors had enunciated. Its humane and philanthropic laws marked a great advance over preceding legislation. Jer. was also in hearty accord with its endeavors to counteract the then influences of the reactionary reign of Manasseh. But in simply emphasizing the formal and ritualistic side of religion, the reformers fell far short of the prophet's demand. The inevitable reaction which followed the iconoclastic reforms of Josiah brought back the old evils and left the heart of the nation to which Jer. sought to appeal practically untouched.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> Cf. the formula of cursing in Dt. 27<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> Cf. for this figure, Dt. 4<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds the awkward phrase, them according to.

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Cf. for the same formula, Dt. 27<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 11<sup>7, 8</sup> The Gk. omits these vss. except the last sentence. It is possible that the fuller Heb. text is due to the late scribe who expanded it elsewhere, for the Gk. is complete in structure. § 70 It has long been recognized by scholars that these vss. interrupt the close sequence between <sup>2</sup> and <sup>19</sup>. With the exception of 12b, 17, which may possibly be a part of the original discourse, they lack the regular five-beat measure which characterizes the impassioned reform sermon found in 2<sup>2-4</sup>. Their theme, also, is fundamentally different. The reform sermon is addressed to Judah, which is also designated by the title Israel; but in 6-16 Israel is the title of the northern kingdom which is here contrasted with Judah.

The promises in this section are closely parallel to those found in 31<sup>2-22</sup>. It is evident that they have been inserted in their present context by a later hand. The question remains whether they are wholly or only in part from Jer. By some modern scholars their Jeremian authorship is wholly denied. There is a strong probability, however, that the main ideas contained in this section are from the great prophet of Anathoth. His keen interest in Northern Israel is, perhaps, due to the fact that his birthplace was in the territory of Benjamin. He was also probably a descendant of the house of Eli, whose traditions were bound up with those of the north. Jer., of all the O. T. prophets, alludes to the destruction of the famous sanctuary of Shiloh. Moreover, he was a spiritual disciple of Hos. whose interests were closely bound up with those of the northern kingdom. In an undisputed passage, 7<sup>12</sup>, he includes both Israel and Judah in his denunciations. The narrative of Kgs. clearly implies that Josiah had extended his career of influence over Northern Israel, at least as far as the plain of Esdraelon. This was possible because did not return and her faithless sister Judah saw it. <sup>8</sup>And although she saw<sup>a</sup> that, because apostate Israel had committed adultery, I had put her away and given her a bill of divorce,<sup>b</sup> yet faithless Judah, her sister, feared not; but she also went and played the harlot. <sup>9</sup>And because of the ill-fame of her whoredoms,<sup>c</sup> she polluted the land and committed adultery with stones and trees.<sup>d</sup> <sup>10</sup>Notwithstanding all this her treacherous sister did not return to me with all her heart but only feignedly.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, Apostate Israel hath shown herself more righteous than treacherous Judah. <sup>12</sup>Go and proclaim these words toward the north, and thou shalt say:

'Return, O apostate<sup>f</sup> Israel, to me,<sup>g</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah.
I will not continue to look in anger upon you,<sup>h</sup> for I am merciful,<sup>i</sup>
And<sup>j</sup> I will not retain my anger forever; <sup>13</sup>only acknowledge thy guilt,
For against Jehovah thy God hast thou transgressed;
And thou hast strayed hither and thither in quest of strangers<sup>k</sup> under every leafy tree;
But thou hast not heeded my voice, is the oracle of Jehovah.'

Promise of forgiveness to Northern
Israel
if the people
repent

<sup>14</sup>Return, O apostate children, is the oracle of Jehovah, for it is I who am your husband, and I will take you, one from a city and two from a family, and I will bring you to Zion. <sup>15</sup>And I will give you shepherds after mine own heart, who shall feed you with knowledge and understanding.

<sup>16</sup>And it shall come to pass when you shall be numerous and fruitful in the land in those days, is the oracle of Jehovah, they shall say no more, 'The ark of the covenant' of Jehovah,' neither shall it come to mind, nor shall they remember it, nor shall they miss it, nor shall it be made again. <sup>17</sup>At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of Jehovah, and all

Res-
toration
under native
rulers

Jeho-
vah's rule
over all mankind

Assyr. rule was at last being relaxed. This conclusion alone explains why Josiah fought his last fatal battle with the Egyptian king, Necho, on the plain of Megiddo, in the central part of Northern Israel. The account in Jer. 41<sup>4</sup>, <sup>s</sup> of the pilgrims who came from Northern Israel to worship even at the ruined altar at Jerusalem points back to the days of Josiah, when the old bond between the north and the south was in part, at least, re-established.

The latter part of Josiah's reign, therefore, when his rule had been established in the north, furnishes the most satisfactory background for the predictions found in this and the following sections. In Ezek. 16<sup>53</sup>, 36<sup>10</sup>, and 37<sup>16</sup>, the priest-prophet of the exile expresses a similar conviction that Northern Israel was more guilty than Judah. As Cornell has noted, Ezek. asserts this conviction as an already established dogma, and this doctrine probably goes back to the present passage from the utterances of Jer. In <sup>8</sup> Jer. states clearly the reason for this conclusion; it is because Judah had persisted in her gross apostasy, even though she had before her the terrible consequences of Northern Israel's similar crimes.

In 14-18 the point of view is that of Jerusalem and the post-exilic period, and the hopes are those which were held before the scattered exiles by the later prophets, so that the passage, as a whole, is clearly a later addition to Jer.'s original prophecy.

<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> So Syr. and one MS. Heb., I saw.

<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Cf. Dt. 24<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb., and it came to pass through the lightness of her whoredoms.

<sup>d</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> The reference is to the heathen cults and to the worship of sacred stones and trees.

Cf. 2<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>10</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> The original Heb. contains a striking paranomasia, shubah mashubih, which it is difficult to reproduce in English: turn thou who hast turned (away).

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost the to me.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Heb. cause my countenance to fall toward you. Cf. Gen. 4<sup>6</sup>, when Cain's countenance fell.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. a later scribe has added, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost the and.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>13</sup> Heb., thou hast scattered thy ways for strangers, but the English has not adopted this idiom.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> The ark disappears early from Israelitish history. It certainly did not survive the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C., if it was then still in existence. In II Mac. 2<sup>4-7</sup> there is a very late tradition that it was hidden on Mt. Nebo.

the nations shall be gathered together to it,<sup>m</sup> and they shall no longer walk after the stubbornness of their evil heart. <sup>n</sup>In those days the house of Judah shall go to the house of Israel,<sup>n</sup> and they shall come together out of the land of the north<sup>o</sup> to the land that I gave as an inheritance to their fathers.

§ 71. Pardon and Restoration of the Northern Israelites, Jer. 31<sup>2-30</sup>

Jer. 31 <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:

Grace<sup>p</sup> found in the wilderness a people who had escaped from the sword, When Israel<sup>q</sup> went to seek a place of rest,<sup>r</sup> <sup>3</sup>Jehovah appeared from afar to him.<sup>s</sup>

Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with love have I drawn thee.

<sup>4</sup>I will<sup>t</sup> again build thee up and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel; Again shalt thou be adorned with the tambourines and shalt go forth in the merry dances.

<sup>5</sup>Again shalt thou plant vineyards upon the mountains of Samaria:

The planters shall plant and shall enjoy its fruit,<sup>u</sup>

<sup>6</sup>For there shall be a day that the watchman upon the hills of Ephraim shall cry,

'Arise and let us make a pilgrimage to Zion to Jehovah our God.'<sup>v</sup>

Jehovah's care for Israel in the past

Restoration of the ancient joys

Gathering and restoration of the scattered exiles

<sup>7</sup>For thus saith Jehovah to Jacob,<sup>w</sup> Rejoice and exult on the top of the mountains,<sup>x</sup> Publish ye, praise ye and say: 'O Jehovah, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.' <sup>y</sup>Behold, I will bring them from the north country, And gather them from the uttermost parts of the earth, Among them the blind and the lame, The woman with child<sup>z</sup> and her that travaileth with child together;

<sup>m</sup> 31<sup>7</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb. the explanatory gloss, to the name of Jehovah, to Jerusalem.

<sup>n</sup> 31<sup>8</sup> I. e., to lead them back. The house of Judah clearly refers to the exiles in Babylonia and possibly also to the Jews in Galilee.

<sup>o</sup> 31<sup>9</sup> The Gk. adds, and from other places.

§ 71 The reasons for classifying the original prophecies of this section as Jer. and for assigning them to the latter part of the reign of Josiah, 620-609 B.C., have already been given in the preceding section. The metre is also the five-beat measure which is prevailingly, if not always, used by Jer. Vss. 7-15<sup>a</sup>, however, are in the very different three-beat measure, break the close connection between <sup>6</sup> and 15<sup>b</sup>, and in thought and form have all the characteristics of the later post-exilic period. They must therefore be regarded as expansions of Jer.'s preceding predictions.

The sympathetic picture of the deep-seated sorrow of the Northern Israelites and the promises of divine favor and restoration reflect the spirit of Hos. and the warm heart of Jer. These sections are of peculiar significance because they reveal the breadth and depth of Jer.'s interests.

<sup>p</sup> 31<sup>2</sup> The meaning of this vs. is not absolutely certain. The grace is apparently Jehovah's favor shown to his people at the exodus and later.

<sup>q</sup> 31<sup>2</sup> Possibly a scribe has added this to make the meaning clear.

<sup>r</sup> 31<sup>2</sup> The reference is to the exodus and the quest for a home in Canaan.

<sup>s</sup> 31<sup>3</sup> So Gk., him, i. e., the nation. Heb., to me. The reference would appear to be to the revelation at Sinai.

<sup>t</sup> 31<sup>4</sup> With the change of tense comes the application to Israel's present condition.

<sup>u</sup> 31<sup>5</sup> Supplying the object demanded by the context and the structure of the vss.

<sup>v</sup> 31<sup>6</sup> This vs. may be a later addition, for it places an emphasis on worshipping Jehovah at Jerusalem that was contrary to Jer.'s teaching elsewhere. It may, however, reflect the usage in Jer.'s day. Cf. 4<sup>4-7</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 31<sup>7</sup> Following the superior order of the Gk.

<sup>x</sup> 31<sup>7</sup> Heb., peoples, but this is in all probability a scribal error for mountains, as in Is.

42<sup>11</sup>. Cf. 7<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 31<sup>8</sup> Gk. omits, the woman with child.

A great company shall they return hither;
<sup>a</sup>They shall go forth<sup>b</sup> with weeping;
 And with comforting words<sup>c</sup> will I lead them,
 I will bring them to streams of water,
 In a level way in which they shall not stumble:
 For I am a father to Israel,
 And Ephraim—he is my first-born.
<sup>d</sup>Hear the word of Jehovah, O ye nations,
 And declare it in the isles most distant,
 And say, ‘He who scattered Israel will gather him.
 And keep him as a shepherd his flock,
<sup>e</sup>For Jehovah hath ransomed Jacob,
 And redeemed him from the hand of one stronger than he.

<sup>f</sup>Then they shall come and sing in the height of Zion,
 And shall rejoice<sup>g</sup> over the goodness of Jehovah,
 Over the grain and over the new wine and over the oil,
 And over the young of the flock and of the herd;
 And their soul shall be as a watered garden;
 And they shall not sorrow any more at all.
<sup>h</sup>Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance,
 And the young and the old men shall be joyful<sup>i</sup> together;
 For I will turn their mourning into joy,
 And will comfort them, and fill them with joy instead of sorrow.
<sup>j</sup>And I will satiate the souls of the priests with fatness,
 And my people shall be satisfied with my goodness.<sup>k</sup>
<sup>l</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>m</sup>

A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her children; she refuseth to be comforted<sup>n</sup> because they are no more.

Joy of the restored
people

Present grief for the
exiles

<sup>o</sup>Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears;<sup>g</sup>
 For thy work shall be rewarded,<sup>h</sup> and they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

Jeho-
vah's
assurances
of forgive-ness
and love

<sup>i</sup>And there is hope for thy latter end,<sup>i</sup> and thy children shall return.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>k</sup>I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus:

‘Thou hast chastened me and I was chastised; I was<sup>k</sup> as a calf untaught.
 Let me return and I will return, since thou art Jehovah my God.

<sup>l</sup>For having been instructed, I repent,<sup>l</sup> I smite upon my breast;<sup>m</sup>
 I am ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I bear the reproach of my youth.’

<sup>n</sup>Is not Ephraim my dear son? Is he not a darling child, <sup>x</sup> 31<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., They shall come in.

<sup>a</sup> 31<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb., supplications.

<sup>b</sup> 31<sup>12</sup> The usual meaning of the verb is, flow over.

<sup>c</sup> 31<sup>13</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has lost the verb.

<sup>d</sup> 31<sup>14</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>e</sup> 31<sup>15</sup> This clause was apparently added by a scribe to connect the later addition with the original passage which continues <sup>f</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 31<sup>16</sup> So Syr. The Heb. repeats, for her children, twice. The Gk. but once. Evidently the Heb. form is due to a scribal error or else to dittography. Rachel, like Jacob, represents the Heb. race.

<sup>g</sup> 31<sup>16</sup> An editor has added, to make the antecedent clear, Thus saith Jehovah.

<sup>h</sup> 31<sup>16</sup> Again omitting with the Gk., it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>i</sup> 31<sup>17</sup> Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>j</sup> 31<sup>17</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to their own border. This clause, however, destroys the metre.

<sup>k</sup> 31<sup>18</sup> So Gk. supported by the metre. Heb. omits, I was.

<sup>l</sup> 31<sup>19</sup> The Heb. is apparently over-full as a result of a scribal repetition. The sense and metre support the above rendering.

<sup>m</sup> 31<sup>13</sup> Lit., thigh.

So that as often as I speak of<sup>n</sup> him, I must remember him.<sup>o</sup>
Therefore my heart yearneth for him; I must be merciful to him.<sup>p</sup>

Summons
to return

<sup>21</sup>Set thee up waymarks, make thee guide posts;
Fix thy attention on the highway, even by the way by which thou wentest, Return, O virgin Israel, return again to these, thy cities.
<sup>22</sup>How long wilt thou go hither and thither, O thou backsplashing daughter?
For Jehovah hath created a new thing in the earth: a woman shall encompass a man.<sup>q</sup>

Blessing of
the restoration

<sup>23</sup>Thus saith Jehovah.<sup>r</sup> Yet again shall they use this speech in the land of Judah and in its cities, when I bring back again its<sup>s</sup> captivity:
<sup>24</sup>Jehovah bless thee, O habitation of righteousness, thou holy mountain, <sup>25</sup>And those who dwell in the cities of Judah and in all its land<sup>t</sup> and the husbandmen and they who go about with flocks!<sup>u</sup>

Renewal of favor
for Israel
and
Judah

<sup>27</sup>Behold, the days are coming, is the oracle of Jehovah,
That I will sow<sup>v</sup> Israel and Judah with the seed of man and the seed of beast.
<sup>28</sup>And as once I watched over them to pluck up and to afflict,<sup>w</sup>
So will I be watchful over them to build and to plant.<sup>x</sup>

Individual
responsibility

<sup>29</sup>In those days they will no more say:
The fathers have eaten unripe grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge,<sup>y</sup> <sup>30</sup>But every one shall die for his own iniquity;
Every man who eats the unripe grapes, his teeth shall be set on edge.

<sup>n</sup> 31<sup>20</sup> Or, against, or, to.

<sup>o</sup> 31<sup>20</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr. Heb. adds, still.

<sup>p</sup> 31<sup>20</sup> Heb. adds, still, the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>q</sup> 31<sup>22</sup> The meaning of this vss. is not certain and it may be secondary. Many explanations have been offered. Brown (Bk. of Jer., 173) translates, a woman goes about like a man. The more recent German commentaries, following the parallel in Lev. 13<sup>3-5</sup>, Zech. 14<sup>10</sup>, would translate, shall be changed into a man. The Jewish commentaries translated the standard text go about in the sense of go after, but this destroys the meaning of the Heb. verb, even though it is not far from the meaning of the passage. The idea seems to be, the nation which is addressed as a woman shall lose her retiring nature and instead of turning away from Jehovah shall affectionately seek him. It is important to note that the new creation is Jehovah's and is a blessing, not a bane.

<sup>r</sup> 31<sup>23</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., of hosts, the God of Israel.

<sup>s</sup> 31<sup>23</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., their.

<sup>t</sup> 31<sup>24</sup> Following the consistent Gk. The Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>u</sup> 31<sup>24</sup> A scribe or scribes have added, <sup>25, 26</sup> For I have satiated the weary soul, and every sorrowful soul have I replenished. <sup>28</sup>Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet to me. These vss. have no logical connection with the context, but probably are the exclamation of some reader who was impressed with the glorious promises, but in the light of the grim reality regarded them as but a dream.

<sup>v</sup> 31<sup>27</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the house of.

<sup>w</sup> 31<sup>28</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to tear out and tear down and destroy. This verse is a quotation from Jer. 1<sup>10-12</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 31<sup>28</sup> All the texts have at the end, it is the oracle of Jehovah, but this destroys the metrical structure of the vss. and is probably a later addition.

<sup>y</sup> 31<sup>29</sup> For the same proverb, cf. Ezek. 18<sup>2</sup>, § 119.

III

JEREMIAH'S ACTIVITY DURING THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM

§ 72. Lament over the Fate of Jehoahaz, Jer. 22<sup>10-12</sup>

Jer. 22 <sup>10</sup>Weep not for him who is dead,<sup>a</sup> nor wail for him;
Weep rather for him who is gone, for he shall not return,
And never again shall he see the land of his birth.

Je-ho-abaz's exile

<sup>11</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, concerning Shallum [Jehoahaz], the son of Josiah,<sup>b</sup> who was king instead of Josiah his father, who went forth from this place: He shall not return thither again,<sup>12</sup>but<sup>c</sup> in the place whither they have led him away captive he shall die, and this land shall not see him again.

No hope of re-turning

§ 73. The Plot Against Jeremiah, Jer. 11<sup>9-12<sup>d</sup></sup>

Jer. 11 <sup>9</sup>And Jehovah said to me, A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup>They have turned back to<sup>d</sup> the iniquities of their forefathers, who refused to heed my words. And they are going after foreign gods to serve them; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers.

Fatal apostasy of the people (11<sup>9-14</sup>)

Jeremiah's Activity during the Reign of Jehoiakim.—The latter part of the reign of Josiah appears to have been one of the few glorious epochs in Heb. pre-exilic history. The king and his able advisers were devoted to enforcing the principles proclaimed by the great ethical prophets of the Assyrian period. Prosperity, extension of territory, and the withdrawal of Assyria all tended to inspire popular confidence in Josiah's policy. These influences, however, produced a false over-confidence in the mind of the king.

In Egypt a Libyan dynasty had arisen which developed a strong military policy. When the weakness of Assyria became apparent, Necho, the son of the founder of the new dynasty, aspired to the conquest of the Eastern Mediterranean coast lands, once held by the kings of the eighteenth Egyptian dynasty. For realizing his ambitions he trusted almost entirely to the Greek mercenaries, which he had enlisted in large numbers.

Before this large and well-organized army Josiah fell a victim in the memorable battle of 608 b.c. His fall marked a reversal of the policies which he had so strenuously espoused. The prophetic party endeavored to save the situation by placing on the throne Shallum, one of Josiah's sons, who assumed on his accession the kingly name Jehoahaz. His reign, however, continued only three months. Then he was summoned before Necho, in Northern Syria, and put in chains. His deposition marked the overthrow of the prophetic party. The popular resentment of Josiah's sweeping reformation expressed itself in a heathen reaction almost as sweeping as that under Manasseh. Jehoiakim also imitated the policy of his great-grandfather, Manasseh, rather than that of his father, Josiah. He was selfish and unprincipled and resented the interference of preachers of righteousness like Jer. The evils and crises which characterize the comparatively brief reign of Jehoiakim (608-597) called forth the greater number of Jeremiah's sermons. In the face of bitter opposition and constant danger of death, he continually held up before king and people the true ideals of life and religion, and thereby kept alive, in the hearts of the few disciples who heeded his words, the faith of his race.

<sup>a</sup> 22<sup>10</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Syr.

<sup>b</sup> 22<sup>11</sup> Again following the Gk. and Syr. and omitting the scribal addition, king of Judah.

<sup>c</sup> 22<sup>12</sup> Following eleven Heb. MSS. and the vss. in correcting the Heb., as the context demands.

<sup>d</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> So Syr. and Targ. The Heb. form is evidently due to a scribal error.

§ 73 The date of the original prophecies contained in this section is clearly to be found in the early part of the reign of Jehoiakim. They reflect the heathen reaction which characterized the opening years of that reign. The section contains fragments of Jer's. original sermons, interspersed with narrative material, which shows the influence of editorial revision. In 9-14 the influence of this Deuteronomic revision is clearly apparent in both idea and literary form. Vss. 15, 16 contain an original fragment from Jer. Vs. 17 is a later prose explanatory note. The rest of the section reveals Jer's. feelings when bitterly and unjustly attacked by his fellow-townsmen of Anathoth. In the outlying villages of Judah the old heathen spirit prevailed more than in Jerusalem itself. Jer. was attacked because he was the exponent of the

<sup>11</sup>“Therefore, thus saith Jehovah, Behold I am bringing upon them<sup>e</sup> evil which they shall not be able to escape; and if they cry to me I will not listen to them. <sup>12</sup>Then shall the cities of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem go and cry to the gods, to which they burn sacrifice; but they will not save them at all in their time of trouble. <sup>13</sup>For thou hast as many gods as thou hast cities, O Judah, and ye have set up as many altars<sup>f</sup> as there are streets in Jerusalem, in order to offer sacrifice to Baal. <sup>14</sup>Therefore pray not for this people, nor offer a petition for them, for I cannot listen to them when they cry to me in their time<sup>g</sup> of trouble.

Sacri-fices insuf-ficient to de-liver

<sup>15</sup>What hath my beloved to do in my house, seeing she hath committed evil acts?<sup>h</sup>

Will vows and holy flesh save thee from misfortune?<sup>i</sup>

<sup>16</sup>A leafy olive tree, beautiful in form,<sup>j</sup> wast thou<sup>k</sup> called,

But with the sound of a great roaring its leaves are set on fire and its branches destroyed.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>17</sup>For Jehovah of hosts, who planted thee, has pronounced evil against thee, because of the evil of the house of Israel<sup>m</sup> and of the house of Judah, which they have done of their own accord to vex me by burning incense to Baal.

At-tempt
of the men of Ana-thoth to kill Jere-miah

<sup>18</sup>Jehovah gave me knowledge of it so that I knew it, then I beheld<sup>n</sup> their deeds.

<sup>19</sup>But I was as a trustful lamb, which they led to the slaughter.<sup>o</sup>

Against me they devised devices;<sup>p</sup> ‘Let us destroy the tree with its sap; And let us cut him off from the land of the living, that his name may no more be remembered.’

<sup>20</sup>But Jehovah,<sup>q</sup> thou righteous judge, who testest the heart and the mind, I shall see thy vengeance on them, for to thee have I revealed my cause.

iconoclastic Jehovah religion and because his demands were contrary to the dominant spirit of the day. His teachings were also regarded as treasonable by the court. Therefore the people of Anathoth, influenced by the popular reaction, apparently regarded Jer's. teaching as hostile to their interests. Hence their strenuous endeavor to put a stop to his public speaking.

Jer's. words reflect the inner tragedy of his life. Conscious that he was sacrificing all that was dearest for the sake of his nation, he found himself hated by his nearest friends and fellow-townersmen. Thus in concrete form there came to him the most difficult of human problems, the question of why the righteous are allowed to suffer while the wicked prosper. It is a question which involves not only the fate of the individual but the justice of God himself. It is the same problem that is developed in greater detail by the author of the book of Job, whose debt to Jer. is shown not only by the close similarity in thought but also in language. The problem is met simply by an appeal to Jer's. faith and noble sense of responsibility which left no permanent place for doubt.

<sup>e</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> Gk., upon them, upon this people. Possibly upon this people is original.

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., altars to the shameful thing.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>14</sup> So certain Heb. MSS. and VSS.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> This vs. in the Heb. is very corrupt. The Gk., which has evidently preserved the original and is supported by the Syr. and other VSS., has been followed.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> The Heb. adds, then thou mightest exult. This is either secondary or else the second part of a fuller vs. preserved by the Gk., which reads, or canst thou escape by these, then thou mightest exult. The Gk. reading, however, is apparently only an attempt to restore a hopelessly corrupt text.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> So Gk. Through a mistake in repetition, a scribe has added in the Heb., fruit, but this does not make sense.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> The Heb. adds, Jehovah, but Jehovah himself is the speaker in this context.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> The Gk. and Lat. apparently read, burnt up—a free translation of the Heb.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>17</sup> Lit., to themselves.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>18</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb., thou causest me to see. The Gk., Lat., and Syr. have the preceding verbs in the second person instead of the third.

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>19</sup> So O. Lat. Heb. adds, and I did not know that.

<sup>p</sup> 11<sup>19</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>q</sup> 11<sup>20</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts.

<sup>21</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning the men of Anathoth, who seek thy life, saying, Thou shalt not prophesy in the name of Jehovah that thou die not by our hand:

<sup>22</sup>Behold<sup>r</sup> I will visit them in punishment, the young men shall die by the sword,

<sup>23</sup>Their sons and their daughters shall perish by famine,

And there shall be no remnant left to them.

For I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even the year of their visitation.

Their punishment

12 <sup>1</sup>Thou art more righteous, O Jehovah, than that I should contend with thee,

Yet would I reason the cause with thee:

Why do the wicked enjoy good fortune? Why are they at ease who deal very treacherously?

<sup>2</sup>Thou thyself didst plant them, yea, they have taken root, they grow and bear fruit;

Thou art ever present on their lips,<sup>s</sup> but far from their hearts.

<sup>3</sup>But thou, Jehovah knowest me<sup>t</sup> and triest my heart before thee;

Pull them away like sheep for slaughter, prepare<sup>u</sup> them for the day when they shall be slain.

<sup>4</sup>How long must the land mourn and all the vegetation wither?

Even the beasts and birds have disappeared because of the wickedness of its inhabitants;

For they have said, God doth not see our ways.<sup>v</sup>

The problem of why the wicked prosper

<sup>5</sup>If thou hast run with the footman, and they have wearied thee,

Then how canst thou contend with horses?

And if in a land of peace thou hast fled,<sup>w</sup>

What wilt thou do in the jungle<sup>x</sup> of the Jordan?

<sup>6</sup>For even thy brothers, and the house of thy father,

Even they have dealt treacherously with thee;

Even they have cried aloud after thee;

Believe them not, though they speak friendly words.

Jehovah's answer:
A servant of God must never be daunted

<sup>r</sup> 11<sup>22</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, therefore thus saith Jehovah of hosts. This is probably the result of a scribal repetition of <sup>21a</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> I. e., Jehovah's name is on their lips but his will does not govern the mainspring of their action.

<sup>t</sup> 12<sup>3</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, thou seest me and.

<sup>u</sup> 12<sup>3</sup> Lit., consecrate. This line may well be a later addition for it is not consistent with the milder teaching of <sup>5, 6</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> So Gk. An inversion of two letters gives the Heb., he shall not see our latter end. By many scholars this vs. is regarded as secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 12<sup>6</sup> Making a slight correction, which is strongly supported by the context.

<sup>x</sup> 12<sup>6</sup> I. e., in the luxuriant growth of the lower Jordan valley, where are the lairs of the wild beasts. Cf. 49<sup>13</sup>, Zech. 11<sup>3</sup>.

§ 74. The Lesson from the Potter, Jer. 18

The
potter-moulding the clay

Jeho-
vah's dealing with a nation
dependent
upon its attitude

Ju-dah's defiant
attitude

The prevailing
heathen-
ism

Jer. 18 <sup>1</sup>This word came to Jeremiah from Jehovah; <sup>2</sup>Arise and go down to the potter's house and there I will cause thee to hear what I have to say. <sup>3</sup>So I went down to the potter's house and he was just then working upon his wheels.<sup>y</sup> <sup>4</sup>And if the vessel which he was making<sup>z</sup> was spoiled in his hand<sup>a</sup> he made it again into another vessel as seemed right to him<sup>b</sup> to make it.

<sup>5</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me: 'O house of Israel,<sup>c</sup> can not I do to you as this potter. Behold as the clay in the potter's hand so are ye in my hand.<sup>d</sup> <sup>6</sup>Whenever I speak concerning a nation or a kingdom to pluck up<sup>e</sup> and to destroy it, <sup>f</sup>if that nation turn from its evil,<sup>f</sup> then I will repent of the evil which I thought to do it. <sup>9</sup>Whenever I speak concerning a nation or a kingdom to build it or to plant,<sup>10</sup> if it do evil in my sight by not heeding my voice then I will repent of the good which I said I would do to it.

<sup>11</sup>Now therefore say to the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem:<sup>g</sup> 'Behold I am framing evil against you and devising a plan against you; turn, I pray you, everyone from his evil way, and mend your ways and your deeds.' <sup>12</sup>But they say, 'It is useless for we will follow our own devices and we will act each according to the stubbornness of his evil heart.'

<sup>13</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah:

Ask ye now among the nations who hath heard such things:

The virgin Israel hath done an exceedingly horrible thing.

<sup>14</sup>Doth the white snow leave the rock of Sirion?<sup>h</sup>

Or can the waters of the cold, flowing mountain streams<sup>i</sup> be dried up?

<sup>15</sup>That my people have forgotten me; they offer sacrifice to nothingness,
And they stumble<sup>j</sup> in their ways, in the old tracks,

§ 74 Vss. <sup>1-4</sup> record an important incident in the life of the prophet. His adaptation of the figure of the potter is unique and differs fundamentally from the prevailing use of the figure elsewhere in the O.T., e. g., Is. 29<sup>16</sup>, 45<sup>9</sup>, 64<sup>8</sup>, B. Sir. 33<sup>13</sup>. Jehovah is pictured not as the arbitrary moulder of human destiny but as the one who earnestly strives, as far as is in his power, to adapt the human material to his divine ends. It is only human depravity that thwarts his divine purpose. The vss. which follow stand in close connection with the introductory figure. It is not certain, however, that they all come from the same period or that they are all from Jer. Original Jeremian utterances are undoubtedly embodied in these passages. Many of them are practically identical with those found in the preceding section. It is probable that they come from the same general period, the early days of Jehoiakim's reign when the prevailing crimes of the people called forth Jer's. bitter denunciations and aroused in turn the active hostility of the people.

<sup>y</sup> 18<sup>3</sup> These were the two round stones used by the ancient potters, the upper one supported the clay while the lower one was turned by the feet. Cf. B. Sir. 38<sup>29</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> 18<sup>4</sup> So Gk., O. Lat. and Syr. Heb. adds, as clay.

<sup>b</sup> 18<sup>1</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg. Heb., by the hand of the potter.

<sup>b</sup> 18<sup>4</sup> So O. Lat., Aquila, and Vulg. Heb., in the eyes of the potter.

<sup>c</sup> 18<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>d</sup> 18<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. repeats the phrase, O house of Israel.

<sup>e</sup> 18<sup>7</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Origen's Syr. Heb. adds, to pull down.

<sup>f</sup> 18<sup>8</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr. Heb. adds, which I have spoken against it. This paragraph contains one of the clearest statements in the O.T. of the conditional element underlying all prophecies.

<sup>g</sup> 18<sup>11</sup> So O. Lat. and Origen's Gk. Heb. adds, saying, Thus saith Jehovah.

<sup>h</sup> 18<sup>14</sup> Following a slightly restored text. Sirion was the ancient designation of Mount Hermon. Heb., the snow of Lebanon from the rock of the field, but this text is evidently corrupt.

<sup>i</sup> 18<sup>14</sup> Again restoring the text as the context demands. Heb., strange waters, but this is evidently a corruption. A more radical reconstruction, proposed by Cornill in his commentary on Jer., p. 325, gives the reading, waters of the western sea, i. e., the Mediterranean. The prophet's thought is that the course of nature remains unchanged; Jehovah's people alone are fickle.

<sup>j</sup> 18<sup>15</sup> Probably here the Gk, Syr., and Lat. have preserved the original reading.

To walk in by-paths, in a way not built,

<sup>16</sup>To make their land an object of horror, a perpetual hissing;

Everyone that passes by it is filled with horror and shakes his head.

<sup>17</sup>I will scatter them; like a hot east wind<sup>k</sup> I will scatter them before their enemies;<sup>l</sup>

I will look upon them with the back and not with the face,<sup>m</sup> in the day of their calamity.

Its
consequences

<sup>18</sup>And they said, Come, let us devise a plan against Jeremiah,

For teaching will not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet.

Come, let us smite him with the tongue, and not give heed to his words.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Listen to me, O Jehovah, and hearken to my contention.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Should evil be repaid for good? for they have digged a pit to take my life.

Remember how I stood before thee to speak well in their behalf,

To turn away thy fury from them.

Jere-
miah's
personal
wrongs

<sup>p</sup>Therefore deliver their children to famine, and they themselves over to the power of the sword, and let their wives become childless and widows, let their men be slain by death, and their young men smitten by the sword in battle. <sup>q</sup>Let a bitter cry be heard from their houses, when thou bringest a hostile band suddenly upon them; for they have digged a pit to take me, and have hidden traps for my feet. <sup>r</sup>Yet thou, Jehovah, knowest all their counsel against me, to slay me. Forgive not their iniquity, nor blot out their sin from thy sight, but make them stumble before thee;<sup>s</sup> deal thou with them in the time of thine anger.

A cry
for vengeance

§ 75. Jeremiah's Temple Discourse, Jer. 7<sup>1</sup>–8<sup>3</sup>

Jer. 7 <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, <sup>2</sup>Stand in the gate of Jehovah's house and proclaim this message: 'Hear the word of Jehovah, all ye of Judah. <sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah the God of Israel: "Amend your ways and your deeds and I will let you dwell in this place; <sup>4</sup>trust not in lying words,

Repentance
and
. . .
acts
the only guarantee of divine
protection

<sup>k</sup> 18<sup>17</sup> I. e., the hot sirocco.

<sup>l</sup> 18<sup>17</sup> So Gk. and Targ. Heb., before the enemy,

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>17</sup> I. e., will not regard them with favor or pity.

<sup>n</sup> 18<sup>18</sup> The thought is, what difference does it make whether there is one prophet more or less. Israel has many teachers, each with his peculiar form of teaching. That passage is especially significant for it brings into contrast the three distinct classes of Israel's teachers.

<sup>o</sup> 18<sup>19</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb., to the voice of mine enemies.

<sup>p</sup> 18<sup>21–23</sup> There are many indications that these vss. are the later additions of a scribe rather than the original words of Jer. In the first place they lack the regular metrical structure which apparently characterized all of the prophet's utterances. Furthermore, their vindictive spirit is far removed from that of Jer., who loved his fellow-countrymen with a passionate fervor. They are much more akin to certain of the imprecatory Psalms of the Psalter, from which they may well have been quoted.

<sup>q</sup> 18<sup>23</sup> Heb., may they stumble before thee.

<sup>§ 75</sup> This is one of the most important discourses of Jer., for in it he deals squarely with the issue of the religion of ceremonialism versus the religion of true service. The popular parallel account of the same sermon in Jer. 26 states that it was delivered at the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim. The death of Josiah and the overthrow of the Jehovah party had led the people to turn with new zeal and blind trust to the formal services of the temple. Some had revived the heathen cults at the ancient sanctuaries in the valley of Ben-hinnom, to the southwest of Jerusalem. The religion of formalism was almost wholly in the ascendancy, and enjoyed the protection and probably the support of the court. Jer. struck at the very root of this false faith by declaring that the time was soon coming when the venerated temple of Jehovah itself should be cast down in ruins, and Jerusalem should be desecrated by the scattered bones of its nobles, priests, and prophets.

The passage 7<sup>1–8</sup> is apparently a distinct literary unit dealing with the temple and the prevailing cults. Possibly <sup>16–20</sup> is secondary, for it has no close connection with the context and thinking, This is the temple of Jehovah.<sup>r</sup> <sup>5</sup>For if ye really amend your ways and your deeds, if ye faithfully execute justice between a man and his neighbor,<sup>s</sup> if ye oppress not the resident alien, the fatherless and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place and do not go after other gods to your hurt; <sup>7</sup>then I will cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, forever and ever.

<sup>t</sup>But now ye are trusting in lying words that cannot profit. <sup>9</sup>Will ye steal, murder and commit adultery, swear falsely and offer sacrifice to Baal,<sup>s</sup> and go after other gods whom ye have not known,<sup>10</sup>and then come and stand before me in this house which is called after my name and say, We are free to do all these abominations? <sup>11</sup>Is this my house, which is called by my name, in your eyes a den of robbers? Behold I, indeed, have seen it,”<sup>t</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>12</sup>“Then go now to my sanctuary which is in Shiloh, where I caused my name to dwell at first, and see what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. <sup>13</sup>And now because ye have done all these deeds, and, although I spoke to you insistently, ye have not heeded, and although I called you, ye have not answered,<sup>14</sup>therefore I will do to the house, which ye call by my name, in which ye trust, and to the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, as I did to Shiloh; <sup>15</sup>and I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out your kinsmen, even the entire race of Ephraim.””

<sup>16</sup>But thou shalt not pray for these people, nor lift up a prayer of supplication for them, nor make intercession with me; for I can not hear thee. <sup>17</sup>Seest thou not what they are doing in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem? <sup>18</sup>The children gather wood, the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the Queen of Heaven, and to pour out libations to other gods in order to vex me. <sup>19</sup>Do they really vex me? is the oracle of Jehovah. Is it not rather themselves? that their own faces may be put to shame. <sup>20</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah:<sup>u</sup> ‘Behold mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place over man and beast, the trees of the field, and the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn without being quenched.’

<sup>21</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel: ‘Add your burnt-offerings to your sacrifices, and eat flesh!<sup>v</sup> <sup>22</sup>For I said nothing to your fathers, nor laid any command upon them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt in regard to burnt-offerings or sacrifices. <sup>23</sup>But this thing I commanded them, “Hearken to my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye just as I command you, that it may be well with

introduces a motif—the worship of the Syrian goddess, the Queen of Heaven—not referred to elsewhere before 44<sup>16</sup>. The later passage, however, contains a reference to the practices prevalent in an earlier period, so that the evidence that even this passage is secondary is not conclusive. Even though much of the material of this section is in prose and shows the effect of long oral transmission, there is good reason to believe that, as a whole, it represents Jer’s. original temple discourse.

<sup>r</sup> 7<sup>4</sup> I. e., the people and many of the false prophets regarded the temple of Jehovah as a guarantee of the prosperity of their nation.

<sup>s</sup> 7<sup>9</sup> Cf. the prophetic decalogue of Dt. 5.

<sup>t</sup> 7<sup>11</sup> I. e., your crimes of theft, murder, etc.

<sup>u</sup> 7<sup>20</sup> Following Gk. and Syr. and omitting Lord which has been added in Heb.

<sup>v</sup> 7<sup>21</sup> I. e., eat not only the flesh of the ordinary offerings but also that of the burnt-offerings which was wholly consecrated to Jehovah. The words are uttered in sarcasm.

Crimes
of the people

Temple
to be destroyed
as was
the sanctuary at Shiloh

Intercession useless

Demand is for obedience,
not sacrifice

you." <sup>24</sup>But they hearkened not, nor gave heed,<sup>w</sup> but walked according to the counsels of their evil heart,<sup>x</sup> so that they have gone backward and not forward. <sup>25</sup>Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt to this day. And I have sent to you all my servants the prophets, sending them daily and persistently;<sup>y</sup> <sup>26</sup>yet they have not hearkened to me, nor have given heed, but have made their neck stiff; doing worse than their fathers.'

<sup>27</sup>And thou shalt speak this word to them:<sup>z</sup>

<sup>28</sup>"This is the nation that hath not hearkened to the voice of Jehovah their God,

Nor received correction; truth hath perished<sup>a</sup> from their mouth.

Lament
over
the corrupt
nation

<sup>29</sup>Cut off their hair, cast it away, and raise on the bare heights the cry of lamentation;<sup>b</sup>

For Jehovah hath rejected and cast off the generation of his wrath;

<sup>30</sup>For the people of Judah have done evil in mine eyes,' is Jehovah's oracle.

'They have set their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to defile it.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>31</sup>They have built the high place,<sup>d</sup> of Topheth, which is in the valley of Ben-hinnom,

In order to burn their sons and daughters in the fire,<sup>e</sup> which I never commanded them, nor had it entered my mind.

<sup>32</sup>Therefore behold the days are coming,' is the oracle of Jehovah,

'When one shall no longer say, "The high place of Topheth" nor "The Valley of Ben-hinnom"

Terrible fate awaiting it

But "The Valley of Slaughter"; for they shall bury in Topheth until there is no place left.

<sup>33</sup>Then shall the dead bodies of this people be food,

For the birds of the heavens and the beasts of the earth; and none shall frighten them away.

w 7<sup>24</sup> Heb., inclined the ear.

x 7<sup>24</sup> So Gk., Heb., in counsels, in the stubbornness of their evil heart.

y 7<sup>25</sup> Heb., daily raising up and sending. Possibly daily is simply due to a scribal error. <sup>27</sup>, 28 So Gk., which has preserved the simpler and original text. The editor who added<sup>1</sup>, 2 has expanded the text by adding<sup>1b</sup> so that it reads, And thou shalt speak all these words to them, but they will not hearken to thee; thou shalt call to them, but they will not answer thee. And thou shalt say to them.

z 7<sup>28</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and is cut off.

b 7<sup>29</sup> The address is to the nation Judah and is a call to bitter lamentation because the generation is the object of Jehovah's righteous wrath.

c 7<sup>30</sup> This vs. in language and thought is closely connected with the late prophetic passage in II Kgs. 21<sup>5, 7</sup>. Cf. also Ezek. 8

d 7<sup>31</sup> So Gk. Heb., high places, but there appears to have been but one in the valley of Ben-hinnom, to the southwest of Jerusalem. High place must be equivalent to small sanctuary.

e 7<sup>31</sup> The horrors of the Assyr. period influenced the people in their extremity to resort to human sacrifice to win the favor of God. Cf. Mic. 6<sup>6, 7</sup>, and for an earlier example, II Sam. 21<sup>1-14</sup>.

<sup>34</sup>Then will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem the sound of mirth and of rejoicing,<sup>f</sup>
The voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; for the whole land shall become a waste.'

Neither
the dead nor living shall escape
the judgment

8 <sup>1</sup>At that time, is the oracle of Jehovah, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and of his nobles, and of the priests, and of the prophets, and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem from their graves.<sup>g</sup> <sup>2</sup>And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, which they have loved, and which they have served, and after which they have walked, and which they have sought, and which they have worshipped—they shall not be gathered nor buried, they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth. <sup>3</sup>And death shall be chosen rather than life by all the residue that remain of this evil family, in all the places<sup>h</sup> whither I have driven them, is the oracle of Jehovah.

§ 76. Later Tradition Regarding the Temple Discourse, Jer. 26<sup>1-19</sup>

Jere-
miah's
prediction of the de-
struc-
tion of the city
and
temple

Jer. 26 <sup>1</sup>In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came from Jehovah, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: 'Stand in the court of Jehovah's house, and speak to all the people of Judah, who come to worship in Jehovah's house, all the words that I command you to speak to them. Do not take away a word. <sup>3</sup>Perhaps they will hearken and turn each from his wicked way, that I may relent of the evil which I purpose to do to them because of the wickedness of their deeds. <sup>4</sup>And thou shalt say to them, "Thus saith Jehovah: If ye will not listen to me, to walk in my law which I have set before you, <sup>5</sup>to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I send to you, sending them constantly although you do not heed, <sup>6</sup>then will I make this temple like Shiloh, and will make this city an object of execration to all the nations of the earth."'<sup>i</sup> <sup>7</sup>And the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the temple of Jehovah.

<sup>8</sup> And then when Jeremiah had finished speaking all that Jehovah had commanded him to speak to all the people, the priests and prophets and all the people took hold of him, saying, You must die. <sup>9</sup>Why have you prophesied in the name of Jehovah, saying, 'This temple shall be like Shiloh, and this

<sup>f</sup> 7<sup>24</sup> For the same threat, cf. 16<sup>9</sup>, 25<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> I. e., the judgment shall affect all classes in the nation. Even the dead shall not be exempt. This and the two following vss. probably represent a later lengthening of Jer.'s original prophecy.

<sup>h</sup> 8<sup>3</sup> So Gk. The Heb. repeats, that remain.

<sup>i</sup> § 76 This section represents the more popular version of Jer.'s temple sermon found in 7<sup>1-8<sup>2</sup></sup>. The theme and part of the subject-matter are identical. This version, however, has preserved less of the original discourse. Its original poetic structure is almost completely obscured. Instead fuller details are given of the effect of the address upon Jer.'s hearers. The section records one of the great crises in his life. It is also significant because the citation from Mi. 3<sup>12</sup> is one of the very few detailed quotations of earlier writers to be found in the pre-exilic prophets. Cf. § 52. This parallel version is also very instructive for it suggests the zeal with which later generations sought to recall all of the possible facts regarding the work of Jer. It also illustrates characteristic differences between the primary and secondary sections of the book, and throws light upon the question why it contains so much that is secondary. For detailed textual notes, cf. Vol. II, § 131.

city shall be desolate, without habitation?' And all the people were gathered about Jeremiah in the temple of Jehovah.

<sup>10</sup>And when the princes of Judah heard these things, they came up from the king's palace to the temple of Jehovah; and they sat at the entrance of the new gate of the temple of Jehovah. <sup>11</sup>Then the priests and the prophets spoke to the princes and to all the people, saying, This man is guilty of a capital offence, for he has prophesied against this city as you have heard with your own ears. <sup>12</sup>Then Jeremiah addressed the princes and all the people, saying, It was Jehovah who sent me to prophesy against this temple, and against this city all the words that you have heard. <sup>13</sup>Now therefore reform your ways and your acts, and obey the voice of Jehovah your God; and Jehovah will repent of the evil that he has pronounced against you. <sup>14</sup>But as for me, see, I am in your hand; do with me as appears to you to be good and right. <sup>15</sup>Only be assured that, if you put me to death, you will bring innocent blood upon yourselves and upon this city and upon its inhabitants, for assuredly Jehovah hath sent me to you to speak all these things in your ears.

<sup>16</sup>Then the princes and all the people said to the priests and to the prophets, This man is not guilty of a capital offense, for he has spoken to us in the name of Jehovah our God. <sup>17</sup>Thereupon certain of the elders of the land arose and spoke to all the assembly of the people, saying, <sup>18</sup>Micah the Morashite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah; and he spoke to all the people of Judah, saying, 'Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:

"Zion shall be plowed as a field,
And Jerusalem shall become stone-heaps,
And the temple-mount wooded heights."

<sup>19</sup>Did Hezekiah and all Judah indeed put him to death? Did they not fear Jehovah and appease Jehovah, so that Jehovah repented of the evil which he had pronounced against them? But we are on the point of doing great injury to ourselves.

§ 77. Fate of Uriah, Jer. 26<sup>20-24</sup>

Jer. 26 <sup>20</sup>Now there was also a man who prophesied in the name of Jehovah, Uriah the son of Shemaiah of Kiriat-jearim; and he prophesied against this city and against this land in the same terms as did Jeremiah.<sup>21</sup> And when Jehoiakim the king and all the princes heard his words, the king sought to put him to death; but when Uriah heard it he was afraid and fled and went to Egypt. <sup>22</sup>And Jehoiakim the king sent men to Egypt. <sup>23</sup>And they brought Uriah from Egypt, and took him to Jehoiakim the king, and he slew him with the sword and cast his dead body into the graves of the common people. <sup>24</sup>But the influence of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was in favor of Jeremiah that they should not give him into the hands of the people to put him to death.

His response
to the public arraign-
ment

Citation of
the precedent established by the prophet
Micah

Fate of Uriah

§ 78. The Fate Awaiting Guilty Judah, Jer. 8<sup>4</sup>–9<sup>1</sup>

Judah's
persistent rebellion

Jer. 8 <sup>4</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>i</sup>

Do men fall, and not rise up again? Doth one turn away and not return?

<sup>5</sup>Why then hath this people<sup>j</sup> turned away,<sup>k</sup> and ever remained away?

They hold fast to their<sup>l</sup> deceit, they refuse to return.

<sup>6</sup>I hearkened and heard, but they speak what is not true;

No man<sup>m</sup> repenteth of his wickedness, saying, ‘What have I done?’

Each turneth hither and thither in his course, as a horse that rusheth headlong in battle.

<sup>7</sup>Yea, the stork in the heavens knoweth her appointed times;

And the turtle-dove, the swallow and the crane observe the time of their coming;

But my people know not the law established by Jehovah.

Treach-ery of the priestly scribes

<sup>8</sup>How can you say, ‘We are wise, and the law of Jehovah<sup>n</sup> is with us’?

But, behold, the deceptive pen of the scribes<sup>o</sup> hath rendered it<sup>p</sup> deceptive.

<sup>9</sup>The wise men are put to shame, they are dismayed and taken!

They reject the word of Jehovah, and what wisdom have they?<sup>q</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Can one glean anything from them?<sup>r</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah,

For there are no grapes on the vine,

Nor figs on the fig-tree, and the leaf is faded!<sup>s</sup>

Complaints
of the
people

<sup>11</sup>Why are we waiting still? assemble,

And let us enter into the fortified cities, and let us perish there;<sup>t</sup>

§ 78 The contents of this section are closely connected in theme and date with the temple discourse in § 75. There is the same sense of deep-seated national guilt and an impending judgment, only the agents of destruction seem nearer at hand. Possibly the section should be dated as late as 604 B.C., when the Chaldeans were already on the horizon. In 14-17 Jeremiah possibly introduces certain Scythian songs, first used in the early reform sermons which gather about the year 626 B.C. The whole, however, fits the stormy days immediately preceding the conquest of Palestine by the Chaldeans. The section, as a whole, is filled with Jeremiah's characteristic notes of denunciation, warning, and personal lamentation. It is the lamentation of a patriot-prophet, who is suffering in imagination all the woes which later overtook his nation.

<sup>i</sup> 8<sup>4</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has an expanded introduction, And thou shalt say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah.'

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> So Gk. After people a scribe has added in the Heb. the explanatory word Jerusalem.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> Lit., Perpetually turned away, i. e., never repenting after apostasy. Cf. for the same thought, 52, 3, 7<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits the possessive pronoun.

<sup>m</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> Following the Gk. Heb. has a slight scribal error. The same figure is found in 2<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> The words of Jehovah are not supported by the metrical structure of the vs. and may be a later addition.

<sup>o</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> I. e., the men of books, the editors and interpreters, as well as the copyists, the precursors of the later scribes.

<sup>p</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> In this exceedingly significant passage Jeremiah appears to condemn those who in the name of Moses exalt the law, which they have freely revised, above the authority of the prophetic word. The law was in all probability that which is now found in Dt. and possibly also portions of the Holiness Code of Lev. Cf. Vol. IV, Introd. pp. 31-42.

<sup>q</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> Here a scribe has introduced in the Heb. vss. 12-15 from chap. 6. In the Gk. a later scribe has reproduced simply<sup>10</sup> of the Heb. Clearly<sup>13</sup> was originally the immediate sequel of<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> Following the Gk., which appears to have preserved the original text. An alternate reading would be, Can I glean their gleanings or I will gather. The current Eng. translations are unwarranted. The idea of the original seems to have been that the teachings of the scribes is utterly barren.

<sup>s</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> The Heb. has at the close a line not found in the Gk. and not in accord with the structure and thought of the vs. It is clearly a later addition. Its meaning is obscure. Probably it may be translated, I will give them those who come over there.

<sup>t</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> Cf. the same words in 4<sup>8</sup>. They are reckless words of the people in the time of their distress.

For Jehovah our God hath caused us to perish,
And given us poisonous<sup>u</sup> water to drink, because we have sinned against him.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>15</sup>We looked for peace, but no good came; for a time of healing, and, behold, dismay!

<sup>16</sup>The snorting of his horses is heard from Dan;<sup>w</sup>
At the sound of the neighing of his strong ones the whole land trembles;
For he<sup>x</sup> has come, and devoured the land,<sup>y</sup> the city and those who dwell in it.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>17</sup>For, behold, I will send against you serpents, adders,<sup>z</sup>
Which cannot be charmed; and they shall bite you, is the oracle of Jehovah. a

<sup>18</sup>My sorrow<sup>b</sup> is beyond healing! my heart is faint within me.

<sup>19</sup>Behold the cry of the daughter of my people sounds from a land that is broad and wide:

Is not Jehovah in Zion? is not her King in her?

Why have they provoked me to anger with their graven images, with foreign vanities?

<sup>20</sup>The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we have not been saved!

<sup>21</sup>Because of the destruction of my people<sup>c</sup> am I destroyed;
I mourn; fright hath possession of me.

<sup>22</sup>Is there no balm<sup>d</sup> in Gilead? is there no physician there?

Why then is there no healing for the wound of my people?

9 <sup>1</sup>Oh, that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears,
That I might weep day and night for the slain of my people!

Jeho-
vah's
response

Jeremiah's sorrow for his
nation

§ 79. The Inevitable Result of Moral Corruption, Jer. 9<sup>2-22</sup>, 10<sup>17-25</sup>

Jer. 9 <sup>2</sup>Oh, that I had in the wilderness a lodging-place of wandering men;
That I might leave my people and go from them!
For they are all adulterers, an assembly of deceivers.

Deep
degeneracy
of the
people

<sup>u</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> Or, gall.

<sup>v</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> So Gk., Heb., Jehovah.

<sup>w</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> Cf. 4<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has, they.

<sup>y</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> A scribe has apparently added, destroying the poetic and literary vigor of the passage, and all that is in it.

<sup>z</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> Probably legendary monsters.

<sup>a</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> This last clause aids in making clear the change of speaker in this vs., but it is not found in the Gk. and is probably not original.

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>18</sup> Here the prophet speaks bemoaning the fate of his people.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>21</sup> Lit., daughter of my people. So in 2<sup>2</sup> and 9<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>22</sup> Lit., resin of the mastic-tree.

§ 79 The position of this section in the book of Jeremiah suggests that the sermon which it contains was written during the earlier part of the reign of Jehoiakim. Its picture of coming national disaster is much more detailed, suggesting that the Chaldeans were already advancing toward Judah. Vs. 10<sup>22</sup> is either a quotation from the earlier Scythian songs or else a direct reference to the approaching Chaldeans. It was probably, therefore, one of the many stirring sermons which Jeremiah appears to have delivered between the critical years 605 and 601 B.C.

Vss. 9<sup>23-10<sup>16</sup> have no connection with their context but are written in the spirit of the II Is., and from the point of view of the exilic or post-exilic period. They also lack the regular metrical structure of the rest of the section. Vss. 10<sup>17-24</sup> are the immediate sequel of 9<sup>22</sup>.
Removing the later supplemental passage the original sermon is revealed.</sup>

<sup>3</sup>And they bend their tongue, as though it were their bow,<sup>e</sup>
 Falsehood and not truth prevail in the land,<sup>f</sup>
 For they proceed from evil to evil, and me they know not,<sup>g</sup>
<sup>4</sup>Let each man keep watch on his neighbor, and trust no<sup>h</sup> brother;
 For every brother will supplant, as did Jacob,<sup>i</sup> and every neighbor will go about slandering;
<sup>5</sup>And each deceives his neighbor, and does not speak the truth.
 They have accustomed their tongue to speak lies: they commit iniquity,<sup>jk</sup>
<sup>6</sup>Oppression follows oppression, deceit, deceit, but they refuse to know me.<sup>l</sup>

Necessity of a sweeping
judgment

<sup>7</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah,<sup>m</sup> Behold, I will refine them,
 And I will test them, for how else should I do, because of the wickedness<sup>n</sup> of my people?
<sup>8</sup>Their tongue is a deadly arrow; deceit is the word in their mouth;
 Each speaketh to his neighbor, 'All is well,' but in his heart he plotteth against him.
<sup>9</sup>Shall I not visit them with punishment for these things, is the oracle of Jehovah;
 Shall not I myself be avenged on such a nation as this?<sup>o</sup>
<sup>10</sup>Over the mountains I must take up a weeping and a wailing<sup>p</sup>
 And over the pastures of the wilderness a lamentation, Because they are burned up, with no man thereon,<sup>q</sup> neither is heard the lowing of cattle;
 Both the birds of the heavens and the beasts have fled, they are gone.
<sup>11</sup>And I will make Jerusalem a heap of ruins, a dwelling-place of jackals;
 And I will make the cities of Judah a desolation, without inhabitant.

<sup>12</sup>What man is so wise that he may understand this?
 And to whom hath the mouth of Jehovah spoken so that he may declare it?
 Why is the land ruined and burned up like a wilderness, so that none passeth through?
<sup>13</sup>Because<sup>r</sup> they have forsaken my law which I set before them,
 And have not obeyed my voice, nor walked in accord with it,

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> This first line is defective and may be a scribal addition originally connected with <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 9<sup>2</sup> Following the Gk., which has clearly preserved the better text.

<sup>g</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., it is the oracle of Jehovah, to identify the speaker.

<sup>h</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, any.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> Evidently, as in Hos. 12<sup>4</sup>, the figure contains an allusion to the classic example of deception in Gen. 27.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>2</sup> So Gk. The Heb. text is evidently corrupt, combining the last word of <sup>5</sup> with the first of <sup>6</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>5</sup> Again following the Gk., which has clearly retained the original.

<sup>l</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Again a scribe has added in the Heb., it is the oracle of Jehovah. Jehovah in the original is introduced in <sup>7</sup>, although in his original sermons Jeremiah so completely identified himself and Jehovah that it is usually unnecessary to introduce him as the speaker.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, as frequently, of hosts.

<sup>n</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk., which has apparently added, wickedness, to bring out the meaning of the original.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> This vs. is almost a verbatim repetition of 5<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> Gk. and O. Lat. omit, and a wailing.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, passing through.

<sup>r</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> A scribe has added, to make the meaning clear, and Jehovah saith, but this destroys the metre of the vs.

<sup>14</sup>But have walked after the stubbornness of their own evils heart.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah,<sup>u</sup> the God of Israel,

Behold, I will feed them<sup>v</sup> with wormwood, and give them poisonous water to drink.

<sup>16</sup>I will scatter them also among the nations, whom neither they nor their fathers have known;

And I will send the sword after them, until I have consumed them.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Summon the mourning women<sup>y</sup> that they may come;

And send for the wise women<sup>z</sup> that they may quickly raise<sup>z</sup> for us their voices in wailing;

That our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids flow with water.

<sup>19</sup>For a sound of wailing is heard from Zion, 'How are we ruined!

We are greatly confounded,<sup>a</sup> because they have cast down our dwellings!

<sup>20</sup>Hear, O women, and let your ears receive my words;<sup>b</sup>

And teach your daughters wailing, and each her neighbor a dirge:

<sup>21</sup>For death<sup>c</sup> is come up into our windows, it has entered into our palaces; Cutting off the children from the streets, the young men from the open spaces.

<sup>22</sup>The dead<sup>d</sup> bodies of men fall as dung upon the open field,

And as the handful after the harvester, with none to gather them.'

The lament
over
the fallen
nation

10 <sup>17</sup>Gather<sup>e</sup> up thy bundle from the ground, O thou that art in a state of siege:

<sup>18</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, Behold, I am slinging out the inhabitants of this land,<sup>f</sup>

And will distress them that they may pay the penalty.<sup>g</sup>

Jeho-
val's
con-dem-
nation

<sup>s</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, evil.

<sup>t</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> Apparently a scribe added, and after the Baalim which their fathers taught them.

<sup>u</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts.

<sup>v</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. a scribe has added the explanatory gloss, even.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>11-16</sup> The immediate continuation of <sup>10</sup> is <sup>17b</sup>. The intervening vss. may be an editorial addition. Vs. <sup>11</sup> describes the exact nature of the judgment. It, as well as <sup>16</sup>, seems to reflect the bitter experiences of the Babylonian exile. Vs. <sup>12</sup> is in the language of the epilogue to Hos. 14<sup>9</sup>, while <sup>13, 14</sup> abound in the characteristic formulas of Dt. Vss. <sup>15, 16</sup> also resemble later sections of Jer., e. g., 44<sup>2</sup>, 7, 11.

<sup>x</sup> 9<sup>17</sup> Heb. prefixes, thus saith Jehovah of hosts, Consider ye. Gk. omits all but the first clause. The line is probably due to scribal expansion.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>17</sup> I. e., the hired mourners, probably also in the minds of the common people, skilled in keeping away evil spirits from the dead.

<sup>z</sup> 9<sup>18</sup> Heb., that they may come and hasten. Gk., come. But the come is probably but a repetition from <sup>17a</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>19</sup> A later scribe, thinking of the exile, has inserted the meaningless and inconsistent clause, for we have forsaken the land.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>20</sup> Heb., the word of Jehovah, but this was easily mistaken for my words, and this in turn led the Hebrew scribe to change my mouth to the word of his mouth.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>21</sup> This and the following vs. contain the touching lament that Jeremiah dramatically puts into the mouth of the wailing women. This and kindred passages doubtless did much to establish in the minds of later generations the tradition that he was the author of the book of Lam. Its metre is the same as that which characterizes Jeremiah.

<sup>d</sup> 9<sup>22</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds the unusual and unnecessary introductory formula, Speak, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>17</sup> These vss. appear to be the immediate continuation of 9<sup>22</sup>. The address is to the nation Judah. The text is very difficult and doubtful.

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>18</sup> So Gk. The Heb. reads, at this time.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>18</sup> Following a restored Heb. text suggested by Luc. and Aquila. Heb., that they may find.

The prophet's lament in behalf of the nation

<sup>19</sup>Woe<sup>b</sup> is me because of my hurt! my wound is painful;
But I said, Truly, this is my grief, and I must bear it.
<sup>20</sup>My tent is spoiled, and all my cords are broken,
My children have gone forth from me and they are not;<sup>i</sup>
There is none to spread my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.
<sup>21</sup>For the shepherds are stupid, and have not inquired of Jehovah;
Therefore they have not prospered, and all their flocks are scattered.<sup>j</sup> <sup>22</sup>Hark! a rumor, behold, it comes! even a great din from the land of the north,
To make the cities of Judah a desolation, a dwelling-place of jackals.

Prayer
for mercy

<sup>23</sup>I know, O Jehovah, that not to man belongs his way;
It is not for man to walk and to direct his steps.
<sup>24</sup>Correct us, O Jehovah, but with judgment, and not in thine anger, lest thou make us few in numbers.<sup>k</sup>

§ 80. The Corrupt, Rejected Nation, Jer. 13<sup>1-14</sup>

Jehovah's command

Jer. 13 <sup>1</sup>Thus Jehovah said to me, Go and buy thee a linen waist-cloth, and put it upon thy loins but do not put it in water. <sup>2</sup>So I bought the waist-cloth as Jehovah commanded and put it upon my loins.

The buried waist-cloth

<sup>3</sup>Then the word of Jehovah came to me a second time, <sup>4</sup>Take the waist-cloth<sup>l</sup> which is upon thy loins, and, arise, go to Perath, and bury it there in a crevice of the rock. <sup>5</sup>So I went and buried it at Perath, as Jehovah commanded me. <sup>6</sup>And it came to pass after many days Jehovah said to me, Arise, Go to Perath, and take thence the waist-cloth which I commanded thee to bury there. <sup>7</sup>Then I went to Perath, and digged, and took the waist-cloth from the place where I had buried it; and behold, the waist-cloth was ruined, it was good for nothing.

<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>19</sup> This and the following vss. contain the lament of the patriotic prophet in behalf of the nation. The Gk. puts it in the second person. Cf. 41<sup>9-24</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>20</sup> This awkward clause, and they are not, may also be secondary.

<sup>j</sup> 10<sup>21</sup> This vs. is perhaps a later explanatory gloss.

<sup>k</sup> 10<sup>23, 24</sup> By many scholars these verses are regarded as later additions. They have, however, the same characteristic five-beat measure and their thought and point of view are those of the great prophet of divine love. To this original prophecy a post-exilic scribe has added the words found in Ps. 79<sup>6, 7</sup>. In its prayer for vengeance upon Israel's foes and in its picture of the Judean community it clearly reflects the post-exilic point of view from which it was written.

§ 80 The integrity of this section has been much discussed. Duhm, in his commentary, rejects it as unworthy of the great prophet. It apparently belongs to the secondary or traditional narrative material. There is no valid reason, however, for rejecting it as not historical. Its dialogue form and graphic symbolism are very similar to Jeremiah's account of his call to be a prophet. It is an established fact that Jeremiah, like Isaiah and Ezekiel, used acted illustrations to impress his teachings upon his hearers. The proverb of the wine-jar is closely connected in thought and teaching with the preceding symbol of the waist-cloth.

The perplexing question is, Where was the waist-cloth hidden? The later and the majority of commentators regard the Heb. as referring to the river Euphrates. The original, however, lacks the article, which is found in the Heb. designation of the Euphrates. The difficulty of interpreting the symbol literally, if the term be interpreted Euphrates, because of the long journey involved, has been recognized by all commentators. At the same time, if not interpreted literally the symbol has little meaning. These difficulties all disappear if the Heb. word Perath be literally transcribed, for it is probably equivalent to the town Parah, mentioned in Josh. 18<sup>23</sup>, a small village three miles northeast of Jeremiah's home at Anathoth. It is in the midst of a secluded, rocky valley, well watered by a plentiful spring, from which a stream runs eastward to the Wady Kelt and the Jordan Valley. The place is still known as the Wady Fara. It was probably a familiar haunt of Jeremiah and its rocky crevices furnished a suitable setting for the symbolic action here described.

<sup>l</sup> 13<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, which I had bought.

<sup>8</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>9</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, ‘Even so will I destroy the pride of Judah and the great pride of Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup>This evil<sup>m</sup> people who refuse to heed my words,<sup>n</sup> and follow other gods to serve them and to bow down to them, shall be like this waist-cloth which is of no use at all. <sup>11</sup>For as the waist-cloth clings to the loins of a man, so have I caused the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah to cleave to me, is the oracle of Jehovah, to be my people, to be for me a cause of renown, and praise, and glory, but they have not hearkened.

<sup>12</sup>And thou shalt say to this people,<sup>o</sup> “Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, Every jar must be filled with wine,” and if they say to thee, “Do we not know<sup>p</sup> that every jar must be filled with wine?” <sup>13</sup>Then thou shalt say to them, “Thus saith Jehovah, Behold, I am about to fill all<sup>q</sup> the inhabitants of this land, the kings,<sup>r</sup> who sit upon the throne of David, the priests, the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with drunkenness,<sup>s</sup> and I will dash them one against the other, even the fathers and their sons together, is Jehovah’s oracle; I will neither pity nor spare nor have compassion, that I should not destroy them.”

Application
of the symbolic action

Destruction of
the
nation

§ 81. Judah’s Guilt Too Great for Intercession, Jer. 14<sup>1</sup>–15<sup>9</sup>

Jer. 14 <sup>2</sup>The cry of Jerusalem rises up, Judah mourns.<sup>t</sup>
 And its gates languish, they sit clad in black upon the ground.
<sup>3</sup>And their nobles send their servants for water;
 They come to the cisterns and find no water;
 They return with their vessels empty; they are confounded,<sup>t</sup>
<sup>4</sup>And the tillers of the ground are terrified, for no rain has come,<sup>u</sup>
 The plowmen are filled with confusion, they cover their heads.
<sup>5</sup>Yea, the hind also in the field calves, and forsakes her young, because there is no grass.<sup>v</sup> <sup>6</sup>And the wild asses stand on the bare heights, they pant for air;<sup>w</sup>
 Their eyes lose their lustre, because there is no herbage.

Effects
of the great drought

<sup>m</sup> 13<sup>10</sup> Reconstructing the impossible Heb. text.

<sup>n</sup> 13<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, who walk after the stubbornness of their heart.

<sup>o</sup> 13<sup>12</sup> So Gk. and Arab. Heb., speak to them this word.

<sup>p</sup> 13<sup>12</sup> The Heb. omits this clause which is superfluous and may be secondary.

<sup>q</sup> 13<sup>13</sup> Gk. omits, all.

<sup>r</sup> 13<sup>13</sup> The original may have read princess.

<sup>s</sup> 81 Because of the nature of the subject-matter in this section its exact date cannot be determined. It is certain, however, that it comes from the reactionary reign of Jehoiakim and probably before 604 B.C., when Jeremiah was silenced by Jehoiakim. It consists of blended dialogue, prayer, and monologue. Some passages are in poetry and others are in prose. Throughout it bears the mark of the personality and point of view of the stern prophet of ethical righteousness, who recognized that there could be no divine forgiveness without a fundamental repentance, which bore fruit in deeds as well as words.

The immediate occasion of the prophecy was evidently a severe drought; but in developing the theme either Jeremiah or his later redactor has introduced two passages, 14<sup>12–18</sup> and 15<sup>2–9</sup>, in which the agents of divine judgment are not drought but the sword, hunger, and pestilence. Vss. 14<sup>18</sup> blends these two motifs with the result that the section, as a whole, is logically complete. It bears the general superscription: The word of Jehovah to Jeremiah with reference to the drought.

<sup>t</sup> 14<sup>2</sup> The first clause has been inserted in the Heb. at the end of the vs. The metre and parallelism support the above restoration.

<sup>u</sup> 14<sup>3</sup> Not found in the Gk., and possibly added by a scribe, as were the words, they cover the head which are taken from <sup>4</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 14<sup>4</sup> Following the suggestion of the Gk., which apparently has the original text. The Heb. is clearly corrupt and makes no sense.

<sup>w</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> This last clause is probably secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 14<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, as jackals.

Confession
and petition
for divine
favor

<sup>7</sup>Though our iniquities testify against us, act for thy name's sake, O Jehovah;
For our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.
<sup>8</sup>O thou hope of Israel, its saviour in the time of trouble, Why shouldst thou be as a sojourner in the land, and as a traveller who turns aside to stay but a night?
<sup>9</sup>Why wilt thou be as a man affrighted, as a man who cannot save?<sup>x</sup>
Yet thou, O Jehovah, art in the midst of us, and we are called by thy name;
leave us not.<sup>y</sup>

Jeho-
vah's refusal to hear or to pardon

<sup>10</sup>Thus saith Jehovah to this people, Even so they love to wander!
They have not held back their feet, therefore Jehovah doth not accept
them;
Now will he remember their iniquity and punish their sins.
<sup>11</sup>And Jehovah said to me,<sup>z</sup> Pray not for this people for their good.
<sup>12</sup>When they fast, I will not hear their cry;
And when they offer a burnt-offering and a cereal-offering, I will not accept
them;
But I will consume them by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

Special
judgment
upon
the false
proph-
ets

<sup>13</sup>Then said I, Alas, Lord Jehovah, the prophets are ever saying to them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you peace and truth<sup>a</sup> in this place.<sup>b</sup> <sup>14</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, nor have I spoken to them; they prophesy to you a lying vision, and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their own heart. <sup>15</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name, Although I myself sent them not, yet they are ever saying, 'Sword and famine shall not be in this land.' By sword and famine shall these people be consumed.
<sup>16</sup>And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the sword and the famine; and they shall have no one to bury them—themselves, their wives, their sons, nor their daughters—for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

Magnitude of the calamity

<sup>17</sup>And thou shalt say this word to them:
'Mine eyes run down with tears night and day,
And they cease not, because great is the destruction;
For the virgin daughter is broken with a very painful wound.
<sup>18</sup>If I go forth into the field, there are the ones slain with the sword!

<sup>x</sup> 14<sup>9</sup> The Heb. adds, mighty man, but is not supported by the Gk. or by the metre and has the ring of a later age.

<sup>y</sup> 14<sup>7</sup> These vss. and the following recall the fickle, superficial prayer of the people in Hos. 5<sup>10</sup>-6<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 14<sup>11</sup> Possibly a later defining gloss.

<sup>a</sup> 14<sup>13</sup> Restoring the text according to 33<sup>6</sup> and Gk., which, however, reverses the order of these two words.

<sup>b</sup> 14<sup>13</sup> Gk., in the land.

And if I go into the city, there are the ravages of famine!
 For both the prophet and the priest wander about<sup>c</sup> in the land, and have no knowledge.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion?
 Why hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us?
 We look for peace, but no good came; and for a time of healing, but behold, dismay!

<sup>20</sup>We acknowledge, O Jehovah, our wickedness and the iniquity of our fathers;
 For we have sinned against thee! <sup>21</sup>Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake;
 Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory;
 Remember, break not thy covenant with us.

<sup>22</sup>Are there any among the false gods<sup>e</sup> of the nations that can cause rain?
 Or can the heavens give showers?
 Art thou not he, O Jehovah our God?
 Therefore we will wait for thee; for thou hast made all these things.

15 <sup>1</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, Though Moses and Samuel<sup>f</sup> stood before me, yet my soul would not be inclined toward them.<sup>g</sup> Cast this people forth out of my sight, go forth. <sup>2</sup>And when they say to thee, 'Whither shall we go forth?' then thou shalt tell them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for captivity, to captivity."
<sup>3</sup>And I will appoint over them four kinds,<sup>h</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah: the sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and the birds of the heavens to devour<sup>i</sup> and the beasts of the earth to destroy.<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>And I will cause them to be tossed to and fro among all the kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh, the son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, for all<sup>k</sup> that he did in Jerusalem.

Further confession and prayer for Jehovah's mercy

<sup>5</sup>Who<sup>l</sup> will have pity for thee, O Jerusalem? or who will show sympathy for thee?
 Or who will turn aside to ask of thy welfare?<sup>m</sup>
<sup>6</sup>Thou hast rejected me, is the oracle of Jehovah,<sup>n</sup> thou art gone backward;
 Therefore I have stretched out my hand,<sup>o</sup> and destroyed thee; I am weary with relenting.

Jehovah's reply: conquest and exile inevitable

His lament over his incorrigible people

<sup>c</sup> 14<sup>18</sup> I. e., go about as mendicants. The verb is ordinarily used to describe the itinerant journeys of the pack peddlers.

<sup>d</sup> 14<sup>18</sup> This last clause is ordinarily regarded as secondary, being suggested by Hos. 4<sup>6</sup>. It is not supported by the metre and has no connection with the context which pictures the ravages of the foreign conqueror.

<sup>e</sup> 14<sup>22</sup> Lit., vanities, a designation characteristic of the later writers.

<sup>f</sup> 15<sup>1</sup> Both Moses and Samuel were famous for their efficiency in prayer. Cf. Ex. 17 and

I Sam. 7.

<sup>g</sup> 15<sup>1</sup> Following the superior Gk.

<sup>h</sup> 15<sup>3</sup> I. e., four kinds (lit., families) of destroyers.

<sup>i</sup> 15<sup>3</sup> In the Heb. this stands next to the last word in the vs.

<sup>j</sup> 15<sup>3</sup> Cf. Ezek. 14<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 15<sup>1</sup> Following the Gk. in retaining all.

<sup>l</sup> 15<sup>5</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, for.

<sup>m</sup> 15<sup>5</sup> The figure is the one expanded by Jesus into the parable of the Good Samaritan.

<sup>n</sup> 15<sup>6</sup> Probably a later addition intended to identify the speaker.

<sup>o</sup> 15<sup>6</sup> So Gk. The Heb. destroys the regular verse structure by adding, against thee.

<sup>7</sup>And I have winnowed them with a fan in the gates of the land;
 I have bereaved them of children, I have destroyed my people, because of their evil deeds.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Their widows are more numerous than the sand of the seas;
 I have brought upon<sup>q</sup> the mother of the young men a destroyer at noonday,
 I have caused anguish and terrors to fall upon her suddenly.

<sup>9</sup>She that hath borne seven pines away, she breathes out her life;
 Her sun goes down while it is yet day, she is put to shame and confounded;
 And the rest of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies.<sup>r</sup>

§ 82. The Prophet's Dialogue with Jehovah, Jer. 15<sup>10-21</sup>

The prophet's wail

Jer. 15 <sup>10</sup>Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man in contention<sup>s</sup> with all the world!
 I have not lent, neither hath man lent to me; yet each of them curses me.

Jehovah's assurances

<sup>11</sup>Jehovah said, Verily I will strengthen thee for good; Verily, I will cause the enemy to make supplication to thee in the time of evil and affliction.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Can one break iron? is not a casing of brass<sup>u</sup> thy strength?<sup>v</sup>

Prayer for vengeance

<sup>15</sup>O Jehovah, thou knowest; remember me, and look after me,
 And avenge me of my persecutors, do not continue to restrain thy wrath;<sup>w</sup>
 Know that for thy sake I have suffered reproach,<sup>x</sup> from those who despise thy words.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>p</sup> 15<sup>7</sup> Again following the superior Gk. Heb., they turned not from their ways.

<sup>q</sup> 15<sup>8</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds an awkward and unnecessary upon them.

<sup>r</sup> 15<sup>9</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. a scribe has added, to make clear who is speaking, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>s</sup> 82 This section is closely connected in point of time with the preceding. It records Jeremiah's Gethsemane and is closely connected in theme with §§ 73, 87. It reveals the fact that Jeremiah's inner struggles and temptations did not cease with his call and consent to be a prophet. More than any other passage, perhaps, it throws light upon the psychology of the prophets, for here we may study a true prophet in the making. It is not a weak complainer who here speaks out of the depth of his heart's experience, but a strong man keenly alive to the tragic nature of his own life. He longs for the joy of the festal assembly, for the happiness of domestic life, for the affection and approval of friends, and for that popularity which his patriotic services fully merited. But all these are denied him. Like the hero of the book of Job, he stands stripped of all that man ordinarily regards as the supreme blessings of life. This pitiable lot, however, is not the result of calamity or an inscrutable fate, but of his own deliberate choice. Although the pain and sense of loss were none the less keen, Jeremiah turned his back upon all these that he might enjoy the sense of divine approval and of doing faithfully the task intrusted to him as the prophet of the Highest. This sense of divine approval was the star which guided him through the valley of the shadow of death through which he was walking. His very isolation and loneliness bound him closer to God, and developed that sense of oneness with the divine purpose which is the inspiration of every true prophet and saviour of men.

<sup>t</sup> 15<sup>10</sup> Heb., A man of strife, is probably a scribal variation of the following clause.

<sup>u</sup> 15<sup>11</sup> This vs. is very doubtful. The Gk. has a widely different reading.

<sup>v</sup> 15<sup>12</sup> Another very doubtful vs. The Gk. gives an intelligible reading for the second part and is followed above.

<sup>w</sup> 15<sup>12</sup> The two vss., <sup>13, 14</sup>, which follow, have by mistake been inserted here. They are but a scribal repetition of 17<sup>3, 4</sup> and have no connection with the context.

<sup>x</sup> 15<sup>15</sup> Reconstructing with the aid of the Gk. The Heb. has an additional verb, take me not away, which must be due to a scribal error.

<sup>y</sup> 15<sup>16</sup> Again following superior text of the Gk.

Make an end of them<sup>y</sup> and it shall be to me a joy and the rejoicing of my heart,
That I am called by thy name, O Jehovah, God of hosts.

<sup>17</sup>I sat not in the assembly of them who make merry, nor rejoiced;

Bereft of joy
and
peace

I sat alone because of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with indignation.

<sup>18</sup>Why is my pain perpetual, and my wound incurable, refusing to be healed?
Wilt thou indeed be to me as a deceitful brook, as waters that can not be trusted?<sup>z</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah,

Jeho-
vah's reiterated assurances

If thou return, then will I bring thee again, that thou mayest stand before me;

And if thou take forth the noble from the vile,<sup>a</sup> thou shalt be as my mouth;<sup>b</sup>

<sup>20</sup>And I will make thee toward this people a fortified, brazen wall;

And they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee;

For I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee;<sup>c</sup>

<sup>21</sup>And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

§ 83. The Fate Awaiting the People of Judah, Jer. 16

Jer. 16 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came also to me.<sup>d</sup> <sup>2</sup>Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons and daughters in this place. <sup>3</sup>For thus saith Jehovah concerning the sons and daughters who are born in this place, and concerning their mothers who bore them and concerning their fathers who begot them in this land:<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>They shall die of pestilence; they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried; they shall be as dung upon the face of the ground; and they shall be consumed by the sword and by famine; and their dead bodies shall be food for the birds of heaven and for the beasts of the earth.'

Jere-
miah's celibacy a symbol of the coming calamity

<sup>y</sup> 15<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk., and also omitting the gloss, thy words, which does not accord with the metrical, syntactical, and logical structure of the verse.

<sup>z</sup> 15<sup>18</sup> Cf. Job 6<sup>15-20</sup>, where the same figure is developed at length.

<sup>a</sup> 15<sup>19</sup> I. e., utter simply noble words. This line throws much light upon Jeremiah's own estimate of the authority of his words. Deep down in his heart he realized that his complaints were inspired not by God but by his own baser impulses and that in yielding to them he was weakening the authority with which he spoke.

<sup>b</sup> 15<sup>19</sup> A scribe has apparently added, playing on the word return, They shall return to thee, but thou shalt not return to them; the immediate equal of <sup>19c</sup> is <sup>20a</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 15<sup>20</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

§ 83 This section throws further light on Jeremiah's feelings and experiences as recorded in the preceding section. The Gk. omits the superscription of 16<sup>1</sup> and more closely blends the two sections. They evidently both come from the same trying period of Jeremiah's life. Occasionally the original poetic structure has been retained, but for the most part it has been lost, although a certain poetic parallelism of thought may be traced, indicating that we are here probably in part dependent upon the exigencies of oral tradition or the memory of Baruch, Jeremiah's scribe.

<sup>d</sup> 16<sup>1</sup> Omitted in Gk. and Syr. of Origen. It is supported, however, by <sup>3</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 16<sup>3</sup> Possibly this vs. is due to scribal expansion.

To refrain
from all public mourn-
ing

<sup>5</sup>For<sup>f</sup> thus saith Jehovah:
Enter not into the house of grief,<sup>g</sup> neither go to lament,<sup>h</sup>
For I have taken away my peace from this people,<sup>i</sup>
<sup>6</sup>Both great and small shall die; they shall not be buried,<sup>j</sup>
Neither shall men lament for them nor cut themselves
Nor make themselves bald for them, nor bemoan them,<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>Neither shall men break bread for those who mourn to comfort them<sup>l</sup> on account of the dead;
Neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother.<sup>m</sup>

From
all social life

<sup>8</sup>Go not into the house of feasting to sit with them, to eat and to drink; <sup>9</sup>For thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place, before your eyes and in your days, the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.

Sins beyond
pardon

<sup>10</sup>And when thou makest known to this people all these words,<sup>n</sup> and they shall say to thee, 'Why hath Jehovah pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity?
or what is our sin that we have committed against Jehovah our God?' <sup>11</sup>Then thou shalt say to them, 'Because your fathers forsook me, is the oracle of Jehovah, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law.' <sup>12</sup>But ye have done worse than your fathers; for, behold, ye are walking each after the stubborness of his heart, so that ye hearken not to me; <sup>13</sup>Therefore, I will cast you forth out of this land into the land that neither ye nor your fathers have known; and there ye shall serve other gods day and night; for I will show you no favor.'<sup>o</sup>

The
divine
judgment

<sup>16</sup>Behold, I will send for many fishers, is the oracle of Jehovah, to fish for them; and then I will send for many hunters to hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill and out of the clefts of the rocks. <sup>17</sup>For mine eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hid from me, neither is their iniquity concealed from mine eyes.

<sup>18</sup>And I will doubly recompense their iniquity and their sin, because they have polluted my land with the carcasses of their detestable things, and have filled mine inheritance with their abominations.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>f</sup> 16<sup>5</sup> Gk. omits, for.

<sup>g</sup> 16<sup>5</sup> Or as in Am. 6<sup>7</sup>, revelry.

<sup>h</sup> 16<sup>5</sup> Cf. <sup>5</sup> Here Jeremiah's characteristic metre reappears in a song of lamentation. A scribe, however, has added, destroying the structure of the verse, nor bemoan them. This has probably been introduced from the end of <sup>6</sup>, where it is required and finds its natural setting.

<sup>i</sup> 16<sup>6</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah, even love and compassion. What Jeremiah originally meant by Jehovah's peace was clearly the continued prosperity of the people.

<sup>j</sup> 16<sup>6</sup> This line is lacking in the Gk. and Syr. of Origen. The Heb. possibly preserves the original. At least it supplies the missing thought, although the clause, in this peace, which is found in the Heb., is clearly secondary.

<sup>k</sup> 16<sup>6</sup> Restoring the last clause of this line from its unnatural position in <sup>5</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 16<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk., which retains the pl. throughout the vs.

<sup>m</sup> 16<sup>7</sup> Try to divert their attention from their grief. The Heb. has the sing.

<sup>n</sup> 16<sup>10-13</sup> These vss. seem to be from a later prophet's hand. The original sequel of <sup>9</sup> is probably 16, 17. Vs. <sup>13</sup> implies clearly the point of view after the exile.

<sup>o</sup> 16<sup>14, 15</sup> These vss. are taken practically verbatim from 23<sup>7, 8</sup>, where they fit the context far better.

<sup>p</sup> 16<sup>18</sup> So Gk. Through a scribal error (probably dittography), first has been added in the Heb.

<sup>q</sup> 16<sup>18</sup> This vs. gives a priestly (cf. Lev. 26<sup>29, 30</sup>) but not a prophetic reason for the exile.
The prophetic judgment is pronounced in <sup>21</sup>.

<sup>19</sup>O Jehovah, my strength, and my stronghold, and my refuge in the day of affliction, to thee shall the nations come from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Our fathers inherited nought but lies, even vanity and things wherein there is no profit. <sup>20</sup>Shall a man make for himself gods, although they are no gods?<sup>r</sup>

Coming
repentance
of
the
nations

<sup>21</sup>Therefore, behold, I will cause them to know my hand this once; and I will cause them to know my might; and they shall know that my name is Jehovah.<sup>s</sup>

Venge-ance
upon Jeho-
vah's
people

§ 84. Judah's Deep-seated Sin, Jer. 17<sup>1-18</sup>

Jer. 17 <sup>1</sup>The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron,
With the point of a diamond, it is graven upon the tablet of their heart,
And upon the horns of their<sup>t</sup> altars,<sup>u</sup> <sup>2</sup>upon every green tree,
Upon the high hills,<sup>3</sup>upon the mountains in the field.

Evidence
of Ju-
dah's
sins

Thy wealth and all thy treasures I will give as a spoil,
As wages for thy sins<sup>v</sup> throughout all thy borders.

Exile
the penalty

<sup>4</sup>And thou shalt loosen<sup>w</sup> thy hand from thy heritage that I gave thee;
And I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest
not;
For ye have kindled a fire in mine anger which shall burn forever.

<sup>5</sup>Cursed<sup>x</sup> is the man who trusteth in man,
And maketh flesh his arm,
And whose heart departeth from Jehovah.
<sup>6</sup>For he is like the naked tamarisk in the desert,
And doth not see when good cometh,
And he shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness,
A salt land and not inhabited.

Fate
of those who do not trust
Jeho-
vah

<sup>7</sup>Blessed is the man who trusteth in Jehovah,<sup>a</sup>
<sup>8</sup>For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters,
That spreadeth out its roots,

Of
those who trust
him

<sup>r</sup> 16<sup>19, 20</sup>. These vss. appear to be a pious ejaculation from the scribe who added <sup>18</sup>. They interrupt the unity of the context, since Jehovah is the speaker, <sup>16, 21</sup>, and not the one addressed.

<sup>s</sup> 16<sup>21</sup>. Following the superior Gk. order.

<sup>t</sup> § 84. This section lacks the close unity of the preceding, with which, however, it is related in theme and date. Vss. <sup>1-4</sup> are not found in the Gk. They are probably omitted because the translator noted that they had already in part been introduced in 15<sup>13, 14</sup>. As has been already noted, § 82, note <sup>v</sup>, they are evidently not original in 15. Hence there is every reason to believe that the Heb. should here be followed, at least as restored through the brilliant work of Duhm. Vss. 5-13 contain a reflective psalm, written in the three-beat measure. There is no close connection between this psalm and the preceding and following passages. It is on the whole probable that they are from a later hand, but they incorporate, in didactic form, several of Jeremiah's characteristic teachings. If not composed by him, the psalm is therefore Jeremian in essence and belongs in the book which bears his name.

The personal elegy in <sup>14-19</sup> is the logical continuation of <sup>1-4</sup>. It is in the five-beat measure, and, with the possible exception of the last vs., undoubtedly comes from the lips of Jeremiah. The concluding vss. of the chapter, <sup>19-27</sup>, which voice the later Jewish interpretation of the sabbath institution, are almost universally recognized as a subsequent addition to the book.

<sup>u</sup> 17<sup>2</sup> Heb., your.

<sup>v</sup> 17<sup>2</sup> A scribe thinking of the survivals of this ancient heathenism in his day, has added, whilst their children remember their altars and their Asherahs.

<sup>w</sup> 17<sup>3</sup> Correcting by analogy with Dt. 15<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 17<sup>3, 4</sup> Following the superior reading of the parallel in 15<sup>13</sup>, the first line of <sup>4</sup> is not found in the parallel, 15<sup>14</sup>, and may be secondary.

<sup>y</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, thus saith Jehovah.

<sup>z</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> I. e., strength and defence.

<sup>a</sup> 17<sup>7</sup> In the present Heb., this line is repeated in slightly different and more awkward form, and whose Jehovah is.

And doth not fear when heat cometh,
But its leaf is green;
And in the year of drought it hath no care,
Nor ceaseth from yielding fruit.

Jeho-
vah tests
and rewards
men

Vanity
of riches

Jeremiah's
prayer
for help
and vindi-
cation

<sup>9</sup>The heart is deceitful above all things,
And it is exceedingly corrupt; who can know it?
<sup>10</sup>I, Jehovah, search the mind,
I am he who tests the heart,
Even to give every man according to his deeds,
According to the fruit of his doings.

<sup>11</sup>As the partridge which sitteth on eggs which she has not laid,
So is he that getteth riches, and not by right;
In the midst of his days they shall leave him,
And at his end shall be a fool.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Heal me, O Jehovah and I shall be healed;
Save me and I shall be saved; for thou art my praise.

<sup>15</sup>Behold, they are constantly saying to me, Where is the word of Jehovah?
Let it come now!

<sup>16</sup>As for me, I have not made haste on account of calamity<sup>c</sup> to call upon <sup>d</sup>thee;
Neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest!
That which came out of my lips was before thy face.

<sup>17</sup>Be not a terror to me, thou who art my refuge in the day of evil!

<sup>18</sup>Let them be put to shame who persecute me, but let me not be put to shame;
Let them be dismayed, but let me not be dismayed;
Bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction!<sup>e</sup>

Command
to keep the law
of the Sabbath

Promises and warnings conditioned on its observ-
ance

<sup>19</sup>Thus Jehovah said to me: Go, and stand in the gate of the children of the people, by which the kings of Judah come in and go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem, <sup>20</sup>and say to them, 'Hear ye the word of Jehovah, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who enter in by these gates: <sup>21</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem; neither carry forth a burden out from your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work; but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I commanded your fathers.' <sup>22</sup>But they neither listened nor gave heed, but were more stiffnecked than their fathers<sup>f</sup> in not hearing nor receiving instruction.

<sup>4</sup>If ye give faithful heed to me, is Jehovah's oracle, in bringing in no burden through the gates of the city on the sabbath, but hallow the sabbath day and do no work in it, <sup>5</sup>then there shalt enter by the gates of this city kings,<sup>g</sup> sitting upon the throne of David, riding on chariots and on horses—they, together with their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall continue to be inhabited forever. <sup>6</sup>And they shall come from the cities of Judah, from the places about Jerusalem, from Benjamin, from the lowland, from the hill-country, and from the South Country bringing burnt-offerings and sacrifices and cereal-offerings and incense, and bringing thank-offerings to the house of Jehovah. <sup>7</sup>But if ye will not hearken to me in hallowing the sabbath, and in not bearing a burden, and in not entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath, then I will kindle a fire in its gates, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem and shall not be quenched.

<sup>b</sup> 17<sup>12</sup> The following vss. are clearly secondary, as the prose form and the post-exilic point of view indicate: 12, A glorious throne set on high from the beginning, is the place of our sanctuary. 13, O Jehovah, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be put to shame. The apostles in the land shall be put to shame. Vs. 13 is composite, being made up of lines from 14<sup>b</sup>, 1s. 12<sup>a</sup>, 2<sup>a</sup>, and Jer. 21<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 17<sup>16</sup> So Sym. and Aquila.

<sup>d</sup> 17<sup>16</sup> Lit., after thee. The text and interpretation of this line are not certain.

<sup>e</sup> 17<sup>18</sup> This last vs. may well be a later addition.

<sup>f</sup> 17<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. omits, than their fathers.

<sup>g</sup> 17<sup>25</sup> Heb. adds, and princes; but the princes are introduced later in the vs., and they would not sit on thrones.

§ 85. The Overwhelming Judgment upon Judah, Jer. 19

Jer. 19 <sup>1</sup>Then<sup>h</sup> Jehovah said to me,<sup>i</sup> Go and buy a bottle made of clay,<sup>j</sup> and take<sup>k</sup> certain of the elders of the people and of the priests,<sup>l</sup> and go out to the Valley of Ben-hinnom, which is by the entrance to the gate of the potsherds, and proclaim there all<sup>l</sup> these words which I shall tell thee. <sup>3</sup>And thou shalt say to them,<sup>m</sup> Hear the words of Jehovah, ye kings of Judah<sup>n</sup> and inhabitants of Jerusalem, who enter into these gates.<sup>o</sup> Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel, ‘Behold I am about to bring calamity upon this place, so that the ears of everyone that heareth of it shall tingle,’ <sup>4</sup>because they have forsaken me and treated this place as foreign, and burnt sacrifices to other gods, whom they knew not—they, or their fathers, or the kings of Judah—and have filled this place with the blood of the innocent.’

<sup>10</sup>And thou shalt break the bottle in the sight of the men who are with thee, <sup>11</sup>and thou shalt say to them, ‘Thus saith Jehovah,<sup>p</sup> “Even so will I break this people and this city; as one breaks an earthen vessel so that it cannot be made whole again,<sup>q</sup> so I will do to this place and to its inhabitants,”’ is the oracle of Jehovah.’

<sup>14</sup>Then Jeremiah came from Topheth, whither Jehovah had sent him to prophesy, and he stood in the court of the temple of Jehovah and said to all the people, <sup>15</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: ‘Behold I will bring upon your city and upon all its villages all the evil that I have pronounced against it, because they have defiantly refused to hear my words.’

Symbolism
of the broken water-bottle

§ 85 This section records another of the dramatic methods whereby Jeremiah impressed his unwelcome message upon the consciences of his fellow-countrymen. It is very similar to the object lesson of § 80. The present version has evidently been expanded by a later editor. After <sup>i</sup> he has introduced in <sup>5-7</sup> an almost verbal quotation from 7<sup>31-33</sup>. To this he has added in <sup>j</sup> a free quotation from 18<sup>6</sup>, and in <sup>k</sup> the following, based upon Dt. 28<sup>53-55</sup>, Lev. 26<sup>29</sup>, Ezek. 5<sup>10</sup>, Lam. 2<sup>20</sup>, 4<sup>10</sup>, and <sup>l</sup> I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and their daughters, and they shall eat each the flesh of his neighbor, in the siege and in the straits, into which their enemies and they who seek their life, shall bring them. This passage is not only shot through with different thoughts and figures from those used by Jeremiah, but also introduces an entirely different figure from that of the earthen bottle, which was broken into fragments, significant of the divine judgment about to overtake Judah. Also in <sup>11b, 12</sup>, the same editor has developed the references to Topheth in <sup>5-7</sup>, which were based upon his quotation from 7<sup>31-33</sup>. Removing these accretions, the original narrative, in its unity, remains.

<sup>b</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb., thus.

<sup>i</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> So ten Heb. MSS. the Gk., and Syr. Heb. omits, to me.

<sup>j</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., potter's earthen bottle. It was their common earthen water-jar, commonly used in Palestine in ancient times as at present.

<sup>k</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, take.

<sup>l</sup> 19<sup>2</sup> So four Heb. MSS. and Gk. The accepted Heb. text omits, all.

<sup>m</sup> 19<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, to them.

<sup>n</sup> 19<sup>4</sup> Gk. adds, and men of Judah.

<sup>o</sup> 19<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and the parallel in 17<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 19<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts.

<sup>q</sup> 19<sup>11</sup> The Heb. scribe who added <sup>5-7</sup> has also added here, and they shall bury in Topheth, because there is no place left to bury. Thus will I do to this place, is the oracle of Jehovah, and to its inhabitants, even to make this place like Topheth, and the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah shall be like the houses of Topheth, uncleaned, even all the house upon whose roofs they have offered sacrifices to all the hosts of heaven, and have poured out libations to other gods. This awkward prose gloss is but a duplicate of Jeremiah's prediction in <sup>11</sup>. It has no connection with the preceding symbolic action, and is clearly secondary.

Reiteration of the prediction of doom

§ 86. Jeremiah's Public Imprisonment, Jer. 20<sup>1-6</sup>

Jere-miah
in the stocks

The
fate
awaiting Pashhur and all the people
of
Judah

Jer. 20 <sup>1</sup>Now when Pashhur, the son of Immer the priest, who was chief officer in the temple of Jehovah, heard Jeremiah<sup>r</sup> prophesying these things, <sup>2</sup>he smote him and put him in the stocks, which were in the upper gate of Benjamin, in the temple of Jehovah.

<sup>3</sup>But on the following day Pashhur released Jeremiah from the stocks. Then Jeremiah said to him, Jehovah hath not called thy name Pashhur but Magor<sup>s</sup> [Terror], <sup>4</sup>for thus saith Jehovah: ‘Behold I am about to make thee a terror to thyself and to all thy friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemy before your very eyes. But thee and all Judah will I give into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he will carry them into captivity<sup>t</sup> and slay them with the sword. <sup>5</sup>Moreover I will give all the riches of this city and all its possessions<sup>u</sup> and all the treasures of the king<sup>v</sup> of Judah<sup>w</sup> into the hands<sup>x</sup> of their enemies,<sup>y</sup> and they shall carry them away to Babylon; <sup>6</sup>and thou<sup>z</sup> and all that dwell in thy house shall go into captivity, and thou shalt die at Babylon and be buried there, together with all thy friends to whom thou hast prophesied falsely.

§ 87. Jeremiah's Complaint, Jer. 20<sup>7-18</sup>

The
prophet's bitter lot

Jer. 20 <sup>7</sup>Thou hast beguiled me, O Jehovah, and I let myself be beguiled; for thou art stronger than I and hast prevailed.

I have become a laughing stock all the day, every one mocketh me;

<sup>8</sup>For as often as I speak I am an object of laughter, for I cry, Violence and Spoil!

---

<sup>§ 86</sup> The incident here recorded is closely connected with the prophecy found in the preceding section. Jeremiah's words had been directed against the practices of the religious as well as the civil leaders of the nation. As a rule the person of the prophet was inviolable. In this instance, however, the head of the temple priesthood sought to bring Jeremiah into disrepute by subjecting him to a public indignity. The prophet was evidently keenly sensitive to the insult, but he was not silenced. Instead, like Amos in a very similar situation, he directed against the representative of the official priesthood a prophecy which applied equally well to the ruling class in Judah. The concreteness of the prophecy only added to its effectiveness.

<sup>r</sup> 20<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb adds, the prophet. The Pashhur of the present narrative is not to be confused with the father of Gedaliah, who bore the same name. Both Pashhur and Immer are familiar names in the later priestly lists.

<sup>s</sup> 20<sup>2</sup> So the Gk. of Origen. Heb. adds, on every side.

<sup>t</sup> 20<sup>3</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., in Babylon.

<sup>u</sup> 20<sup>4</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, all its precious things.

<sup>v</sup> 20<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb., kings.

<sup>w</sup> 20<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, I will give.

<sup>x</sup> 20<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb., hand.

<sup>y</sup> 20<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, they shall rob and take away.

<sup>z</sup> 20<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Pashhur.

<sup>§ 87</sup> The position of these words suggests that they were uttered immediately after Jeremiah's public imprisonment, and there is no sufficient reason for questioning this implication. The injustice of which he was the victim culminated in this act. Even more intolerable than the attack of a mob was the deliberate indignity which was heaped upon him by the religious leaders of the nation when he was put in the stocks and exposed to the jeers of the people. His only offence was faithfully and efficiently doing his duty as Jehovah's prophet. His fidelity had brought him only reproach and derision. Attacked by foes, deserted by friends, and without human sympathy, he was indeed a pitiable object. The present passage reveals the prophet's humanity. He was not an abnormal being, but felt strongly all those ambitions and passions which bind together suffering humanity. It would seem that he felt a certain relief in voicing his woes in the elegies which are scattered through his prophecies. Their boldness and frankness astonish us, but at the same time they afford a clear vision of the mighty struggle which was going on in the heart of this man of sorrows—a struggle which resulted victoriously for himself and the human race.

For the word of Jehovah hath become to me a cause of reproach and derision all the day;

<sup>9</sup> And if I say, I will not think of it nor speak any more in his name,
Then there is in mine heart, as it were, a burning fire shut up in my bones.
And I am weary of enduring, I cannot longer bear it;<sup>a</sup>

<sup>10</sup> For I hear defaming of many, terror on every side.
Let us rise up against him, [say] all my familiar friends who watch for my stumbling;<sup>b</sup>

Perhaps he will be beguiled, and we will prevail against him and take our vengeance upon him.

<sup>11</sup> But Jehovah is with<sup>c</sup> me as a terrible hero;
Therefore my persecutors shall stumble and not prevail;
They shall be greatly put to shame because they have not done wisely;
They shall have everlasting confusion<sup>d</sup> which shall never be forgotten.
<sup>12</sup> But Jehovah,<sup>e</sup> thou righteous tester, who seest the innermost depths<sup>f</sup> of the heart,
Let me see thy vengeance upon them, for to thee have I committed my cause.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Cursed be the day in which I was born,
Let not the day wherein my mother bore me be blessed.
<sup>15</sup> Cursed be the man who brought joyful tidings to my father saying,
A man child is born to thee, making him very glad.
<sup>16</sup> Let that man be as the cities which Jehovah pitilessly overthrew;
Let him hear a cry of pain in the morning and a war-cry at noontime,<sup>h</sup>
<sup>17</sup> Because he did not let me die in<sup>i</sup> the womb, so that my mother should have been my grave and her womb ever great.
<sup>18</sup> Why came I forth from the womb to see labor and sorrow,
That my days should be consumed with shame?

Jeho-vah his sole hope of vindication

Regret that he was ever born

§ 88. The First and Second Collections of Jeremiah's Sermons, Jer. 36

Jer. 36 <sup>1</sup>Now in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, the following message came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, <sup>2</sup>Take a book-roll and write on it all the words that I have spoken to thee regarding Jerusalem and Judah and all the nations, since the day I spoke to thee, from the time of

Com-mand to re-cord his earlier proph-ecies

<sup>a</sup> 20<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb. omits, to bear it.

<sup>b</sup> 20<sup>10</sup> Translating the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>c</sup> 20<sup>11</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>d</sup> 20<sup>11</sup> Gk. and O. Lat., their confusion.

<sup>e</sup> 20<sup>12</sup> Following the Gk. and the parallel verse in 11<sup>20</sup> in omitting, of hosts.

<sup>f</sup> 20<sup>12</sup> Lit., the reins and heart.

<sup>g</sup> 20<sup>11, 12</sup> These verses lack the regular metre of the rest of the section and are only loosely connected with the context so they may possibly be secondary. A pious scribe has added the following psalm:

*Sing to Jehovah Praise ye Jehovah,
For he delivereth the life of the needy
From the hand of evil doers.*

<sup>h</sup> 20<sup>16</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>i</sup> 20<sup>17</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr.

§ 88 Cf. for critical notes, Vol. II, § 133.

Josiah, even to this day. <sup>3</sup>Perhaps the house of Judah will give heed to all the evil which I purpose to do to them, so that they will turn each from his evil way, that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

<sup>4</sup>Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah; and Baruch wrote at the dictation of Jeremiah all the words of Jehovah, which he had spoken to him, upon a roll of a book. <sup>5</sup>And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am prevented, I cannot go to the temple of Jehovah. <sup>6</sup>Therefore you go and read in the roll, which you have written at my dictation, the words of Jehovah in the hearing of the people in Jehovah's house upon the fast-day. And also you shall read them in the hearing of all the people of Judah who have come from their cities. <sup>7</sup>Perhaps they will present their supplication before Jehovah and will turn each from his evil course, for great is the anger and the wrath that Jehovah has pronounced against this people. <sup>8</sup>And Baruch the son of Neriah did just as Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading out of the books the word of Jehovah in the temple of Jehovah.

<sup>9</sup>Now in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, all the people in Jerusalem and all the people who came from the cities of Judah to Jerusalem proclaimed a fast before Jehovah. <sup>10</sup>Then Baruch read in the hearing of all the people out of the book the words of Jeremiah in the temple of Jehovah in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan, the chancellor in the upper court at the entry of the new gate of Jehovah's house.

<sup>11</sup>And when Micaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard all the words of Jehovah out of the book, <sup>12</sup>he went down into the royal palace to the chancellor's chamber, and there were sitting all the princes, Elishama the chancellor, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, Elanthan the son of Achbor, Gemariah the son of Shaphan, Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes. <sup>13</sup>Then Micaiah made known all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the hearing of the people. <sup>14</sup>Then all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, to Baruch, saying, Take in your hand the roll from which you have read in the hearing of all the people, and come here. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came to them. <sup>15</sup>Then they said to him, Sit down now and read it in our hearing. So Baruch read it in their hearing. <sup>16</sup>But when they had heard all the words, they turned in alarm to one another, and said to Baruch, We must surely tell the king of all these words. <sup>17</sup>And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, 'How did you write all these words? Then Baruch answered them, Jeremiah dictated all these words to me and I wrote them with ink in the book.' <sup>18</sup>Then the princes said to Baruch, Go, hide yourself, you and Jeremiah, and let no man know where you are.

<sup>19</sup>But they went in to the king in his apartment, after they had laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the chancellor, and they told all these words in the hearing of the king. <sup>20</sup>Then the king sent Jehudi to bring the roll, and he brought it out of the chamber of Elishama the chancellor. And Jehudi read it in the hearing of the king and of all the princes who stood beside the king. <sup>21</sup>Now the king was sitting in the winter house with a heated brazier burning before him. <sup>22</sup>And when Jehudi had read three or four double

His command to Baruch to read them before the people

The public reading

The reading before the nobles in the palace

The king's contempt for the prophecies and the prophet columns, the king cut it with a paperknife, and threw it into the fire that was on the brazier, until the entire roll was consumed in the fire that was on the brazier. <sup>24</sup>But they were not alarmed nor tore their garments—neither the king nor any of his servants who heard all these words. <sup>25</sup>Moreover, although Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah besought the king not to burn the roll, he would not hear them. <sup>26</sup>Then the king commanded Jerahmeel the king's son and Seraiah the son of Azriel and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel to seize Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet, but Jehovah kept them concealed.

<sup>27</sup>Then after the king had burned the roll, that is, all the words which Baruch wrote at the dictation of Jeremiah, the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah as follows, <sup>28</sup>Take again another roll and write in it all the words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah burned.

<sup>29</sup>And concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah thou shalt say, ‘Thus saith Jehovah, “Thou hast burned this roll saying: Why hast thou thus written therein: The king of Babylon shall assuredly come and destroy this land and shall remove from there man and beast?”’ <sup>30</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah, “He shall have none left to sit upon the throne of David and his dead body shall be exposed to the heat by day and to the frost by night. <sup>31</sup>And I will visit upon him and his descendants and his servants their iniquity, and I will bring upon them and the inhabitants of Jerusalem and the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them, but which they heeded not.”’

<sup>32</sup>Then Jeremiah took another roll and gave it to Baruch the scribe the son of Neriah, who wrote on it at the dictation of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire. And there were also added to them many other similar words.

The
new
command

Prophecy of
destruk-
tion

The new roll

§ 89. Exultation Over Necho's Defeat at Carchemish, Jer. 46<sup>1-12</sup>

Jer. 46 <sup>1</sup>The word of Jehovah which came to Jeremiah the prophet concerning the army of Pharaoh-Necho king of Egypt, which was by the River Euphrates, in Carchemish, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon defeated in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah:

Super-
scrip-
tion

<sup>§ 89</sup> The occasion of this prophecy is the most significant event in the history of this period: the overthrow of the Egyptian king Necho by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadrezzar. The decisive battle was fought in 605 B.C. at Carchemish beside the Euphrates. The result was the complete overthrow of the Egyptian rule in Asia. This overthrow meant that Jehoiakim lost his chief foreign support. The true prophets welcomed with enthusiasm the prospect of any change, for the Egyptian rule had proved onerous and had brought to Judah a period of religious reaction and moral decline. In the present section Jeremiah sings a taunt song in commemoration of the overthrow of the Egyptian power. Again Jehovah was beginning to assert himself in behalf of his faithful followers. The poem is in Jeremiah's characteristic five-beat measure and is full of local color. The long introductory superscription is from a later editor; but there is every reason for regarding his testimony as authentic and for regarding the poem as a whole as the work of Jeremiah.

In the remainder of the oracle regarding Egypt, beginning with the new superscription in <sup>12</sup>, an entirely new point of view is reflected. Egypt, instead of assuming the aggressive, is about to be conquered and carried into exile. The date would seem to be about 568 B.C., when it would seem that Nebuchadrezzar was actually taking measures to invade Egypt. This part of the prophecy, therefore, is a later appendix to the original Jeremian oracle.

The date and authorship of the remaining foreign prophecies regarding Phoenicia, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Damascus, Kedar, Elam, and Babylon, found in chaps. 46-51, are much disputed. Their position suggests that they are all a later appendix to the work of Jeremiah, and this position is maintained by many scholars. Many passages certainly reflect events of the post-exilic period. References elsewhere in his prophecies, however, indicate that Jeremiah

Summons
to battle

<sup>3</sup>Set in line<sup>j</sup> the buckler and shield and draw near to battle!

<sup>4</sup>Harness the horses and mount, ye riders,<sup>k</sup> and take your stand with your helmets!

Polish<sup>l</sup> the lances, put on the coats of mail!

Flight
of Egypt's warriors

<sup>5</sup>Why<sup>m</sup> are they terrified and turning backward?<sup>n</sup>

They flee in wild flight and look not back; terror on every side!<sup>o</sup>

<sup>6</sup>The swift cannot flee away nor the mighty warrior escape!

Northward beside the River Euphrates they have stumbled and fallen!

Egypt's
vain boasts of conquest

<sup>7</sup>Who is this that riseth up like the Nile, whose waters toss themselves like the streams?

<sup>8</sup>And<sup>p</sup> he saith, I will rise up, I will cover the earth, I will destroy<sup>q</sup> its inhabitants!

<sup>9</sup>Go up ye horses and rage ye chariots, let the mighty warriors go forth: Cush and Put, armed with shields, and the Ludim who bend<sup>r</sup> the bow!

Jeho-
vah's
judgment
on
Egypt

<sup>10</sup>But that day is Jehovah's<sup>s</sup> day of vengeance, that he may avenge himself on his adversaries;

And the sword shall devour to satiety and shall drink its fill of their blood, For Jehovah hath a sacrifice in the north-land, beside the River Euphrates.

Egypt's
overthrow final

<sup>11</sup>Go up to Gilead and take balm,<sup>t</sup> O virgin daughter of Egypt!

In vain hast thou employed many medicines; there is no healing for thee:

<sup>12</sup>Nations have heard thy wail,<sup>u</sup> and the earth is full of thy outcry, For hero hath stumbled<sup>v</sup> against hero, they are fallen both of them together!

himself did not limit his vision to Judah, Egypt, and Babylon. It is probable, therefore, that a nucleus in these prophecies comes from him, but that these original utterances have been expanded until they are really products of a later period. While they possess a certain literary and historical value, they are unimportant compared with parts of the book and have been omitted in the present volume.

The editor of the Gk. vs. of the book of Jeremiah introduces the foreign prophecies immediately after 25<sup>13</sup>, where they logically belong. A later editor has added to the superscription which introduces the oracle regarding Egypt the phrase concerning the nations: concerning Egypt in order to adapt it as a title to the foreign prophecies which follow. Removing these additions which interrupt the context, the original superscription remains.

<sup>j</sup> 46<sup>3</sup> Gk. and Syr., lift up.

<sup>k</sup> 46<sup>4</sup> Possibly this word is secondary.

<sup>l</sup> 46<sup>4</sup> Gk., take up. Possibly this is original.

<sup>m</sup> 46<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds the awkward expression, I have seen, which interrupts the context and destroys the metrical symmetry of the vs.

<sup>n</sup> 46<sup>6</sup> Heb. adds the phrase, their mighty men are broken up, but this is not in keeping with the metrical form of the vs., and is either secondary or else a fragment of a lost line.

<sup>o</sup> 46<sup>6</sup> Again a scribe has apparently inserted the incongruous phrase, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>p</sup> 46<sup>8</sup> Through a scribal error the greater part of <sup>7</sup> has been repeated with variations at the beginning of <sup>8</sup>. Only part of the repetition is found in the Gk. The second half of <sup>8</sup> is obviously the original sequel of <sup>7</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 46<sup>8</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb. the incongruous words, a city and.

<sup>r</sup> 46<sup>9</sup> Removing the word handle, which is but a scribal duplicate of the word bend.

<sup>s</sup> 46<sup>10</sup> So Syr. Heb., to the Lord Jehovah of hosts. Gk. omits, of hosts. The same phrase occurs in the last line of the vs. Here the Gk., which has been followed, has simply Jehovah. The fuller Heb. form entirely destroys the metrical form of the vs. and is a result of the scribal tendency to expand found in Jeremiah and Ezekiel.

<sup>t</sup> 46<sup>11</sup> As in 8<sup>22</sup>, the balsam of Gilead is referred to because of its far-famed curative qualities. In Gen. 43<sup>11</sup> Israel sends, among other gifts, balsam as a present to the Egyptians.

<sup>u</sup> 46<sup>12</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>v</sup> 46<sup>12</sup> Again following the superior Gk. text.

§ 90. The Conquest of Judah by Nebuchadrezzar, Jer. 25<sup>1-11</sup>, 15-2

Jer. 25 <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah king of Judah (the same was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon),<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>which Jeremiah the prophet spoke to all the people of Judah and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: <sup>3</sup>From the thirteenth year of Josiah, son of Amon king of Judah, even to this day, now twenty-three years,<sup>x</sup> I have spoken to you faithfully and earnestly and have said,<sup>y</sup> <sup>5</sup>Turn each from his evil way and from your evil deeds, that ye may dwell in the land which Jehovah hath given to you and your fathers, from of old and even from evermore.<sup>z</sup> <sup>7</sup>But ye have not heeded.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>b</sup>Therefore Jehovah<sup>b</sup> saith, ‘Because ye have not heeded my words <sup>9</sup>I am about to send and take a race<sup>c</sup> from the north<sup>d</sup> and bring them against this land and its inhabitants, and all the people<sup>e</sup> round about; and I will utterly destroy<sup>f</sup> them and make them an object of horror and hissing and a perpetual reproach,<sup>g</sup> <sup>10</sup>and I will cause to disappear from their midst the sound of

---

§ 90 The Jeremian authorship of this section has been seriously questioned. There is much in the chapter which clearly comes from the exilic or post-exilic period. The Heb. and Gk. vss. also differ widely, indicating that this twenty-fifth chapter has been subjected to a much later revision. The question, however, is not whether all the chapter is from Jeremiah, but whether or not there is a Jeremian nucleus. The evidence, on the whole, points to the conclusion that there is, and that here we have Jeremiah's interpretation of the advent of the Chaldeans as that event affected the fortunes of Judah and of the other nations along the eastern Mediterranean. While the prophet hailed the overthrow of the Egyptians, he saw clearly that the new conquerors would prove agents of judgment upon his own people and their immediate neighbors. They, like Assyria (cf. Nah. 3<sup>11</sup>), should be obliged to drink the intoxicating cup of Jehovah's wrath at the hand of the Chaldean conquerors.

The Gk. translators of the O.T., in introducing the oracles regarding the foreign nations now found in the Heb. Bible, 45-51, immediately after 25<sup>10</sup>, showed their appreciation of the fact that these oracles were closely connected with the present chapter. In their original form, however, the first thirteen vss. of chap. 25 do not properly introduce foreign oracles, but rather foretell the doom awaiting Judah at the hands of the Chaldeans. The latter part of the chapter, with its vivid picture of the cup of Jehovah's fury which the nations must drink, furnish, as Cornhill has clearly shown (Jeremia, 286-9), a fitting introduction to the foreign oracles. Of this second part of the chapter,<sup>15-24</sup> evidently contain the original Jeremian nucleus. They deal not with some distant fate but present in general terms the immediate effect of Chaldean conquest. Like the opening vss. of the chapter, their contents are in perfect harmony with the superscription, which dates the prophecy in 605 b.c., the memorable year when Nebuchadrezzar overthrew Necho and established his title to southwestern Asia. As has already been said, note § 89, it seems exceedingly probable that we have in vss. 15-24 nearly all that Jeremiah had to say regarding foreign nations. The remainder of this chapter certainly represents the work of later hands. The same is apparently true of the oracles in 46-51. Inasmuch as Jeremiah had spoken in his original utterances of the fate awaiting these foreign nations, it was natural that later spiritual disciples of the prophet should feel justified, either in expanding, in the light of later history, this earlier nucleus or else in adding to the collection of Jeremiah's sermons later anonymous oracles regarding these nations. Logically they belong immediately after chap. 25, but probably their position in the Heb. VS. of the O.T., as appendices to the book of Jeremiah, is the more original.

<sup>w</sup> 25<sup>1</sup> This explanatory clause is lacking in the Gk. and O. Lat.

<sup>x</sup> 25<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds the words, Jehovah spoke to me and.

<sup>y</sup> 25<sup>4</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, which he did not hear. This clause and the following vs., which reads, and Jehovah sent to you all his servants the prophets, early and late, but ye did not hear, interrupts the close connection between <sup>3</sup> and <sup>5</sup> and is a later scribal expansion based on 7<sup>25</sup>, 26.

<sup>z</sup> 25<sup>5</sup> Vs. 7 is the immediate and logical sequel of <sup>5</sup>. Vs. 6, like <sup>4</sup>, has all the characteristics of a scribal note, a part of the expansion of the original text which characterizes this chapter. It reads, and do not follow after other gods to serve them and to worship them, and vex me not with the work of your hands and I will do you no hurt. The last clause is clearly based on 7<sup>5b</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> 25<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. A scribe has added in the Heb., is the oracle of Jehovah, that ye might vex me with the work of your hands to your own hurt.

<sup>b</sup> 25<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts.

<sup>c</sup> 25<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb., all the families of the north.

<sup>d</sup> 25<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, is the oracle of Jehovah, namely the king of Babylon, Nebuchadrezzar, my servant.

<sup>e</sup> 25<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb., these people.

<sup>f</sup> 25<sup>10</sup> Gk. and Syr., I will lay them waste. Heb., lit., I will devote them.

<sup>g</sup> 25<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb., reproaches.

Jeremiah's message to Judah

The divine judgment by the Chaldeans mirth and gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the bride, the sound of the hand-mills and the light of the lamp. <sup>11</sup>And the whole land shall become an object of terror,<sup>h</sup> and they shall serve among the nations<sup>i</sup> seventy<sup>j</sup> years.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>15</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel to me: Take the cup of the wine of this fury from my hand, and cause all the nations to whom I send thee, to drink it. <sup>16</sup>And they shall drink, and reel to and fro, and be mad because of the sword which I am sending among you.<sup>l</sup> <sup>17</sup>So I took the cup from Jehovah's hand, and caused to drink all the nations to whom Jehovah had sent me: <sup>18</sup>namely, Jerusalem, the cities of Judah, both its kings and its princes,<sup>m</sup> <sup>19</sup>Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and his servants and princes, and all his people, <sup>20</sup>and all the foreign peoples,<sup>n</sup> and all the kings of the land of Uz,<sup>o</sup> and all the kings of the land of the Philistines, and Askelon, Gaza, and Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod,<sup>p</sup> <sup>21</sup>Edom, and Moab, and the Ammonites, <sup>22</sup>and all the kings of Tyre and all the kings of Sidon, and the kings of the coast-lands which are across the sea,<sup>q</sup> <sup>23</sup>Dedan, and Tema, and Buz,<sup>r</sup> and all those who have the corners of their hair shorn,<sup>s</sup> <sup>24</sup>and all the kings of the Arabians<sup>t</sup> who live across the desert.

<sup>b</sup> 25<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, this to a waste. Possibly the first part of this vs. is entirely secondary.

<sup>i</sup> 25<sup>11</sup> So Gk. The editor who revised the Heb. has prefixed these to nations and added the king of Babylon.

<sup>j</sup> 25<sup>11</sup> The number 70 seems to be original. It recurs again in 29<sup>10</sup>, which comes from a later period in Jeremiah's work. It is equivalent to a round number and means more than a generation. It corresponds with Ezekiel's estimate of forty years for the same period. It is in harmony with Jeremiah's advice to the exiles in 29 to build houses and rear families for the exile was to endure for a considerable period. That Jeremiah firmly believed in the future restoration of his people is shown by his later symbolic acts.

<sup>k</sup> 25<sup>11</sup> Vss. 12<sup>14</sup>, which follow, are purely editorial additions, intending to connect the fate of Judah with those of foreign nations. Part of <sup>12</sup> and all of <sup>14</sup> are lacking in the Gk. Vs. <sup>13</sup> assumes that the book of Jeremiah is in its final form. Vss. <sup>12</sup>, <sup>13</sup> read in the Heb., when the seventy years are completed I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation, saith Jehovah, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans; and I will make it desolate forever; and I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it; even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations.

<sup>l</sup> 25<sup>16</sup> Possibly this last clause is secondary.

<sup>m</sup> 25<sup>18</sup> A later scribe has expanded this vs. by adding, to make them a waste, a fright, and a kissing, and a curse, as it is this day. The latter part of this scribal gloss is lacking in the Gk.

<sup>n</sup> 25<sup>20</sup> The reference is probably to the mixed foreign population settled in Egypt.

<sup>o</sup> 25<sup>20</sup> An Aramean tribe somewhere to the northeast of Edom. Cf. Gen. 10<sup>23</sup>, 22<sup>21</sup>, 36<sup>28</sup>, Lam. 4<sup>21</sup>, Job 1<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 25<sup>20</sup> Ashdod had for many years been besieged by the Egyptians. The reference evidently is to those that survived.

<sup>q</sup> 25<sup>22</sup> I. e., the Phoenician colonies along the shores of the Mediterranean.

<sup>r</sup> 25<sup>23</sup> Three important tribes of Northern Arabia. Cf. Is. 21<sup>14</sup>, Gen. 10<sup>7</sup>, 22<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 25<sup>23</sup> The members of many of these Arabian tribes were distinguished by a peculiar cutting of the hair, which appears to have constituted the tribal mark.

<sup>t</sup> 25<sup>24</sup> Through a scribal repetition, the Heb. text is corrupt. The Gk. has preserved the more original reading.

IV

THE SERMONS OF HABAKKUK

§ 91. The Justice of Jehovah's Rule, Hab. 1<sup>1-4, 12a, 13, 21-4</sup>

<sup>1</sup>THE ORACLE WHICH HABAKKUK THE PROPHET BEHELD

Hab. 1. <sup>2</sup>How long, O Jehovah, have I cried out and thou hearest not!

<sup>3</sup>I cry to thee, Violence, but thou helpest not.

Why dost thou make me look upon wickedness and behold trouble?

Destruction and violence are before mine eyes,<sup>a</sup> and strife and<sup>b</sup> contention.

The problem
in
Judah

The Prophecy of Habakkuk.—The prophecy of Habakkuk presents one of the most difficult problems in the O.T., for it bears the simple superscription, The burden which Habakkuk saw, and contains little decisive evidence as to when it was delivered. The result is that a great variety of dates have been assigned to this little book. A recent writer, Betteridge, Am. Jour. of Theol., Oct., 1903, VII, 644-61, assigns the whole book to the year 701 b.c. G. A. Smith, in his Bk. of the Twelve Prophs., finds in 1<sup>2-24</sup> an appeal from either an Assyrian or Egyptian tyrant, from whose power the Chaldeans will deliver Jehovah's people. Peiser, in his monograph on Habakkuk, maintains that the book is a unit and that it was written by a Hebrew prince about the year 609 b.c. Peake regards 1<sup>1-11</sup> as a misplaced, pre-exilic prophecy and assigns the rest of chaps. 1, 2 to the exile. Marti, in his Dodekapropheten, argues strongly that the original prophecy is to be found in 1<sup>5-11, 12b, 14-17</sup>. Vss. 12<sup>4</sup>, 12a, 13, 21-4 he regards as a psalm coming from either the fifth or second century b.c. The woes of 2<sup>5-19</sup> he dates from 540 b.c., when the Chaldean empire was nearing its fall. Duhm, in his commentary on the book, regards the foe in 1<sup>5-11</sup> as the Kittim, or Greeks, and urges that the description does not fit the Chaldeans. He finds himself obliged, however, to make many arbitrary changes in order to adjust the text to his theory. Happel would date the prophecy in the age of Antiochus IV about 170 b.c. These differences of opinion suggest the difficulties of the problem and tend to shake confidence in the widely divergent positions maintained by the various scholars.

The decisive points in the problem are the references to the Chaldeans in the first chapter and the problem of why the righteous are oppressed by the wicked. The violence and wickedness referred to in the opening vss. seem to be within as well as without the community to which the prophet spoke. Justice is perverted by those in authority, as in § 81, Jeremiah's complaint. The problem is one that involves the justice of Jehovah's rule. The Chaldeans were also just beginning to appear on the scene. They are the agents of Jehovah's judgment upon the guilty oppressors of the righteous both within and without the community. Their motive, however, is the mere lust of conquest and their victories introduce a new problem, even though they overthrow the present oppressors. In the light of the preceding sections, it is evident that the situation is precisely similar to that described by Jeremiah; and Habakkuk's teachings are closely parallel to those of Jeremiah in the same period. The rule of Jehoiakim, under Egyptian supremacy, represented injustice and violence to the true followers of the prophets. Habakkuk, as well as Jeremiah, recognized that the fate of the faithful seemed, for the moment at least, to implicate the very justice of Jehovah himself. At the same time, after the great victory at Carchemish, the advancing Chaldeans were recognized as Jehovah's agents, commissioned to overthrow the existing régime of violence and oppression. Hence there is good reason for dating the original sections of Habakkuk in 605-4 b.c. Budde and Marti have contributed materially to the solution of the problem of Habakkuk by distinguishing between 1<sup>2-4, 12a, 13, 21-4</sup>, which deals with the question of Jehovah's justice, and 1<sup>5-11, 12b, 14-17</sup>, which interprets the significance of the advent of the Chaldeans. Separating the two groups of passages, the logical unity of each and their relation to each other becomes clear. With this rearrangement the reasons which have been urged against Habakkuk as their author disappear, and the year 605 b.c. furnishes by far their most satisfactory background.

The authorship and date of the woes in 2<sup>5-20</sup> are by no means so certain. It is evident that this passage has been supplemented by many later scribal glosses. When these have been re-

§ 91 In this passage Habakkuk shatters the false hopes of Jehoiakim and his supporters, who trusted that, with the overthrow of Assyria and Egypt, they would be free from foreign interference. For more than a century the Chaldeans had lived in obscurity in the swamps of lower Babylonia. Suddenly, under the leadership of Nabopolassar, they united with the Medes in the conquest and overthrow of Nineveh and, as a result of their great victory over Necho, entered, within two or three years, into the possession of the western empire. The description is probably based on rumor rather than actual knowledge. Many of the figures were apparently drawn from the well-known characteristics of the Assyrians to whose position and prestige the Chaldeans had succeeded.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Omitting there is, which is superfluous and destroys the metre of the vs.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. as the context requires.

Reign of lawlessness

<sup>a</sup>Therefore law is relaxed,<sup>c</sup>
And justice is never rendered;<sup>d</sup>
For the wicked encompass the righteous,
So that justice is perverted.

Jeho-
vah's strange silence

<sup>12</sup>Art thou not of old,
O Jehovah, my God, my Holy One,
<sup>13</sup>With eyes too pure to behold evil?
And thou canst not gaze upon trouble.
Why dost thou gaze upon those who deal treacherously?
Art silent when the wicked swallows him that is more righteous than he?

The
proph-
et's waiting attitude

2 <sup>1</sup>Upon my watch tower will I stand,<sup>e</sup>
And take my place at my station,
And I will watch to see what he will say to me;
And what he will answer to my plea.

The answer:
time
will prove that
the righteous
alone
survive

<sup>2</sup>Then Jehovah answered me and said:
Write down the vision and make it plain upon tablets,
That he may run who reads it.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>3</sup>For the vision is still for times yet to be appointed;
Yea, it hastens to fulfilment and shall not fail;
Though it lingers, wait for it;
For it shall surely come, it will not tarry,<sup>g</sup>
<sup>4</sup>Behold the wicked—his soul fainteth within him,<sup>h</sup>
But the righteous—he liveth by his faithfulness.

moved there remains a stirring prophecy in the spirit and literary form characteristic of the pre-exilic prophets. The arrogance and cruelty of the Chaldeans, which are denounced in the latter part of 1, are here made the object of severe denunciation. It is possible that they come from Habakkuk himself, but they are on the whole related most closely to the denunciations of Babylon and the Chaldeans, which come from the middle and latter part of the Babylonian exile. Logically, however, they belong with the description of the Chaldeans found in the first chapter, and hence have been introduced in their present context.

With a few exceptions students of the book of Habakkuk are agreed that the third chapter is a post-exilic psalm describing in majestic terms the advent of Jehovah to deliver his people and professing an undying faith in Jehovah. Its present position in the book of Habakkuk is probably due to the fact that in its closing vss. the same problem of the suffering of the righteous is presented as in the first chapter of the book. Its logical and permanent place, however, is with the psalms of the Psalter, with which it is closely related.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>14</sup> Possibly the text is corrupt as the Gk. has a different rendering. The general meaning, however, is clear.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>14</sup> Lit., goes forth perverted.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>21</sup> I. e., upon the prophetic watch-tower, studying human history, seeking, from the course of events, to learn the divine purpose.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>21</sup> I. e., make it so plain that one may read it at a glance.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>23</sup> A full demonstration of the principle which the prophet would proclaim belongs to the future, and yet events are transpiring so rapidly the time will not be long. The implied situation accords well with the epoch-making years, 605-4 B.C.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>24</sup> This verse contains the principle which the prophet was commanded clearly to set forth. The first line of this vs. in the standard text makes little sense. It is ordinarily translated, behold, his soul is puffed up, it is not upright in him. This reading leaves the antecedent entirely indefinite and furnishes no antithesis to the righteous in the second member of the couplet. The text is evidently corrupt. Many conjectural reconstructions have been suggested. The Targ. supplies the antithesis required by the context in that it reads, behold, the wicked. This is also supported by the Syr. A simple reconstruction of the Heb. of the remainder of the line gives the above reading. The Gk. rendering is, my soul is not pleased with him. Either rendering supplies the demands of the context, although the former carries out the parallelism

§ 92. Significance of the Advent of the Chaldeans, Heb. 1<sup>5-11</sup>, 12b, 14-17, 2<sup>5-20</sup>

Hab. 1 <sup>5</sup>Look around ye that deal treacherously, look well, Shudder and be shocked.
For I am about to do a work in your days—
Ye shall not believe it when it is told.
<sup>6</sup>For behold I am about to raise up the Chaldeans,
A nation grim and quick of action;
Who go through the whole breadth of the earth
To possess dwelling places not their own.
<sup>7</sup>Awful and terrible are they,
From them judgment<sup>i</sup> goeth forth.
<sup>8</sup>Their horses are swifter than leopards,
And their riders quicker than the wolves of evening.<sup>j</sup>
From afar they come swooping down,
Like the eagle which hastens to devour.
<sup>9</sup>They<sup>k</sup> all come to do violence,
The direction of their faces is straight ahead,
And they gather up captives like sand.
<sup>10</sup>At kings they scoff,
And princes are sport to them.
They laugh at every fortress,
And heap up dust and take it.<sup>l</sup> <sup>11</sup>Then their spirit changes, and they pass by,
And they make their strength their god.

The Chaldeans are Jehovah's agents of judgment

<sup>12b</sup>O Jehovah<sup>m</sup> thou has appointed them for judgment,
And thou, O Rock, hast established them for correction;
<sup>14</sup>For they<sup>n</sup> make men like fish of the sea,
Like worms which have no ruler.
<sup>15</sup>They<sup>o</sup> gather up all in their net,
And catch them in their drag-net;<sup>p</sup>

Their irresistible advance

more perfectly. The thought is that wickedness and righteousness carry in themselves their own reward, the wicked man has in himself the seeds of decay, while the righteous man having in himself the consciousness of doing right, and because of the faith in God which causes that consciousness, lives, and lives abundantly. The wicked man has no such supporting consciousness but is the prey of fear and the effects of his misdeeds.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Amending the text as the context and demands of metre require.

<sup>j</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Eliminating a verb which is apparently due to repetition of three of the consonants of the following word. The same word is again repeated at the beginning of the following line but is not found in the Gk.

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> Translating the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. The verbs in this and the following vs. are in the singular, although the pronominal suffix referring to the subject of the preceding and following verbs is plural. Evidently a collective subject is implied as in the woes of 2<sup>5-20</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>0</sup> The reference is evidently to the capture of cities by casting up earthworks around them. Cf. II Sam. 20<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>2b</sup> A marginal gloss, we shall not die, has been introduced at the beginning of this line. It is entirely out of connection with the preceding and following vss. and is apparently only the remark of some early reader of the text.

<sup>n</sup> 1<sup>14</sup> Restoring the original verb, which has clearly been attracted by the verbs in 1<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> Omitting, he taketh up with the angle, a parallel phrase, explanatory of the original text.

<sup>p</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> The concluding line of this vs., therefore they rejoice and are glad, is probably also a marginal gloss, although it may possibly have formed a part of the original text.

<sup>16</sup>Therefore they sacrifice to their net,
And burn offerings to their drag-net;
For by them is their portion fat,
And their food is rich.
<sup>17</sup>Shall they forever bare their sword,<sup>a</sup>
And continually slay peoples without mercy?

<sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup>Woe<sup>r</sup> to the proud and treacherous,
The arrogant one, who never has enough,<sup>s</sup>
Who makes his desire as wide as Sheol,
He is like death, unsatisfied,<sup>t</sup>
For he hath gathered to himself all the nations,
And brought together to himself all peoples.
<sup>6</sup>Shall not these, all of them, take up a proverb against him,

Well-merited
fate of
the cruel
conqueror

Rejoicing of his victims

Results
of his cruel rapacity

Punishment
for his bloody conquests

And a taunt-song against him, and say,
Woe to him who heaps up what is not his own,<sup>u</sup>
And loads himself with a burden of guilt?
<sup>7</sup>Shall not thy creditors rise up,
And thy troublers awake,
And thou be a spoil for them?<sup>v</sup>
<sup>8</sup>Because thou hast spoiled many nations,
All the survivors of the people shall spoil thee,
For the shedding of men's blood and the violence on the earth,
On cities and all their inhabitants!

<sup>9</sup>Woe to him who gets evil gain for his house,<sup>w</sup>
To build his nest on high,
To save himself from the grasp of calamity!

<sup>10</sup>Thou hast planned shame for thy house,
Thou hast cut<sup>x</sup> off many peoples,
And thou hast sinned against thyself.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For the stone shall cry out from the wall,
And the cross-beam from the timber shall answer it.

<sup>12</sup>Woe to him who builds a city by shedding blood,
And establishes a town in iniquity,

<sup>q</sup> <sup>117</sup> Following an amended text. The standard Heb. reads, shall he therefore empty his net. This is not consistent with the second member of the couplet. This vs., as a whole, may be secondary.

<sup>r</sup> <sup>25</sup> Following Wellhausen, in reconstructing the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>26</sup> Again following a restored Heb. text., suggested by the Syr.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>26</sup> Cf. Pr. 27<sup>1</sup>, 30<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> <sup>26</sup> A later scribe has apparently added the introduction, how long.

<sup>v</sup> <sup>27</sup> I. e., his day of requital shall come at the hands of those he has wronged.

<sup>w</sup> <sup>29</sup> House probably stands here for a nation or dynasty.

<sup>x</sup> <sup>210</sup> So Gk.

<sup>y</sup> <sup>210</sup> Possibly the Heb. should read, and forfeited thine own life. Even the stones and beams which the Chaldeans shall build into their houses, as the fruit of their robbery, shall bear testimony to the guilt and cruelty of the conqueror.

<sup>13</sup>So<sup>z</sup> that the nations toil for smoke,

And the peoples wear themselves out for nought!<sup>a</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Woe to him who gives his neighbor to drink,

From the cup of his wrath<sup>b</sup> till he be drunken,

That he may gaze on his<sup>c</sup> nakedness!

<sup>16</sup>Drink thou also and stagger.<sup>d</sup>

The cup of Jehovah's right hand cometh round to thee,

Thou art sated with shame—not with glory,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>17</sup>For the violence done to Lebanon shall cover thee,

And the destruction of the beasts shall terrify thee,<sup>f</sup>

For the shedding of men's blood on the earth.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Woe<sup>b</sup> to him who saith to a block, awake!

To a dumb stone, arise!<sup>h</sup>

Behold, it is set with gold and silver,

But there is no breath at all within it.

<sup>20</sup>Jehovah is in his holy temple,

Let all the earth be silent before him!<sup>i</sup>

Woe to
all idola-
tors

* 2<sup>13</sup> A scribe has apparently added, lo, is it not from Jehovah of hosts? In its present context, this would surely be contrary to the teaching of the prophet. It may well represent a marginal gloss which has crept into the text.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> A scribe, who had in mind Is. 11<sup>9</sup>, has here added, for the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea. The verse lacks the metrical form which characterizes the rest of the prophecy, and introduces a thought entirely alien to the passage.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> So Gk. Also slightly correcting the Heb. after the analogy of Nah. 3<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and parallel passages. Through an error of the copyist two Heb. letters have been transposed.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> The Heb. of the last line is badly corrupt. Apparently a scribe, by mistake, quoted it in its original form at the beginning of the vs. Restoring it to its logical position the meaning of the vs. is clear.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>17</sup> Following the vss. in slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>g</sup> 2<sup>17</sup> Possibly these two lines are simply repeated from 8c, d.

<sup>h</sup> 2<sup>19</sup> A scribe, commenting on this vs., added in the margin the following vs., which later was incorporated in the text before rather than after 1<sup>9</sup>: of what use is a graven image when an artist has graven it, or a molten image and a false oracle in which the one who molded it has put his trust, making dumb idols? The contents as well as the prose form of this vs. leave no doubt as to its secondary character.

<sup>i</sup> 2<sup>19</sup> The unintelligible words, he shall teach, are added at this point. They probably represent the scornful interjection of some later scribe, which has been incorporated in the text.

<sup>j</sup> 2<sup>19-20</sup> These closing vss. are probably later additions to the original woes. They reflect post-exilic ideas and point of view. Cf. Is. 46<sup>1-4</sup>, Ps. 135<sup>17</sup>. Vs. 20 is composed of Ps. 11<sup>4</sup> and Zeph. 1<sup>7</sup>.

V

JEREMIAH'S SERMONS IN CONNECTION WITH THE FIRST CAPTIVITY

§ 93. The Guilt and Fate of Jehoiakim, Jer. 22<sup>13-23</sup>

Jehoia-
kim's selfish
cruel
policy

Jer. 22 <sup>13</sup>Woe to him<sup>a</sup> who buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by injustice;

Who causeth his neighbor to labor without wages, and giveth him not his pay;

<sup>14</sup>Who saith, I will build me<sup>b</sup> a vast palace with spacious chambers;

Provided with deep-cut windows,<sup>c</sup> ceiled with cedar and painted with vermillion.

<sup>15</sup>Dost thou call thyself king because thou excellest in cedar?

Thy father—did he not eat and drink and execute law and justice?<sup>d</sup>

<sup>16</sup>He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well.

Was not this to know me? saith Jehovah.

<sup>17</sup>But thine eyes and heart are bent only on thy dishonest gain,

And on the shedding of innocent blood and on oppression and violence!<sup>e</sup>

Jehoia-
kim's
fate

<sup>18</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah:<sup>f</sup>

They shall not lament over him, 'O my brother' or 'O my sister'!

Jeremiah's Sermons in Connection with the First Captivity.—According to II Kgs. 24<sup>1</sup> Jehoiakim submitted without opposition to Nebuchadrezzar, and for three years Judah enjoyed peace. But in 601 b.c. he rebelled and thereby inaugurated a period of disaster culminating in the first captivity of 597 b.c. The primary cause of this foolish behavior was probably the unstable character of Jehoiakim himself. The Egyptians, who rightly feared the power of Nebuchadrezzar, undoubtedly had incited him to the act. The false prophets, of whom at this time there were many in Judah, aroused false hopes in the minds of the people. Jehoiakim seems at this time to have stood alone in defying the power of the mighty Chaldean king. The rebellion was so insignificant that Nebuchadrezzar at first contented himself with sending against Jehoiakim bands of the Arameans, Moabites, and Ammonites. These were apparently supplemented by the local Chaldean soldiery. Cf. II Kgs. 24<sup>1, 2</sup>, Vol. II, § 138. For three or four years the territory of Judah appears to have been overrun with these hostile bands. But Jerusalem with its strong walls stood out against them, until in 597 Nebuchadrezzar sent an army to complete the capture of the city.

During these disastrous years Jeremiah's message was naturally one of lamentation over the calamities which were overtaking his nation and the follies and crimes which had brought upon it these disasters.

§ 93 The picture of Jehoiakim given in this section is evidently faithful in every detail. In his policy he aligned himself with Solomon and Ahab without possessing the ability of either. In his blind regard for his own selfish interests he entirely ignored those of his subjects. In the face of national disaster and heavy taxation to meet the demands of grasping foreign conquerors, he went on building for himself an elaborate palace. The social principles underlying this powerful passage are of universal application. In vss. 20-23 the prophet turns from the king to address the nation, to condemn it for its crimes, and to commiserate it for the pitiable fate that was about to overtake it as a result of the follies of its leaders. The note of coming disaster and the unrestrained freedom with which Jeremiah denounces Jehoiakim imply that this prophecy comes from near the end of his reign, probably between 601 and 597 b.c.

<sup>a</sup> 22<sup>13</sup> The Gk. supplies the article required by the context.

<sup>b</sup> 22<sup>14</sup> Gk., thou hast built for thyself. This may represent the original.

<sup>c</sup> 22<sup>14</sup> This line is especially difficult. The Gk., which has, in general, been followed, probably preserves the original. Heb., cutteth him out his windows. The rest of the line in the Heb., as it stands, is untranslatable.

<sup>d</sup> 22<sup>15</sup> So Gk. A scribe has introduced by mistake, at the end of this vs., a clause found at the end of 16<sup>a</sup>. The king referred to in these vss. is, of course, Josiah, whose just rule became the ideal of later prophets and psalmists.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>17</sup> Following the slightly superior reading of the Gk.

<sup>f</sup> 22<sup>18</sup> The Gk. adds, woe over this man.

They shall not bewail<sup>g</sup> for him, 'O lord,' or 'O his glory!'

<sup>19</sup> He shall be buried as an ass is buried, drawn out and cast forth!<sup>h</sup>

<sup>20</sup> Go up to Lebanon<sup>i</sup> and cry out, and in Bashan let thy voice resound;
And cry out from Mount Abarim, for all which thou lovest<sup>j</sup> are broken in pieces.

<sup>21</sup> I spoke to thee in thy prosperity<sup>k</sup> but thou saidst, I will not hear;
This has been thy way from thy youth, thou<sup>l</sup> hast not hearkened to my voice.

<sup>22</sup> All thy shepherds the wind shall shepherd, and those whom thou lovest shall go into captivity;
Then<sup>m</sup> thou shall be put to shame and confounded because of all thy wickedness.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>23</sup> Thou who dwellest on Lebanon, thou who nesteth among the cedars,
How wilt thou groan<sup>o</sup> when pangs come upon thee,<sup>p</sup> as of a woman in travail?

§ 94. Jehovah's Lament Over His Sinful People, Jer. 12<sup>7-12</sup>

Jer. 12 <sup>7</sup>I have forsaken my house, I have cast off my heritage,
I have given over my dearly beloved into the hands of his enemies.

<sup>8</sup>Mine heritage hath become to me as a heritage in the forest;
She hath raised her voice against me, therefore do I hate her.

<sup>9</sup> Is my heritage to me as a speckled bird of prey,<sup>q</sup> so that the birds of prey gather around against her?

Go assemble all the beasts of prey, bring them<sup>r</sup> to devour!

<sup>10</sup> Many shepherds have destroyed my vineyard, they have trampled down mine inheritance under foot,

They have made my beautiful portion a desolate wilderness!

<sup>11</sup> They have made<sup>s</sup> it a desolation, to my sorrow it mourneth desolate;
The whole land is desolate, for no man taketh it to heart.

<sup>12</sup> Upon all the bare heights of the wilderness spoilers have come;
From<sup>t</sup> one end of the land to the other no flesh hath peace.

Judah summoned to bewail her coming fate

Jehovah's guilty people, the prey of their foes

<sup>g</sup> 22<sup>18</sup> So Gk. The Heb. repeats the verb of the preceding line.

<sup>h</sup> 22<sup>19</sup> A scribe, to make the preceding statement explicit, has added the unmetrical line, beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

<sup>i</sup> 22<sup>20</sup> Judah, which is here addressed collectively, is dramatically commanded to go forth to the commanding heights on the north and east and there bewail her fate. Bashan was the east-Jordan territory northeast of Judah and the mountains of Abarim are the peaks of Northern Moab, among which was the famous Mt. Nebo. Cf. Num. 27<sup>12</sup>, 33<sup>17</sup>, Dt. 32<sup>10</sup>, 34<sup>1, 2</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 22<sup>20</sup> These were Judah's allies which had lured her on to rebellion and disaster.

<sup>k</sup> 22<sup>21</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>l</sup> 22<sup>21</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, that.

<sup>m</sup> 22<sup>22</sup> So Syr. and Lat. Heb. adds, verily.

<sup>n</sup> 22<sup>22</sup> Gk., thy lovers.

<sup>o</sup> 22<sup>23</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The Heb. text is slightly corrupt.

<sup>p</sup> 22<sup>23</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, pain, but this is unnecessary and destroys the metrical symmetry of the vs.

<sup>q</sup> 94 This touching elegy over the fate of Judah was evidently written when the marauding bands of the Arameans, Moabites, and Ammonites were overrunning the land. The shepherds are rulers like Jehoiakim. Saddest of all, Jehovah, instead of protecting his people, was compelled to bring upon them the judgment which they so richly deserved.

<sup>r</sup> 12<sup>19</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., as the context demands.

<sup>s</sup> 12<sup>19</sup> So Gk. and parallel passage in Is. 59<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> 12<sup>11</sup> So Targ. and Lat. The Heb. text is corrupt.

<sup>u</sup> 12<sup>12</sup> The clause at the beginning of this line, for the sword of Jehovah devours, destroys the metre and has no close connection with its context. It is probably secondary.

§ 95. The Fallen Nation, Jer. 13<sup>15-17, 20-27</sup>

Jeremiah's remonstrance

Jer. 13 <sup>15</sup>Hear ye and give ear, be not proud for Jehovah hath spoken!
<sup>16</sup>Give glory to Jehovah your God, before it growtheth dark,
 Before your feet stumble upon the mountains enveloped in twilight;
 And while ye wait for light ye turn it into blackness and dense darkness.<sup>u</sup>
<sup>17</sup>But if ye will not hear it,<sup>v</sup> I must weep in secret because of your pride.<sup>w</sup>
 And mine eyes must shed torrents of tears because Jehovah's flock is taken captive.

Agents of divine judgment at hand

<sup>20</sup>Lift up thine eyes and behold them who come from the north!
 Where is the flock that is given thee, thy beautiful sheep?
<sup>21</sup>What wilt thou say when they shall set over thee as head<sup>x</sup>
 Those whom thou hast taught to be thy friends?
 Will not pains take hold of thee as a woman in child-birth?
<sup>22</sup>And if you say in thine heart, Why are these things come upon me?
 For the greatness of thine iniquity are thy skirts uncovered and thou sufferest violence.
<sup>23</sup>Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the panther his stripes?
 Then may ye also do good, who have learned evil.
<sup>24</sup>Therefore I will scatter thee as stubble borne away by a desert wind.
<sup>24</sup>This is thy lot, the portion measured out to thee, is Jehovah's oracle.
 Because thou hast forgotten me and trusted in falsehood, <sup>26</sup>Therefore I have stripped off thy skirts before thy face, that thy shame might be revealed, <sup>27</sup>Thine adulteries and thy neighings and the lewdness of thy whoredom.<sup>y</sup>
 On the hills and<sup>z</sup> in the fields I have seen thy detestable deeds.
 Woe to thee, Jerusalem! How long will it be before thou becomest clean?

Innate guilt of the nation about to be revealed

§ 96. Lesson from Rechabites, Jer. 35

Command regarding the Rechabites

Jer. 35<sup>1</sup> This word which came to Jeremiah from Jehovah in the days of Jehoiakim king of Judah: <sup>2</sup>Go to the house of the Rechabites and bring them into the temple, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

§ 95 This is another of Jeremiah's exquisite but pathetic lamentations over Judah's coming fate. One readily detects the prophet's sobs and heart-break as he pictures the calamity which for him is already a reality. Vss. <sup>18, 19</sup> come from the same general period, but evidently refer to the young king Jehoiachin and the queen-mother and represent a later stage in the siege of Jerusalem. The present elegy, like the preceding, evidently comes from the last days of Jehoiakim's reign, when the hostile hosts were closing about the city.

<sup>u</sup> 13<sup>16</sup> The figure is a powerful one, that of the brief period before the gathering storm when, instead of a rift in the clouds, the clouds settle down with their ominous darkness.

<sup>v</sup> 13<sup>17</sup> This first clause may be secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 13<sup>17</sup> So Gk. and the requirements of the context. The Heb. adds, weep bitterly.

<sup>x</sup> 13<sup>21</sup> The reference, of course, is to the Chaldeans. The sense and the metre favor the transfer of this word to the position in the sentence given above. Another possible rendering of the Heb. would be, Why dost thou say that he (Jehovah) has been appointing friends over thee, while thou thyself have taught them to rule over thee?

<sup>y</sup> 13<sup>22</sup> Following the superior order and construction of the Gk.

<sup>z</sup> 13<sup>27</sup> So Gk. Heb., on the hills in the field.

§ 96 The incident here recorded also belongs to the last days of the siege of Jerusalem. The invading bands of the Arameans and Chaldeans had driven the wandering Rechabites to seek refuge in Jerusalem. In their life and tribal organization they had kept alive the nomadic traditions of Israel's earlier faith. The father or founder of this peculiar sect was Jonadab, a contemporary of Jehu, mentioned in II Kgs. 10<sup>6-17, 25</sup>. They represented an extreme reaction from the agricultural type of Canaanitish civilization which flourished especially in Northern

<sup>3</sup>Then I took Jazaniah, the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habazziniah, and his kinsman and his son and all the Rechabites <sup>4</sup>and brought them into the temple of Jehovah into the chamber of the sons of Johanan the son of Hananiah the son of Gedaliah the man of God, which is by the chamber of the princes, above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the threshold; <sup>5</sup>and I set before them bowls of wine and cups and said: 'Drink wine.'

Testing
the Recha-
bites

<sup>6</sup>But they answered: 'We drink no wine.' For Jonadab our father commanded us: 'Ye shall never drink wine, neither ye nor your sons; <sup>7</sup>neither shall ye build a house nor sow seed, nor possess a vineyard; but all your days ye shall dwell in tents, that ye may live long in the land wherein you dwell as aliens.' <sup>10</sup>And we have obediently done just as Jonadab our forefather commanded us. <sup>11</sup>But when Nebuchadrezzar came up against the land, we said: 'Come let us go to Jerusalem from before the army of the Chaldeans and the army of the Arameans.' So we dwell there.

Their
reply

<sup>12</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>13</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'Go and say to the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: "Will ye not learn instruction as to how one should heed my words? <sup>16</sup>For, while the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the command of their forefather, this people hath not hearkened to me." <sup>17</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah, 'Behold I am about to bring upon Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them.'

Application
of the lesson
to
Judah

<sup>18</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: 'Because the descendants of Jonadab the son of Rechab have been obedient and have done as their father commanded them, <sup>19</sup>the descendants of Jonadab the son of Rechab shall never lack a man to serve me as long as the earth stands.'

Promise to
the Recha-
bites

§ 97. Fate of Jehoiachin and the Queen-mother, Jer. 13<sup>18-19</sup>, 22<sup>24-30</sup>

La-
ment
over
coming
captivity

Jer. 13 <sup>18</sup>Say<sup>a</sup> to the king and to the queen-mother, Sit ye down low, For from your head<sup>b</sup> hath fallen your fair crown.

<sup>19</sup>The cities of the South Country are shut up; and there is none to open; All Judah is carried away into exile, with a complete captivity.

Israel. The culture of the vine and the wine made from its grapes were characteristic of that civilization. Hence Jonadab's injunction was that his tribesmen should retain their nomadic manner of life and customs and have nothing to do with the civilization of Canaan.

In his eagerness to make a deep impression upon his countrymen, Jeremiah recognized in the habits and fidelity of this nomadic tribe a dramatic illustration. The present section describes how effectively he employed it.

The Gk. text varies widely from the Heb. The Heb. is at many points verbose and obscure, while the Gk. is briefer, clear-cut, and lucid at every point. The variations are evidently due to a deliberate expansion of the original text (which the Gk. has preserved) by the scribe or group of scribes who have given us the present Heb. text. In the translation adopted above the Gk. text has accordingly been followed throughout.

§ 97 King Jehoiakim died before the final capture of Jerusalem. He left his throne to his eighteen-year-old son Coniah, who assumed on his accession the royal name of Jehoiachin. Owing to the extreme youth of the king his authority seems to have been shared by the queen-mother, the wife of Jehoiakim. His short reign of three months ended in exile in Babylon. With him went the queen-mother, the royal officials, the chief men of the land, the warriors and craftsmen, in all about ten thousand men. The words of Jeremiah found in the present section were probably uttered on the eve of the fall of Jerusalem in 597 B.C. With true insight he saw that the degenerate house of Jehoiakim had proved so incapable that it had forever forfeited its right to the throne of Judah.

<sup>a</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat.<sup>b</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., with the aid of the Gk., Syr., and Lat.

Jeremiah's prediction of Jehoiachin's fate

22 <sup>a</sup>As I live, saith Jehovah, though Coniah [Jehoiachin] the son of Jehoiakim were the signet-ring upon my right hand, I would pluck him<sup>c</sup> thence, <sup>b</sup>and I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life,<sup>d</sup> whom, thou darest, into the hands of the Chaldeans,<sup>e</sup> <sup>f</sup>and I will hurl thee forth and thy mother who bore thee into a<sup>f</sup> land where ye<sup>g</sup> were not born, and there ye shall die. <sup>g</sup>But to the land for which they long<sup>h</sup> they shall not return. <sup>28</sup>Is Coniah<sup>i</sup> despised as a broken vessel and thrown forth into a land which he knoweth not? <sup>29</sup>O land, land,<sup>j</sup> hear the word of Jehovah! <sup>30</sup>Write<sup>k</sup> down this man as childless!<sup>l</sup> For none<sup>m</sup> of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David and ruling any more in Judah.

Vision of the two baskets of figs

Jehovah's question

Character and future of the exiles

§ 98. Character of the Exiles and of those Left in Judah, Jer. 24

Jer. 24 <sup>1</sup>After Nebuchadrezzar had carried Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah and the princes<sup>n</sup> and craftsmen and the joiners and the rich men<sup>o</sup> of Jerusalem into exile to Babylon, Jehovah showed me two baskets of figs.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>One<sup>q</sup> basket had very good figs, like first-ripe figs, and the other basket had very bad figs which could not be eaten they were so bad.

<sup>3</sup>Then Jehovah said to me, What seest thou Jeremiah, and I answered Figs, the good figs are very good and the bad very bad, so bad that they cannot be eaten.

<sup>4</sup>Thereupon this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>5</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel: 'Like these good figs, so will I regard for good the exiles of Judah whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans; <sup>6</sup>and I will watch over their welfare and will bring them back to this land, so that I will build them up and not pull them down, I will plant them and not pluck them up, <sup>7</sup>and I will give them a heart to know me, that I am Jehovah;<sup>r</sup> and they shall be my people and I will be their God, when they return to me with their whole heart.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>24</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., which reads, thee.

<sup>d</sup> 22<sup>25</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, into the hand of those.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>25</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon.

<sup>f</sup> 22<sup>26</sup> So Gk. Heb., another.

<sup>g</sup> 22<sup>26</sup> So Gk. The Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>h</sup> 22<sup>27</sup> Following the briefer Gk. text.

<sup>i</sup> 22<sup>28</sup> Again following the briefer text of the Gk. and O. Lat. The Heb. is badly corrupt.

<sup>j</sup> 22<sup>29</sup> So Gk. Heb. repeats the word land three times.

<sup>k</sup> 22<sup>30</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds the cumbersome gloss, Thus saith Jehovah.

<sup>l</sup> 22<sup>30</sup> So two Heb. MSS. and Gk. A Heb. scribe by mistake has repeated in corrupt form the opening words of the next sentence.

<sup>m</sup> 22<sup>30</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, a man.

§ 98 In his usual graphic way Jeremiah pictures the contrast between the Jews who were carried into exile in 597 and those who were left behind. Nebuchadrezzar had taken good care to transfer to Babylon the most intelligent and gifted of the people of Judah, including the leaders in the professional, intellectual, and religious classes. The advisers who rallied about Zedekiah, the son of Josiah, whom Nebuchadrezzar placed on the throne, were necessarily drawn from the poorer classes. Although Jeremiah's contemporary, Ezekiel, was keenly alive to the faults of the exiles among whom he lived, he also recognized the inferior character and greater vices of those who were left in Judah. Cf., e. g., Eze. 11. Subsequent history confirmed the judgment of these prophets. One admires, however, Jeremiah's courage more than his tact in comparing his fellow-countrymen, among whom he must live, to a basket of worthless figs, which, when decayed, are among the most loathsome of sights.

<sup>n</sup> 24<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and the Syr. of Origen. Heb., princes of Judah.

<sup>o</sup> 24<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, and the rich.

<sup>p</sup> 24<sup>1</sup> It is difficult to see why a basket of worthless figs should be standing before the temple of Jehovah. It is probable, however, that the clause, found in the Heb., standing before the temple of Jehovah, was added by a later editor who wished to make still clearer the identification of the baskets of figs with Jehovah's chosen people.

<sup>q</sup> 24<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and Syr. and the demands of the context. Through the mistaken writing of one letter the Heb. reads, one.

<sup>r</sup> 24<sup>7</sup> This phrase, more characteristic of Ezekiel than Jeremiah, may have been added by a later scribe.

<sup>s</sup>But as for the bad figs which are so bad that they cannot be eaten,<sup>s</sup> saith Jehovah, So will I give up Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes and the remnant of Jerusalem that is left in this land and those who dwell in the land of Egypt; <sup>t</sup>and I will make them an object of consternation<sup>t</sup> to all the kingdoms of the earth, and they shall be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places<sup>u</sup> whither I shall drive them; <sup>10</sup>and I will send the sword, famine and pestilence among them until they are completely consumed out of the land which I gave to them.<sup>v</sup>

of Zedekiah and his subjects

§ 99. Jeremiah's Letter to the Babylonian Exiles, Jer. 29

Jer. 29 <sup>1</sup>Now these are the words of the letter which Jeremiah of Jerusalem sent to the elders of the exiles,<sup>w</sup> <sup>3</sup>by the hand of Eleasar, the son of Shaphan and Gemariah, the son of Hilkiah, whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Babylon:

The
superscrip-
tion

<sup>4</sup>Thus saith Jehovah the God of Israel to the exiles whom I have carried into exile from Jerusalem: <sup>5</sup>Build houses and dwell in them and plant gardens and eat the fruit of them. <sup>6</sup>Take wives and let your sons take wives and give your daughters to husbands, and multiply and be not diminished; and seek the welfare of the land whither I have carried you into exile, and pray to Jehovah for it; for in its prosperity rests your own prosperity.

Settle down
in Babylon

<sup>7</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, 'Let not the prophets who are in your midst nor your diviners deceive you; neither heed their dreams which they dream. <sup>8</sup>For they prophesy falsely in my name; but I have not sent them.'

Heed
not false
proph-
ets

<sup>10</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, 'As soon as seventy years be accomplished for Babylon, I will visit you and fulfil my promises to you, by bringing you back to this place. <sup>11</sup>For I cherish for you thoughts of peace and not of evil, that I may give you a future and a hope. <sup>12</sup>Pray to me and I will hear you; <sup>13</sup>seek me and ye shall find me; if ye seek me with all your heart, I will reveal myself to you.'

Promise of final restora-
tion

<sup>s</sup> 24<sup>s</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The phrase which follows, thus saith Jehovah, is superfluous and may also be a scribal addition.

<sup>t</sup> 24<sup>g</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, for a misfortune.

<sup>u</sup> 24<sup>g</sup> Gk., place.

<sup>v</sup> 24<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and to their fathers.

<sup>g</sup> 99 The Jews deported to Babylon by Nebuchadrezzar in 597 were not scattered throughout the empire, but settled in a colony by themselves in certain villages along the Khabur canal, mentioned in certain recently discovered contract tablets coming from the early Persian period. This canal ran through a rich alluvial territory lying between Babylon and the ancient city of Nippur. Here in fields far more productive than those of Judah the exiles were free to continue their old agricultural life. Except in the punishment of capital offences, they appear to have been allowed to live according to their own laws.

The importance of this little Judah in the heart of distant Babylon, in the eyes of Jeremiah, explains why he sought to guide them, even as Ezekiel, living in Babylon, devoted his attention largely to the Jews left behind in Judah. During the period between the first and second captivity, communication between the Jews in Palestine and Babylonia was evidently very close. The present letter of Jeremiah in setting, aim, and character is akin to the epistle which Paul wrote to the churches which he could not visit. It illustrates the close similarity between the so-called prophecies of the O.T. and the epistles of the New. Aside from differences in theme and date, the only fundamental distinction between the two is that the prophets ordinarily spoke in person to their bearers, while the apostles were, to a great extent, obliged to depend upon the written letter.

The divergencies between the Heb. and Gk. versions of Jeremiah's letter are very wide. Here again the Gk. has preserved a far briefer and better version which, with the exception of a few words, undoubtedly represents the original. The variations in the Heb. are readily recognized as explanatory or hortatory glosses with the characteristic form and ideas of the later scribes. These glosses are so unimportant that they may be ignored. In the translation given above, the Gk. text has been adopted as the basis.

<sup>w</sup> 29<sup>1</sup> The Gk. text has here been supplemented, although not so fully as the Heb., by a further description of the different classes which had been carried into exile. This scribal note is based on 24<sup>1</sup>, II Kgs. 24<sup>12</sup>.

Fate
of the immoral proph-
ets

<sup>15</sup>Because ye have said, Jehovah hath raised us up prophets in Babylon, <sup>21</sup>thus saith Jehovah concerning Ahab, the son of Kolaiah, and concerning Zedekiah, the son of Maaseiah.<sup>x</sup> Behold I will deliver them into the hand of the king of Babylon and he shall slay them before your eyes. <sup>22</sup>And from them men shall take up the curse for all the exiles of Judah in Babylon: 'Jehovah make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire'; <sup>23</sup>for they have wrought impious folly in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbor's wives and have spoken in my name that which I did not command them, and I am the witness, is the oracle of Jehovah.

She-maiah's opposition

<sup>24</sup>And to Shemaiah the Nehelamite thou shalt also speak,<sup>y</sup> because this one wrote in his name to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying, Jehovah hath made thee priest instead of Jehoiadah the priest, that thou shouldst be overseer in Jehovah's house over every man who is mad and pretendeth that he is a prophet, that thou shouldst put him in the stocks and in the neck-rings. <sup>27</sup>Now therefore why hast thou not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth, who pretends to you that he is a prophet, inasmuch as he has written to us this very month to Babylon, as follows: <sup>28</sup>The matter<sup>z</sup> is prolonged, build houses and dwell in them and plant gardens and eat the fruit from them.
<sup>29</sup>And Zephaniah read this letter to Jeremiah.

Judgment awaiting him

<sup>30</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah: <sup>31</sup>Send to the exiles saying, 'Thus saith Jehovah concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite: "Because Shemaiah hath prophesied to you, although I have not sent him, and hath caused you to trust in a lie," <sup>32</sup>therefore thus saith Jehovah, Behold I will visit in judgment Shemaiah and his descendants, and he shall have no one among you who shall see the good fortune which I am about to bring to you; he shall see it not, for he hath spoken rebellion against Jehovah."<sup>za</sup>

§ 100. Jeremiah's Advice and Warning to Zedekiah, Jer. 22<sup>1-8</sup>

Jere-
miah's
exhortation
to the king

Jer. 22 <sup>1</sup>Thus saith Jehovah [to Jeremiah], Go<sup>b</sup> down to the palace of the king of Judah and speak there this message: <sup>2</sup>Hear the word of Jehovah, O king of Judah, who art sitting upon the throne of David, thou and thy servants<sup>c</sup> and thy people who enter in by these gates!
<sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, "Execute justice and righteousness and deliver him who is robbed from

<sup>x</sup> 29<sup>21</sup> The Gk. has not preserved the names of these two false prophets.

<sup>y</sup> 29<sup>24</sup> Heb., as follows; but the message is first given in 30-32.

<sup>z</sup> 29<sup>28</sup> I. e., the duration of the exile.

<sup>a</sup> 29<sup>32</sup> This last clause seems to be original although it is not preserved in the Gk.

<sup>b</sup> § 100 This short section is the introduction to the oracles regarding the different kings of Judah found in the remainder of the chapter. Vss. <sup>6, 7</sup> contain an original prophecy of Jeremiah. Vss. <sup>1-5</sup> are probably based upon an original Jeremian utterance, but they, like the corresponding material in <sup>6, 7</sup>, have been worked over in the spirit of the Deuteronomic editors. It is difficult to determine the date of the original utterances. The freedom with which Jeremiah speaks suggests that it was the reign of Zedekiah, who was ever ready to listen to the words of Jeremiah even though he was slow to act upon them.

The brief oracle in 23<sup>1, 2</sup> is the conclusion of the prophecies concerning Judah's kings. It undoubtedly comes from the earlier part of the reign of Zedekiah, but it relates not so much to the deeds of that unfortunate ruler as of those of his immediate predecessors. It is in fact a summary of 22. To this severe arraignment of Israel's rulers later prophets have appended in <sup>3, 4</sup> a promise that the scattered exiles shall be restored, and in <sup>5-8</sup> a promise that a scion should arise from the house of David who should restore and unite Judah and Israel. These verses are practically a duplicate of 33<sup>15, 16</sup> and 16<sup>14, 15</sup>. Vss. <sup>7, 8</sup> are also lacking in the Gk. While original here, they represent a very late addition and voice the post-exilic hope of a general restoration of the Jewish exiles.

<sup>b</sup> 22<sup>1</sup> Gk., go out, go down.

<sup>c</sup> 22<sup>2</sup> Gk., thy house. Possibly this is original.

the hand of his oppressor, and do no wrong nor violence to the resident alien, the orphan and the widow nor shed innocent blood in this place. <sup>4</sup>For, if he faithfully follow this command, then there shall enter into the gates of this palace kings who shall sit on the throne of David and ride in chariots<sup>d</sup> and on horses. <sup>5</sup>But if he will not give heed<sup>e</sup> to these words, I swear by myself," saith Jehovah, "that this palace shall become a desolation."<sup>f</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Thus saith Jehovah concerning the palace of the king of Judah:

Thou art Gilead to me, even the top of Lebanon:

Yet verily I will make thee a wilderness, like cities uninhabited!

<sup>7</sup>And I will bring in destroyers against<sup>f</sup> thee, each with his weapon;

And they will cut down thy choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.

Lament over the fall of the palace

<sup>8</sup>And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say, each to the other: Why hath Jehovah done thus to this great city? <sup>9</sup>And they shall answer: Because they forsook the covenant of Jehovah their God, and worshipped other gods and served them.

Cause of the calamity

23 <sup>1</sup>Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the flock entrusted to their care!<sup>g</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah,<sup>h</sup> concerning those who take care of my people:<sup>i</sup>

Ye have scattered my flock<sup>j</sup> and ye have not concerned<sup>k</sup> yourself about them;

Behold I will concern myself about you, about the evil of your deeds.<sup>l</sup>

Condemnation of the rulers

§ 101. Crimes of the False Prophets, Jer. 23<sup>9-40</sup>

Jer. 23 <sup>9</sup>Mine heart<sup>m</sup> within me is broken, all my bones relax;

I am become like a drunken man, as a man overcome by wine;

Because of Jehovah and because of his glorious majesty.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>10</sup>For the whole land is full of adulterers,<sup>o</sup>

Judgment coming upon the faithless priests and prophets

<sup>d</sup> 22<sup>4</sup> Heb. adds the awkward phrase, he and his servants and his people, Gk., they and their servants and their people. The awkwardness of the clause, the variation in the VSS., the lack of connection in the context, all suggest that it is a later gloss.

<sup>e</sup> 22<sup>5</sup> Gk., do.

<sup>f</sup> 22<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and the Syr. of Origen. Heb., I will consecrate it. Possibly the Heb. is original.

<sup>g</sup> 23<sup>1</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr. Lit., of your shepherding. Heb., of my pasture. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah, but this would seem to be a scribal expansion which destroys the symmetry of the verse.

<sup>h</sup> 23<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, God of Israel.

<sup>i</sup> 23<sup>2</sup> The Heb. repeats shepherds, but this is omitted in two manuscripts and the Gk.

<sup>j</sup> 23<sup>2</sup> The Heb. adds, and ye have driven them away, but this would seem to be only a scribal variation of the preceding.

<sup>k</sup> 23<sup>2</sup> Lit., ye have not visited them.

<sup>l</sup> 23<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>§ 101</sup> This prophecy regarding the false prophets of Jehovah is closely connected with the preceding prophecies regarding the kings of Judah, and probably comes from the same period, the earlier part of the reign of Zedekiah, not long after the first captivity. It was the misleading counsel of these mercenary or self-deceived prophets that earlier encouraged the people of Judah to rebel against Nebuchadrezzar and that now threatened to bring another catastrophe upon the nation. They had prophesied with the same formulas and seemingly with the same authority

<sup>m</sup> 23<sup>9</sup> This section is appropriately introduced in the Heb. by the superscription, concerning the prophets.

<sup>n</sup> 23<sup>9</sup> Heb., from before Jehovah and his holy words. The Gk. has been followed in the translation.

<sup>o</sup> 23<sup>10</sup> This line is lacking in the Gk. and may well be secondary; in fact, the entire vs. may be late. Some scribe has added the incongruous sentence, for because of the curse the land mourneth; the pastures of the wilderness are dried up. These words interrupt the thought and are plainly secondary.

And their course is evil and their might is not right,

<sup>11</sup>For both prophet and priest are shamefully corrupt.

Even in my temple have I found<sup>p</sup> their wickedness, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>12</sup>Therefore their way shall be to them as slippery places.

Into darkness shall they be thrust along and fall therein;

For I will bring evil upon them, even the time of their visitation.<sup>q</sup>

Prophets of Jerusalem
worse than were those of Samaria

<sup>13</sup>In the prophets of Samaria I saw that which was sickening,

They prophesied by Baal, and led my people Israel astray.

<sup>14</sup>But in the prophets of Jerusalem I have seen a horrible thing:

They commit adultery, they walk in falsehood and strengthen the hands of evil-doers.<sup>r</sup>

They are all of them like Sodom, and its inhabitants like Gomorrah.

<sup>15</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah<sup>s</sup> concerning the prophets:

Behold I will feed them with wormwood and make them drink the water of gall;

For from the prophets of Jerusalem hath profaneness gone forth into all the land.

Their
false
message

<sup>16</sup>Hearken<sup>t</sup> not to the words of the prophets,<sup>u</sup> they fill you with vain hopes; They speak the vision of their own heart,<sup>v</sup> not out of the mouth of Jehovah.

<sup>17</sup>They say<sup>w</sup> to those who despise<sup>x</sup> the word of Jehovah: ‘Ye shall have peace.’ And if<sup>y</sup> any one walk according to the stubbornness of his own heart:<sup>z</sup> ‘No evil shall come upon you.’

<sup>18</sup>For who hath stood in the council of Jehovah and seen;<sup>a</sup>

Who hath perceived his word<sup>b</sup> and heard it?<sup>c</sup>

as the true prophets. Until disaster gave the lie to their predictions, they undoubtedly stood high in public favor as loyal patriots, while Jeremiah was branded as a pessimist and a traitor. As the event proved, they were the worst foes to Judah, for they undermined the popular confidence in the prophet and gave a pseudo-divine authority to the follies of the people and their rulers. Jeremiah, in emphasizing the importance of a prophet's acts in determining his authority, established a new and important criterion for judging a prophet. His arraignment of the errors and crimes of his false colleagues is one of the strongest passages in all his prophecies. The section, however, has been revised at certain points. In the concluding paragraph,<sup>30-40</sup>, if there is an original nucleus it has been fundamentally recast and supplemented by later hands. It lacks the poetic form and beauty of the preceding and is devoted to the consideration of petty details rather than to the general principles, which ever commanded Jeremiah's attention. It may therefore with good grounds be regarded as a later supplement.

<sup>p</sup> 23<sup>11</sup> Gk. and Syr. of Origen, I have seen.

<sup>q</sup> 23<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>r</sup> 23<sup>14</sup> Heb. adds, so that they do not turn each from his evil.

<sup>s</sup> 23<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts. The Gk. also omits the phrase, concerning the prophets.

<sup>t</sup> 23<sup>16</sup> In its present form this vs. lacks the poetic form of the preceding passages. This is apparently due to scribal revision. The clause, thus saith Jehovah of hosts, which stands at the beginning is entirely superfluous and probably secondary. Eliminating this and following a suggestion of the Gk. the original may be restored as above.

<sup>u</sup> 23<sup>16</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, who prophesy to you.

<sup>v</sup> 23<sup>16</sup> Following the superior Gk. rendering.

<sup>w</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> Following the VSS. in omitting the word saying found in the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk., O. Lat., and Syr.

<sup>y</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg.

<sup>z</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> So Gk. A. O. Lat., and Arab. Heb. adds, they say.

<sup>a</sup> 23<sup>18</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk., Syr., and Lat.

<sup>b</sup> 23<sup>18</sup> Rearranging this line as the sense demands and the variations in the readings suggest.

<sup>c</sup> 23<sup>18</sup> A later editor has here introduced, in vss. 19, 20, a quotation from 30<sup>23, 24</sup>. They interrupt the connection and are clearly secondary.

<sup>21</sup>I have not sent the prophets, yet they ran!

I have not spoken to them, yet they have prophesied!

<sup>22</sup>If they had really stood in my council and heeded my words,

Then would they have turned back my people from their evil deeds.<sup>d</sup>

Their repudiation
by Je-
hovah

<sup>23</sup>Am not I a God near by<sup>e</sup> and not a God far off ?

<sup>24</sup>Can a man hide himself in secret places and I not see him ?<sup>f</sup>

Do not I fill both heaven and earth ?

<sup>25</sup>I have heard what the prophets say,

They who prophesy falsely in my name, saying: 'I have dreamed, I have dreamed';

<sup>26</sup>How long shall there be a message in the heart of the prophets who prophesy falsehood,

And prophesy the deceit of their own heart, <sup>27</sup>thinking that they can make my people forget my law,<sup>g</sup>

By their dreams which they recount each to his neighbor,

Just as their fathers forgot my name through Baal ?

Their
folly in thinking
they can escape
Jeho-
vah

<sup>28</sup>The prophet, who has a dream, let him recount his<sup>h</sup> dream;

And he with whom is my word let him speak my word faithfully.

What hath the straw to do with the wheat?<sup>i</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>29</sup>Is not my word<sup>j</sup> like a fire,<sup>k</sup> like a hammer which breaks in pieces the rocks ?

Their
real duty

<sup>30</sup>Therefore Behold,<sup>l</sup> I am against the prophets,<sup>m</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah, who steal my words each from the other. <sup>31</sup>Behold, I am against the prophets, who use their tongues and say, 'An oracle.' <sup>32</sup>Behold, I am against the prophets who prophesy<sup>n</sup> lying dreams and recount them and lead my people astray by their lives and by their reckless boasting; yet I sent them not nor commanded them, neither are they of any profit to this people.

Jeho-
vah's opposition to false
proph-
ets

<sup>33</sup>And when this people, or a prophet, or a priest shall ask thee, 'What is Jehovah's burden?' thou shalt say to them, 'Ye<sup>p</sup> yourselves are the burden, and I will cast you off,' is the oracle of Jehovah. <sup>34</sup>And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people who shall say, 'Jehovah's burden'; I will visit in judgment that man and his household. <sup>35</sup>Thus shall ye

<sup>d</sup> 23<sup>22</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, from their evil deeds and.

<sup>e</sup> 23<sup>23</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>f</sup> 23<sup>24</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah. A scribe has again added the same words at the end of the second line.

<sup>g</sup> 23<sup>27</sup> So Gk. Heb., forget my name.

<sup>h</sup> 23<sup>28</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits his.

<sup>i</sup> 23<sup>29</sup> I. e., let them not mix the wheat and the chaff, the false and the true. The prophet should proclaim only the truth.

<sup>j</sup> 23<sup>29</sup> Following the Syr., O. Lat., Vulg., and Arab. in omitting the so found in the Heb.

<sup>k</sup> 23<sup>29</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>l</sup> 23<sup>30</sup> Vss. 30-31 are not found in Gk. and may be a very late addition to the present context.

<sup>m</sup> 23<sup>31</sup> The words, it is the oracle of Jehovah, have been added in this and the two following vss. They are not found in the Gk., however, and are probably due to very late scribes.

<sup>n</sup> 23<sup>32</sup> So Gk. and Lat.

<sup>o</sup> 23<sup>33</sup> The play is upon the double meaning of the word massa, which comes from the root, lifted or taken up, and means either a burden, that which is borne on the lips, or in its secondary, more technical sense, an oracle. The term appears to have been derisively applied to Jeremiah's prophecies because, in view of their constant note of doom and denunciation, they were regarded by their foes, not only as a divine oracle but as a burden. The reply is that not Jehovah's words but the people themselves are a burden. The term, however, was no longer to be employed by the true prophets because its use had been perverted.

<sup>p</sup> 23<sup>33</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg., and the correct division of the Heb. radicals.

say, each to<sup>q</sup> his neighbor and each to his brother, 'What hath Jehovah answered and what hath Jehovah spoken?' <sup>36</sup>But ye shall mention no more Jehovah's burden, for every man's word is his burden,<sup>r</sup> and what hath Jehovah our God spoken?<sup>s</sup>

Penalty
for disobedience

<sup>t</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah our God,<sup>t</sup> because ye say this word, Jehovah's burden, and I have sent to you saying, Ye shall not say, Jehovah's burden; <sup>39</sup>therefore, behold, I am here, and I will surely take you up<sup>u</sup> and cast you off from the city which I gave you and your fathers, out of my sight;<sup>v</sup> <sup>40</sup>and I will lay upon you an everlasting reproach and a perpetual disgrace which shall not be forgotten.

§ 102 The Babylonian Yoke Upon the Necks of the Nations, Jer. 27

The
warning to the rebellious kings of Palestine

Jer. 27 <sup>1</sup>In the fourth year [593 B.C.] of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fifth month, this word came from Jehovah to Jeremiah:<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>Thus Jehovah saith to me: 'Make thongs<sup>x</sup> and a yoke and put them on thy neck, <sup>3</sup>and send to the kings of Edom, of Moab, of the Ammonites, of Tyre and of Sidon, by the messengers who have come to Jerusalem to Zedekiah king of Judah, <sup>4</sup>and let them give this command to their masters: "Thus saith Jehovah, God of Israel, Thus shall ye say to your masters: <sup>5</sup>I have made the earth<sup>y</sup> by my great power and by mine outstretched arm, and I give it to whom it seemeth right to me. I now have given the earth to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon my servant and the beasts of the field to serve him; <sup>7</sup>and the people and the kingdom which will not put their neck in the yoke of the king of Babylon will I punish by sword and famine, until I have given them<sup>z</sup> into his hand, is Jehovah's oracle. <sup>8</sup>But ye, hearken ye not to your prophets nor to your diviners nor to your dreamers nor to your soothsayers and sorcerers, who say: Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon! <sup>10</sup>For they prophesy a lie to you, in order to re-

<sup>q</sup> 23<sup>35</sup> Correcting the Heb. text by the aid of certain MSS.

<sup>r</sup> 23<sup>36</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and ye pervert the words of the living God, of Jehovah of hosts, our God.

<sup>s</sup> 23<sup>36</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, repeating the thought of <sup>35</sup>, thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath Jehovah answered thee?

<sup>t</sup> 23<sup>38</sup> So Gk. The words, our God, are not found in the Heb.

<sup>u</sup> 23<sup>39</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The Heb. has, through an error, failed to preserve the play on the Heb. word meaning, take up or lift up.

<sup>v</sup> 23<sup>39</sup> Gk. omits, out of my sight. The phrase may well be secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 102 Chaps. 27 and 28, together with chap. 29, constitute a little book within the larger book of Jeremiah. They have certain literary peculiarities which are shared with no other passages in the book of Jeremiah. Thus, for example, Jeremiah and Hananiah are spoken of repeatedly as the prophet. The Heb. spelling of the name Jehovah and of the reigning king of Babylon are also different from that commonly followed. These peculiarities are in part confined to the Heb. version. The Gk. text of 27 is much shorter and clearer than the Heb. This shorter Gk. version has been followed in the translation given above. This original version may well come from the pen of Jeremiah's scribe, Baruch. The first person, which is used throughout, would suggest that Jeremiah himself dictated its contents to Baruch. The detailed and circumstantial character of the narrative still further establishes its historical value. It is a vivid and dramatic scene from Jeremiah's daily experience. Again at a critical moment in the history of Judah the prophet resorted to an object lesson to impress his teachings. Evidently the kings of the neighboring nations had just sent emissaries to Zedekiah in order to persuade him to rebel against Nebuchadrezzar. Judah's false prophets joined in urging the king and people to raise the standard of revolt. Again Jeremiah appears to have stood alone. With all his powers of word and act he endeavored to dissuade them from this foolish course.

<sup>x</sup> 27<sup>1</sup> This verse is lacking in the Gk. The original prophecy probably began with <sup>2</sup>, preserving the first person throughout. The accepted Heb. text reads, at the beginning of the reign of Jehovah (i.e., Zedekiah), but clearly this is simply due to the mistake of a scribe who repeated the superscription of 26. From <sup>3</sup>, <sup>12</sup> and from <sup>28</sup> it is perfectly obvious that the events here described took place in the fifth month of the fourth year of the reign of Zedekiah.

<sup>y</sup> 27<sup>2</sup> Lit., bars, i. e., the pieces which constituted the yoke. The thongs bound the yoke together about the neck.

<sup>z</sup> 27<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the men and animals which are upon the face of the earth. This well illustrates the type of additional glosses which distinguish the Heb. version from the Gk. which has been followed.

<sup>s</sup> 27<sup>8</sup> Slightly revising the text as the context requires.

move you far from your land. <sup>11</sup>But that people which shall bring its neck into the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him I will leave in their own land, and they shall till it and dwell therein.”

<sup>12</sup>And to Zedekiah king of Judah I spoke the same words and said: Bring your neck into his yoke and serve the king of Babylon; <sup>13</sup>for these prophets prophesy a lie to you, <sup>14</sup>for I have not sent them, is Jehovah’s oracle, and they prophesy in my name falsely, that they might drive you out and that ye might perish, together with the prophets who have prophesied falsely to you.

<sup>15</sup>And to the priests and the whole people I said: Thus saith Jehovah: ‘Listen not to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you saying: “Behold the vessels of Jehovah’s house shall shortly be brought back from Babylon.” For they prophesy a lie to you. <sup>16</sup>But if they be prophets, and if Jehovah’s word be really with them, then let them make intercession with me.’ <sup>17</sup>For thus saith Jehovah: ‘The other vessels <sup>18</sup>which the king of Babylon did not take with him to Babylon, when he carried away into captivity from Jerusalem Jeconiah king of Judah, shall be brought to Babylon,’ is Jehovah’s oracle.’

To Zedekiah

Further captivity, not an immediate date restoration

§ 103. Hananiah’s Opposition, Jer. 28

Jer. 28 <sup>1</sup>Then Hananiah, the son of Azzur, the prophet of Gibeon, said to me in the temple in the presence of the priests and all the people, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: ‘I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon, <sup>3</sup>within two years I will bring back to this place the vessels of Jehovah’s house, and Jeconiah and the Jewish exiles; for I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.’

<sup>4</sup>Then Jeremiah said to Hananiah in the presence of the priests and all the people who were standing in the temple: <sup>5</sup>Amen! Even so may Jehovah do. May he fulfil the words that you have prophesied and bring back the vessels of the temple and all the exiles from Babylon to this place! <sup>6</sup>Only hear, I pray, the word that I speak in your ears and in the ears of all the people: <sup>7</sup>The prophets of old, who were before me and before you, prophesied of war against many countries and great kingdoms. <sup>8</sup>If a prophet prophesied a peace, then, when the word came to pass, it was known whether Jehovah had truly sent this prophet.’

<sup>9</sup>Thereupon Hananiah, in the presence of all the people, took the yoke from Jeremiah’s neck and broke it; <sup>10</sup>and Hananiah said in the presence of all the people: Even so will I break the yoke of the king of Babylon from off the necks of all people. Then Jeremiah went his way.

<sup>11</sup>Now the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah after Hananiah had broken the yoke from off his neck, saying, <sup>12</sup>Go and say to Hananiah: <sup>13</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, “Thou hast broken the yoke of wood, but I will make<sup>a</sup> in its stead

Hananiah’s prediction of restoration

Jeremiah’s reply

Hananiah’s symbolic act

The iron yoke of Babylon

§ 103 The present section reveals the strenuousness of the struggle between the nationalistic party in Judah and the true prophets. Jeremiah’s opponent, Hananiah, was evidently not lacking either in wit or in devotion to his cause. It was a clear case of a self-deceived enthusiast. The first person, which appeared in the preceding section, disappears, and we have here a narrative from some one of Jeremiah’s biographers, presumably Baruch. The detailed prediction concerning Hananiah may be in part due to the work of the historian, who was evidently acquainted with the fact. Again the somewhat shorter and superior Gk. text has been followed.

<sup>a</sup> 28<sup>14</sup> Heb. and Gk., thou hast made, but the context requires the reading, I will make.

one of iron. I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these peoples, that they may serve the king of Babylon.”

Han-aniah's
fate

<sup>15</sup>Then Jeremiah said to Hananiah: Jehovah hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in lies. <sup>16</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: Behold I will send thee away from the face of the earth. This very year shalt thou die. <sup>17</sup>And he died in the seventh month.

VI

EZEKIEL'S SERMONS BEFORE THE FINAL DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM

§ 104. Ezekiel's Vision, Ezek. 1

Date
and place

Ezek. 1 <sup>1</sup>In the thirtieth year,<sup>a</sup> in the fifth day of the fourth month, as I was among the captives by the River Chebar,<sup>b</sup> the heavens were opened and I saw visions of God,<sup>c</sup> <sup>3</sup>and the hand of Jehovah was on me<sup>d</sup> there.

Ezekiel's Sermons before the Final Destruction of Jerusalem.—As has already been noted, Introd., pp. 24, 25, Ezekiel was one of Jerusalem's priests carried captive to Babylon in 597 b.c. His call to take up the work of a prophet did not come, however, until 592, when he had been five years in Babylon. His writings have been carefully edited, Cf. Introd., p. 56.

The text of Ezekiel's sermons has suffered from minor scribal errors, but there are comparatively few supplemental passages. This was probably due to Ezekiel's precise and repetitious style, and the fact that the contents of his prophecies did not appeal as strongly as did the impassioned utterances of Isaiah and Jeremiah to the interests and zeal of the later annotators. As a whole, Ezekiel's prophecies present comparatively few critical problems. They lack, however, the poetic form and the literary vigor of many of the prophets who preceded and followed him. The influence of his priestly training and point of view is discernible at every point. Elaborate symbolism and allegory begin to take the place of the direct address. His sermons come from the study rather than the public forum and reflect the leisure and spirit of meditation which distinguished the exile from the strenuous years preceding. These prophecies record, however, the work of a man who was dealing with great and vital problems and who, in his characteristic way, made a profound impression upon his own and especially succeeding generations.

§ 104. This section, like Is. 6 and Jer. 1, is a general introduction to the prophet's work as a whole and was doubtless written with that aim. It reveals at every point the results of deliberate and careful elaboration. Back of it doubtless lies a deep spiritual experience in the soul of the prophet which marked the beginning of his prophetic ministry. In the light of the historical situation it is possible to ascertain what were some of the external influences which prepared the mind of the prophet for the call which then came to him. As a youth he had listened to the impassioned words of Jeremiah. Ezekiel's experience in the exile confirmed the truth of Jeremiah's teachings and made it clear that the great need of the hour was not for form and ritual, but for men to interpret honestly and forcibly the significance of the situation and to shape the faith and hopes of their countrymen, and to deliver them from the bondage of the errors which were widely prevalent.

It is probable that Ezekiel's sense of personal responsibility and consciousness of a divine call culminated on the definite day which he has indicated at the beginning of his prophecy.

<sup>a</sup> 1st The meaning of the thirtieth year is uncertain. Ezekiel's method of reckoning would suggest some event in Chaldean history, possibly the founding of the new Babylonian empire, about 626 b.c.

<sup>b</sup> 1st The river Chebar was, in all probability, the Kabaru Canal, mentioned in some recently discovered inscriptions, coming from the early Persian period. It appears to have been one of the great highways connecting Babylon with the ancient city of Nippur.

<sup>c</sup> 1st In this chapter, as elsewhere, Ezekiel speaks in the first person, but a later scribe, endeavoring to define more exactly the date of Ezekiel's vision, has added the following chronological note, in the fifth day of the month, that is, in the fifth year of the captivity of king Jehoachin, the word of Jehovah came to the priest Ezekiel the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans, by the River Chebar.

<sup>d</sup> 1st Following the Gk., Syr., and certain Heb. MSS. Present Heb., attracted by the preceding scribal note, reads, to him.

<sup>4</sup>And I looked and behold, a storm wind came from the north, a mighty cloud, surrounded by brightness and shot through with fire,<sup>e</sup> and out of its midst gleamed something like shining<sup>f</sup> metal.<sup>g</sup> <sup>5</sup>And out of its midst appeared the forms of four living creatures. And this was their appearance: they had the form of a man, <sup>6</sup>each had four faces and four wings; <sup>7</sup>their legs were straight<sup>h</sup> and the soles of their feet were like the sole of a calf's foot. They shone like polished<sup>i</sup> bronze. <sup>8</sup>And the hands<sup>j</sup> of a man were under their wings, on the four sides, and the wings of the four <sup>k</sup>touched each other, and their faces<sup>k</sup> did not turn as they went; each went straight forward. <sup>10</sup>And this was the form of their faces: all four had in front<sup>l</sup> the face of a man; on the right, the face of a lion; on the left the face of a bull; and behind,<sup>l</sup> the face of an eagle. <sup>11</sup>Their wings<sup>m</sup> were separated above, the one from the other; each wing of the pair was joined to its neighbor, while one pair of wings covered the upper part of the body. <sup>12</sup>Each went straight forward; whither the spirit impelled him to go, he went, and they turned not as they went. <sup>13</sup>And in the midst<sup>n</sup> of the living creatures was an appearance like glowing coals of fire, like torches,<sup>o</sup> and it was moving up and down among the living creatures, and the fire was gleaming, and from the fire went forth lightning. <sup>14</sup>And as the living creatures moved to and fro, there was an appearance like lightning.<sup>p</sup>

Jehovah's throne and the four creatures supporting and guarding it

<sup>15</sup>And I beheld the living creatures, and lo, a wheel<sup>q</sup> was on the ground

In recounting that experience, however, he has evidently sought to impress upon his readers, in concrete, symbolic form, his fundamental conceptions of the character of Jehovah. There is so much of this conscious elaboration in the first chapter of Ezekiel that it is difficult to believe that all the detailed symbolism was part of the initial vision. It is rather the product of Ezekiel's characteristic methods of teaching. Its prototype is Isaiah's initial vision; but this has been freely modified under the influence of the changed political situation and Ezekiel's contact with the highly developed, symbolic religion of Babylonia. Jehovah is no longer represented as sitting enthroned in his temple at Jerusalem, but on a celestial throne, guarded by four creatures which correspond to the four quarters of the heavens. Hence he is able to come and dwell among the distant exiles, even as of old he had dwelt at Sinai and Jerusalem. The four animals also apparently symbolize different attributes: the eagle, swiftness of flight; the lion, royal majesty; the bull, natural strength; the human figure, knowledge and intelligence. The eyes on the swiftly revolving wheels also suggest divine omniscience; and the splendor of the throne, Jehovah's majesty and omnipotence. The effort thus to teach theology in objective form is exceedingly bold, and no one but a priest-prophet like Ezekiel would have thought of attempting it. The result is, necessarily, somewhat artificial and open to criticism, and yet there is little doubt that Ezekiel made, in this way, a deep impression upon his contemporaries, who could learn from picture and symbol what they could never grasp in abstract form.

<sup>14</sup> Following the Gk. and transposing these clauses, which are thus brought into their syntactical and logical order.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>14</sup> The exact meaning of this word is uncertain.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>14</sup> The Heb. adds what is apparently a scribal gloss, from the midst of the fire.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>17</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. and Syr.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>17</sup> Again following the superior reading of the Gk., Syr., and Arab.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>18</sup> The Heb. is clearly corrupt, but certain MSS. have preserved the original, which is to be followed.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>19</sup> Transferring, and their faces, from this verse, where it is inconsistent, to verse <sup>9</sup>, where these words are demanded. The present order is clearly due to a scribal error.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>10</sup> Supplying the phrase, in front in the first part of the vs. and, behind, in the latter part, as demanded by the context. The Heb. text is evidently corrupt. Ezekiel's thought was clearly influenced by his familiarity with the colossi or genii, with the bodies and faces of men, or birds, or beasts, which adorned the Babylonian temples.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>11</sup> A scribe has introduced, in the Heb., and their faces, but this phrase is inconsistent with the context, which deals simply with wings. The meaning of this obscure verse seems to be, that the upper pair of wings was distinct from the lower, which covered the body of the living creature.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>13</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk., Lat. and Arab.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>13</sup> Possibly this clause is secondary.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>14</sup> Possibly this verse is secondary.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>15</sup> Possibly, with the Syr., this should be read, wheels. The meaning, however, of the verse is clear.

The wheels which accompanied
the creatures

beside each of the four living creatures. <sup>16</sup>The appearance<sup>r</sup> of the wheels was like topaz,—the four had the same form and their construction was as though one wheel were within another. <sup>17</sup>They went in whatever direction their four sides faced, and<sup>s</sup> they did not turn as they went. <sup>18</sup>And their felloes—they were high and dreadful<sup>t</sup>—were full of eyes, on all sides. <sup>19</sup>And when the living creatures moved, the wheels moved beside them; and when the living creatures rose up from the earth, the wheels rose up; <sup>20</sup>whithersoever the spirit impelled them to go they went;<sup>u</sup> and the wheels rose up beside them, for the spirit of the creatures was in the wheels. <sup>21</sup>When those moved, these moved, and when those stood still, these stood still, and when those rose up from the earth, the wheels rose up beside them, for the spirit of the creatures was in the wheels.

<sup>22</sup>And<sup>v</sup> on the heads of the creatures was a firmament, in appearance like crystal, stretched out above their heads.<sup>w</sup> <sup>23</sup>Under the firmament their wings were stretched<sup>x</sup> out straight, each touching the other, and two covering their upper body.<sup>y</sup> <sup>24</sup>And I heard the sounds of the wings as the sound of many waters, like the voice of the Almighty,<sup>z</sup> the sound of a tumult, like the sound of a multitude; and when they stood still, they folded their wings.

<sup>26</sup>Above the firmament, which was over their heads, was something that resembled sapphire, in the form of a throne, and on the form of the throne was a form<sup>a</sup> which resembled a man. <sup>27</sup>And I saw something like shining metal, which resembled fire, surrounded by brightness. From what seemed his loins, above and below, I saw what looked like fire, surrounded by brightness, <sup>28</sup>like the bow which appears in a cloud, on a rainy day; such was the brightness round about. It was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of Jehovah.

And when I saw, I fell upon my face, and I heard the voice of one speaking.<sup>b</sup>

---

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> The Heb. adds, and their construction, but this is omitted in the Gk. as is also, and their appearance, which a scribe has added before and their construction, in the same verse. These glosses well illustrate the tendency of the later scribes to expand the text.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> Adding and as do the vss. and certain MSS.

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> Possibly this clause is secondary.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> A scribe has added in the Heb. the repetitious phrase, there was the spirit to go.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>22</sup> The verse is introduced by the awkward phrase, and the form.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>22</sup> The Syr. omits this sentence.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>23</sup> Adding, with the Gk., Lat., and Arab., the participle, which is demanded by the context.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>23</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk., Lat., Arab., and the context.

<sup>z</sup> 1<sup>24</sup> Possibly the phrase, as the voice of the Almighty, is secondary.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>26</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> The account of Ezekiel's call and commission immediately follows this elaborate introduction.

The firma-
ment
above
the wings
of the guardian creatures
Jeho-
vah seated
upon
his throne

The
divine
voice

§ 105. The Prophet's Commission, Ezek. 2<sup>1</sup>-3<sup>11</sup>

Ezek. 2 <sup>1</sup>Then [Jehovah] said to me, Son of man stand up on thy feet that I may speak with thee. <sup>2</sup>And the spirit entered into me, as he spoke to me, and made me stand upon my feet; and I heard him who spoke to me.

<sup>3</sup>And he said to me, Son of man, I am about to send thee to the rebellious house of Israel;<sup>d</sup> who have rebelled against me,<sup>e</sup> both they and their fathers, even to this day. <sup>4</sup>If<sup>f</sup> is I who send thee to them that thou shouldst say to them: 'Thus saith<sup>g</sup> Jehovah.' <sup>5</sup>Whether<sup>h</sup> they will hear or refuse to hear—for they are a rebellious house—they shall learn that a prophet is among them. <sup>6</sup>And thou son of man, fear them not nor be dismayed at their words, though briars and thorns are about thee<sup>i</sup> and thou dwellest among<sup>j</sup> scorpions. Be not afraid of their words nor be dismayed at their looks; for they are a rebellious house.<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>But do thou speak my words to them, whether they hear or refuse to hear; for they are a rebellious house.

<sup>8</sup>But thou son of man, hear what I say to thee. Be not rebellious like this rebellious house. Open thy mouth and eat what I give thee. <sup>9</sup>Then I looked and there was stretched out to me a hand in which there was a roll of a book. <sup>10</sup>And he unrolled it before me and it was written within and without; and in it were written lamentations and mourning and woe. <sup>3</sup> <sup>1</sup>And he said to me, Son of man,<sup>l</sup> eat this roll and go speak to the house of Israel. <sup>2</sup>So I opened my mouth and he made me eat the roll. <sup>3</sup>And he said to me, Son of man, eat and be filled with<sup>m</sup> this roll which I give thee. Then I ate it and it was as sweet as honey in my mouth.

<sup>4</sup>And he said to me, Son of man, up, go to the house of Israel and speak my words to them. <sup>5</sup>For thou art not sent to a people of strange speech,<sup>n</sup> nor to many peoples<sup>o</sup> whose words thou couldst not understand. Verily, if I sent

Command
to stand up

To go
and speak
to rebellious
Israel

To find true
joy
in receiving
and proclaiming Je-
hovah's
message

To deliver
that message courageously
in the face of opposition

§ 105 This section introduces us to the actual call of the prophet. As with the great prophets who preceded him, it came to him with such definite direct form that he reports it as a direct dialogue between him and Jehovah. He is addressed here, as usual throughout his prophecies, as the son of man. The term is used only by Jehovah and never by the prophet himself. It emphasizes his humanity, and humility in the presence of the Deity. It is equivalent to our expression, finite man, and serves to bring out, by contrast, Jehovah's omnipotence. This peculiar usage of the phrase was apparently introduced by Ezekiel and was followed by the authors of Is. 51<sup>12</sup>, Ps. 8<sup>1</sup>, Job. 25<sup>6</sup>.

This section well illustrates the personal characteristics of Ezekiel; his high moral sense, his sternness, and that deep feeling of responsibility for his race as a whole which is still more fully expressed in the next section. His figure of eating the roll containing the divine message is characteristic of the literary age in which he lived and of the emphasis which he and his contemporaries placed upon the written word.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>22</sup> Gk. omits this clause.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>23</sup> So Gk. and Ezekiel's usage elsewhere. E.g., <sup>5</sup> and <sup>31</sup>. His phrase is perhaps modelled after the Babylonian, e.g., House of Omri.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>23</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, to the nations that are rebellious.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>24</sup> Following the Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, and the children are bold and unyielding.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>24</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the Lord. So also in <sup>311</sup> and frequently. The longer form probably represents a scribal expansion.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>25</sup> Again following the Gk. Heb. adds, and they.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>26</sup> Following the Gk. Heb. with thee.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>26</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., Syr., and Targ.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>27</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ., and the refrain elsewhere. The Heb. has lost the word, house.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>31</sup> So Gk., which omits, what thou findest to eat. Gk. is supported by <sup>2</sup>, while the Heb. has the characteristics of an expanded text.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>33</sup> Heb. idiom, cause thy stomach to eat.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>33</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, of hard language. A scribe has also added, to the house of Israel.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>36</sup> So Syr. Heb. adds, repeating the preceding clause in the expanded form, of strange speech and of a hard language.

thee to them, they would hear thee! <sup>7</sup>But the house of Israel will not be willing to hear thee, for they are not willing to hear me; for all the house of Israel are bold and unyielding.<sup>p</sup> <sup>8</sup>Behold I make thee as bold and unyielding as they.<sup>q</sup> <sup>9</sup>As adamant,<sup>r</sup> harder than flint, have I made thy face.<sup>s</sup> Be not afraid of them neither be dismayed at them. For they are a rebellious house. <sup>10</sup>He also said to me, Son of man, all of my words that I shall speak to thee receive in thy mind and hear with thine ears, <sup>11</sup>and go to the captives, the people of thy race, and speak to them and say to them: 'Thus saith Jehovah' whether they hear or refuse to heed.

§ 106. Ezekiel's Appointment as a Watchman, 3<sup>12-21</sup>

Mission
to the exiles at Tel-abib

Nature
and extent
of his responsibility

Ezek. 3 <sup>12</sup>Then the spirit lifted me up and I heard behind me the sound of great rustling,<sup>t</sup> as the Glory of Jehovah rose<sup>u</sup> from its place; and <sup>13</sup>the sound of the wings of the living creatures touching one another, and the sound of the wheels beside them, even the sound of a great<sup>v</sup> rustling. <sup>14</sup>So the spirit lifted me up and took me away and I went<sup>w</sup> in great excitement,<sup>x</sup> for the hand of Jehovah was strong upon me. <sup>15</sup>Then I came to the captives at Tel-abib who dwelt by the canal Chebar,<sup>y</sup> and I sat there overwhelmed among them seven days.

<sup>16</sup>At the end<sup>z</sup> of seven days this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>17</sup>Son of man, I make thee a watchman to the house of Israel. When thou hearest a word from my mouth, thou shalt warn them from me. <sup>18</sup>When I say to the wicked, 'Thou shalt surely die,' then if thou speak not to the wicked to warn him<sup>a</sup> from his wicked way, so as to save his life, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand. <sup>19</sup>But if thou warn a wicked man and he turn not from his wickedness nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity. But thou hast saved thyself. <sup>20</sup>Again, when a righteous man turns from his righteousness and does wrong, and I lay a stumbling-block before him, he shall die; because thou hast not given him warning he shall die in his sin, for<sup>b</sup> the righteous deeds which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thy hand. <sup>21</sup>But if thou warn<sup>c</sup> the righteous man not to sin and he doth not sin, the righteous man shall surely live, because he took warning; and thou hast saved thyself.

<sup>p</sup> 3<sup>7</sup> Heb. idiom, of a hard forehead and a stiff heart.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Lit., thy face hard against their face, and thy forehead hard against their forehead.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Or, diamond.

<sup>s</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Lit., forehead.

<sup>t</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Or, rumbling as of an earthquake.

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Slightly correcting an obviously corrupt text. Cf. 10<sup>t</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> The Gk. omits, great. Possibly this last clause is secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 3<sup>14</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., probably by mistake, bitterly, but this is not supported by the context.

<sup>x</sup> 3<sup>4</sup> Lit., in the heat of my spirit.

<sup>y</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> So Syr. In the Heb. an awkward repetition is found, and to where they were dwelling.

<sup>z</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> So Syr.

<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> Following the Syr. The Heb. is verbose and repetitious.

<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>21</sup> So Gk., Syr., and O. Lat. Heb. also repeats, righteous.

§ 107. The Prophet's Period of Silence, Ezek. 3<sup>22-27</sup>

Ezek. 3 <sup>22</sup>And the hand of Jehovah was upon me<sup>d</sup> and he said to me, Arise, go forth into the valley and there I will speak with thee. <sup>23</sup>Then I arose and went forth into the valley; and lo, there the Glory of Jehovah was standing, like the Glory that I saw by the River Chebar. And I fell on my face.

<sup>24</sup>And the spirit entered me and set me on my feet. And he spoke with me and said to me, Enter in, shut thyself up within thy house. <sup>25</sup>And as for thee, O son of man, I<sup>e</sup> will put bonds upon thee and bind thee therewith, and thou shalt not go forth among them. <sup>26</sup>And I will cause thy tongue to cleave to the roof of thy mouth,<sup>f</sup> and thou shall be dumb, and thou shalt not be a repressor to them, for they are a rebellious house. <sup>27</sup>But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth and thou shalt say to them: 'Thus saith Jehovah.' Let him hear and let him forbear to hear who will, for they are a rebellious house.

The new vision of Jehovah

Command to cease prophesying for a time

§ 108. Symbolic Representations of the Fate Awaiting Jerusalem, Ezek. 4<sup>1-5<sup>17</sup></sup>

Ezek. 4 <sup>1</sup>Do thou also, son of man, take a tile, and set it before thee, and portray upon it a city, even Jerusalem; <sup>2</sup>and lay siege against it, and build a siege wall against it, and throw up a mound against it; pitch camps also against it, and plant battering rams about it. <sup>3</sup>And take thou an iron plate, and set it

Portrayal of the siege of Jerusalem

§ 107 This section constitutes the general introduction to the succeeding group of prophecies regarding the coming destruction of Jerusalem. For the next six years, until the news came of Jerusalem's fall, Ezekiel does not appear to have spoken in public, but rather to have sent out his prophecies in the form of written tracts, or else to have taught in private those who, like the elders (8), (14'), (20'), visited him in his own house. His silence was apparently due to the fact that he appreciated the unwillingness and incapacity of the people at this time to receive his message. Not until the final destruction of Jerusalem confirmed the truth of his words were the majority ready to listen to his prophetic counsels.

<sup>d</sup> 3<sup>22</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., there.

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>25</sup> Heb., they, but the context indicates that the original read as above.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>26</sup> Lit., palate.

§ 108 The question has often been raised whether the symbolic actions here described were really imaginary or allegorical, or whether they were actually carried out as object lessons before the eyes of the people. In the western world of to-day such action would be regarded as mere sensationalism. Ezekiel, however, was an oriental and a priest, taught from his youth to represent truth in a symbolic form. He also lived among a people who, like children, were keenly appreciative of this method of teaching. From his other prophecies it is clear that he constantly employed objective symbols. Dramatic action was the most striking characteristic of Ezekiel's methods of teaching. With him it was not sensationalism, for it was perfectly natural and spontaneous.

It is also difficult to see what these symbolic acts would have meant if they had been presented simply as allegories or imaginary signs. Their strangeness and the difficulty of carrying them out, which has often been urged against their literal interpretation, only made them the more impressive. Even though their teachings were intended ultimately for the Jews in Palestine, Ezekiel would have accomplished his end by impressing them upon the minds of his fellow-exiles, for they were in close communication with their kinsmen in Judah. It is also difficult to see how the prophet could stand up before his people and declare that he had received definite commands to perform certain acts and then fail to carry out these commands. Ezekiel ever figures as a prophet who stood ready to follow implicitly, at whatever cost, the divine direction.

It takes little imagination to picture him in the presence of his people, with one of the soft clay tablets on which the Babylonians not only inscribed their writing, but drew maps of their cities and lands and portrayed their warlike and other achievements, and on this sketching the siege of Jerusalem and at the same time interpreting to the wondering Jews the meaning of his pictorial sermon. It was more difficult to carry out the second symbol, and yet there is every reason to believe that the prophet found a method by which to make this symbol objective and impressive. The last symbol was equally strange, but its strangeness was a part of Ezekiel's method as a teacher. He realized, as did the other prophets, that to teach he must first attract the attention of those to be taught, and that to make a deep and lasting impression he must for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face toward it and so it shall be in a state of siege, and thou shalt lay a siege against it; and this is a sign to the house of Israel.

Sign
that
the overthrow of Jerusalem was to last a generation

<sup>4</sup> And do thou lie upon thy left side, and bear<sup>g</sup> the iniquity of the house of Israel. According<sup>h</sup> to the number of days thou liest on it thou shalt bear their iniquities. <sup>5</sup> I assign thee for the years of their iniquity a fixed number of days, one hundred and ninety<sup>i</sup> days. Thus thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Israel. <sup>6</sup> And when thou hast completed these, thou shalt lie on thy right side,<sup>j</sup> and bear the guilt of the house of Judah forty days, a day for a year<sup>k</sup> I assign<sup>l</sup> thee. <sup>7</sup> And thou shalt turn thy face and thy bared arm toward the siege of Jerusalem, and prophesy against her. <sup>8</sup> See, I put bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn from one side to the other until thou hast finished the days of thy siege.

Symbol of
the coming famine
and national pollution

<sup>9</sup> Do thou also take for thyself wheat and barley, and beans and lentils, and millet and spelt, and put them in a vessel, and make bread for thyself of them. Thou shalt eat of it the number of the days that thou liest on thy side [one hundred and ninety days]. <sup>10</sup> Thou shalt eat thy food<sup>m</sup> by weight, twenty shekels a day; at fixed intervals shalt thou eat it. <sup>12</sup> Thou shalt eat it in the form of barley cakes, and bake<sup>n</sup> it in their presence on human dung. <sup>11</sup> Thou shalt drink water by measure, one-sixth of a hin; thou shalt drink it at fixed intervals. <sup>13</sup> And Jehovah said, Thus shall the Israelites eat their food unclean among the nations, whither I shall drive them. <sup>14</sup> And I said, Ah, Lord Jehovah, from my youth until now I have never been defiled, nor have I eaten what died of itself, or was torn by beasts, nor hath abominable flesh entered my mouth. <sup>15</sup> Then he said to me, See, I allow thee to use cow's dung instead of human dung; on it thou mayest prepare thy food. <sup>16</sup> He also said to me, Son of man, I am about to break the staff of bread in Jerusalem; they shall eat bread by weight and in terror, and drink water by measure and in dismay, <sup>17</sup> that, lacking bread and water, each man may be filled with dismay and waste away because of his iniquity.

Of the
disasters impend-
ing

<sup>5</sup> <sup>1</sup> And do thou, son of man, take a short sword and use it as<sup>o</sup> a barber's razor, and pass it over thy head and beard. Then take the balances and divide the hair.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup> A third part burn in the fire in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are complete; and take a third part and smite with the sword round about the city;<sup>q</sup> and a third part scatter to the wind.<sup>r</sup> <sup>3</sup> But take a few

depart widely from the ordinary types of expression. This was especially necessary because the truth that he was trying to impart was not only unacceptable to his hearers but also comparatively commonplace. In plain words his message was simply that if Zedekiah and his followers rebelled against Nebuchadrezzar they would pay the penalty through conquest and exile. The present section, therefore, well illustrates the fact that Ezekiel's originality was not in his message but in the manner in which he delivered it.

<sup>g</sup> 4<sup>3</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by aid of the parallel context.

<sup>h</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> So Gk.

<sup>i</sup> 4<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and also in vs. <sup>9</sup>. Heb., three hundred.

<sup>j</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, again.

<sup>k</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. repeats this clause by mistake.

<sup>l</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat.

<sup>m</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, which.

<sup>n</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> So Gk. and Lat.

<sup>o</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> So Syr. and Lat. Heb. omits, as.

<sup>p</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> Heb., them. The reference is to the hair cut off by the sword.

<sup>q</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> Heb., it. The antecedent, the city, has been supplied in the translation.

<sup>r</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> The Heb. adds, and I will pursue them with the sword, but this anticipates the application found in the latter part of the chapter.

REPRESENTATIONS OF JERUSALEM'S FATE [EZEK. 5<sup>4</sup>

of them and wrap them up in thy skirts; <sup>4</sup>and of these again take some and burn them in the fire.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>t</sup>Then thou shalt say to all the house of Israel, ‘Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>t</sup> “This is Jerusalem. I have set her in the midst<sup>u</sup> of the nations and countries round about her. <sup>6</sup>But she hath rebelled against mine ordinances more wickedly than the nations; and against my statutes more than the countries round about her. For they rejected mine ordinances and have not walked in my statutes.” <sup>7</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah:<sup>v</sup> “Because ye have been more rebellious<sup>w</sup> than the nations round about you, in that ye have not walked in my statutes nor kept my ordinances; but have<sup>x</sup> done according to the ordinances of the nations that are round about you,” <sup>8</sup>therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah, “behold I also am against thee and will execute judgment against thee in the sight of the nations. <sup>9</sup>And I will do in thee that which I have not done and the like of which I will not do again, because of all thine abominations. <sup>10</sup>Therefore fathers shall eat their sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers. And I will execute judgment on thee, and I will scatter the whole remnant of thee to every wind. <sup>11</sup>Therefore, as I live,” is the oracle of Jehovah,<sup>y</sup> “because<sup>z</sup> thou hast defiled my sanctuary with all my detestable things and with all thine abominations, I will also drive thee away. And mine eye shall not spare and I also will defile thee. <sup>12</sup>A third part of these shall die by the pestilence and perish with famine in the midst of thee, and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee, and a third part I will scatter to every wind and pursue with the sword.

<sup>13</sup>Thus will mine anger be vented, and I will appease my fury on them,<sup>a</sup> and they<sup>b</sup> shall know that I, Jehovah, have spoken in mine indignation, when I have vented mine anger on them. <sup>14</sup>And I will make thee a desolation<sup>c</sup> among the nations which are about thee, in the eyes of every passer by. <sup>15</sup>And thou shalt be<sup>d</sup> an object of scorn and derision, of instruction and dismay to the nations<sup>e</sup> which are round about thee, when I execute judgments upon thee in anger and fury and in my wrathful<sup>f</sup> rebukes, I, Jehovah, have promised. <sup>16</sup>When I send against you<sup>g</sup> mine evil arrows,<sup>h</sup> which shall destroy you,<sup>i</sup> I will send famine upon you and break your staff of life.<sup>j</sup> <sup>17</sup>And I will

Jerusalem's awful but well-deserved fate

Calamities awaiting the nation

<sup>s</sup> 5<sup>4</sup> Heb. adds, from them shall go forth a fire, again anticipating the later application. The Gk., which supplies the necessary verb, has been followed.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Lord.

<sup>u</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> The Hebrews, like most ancient peoples, regarded their chief city as the centre of the world.

<sup>v</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> So Gk.

<sup>w</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> Slightly revising the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> A scribe has added by mistake, in the Heb., not, which clearly obscures the prophet's meaning.

<sup>y</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> So Gk.

<sup>z</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr. The Heb. is evidently corrupt.

<sup>a</sup> 5<sup>13</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, probably as the result of dittoigraphy, and be content.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>13</sup> Gk., thou shalt know.

<sup>c</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, an object of reproach.

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> So the VSS. Heb., it shall be.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> The Gk. has here a shorter version, which is perhaps original, for the Heb. shows signs of scribal expansion.

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>15</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>g</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., as the context demands.

<sup>h</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> Famine has here been added by a scribe familiar with the subsequent context.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. this clause has been repeated with slight variation.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> Lit., staff of bread.

send upon you famine and evil beasts, and they<sup>k</sup> shall bereave you, and pestilence and bloodshed<sup>l</sup> shall pass through you, and I will bring a sword upon you; I, Jehovah, have said it.”

§ 109. The Judgment upon Guilty Judah, Ezek. 6

Conquest
and devastation

Ezek. 6 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, set thy face against the mountains of Israel and prophesy against them, and say, ‘O mountains of Israel, hear the word of Jehovah: “Thus saith the Lord Jehovah to the mountains and the hills, to the ravines and the valleys: Behold, I am about to bring the sword against you and I will destroy your high places, <sup>4</sup>and your altars shall be shattered, and your sun pillars broken in pieces, and I will cause your slain to fall before your idols, <sup>5</sup>and<sup>m</sup> I will scatter your bones about your altars. <sup>6</sup>In all your dwelling places cities shall be laid waste, and the high places desolate, so that your altars shall be wasted<sup>n</sup> and desolate,<sup>o</sup> and your idols shall be broken in pieces, and your sun pillars hewn down;<sup>p</sup> <sup>7</sup>and the slain shall fall in your midst, and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.”

Re-pen-tance
in exile

<sup>8</sup>And when there shall be among the nations some of you who have escaped the sword, when ye are dispersed in the lands; <sup>9</sup>then ye who have escaped will remember me among the nations whither ye are carried captive. I will crush the hearts of those who have adulterously turned from me, and the eyes which have adulterously turned after their idols, and they shall loathe themselves for the wicked things which they have done, for all their abomination. <sup>10</sup>And they shall know that I, Jehovah, have not vainly said that I would do them this evil.”

Punishment of
the deep-seated corruption

<sup>11</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Clap thy hands and stamp thy feet and say, ‘Woe, woe,<sup>q</sup> because of all the wicked abominations of the house of Israel,<sup>r</sup> because with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence shall they fall. <sup>12</sup>He who is far off shall die by pestilence, and he who is near shall fall by the sword,<sup>s</sup> and he who is besieged shall die by famine; thus, I will vent my fury upon them. <sup>13</sup>And they<sup>t</sup> shall know that I am Jehovah, when their slain lie in the midst of their idols on every high hill, on every mountain top, and under every green tree, and under every leaf-clad terebinth, where they have offered sweet savor to all their idols. <sup>14</sup>And I will stretch out my hand against them to make the land waste and desolate from the wilderness to Riblah,<sup>u</sup> in all their dwelling places; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.’

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> Gk., I will bereave.

<sup>l</sup> 5<sup>17</sup> Lit., blood.

<sup>§ 109</sup> The preceding section dealt with the sins of Jerusalem, but the present deals with those of Judah as a whole, and especially of the outlying towns. Ezekiel, like the authors of Dtr., completely condemned the worship at the local shrines, and denounced in detail the corrupt practices which flourished at the local high places. The stern, rigorous spirit of the prophet is well illustrated in the present passage.

<sup>m</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> So Gk. A scribe has expanded the Heb. text by adding the repetitious, incongruous gloss, and I will put the corpses of the children of Israel before their idols. This and the following verses through <sup>12</sup> contain so many repetitions that it is possible that they are the work of a later scribe who wished to heighten still further Ezekiel's picture of doom.

<sup>n</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> So Syr., Lat., Targ., and Sym. Gk. omits.

<sup>o</sup> 6<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb adds another verb, which is probably due to dittography.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and your work shall be blotted out.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> So Gk., Arab., and Aquila, which repeat the exclamation.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, which.

<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and the remnant.

<sup>t</sup> 6<sup>13</sup> So Syr. Heb., ye shall know.

<sup>u</sup> 6<sup>14</sup> Correcting a common error in the Heb.

§ 110. Jerusalem's Guilt and Punishment, Ezek. 8<sup>1</sup>–11<sup>12</sup>

Ezek. 8 <sup>1</sup>In the sixth year, on the fifth day of the sixth month, as I was sitting in my house, and the elders of Judah were sitting before me, the hand of Jehovah<sup>v</sup> fell upon me. <sup>2</sup>Then I beheld and there was a form like that of a man;<sup>w</sup> from<sup>x</sup> that which appeared to be his loins downward, fire; and from his loins upward, like something shining, as the gleam of glowing metal. <sup>3</sup>And he stretched forth the form of a hand, and took me by a lock of my hair; and the spirit lifted me up between earth and heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the entrance of the northern gateway of the inner court, where stood the image of jealousy, which provokes his jealousy.<sup>y</sup> <sup>4</sup>And there was the glory of the God of Israel, like that which I saw in the plain.

Ezekiel carried in a vision to Jerusalem

<sup>5</sup>Then said he to me, O man, lift up thine eyes toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes toward the north, and there at the north of the gate of the altar was that image which provokes jealousy.<sup>z</sup> <sup>6</sup>And he said to me, O man, seest thou<sup>a</sup> what they are doing?<sup>b</sup> the great abominations which they<sup>c</sup> are doing here, so that I<sup>d</sup> must go far off from my sanctuary? yet thou shalt see still greater abominations.

The abom-inable image

<sup>7</sup>And he brought me to the door of the court; and I saw, and there was a hole in the wall. Then he said to me, O man, dig now in the wall; and when I had digged into the wall, there was a door.<sup>e</sup> <sup>8</sup>And he said to me, Go in, and see the wicked abominations that they are practicing here. <sup>10</sup>So I went in and saw; and behold, every form of reptile, and all the idols of the house of Israel were portrayed on the wall round about. <sup>11</sup>And seventy men of the elders of the house of Israel with<sup>f</sup> Jaazaniah, the son of Shaphan, were stand-

Secret heathen practices

---

§ 110 This section is important because it reveals the significant place Ezekiel occupied among the exiles. The presence of the elders, who represented the Babylonian exiles, in the prophet's home is probably to be explained by the fact that they were wont to consult him upon important questions. The supreme question ever in their minds was the future of Judah and Jerusalem. As the prophet meditated upon the problem, a vivid vision of the heathen cults which were practised in Jerusalem rose before him. This vision was probably based in part upon his own memories of conditions in Jerusalem, and in part upon the reports which had been brought to him from time to time. He reviews in detail the different types of heathenism which had survived in the days of Manasseh and Jehoiakim. By the north gate he saw in his vision what was probably an asherah or sacred pole, a remnant of the old Canaanite religion. In another quarter of the temple he beheld some of the elders practising certain rites of a mystery cult probably derived from Egypt. Elsewhere the women were weeping for Tammuz, a Babylonian god whose worship had come in through Assyrian influence. He appears to have been the god of the spring vegetation which perished about the first of July. Hence the Babylonian month of June-July was called Tammuz. The rite seems to have consisted in pouring out libations and of lamentations uttered by the mourning women. It was undoubtedly related to the corresponding Greek worship of Adonis. Moreover, Ezekiel saw others worshipping the sun, probably under Babylonian influence. With these abominations, practised openly in the very temple of Jehovah, Ezekiel could find no justification or hope of divine deliverance. Hence he could see only doom awaiting the guilty city.

<sup>v</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Lord, as elsewhere.

<sup>w</sup> 8<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb., fire.

<sup>x</sup> 8<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and revised Heb.

<sup>y</sup> 8<sup>3</sup> This last clause is omitted in Gk. and Syr., and was possibly added in the Heb. by a scribe who had in mind<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, at the entrance.

<sup>a</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and Syr. and the demands of the context.

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> So marginal reading of the Heb.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., the house of Israel.

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>e</sup> 8<sup>7b</sup> This sentence is not found in the Gk. and may be secondary.

<sup>f</sup> 8<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, standing.

ing before them, each with his censer in his hand; and the odor of the cloud of incense was ascending. <sup>12</sup>Then said he to me, Son of man, dost thou see what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in secret,<sup>g</sup> each in his chamber? for they think, 'Jehovah doth not see us; Jehovah hath forsaken the land.' <sup>13</sup>He also said to me, Thou shalt see still greater abominations which they do.

<sup>14</sup>Then he brought me to the door of the north gate of Jehovah's house; and behold, there sat women<sup>h</sup> weeping for Tamuz. <sup>15</sup>Then said he to me, Seest thou, O man? thou shalt again see yet greater abominations than these.

<sup>16</sup>And he brought me into the inner court of Jehovah's house; and behold, at the door of the temple of Jehovah, between the porch and the altar, were about twenty-five men, with their backs toward the temple of Jehovah, and with their faces toward the east; and they were worshipping<sup>i</sup> the sun, in<sup>j</sup> the east. <sup>17</sup>Then he said to me, Seest thou, O man? Is it too slight a thing for the house of Judah to practice the abominations which they commit here? but they must fill the land with violence and turn again to provoke me to anger? and now they are sending a stench to my<sup>k</sup> nostrils. <sup>18</sup>Therefore will I also act in wrath: I will show no compassion, neither will I have pity.<sup>l</sup>

9 <sup>1</sup>Then he cried loudly in my ears, saying, Draw near, ye who have charge over the city,<sup>m</sup> each with his weapon of destruction in his hand. <sup>2</sup>Thereupon, six men came from the direction of the upper gate, that faces northward, each with his weapon of slaughter in his hand; and in the midst of them a man clothed in linen, with a writer's inkhorn at his side. And they went in, and stood before the bronze altar.

<sup>3</sup>Now the Glory of the God of Israel had ascended<sup>n</sup> from the cherubim<sup>o</sup> on which it rested, to the threshold of the temple, and he called to the man clothed in linen, who had the writer's inkhorn at his side, <sup>4</sup>and said to him, Go through the city<sup>p</sup> and put a mark upon the foreheads of the men, who sigh and lament over the abominations that are done in its midst.

<sup>5</sup>And to the others he said in my hearing, Go through the city after him, and smite; show no compassion neither have pity; <sup>6</sup>slay utterly old men, young men, and virgins, little children and women; but touch no man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began with the elders who were in front of the temple. <sup>7</sup>And he said to them, Defile the temple and fill the courts with the slain: go forth and slay in the city.<sup>q</sup> <sup>8</sup>And while they were smiting,<sup>r</sup> I fell upon my face and cried out, Ah, Jehovah! wilt thou destroy all that remains of Israel when thou pourest out thy wrath upon Jerusalem?

<sup>g</sup> 8<sup>12</sup> Gk. omits, in secret, lit., in darkness.

<sup>h</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb., the women.

<sup>i</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> So fourteen Heb. MSS.

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> So Gk.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> So the Jewish interpreters.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>18</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and though they cry loudly in my ears I will not hear them.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> Restoring with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>n</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Arab.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb., cherub.

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>4</sup> A scribe has apparently added in the Heb., through Jerusalem.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Restoring, with the aid of the Syr. and Gk., what seems to have been the original.

<sup>r</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and I was left by myself.

Tam-muz worship

Sun worship

The divine executioners sum-monned

Preser-vation of the faithful

Slaugh-ter of the guilty

<sup>9</sup>Then he said to me, The iniquity of the house of Israel is exceedingly great, and the land is full of blood, and the city full of injustice,<sup>s</sup> for they think that Jehovah hath forsaken the land so that Jehovah doth not see. <sup>10</sup>And as for me also, I will show no compassion, neither will I have pity, but I will bring the consequences of their acts upon their own head. <sup>11</sup>And behold, the man clothed in linen, who had the inkhorn at his side, reported, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

10 <sup>2</sup>Then<sup>t</sup> he said to the man clothed in linen,<sup>u</sup> Go in between the whirling wheels, which<sup>v</sup> are under the cherubim, and fill both thy hands with coals of fire from between the cherubim, and scatter them over the city. And in my sight he went in. <sup>3</sup>Now the cherubim were standing on the right side of the temple, when the man went in; and the cloud filled the inner court. <sup>4</sup>And the glory of Jehovah ascended from the cherubim<sup>w</sup> to the threshold of the temple; and the temple was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the glory of Jehovah. <sup>5</sup>And the sound of the wings of the cherubim was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of God Almighty when he speaketh. And when he commanded the man clothed in linen, Take fire from between the whirling wheels, from between the cherubim, he went in and stood beside a wheel. <sup>7</sup>And he<sup>x</sup> stretched forth his hand<sup>y</sup> to the fire that was between the cherubim<sup>z</sup> and took some and went out.

Their
guilt
precludes
pardon

Command
to burn
the city

<sup>8</sup>And there appeared on the cherubim the form of a man's hand under their wings. <sup>9</sup>And I looked,<sup>a</sup> and behold, four wheels beside each cherubim; and the appearance of the wheels was like that of a topaz. <sup>10</sup>And as for their appearance, the four had the same form, as if a wheel had been within a wheel. When they went, they went in whatever direction the four sides faced; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked, they followed it, not turning as they went. <sup>12</sup>And<sup>b</sup> the felloes<sup>c</sup> and spokes of the four wheels were full of eyes round about. <sup>13</sup>As for the wheels,<sup>d</sup> in my hearing they were called, the whirling wheels.<sup>e</sup> <sup>15</sup>And the cherubim mounted up; these are the living creatures that I saw by the River Chebar. <sup>16</sup>And when the cherubim went, the wheels went beside them; and when the cherubim spread their wings to mount up from the earth, the wheels did not leave their side. <sup>17</sup>When they stood still, these stood still; and when they mounted up, these mounted up with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in them.

The wheels
symbols
of divine activity and insight

<sup>s</sup> 9<sup>9</sup> So Gk.

<sup>t</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> The first vs. of this chapter is but a repetition of 1<sup>26</sup>. It also breaks the connection between 9<sup>11</sup> and 10<sup>2</sup> and is evidently an addition by later scribes.

<sup>u</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. repeats, and said.

<sup>v</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> So Gk., Lat., and Arab. Heb. omits the relative.

<sup>w</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb., cherub.

<sup>x</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb., the cherub, but this is not in harmony with the command of 6.

<sup>y</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, from between the cherubim.

<sup>z</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> The scribe who made, the cherub, the subject of this sentence has added, and put it into the hands of him who was clothed in linen.

<sup>a</sup> 10<sup>9-17</sup> These vss. are little more than a repetition of the corresponding vss. in the account of Ezekiel's vision, 1<sup>15-21</sup>, and may have been inserted by a later scribe. The repetition, however, is in keeping with Ezekiel's method and literary style.

<sup>b</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and their entire body.

<sup>c</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> Restoring the vs. as the context requires.

<sup>d</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> This vs. may be secondary.

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> A scribe has apparently added the following, based on 1<sup>10</sup>, And every one had four faces; the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

The living creatures the cherubim

<sup>18</sup>And the Glory of Jehovah went forth from over the threshold of the temple,<sup>f</sup> and stood over the cherubim. <sup>19</sup>And the cherubim lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight as when they went forth, the wheels being beside them; and they stood at the door of the east gate of Jehovah's house; and over them was the Glory of the God of Israel. <sup>20</sup>These are<sup>g</sup> living creatures that I saw under the God of Israel by the River Chebar; and I knew they were cherubim. <sup>21</sup>Each one had four faces and four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings. <sup>22</sup>And as for the likeness of their faces, they were the faces which I saw by the River Chebar—<sup>h</sup> as for them,<sup>i</sup> they went every one straight forward.

The conspirators at Jerusalem

11 <sup>1</sup>Moreover the spirit lifted me up, and brought me to the east gate of the house of Jehovah;<sup>j</sup> and there, at the door of the gate, were twenty-five men, among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azzur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiyah, princes of the people. <sup>2</sup>And he said to me, O man, these are the men who are devising iniquity, and counselling evil in this city, who are saying, 'Have not the houses recently been rebuilt? this city is the caldron, and we are the flesh.' <sup>3</sup>Therefore prophesy against them: prophesy, O man.

Inevitable consequences of their folly

<sup>5</sup>And the spirit of Jehovah fell upon me, and he said to me, Say, Thus saith Jehovah: 'So ye say, O house of Israel; for I know the things that come into your mind. <sup>6</sup>Ye have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled its streets with the slain. <sup>7</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah:<sup>k</sup> "Your slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron; but you will I bring out of the midst of it. <sup>8</sup>Ye fear the sword, and I will bring the sword upon you," saith Jehovah. <sup>9</sup>"And I will bring you out of its midst, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, and will execute judgments upon you. <sup>10</sup>Ye shall fall by the sword; I will judge you on the border of Israel; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. <sup>11</sup>This city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in its midst; I will judge you in the border of Israel; <sup>12</sup>and ye shall know that I am Jehovah, for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither have ye executed my decisions, but have acted according to the decisions of the nations that are round about you."

§ 111. Promise of Restoration to the Faithful Exiles, Ezek. 11<sup>13-25</sup>

Ezekiel's prayer

Ezek. 11 <sup>13</sup>Now while I was prophesying, Pelatiah the son of Benaiyah died. Then I fell down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Alas, Lord Jehovah! wilt thou make an end of the remnant of Israel?

Jehovah's assurance that the exiles shall be brought back

<sup>14</sup>Thereupon this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>15</sup>Son of man, thy kinsmen<sup>1</sup>

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>18</sup> Gk. simply, from the temple.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>20</sup> Lit., this is.

<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>22</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, their appearances.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>22</sup> So Gk. and Targ.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Lat. The Heb. adds, tautologically, which faces the east.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> So Gk. So also in <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>§ 111</sup> This short section is the immediate sequel of preceding and presents the brighter contrast to the doom which awaited the guilty people of Judah. Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, firmly believed in the ultimate restoration of his exiled people. Here he suggests the ultimate basis of his hope; it was because he believed that the discipline of the exile would under divine influence transform the heart of the scattered people so they would be willing to do the divine will and therefore worthy of the blessings which Jehovah was eager to confer upon them.

<sup>1</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> So five Heb. MSS., Gk., O. Lat., and Arab.

thy fellow-exiles,<sup>m</sup> and all the house of Israel, all of them, of whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem say: 'You are far from Jehovah; to us this land is given as a possession.' <sup>16</sup>Therefore say, 'Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>n</sup> "True I have removed them far off among the nations, and scattered them over the lands, yet will I be their sanctuary for a little while in the countries whither they have gone."<sup>o</sup> <sup>17</sup>Therefore say, Thus saith Jehovah: 'I will gather them from the peoples, and assemble them from the countries where they have been scattered, and I will give them the land of Israel. <sup>18</sup>And they shall go thither, and shall take away all its detestable and abominable things. <sup>19</sup>And I will give them another heart, and I will put a new spirit into them; and I will take the stony heart out of their breast and give them a heart of flesh,<sup>p</sup> that they may follow my statutes, and keep mine ordinances and do them. And they shall be my people, and I will be their God. <sup>21</sup>But as for those who are devoted to their detestable things and their abominations, I will visit the consequences of their deeds upon their own heads,"' is Jehovah's oracle.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Then the cherubim spread their wings and the wheels were beside them and the Glory of the God of Israel was over them. <sup>23</sup>The Glory of Jehovah ascended from the midst of the city and stood on the mountain on the east of the city. <sup>24</sup>And the spirit lifted me up and brought me to the land of the Chaldeans to the captives, in a vision by the spirit of God. And the vision which I saw departed from me. <sup>25</sup>And I told the captives all the words that Jehovah had shown me.

Jehovah's departure
from Jerusalem

§ 112. Jehovah's Past Dealings with His People, Ezek. 20<sup>1-44</sup>

Ezek. 20 <sup>1</sup>Now in the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month, certain of the elders of Israel came to inquire of Jehovah, and sat before me. <sup>2</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>3</sup>Son of man, speak to the elders of Israel, and say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah<sup>p</sup>: "Have ye come to consult me? As I live, saith Jehovah,<sup>p</sup> I will not be consulted by you."<sup>q</sup> <sup>4</sup>Wilt thou judge them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? Cause them to know the abomination of their fathers;<sup>r</sup> and say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "In the day when I chose Israel, and swore to the descendants of the house of Jacob, and made myself known to them, in the land of Egypt, when I swore to them, saying, I am Jehovah, your God; <sup>6</sup>in that day I swore to them, to bring them out of the land of Egypt into a land that I had given<sup>s</sup> them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the glory of all lands. <sup>7</sup>And I said to them, Cast ye away every man

Jehovah's promises and demands in Israel's
early history

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> So Gk. and the corrected Heb.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> So Gk.

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>21</sup> Possibly this vs. is secondary.

<sup>q</sup> 112 Ezekiel's object is to show that the tendency toward and the practice of idolatry among his fellow-countrymen are but the inheritance from the past and to point out the evil consequences of these crimes. In his view of the past he is strongly influenced by the book of Dt. He also judges the acts of the ancient Israelites according to the statutes and ordinances of Dt. and assumes the early existence of laws which were first formulated in the later prophetic period. In this respect also, Ezekiel is the forerunner of later Judaism. His estimates of the sins of his forefathers is much more severe than that of earlier prophets, like Hosea. Cf. Hos. 2<sup>15</sup>. In general, he follows a distinct tradition and at many points interprets the early events from his own peculiar point of view.

<sup>p</sup> 20<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Lord, as also in 5, 27, 30, 31, 33, 39, 40, 44.

<sup>q</sup> 20<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., searched out.

the abominations of his eyes,<sup>r</sup> and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am Jehovah your God.”<sup>s</sup>

Sins of the people
overlooked by Je-
hovah

<sup>t</sup>But they rebelled against me, and would not hear me; they did not cast away the abominations of their eyes, nor forsake the idols of Egypt. Then I said I would pour out my wrath upon them, to accomplish mine anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. <sup>u</sup>But I acted for my name's sake,<sup>v</sup> lest it should be profaned in the sight of the nations, among which they were, in whose sight I had made myself known to them, in bringing them out of the land of Egypt.

In the wilderness

<sup>10</sup>So I caused them to go out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness. <sup>11</sup>And I gave them my statutes, and showed them mine ordinances, which if a man do he shall live thereby. <sup>12</sup>Moreover I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them,<sup>t</sup> that they might know that it is I, Jehovah, who sanctifieth them. <sup>13</sup>But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness; they walked not in my statutes, and they rejected mine ordinances, which if a man keep he shall live thereby; and my sabbaths they greatly profaned. Then I said I would pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness to consume them. <sup>14</sup>But I acted for my name's sake, lest it should be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I brought them out. <sup>15</sup>Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the glory of all lands; <sup>16</sup>because they had rejected mine ordinances, and walked not in my statutes, and profaned my sabbaths; for their heart went after their idols. <sup>17</sup>Nevertheless mine eye spared them, and I destroyed them not, neither did I completely destroy them in the wilderness.

Persistent idolatry
and rebellion

<sup>18</sup>And I said to the children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, nor observe their ordinances, nor defile yourselves with their idols. <sup>19</sup>I am Jehovah your God; walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them; <sup>20</sup>and keep my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am Jehovah your God. <sup>21</sup>But the children rebelled against me; they walked not in my statutes, neither kept mine ordinances to do them, which if a man do he shall live thereby; they profaned my sabbaths. Then I said I would pour out my wrath upon them, to accomplish mine anger against them in the wilderness. <sup>22</sup>Nevertheless I withdrew my hand, and acted for my name's sake, lest it should be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I brought them forth. <sup>23</sup>Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness that I would scatter them among the nations, and disperse them through the countries, <sup>24</sup>because they had not executed mine ordinances, but had rejected my statutes, and had profaned my sabbaths, and because their eyes were turned toward the idols of their fathers.<sup>u</sup> <sup>25</sup>Moreover I gave them statutes that were not good, and ordinances wherein they should not live; <sup>26</sup>and I defiled them by their own gifts, through

<sup>r</sup> 20<sup>7</sup> I. e., idols and the corrupt practices connected with their worship.

<sup>s</sup> 20<sup>9</sup> I. e., so as to maintain his reputation.

<sup>t</sup> 20<sup>12</sup> Ezekiel held the conception of the sabbath peculiar to later Judaism. For the history of the sabbath, cf. Vol. iv, § 210, 217.

<sup>u</sup> 20<sup>23, 24</sup> Cf. Dt. 5-11, the later conception of the early history.

causing all their first-born to pass through the fire, that I might make them desolate, so that they might know that I am Jehovah.

<sup>27</sup>Therefore, son of man, speak to the house of Israel, and say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "In this also have your fathers blasphemed me, committing a trespass against me. <sup>28</sup>For when I had brought them into the land, which I swore to give to them, and whenever they saw any high hill, or leafy tree, they offered there their sacrifice, and there<sup>v</sup> they presented their sweet savor, and they poured out there their libations. <sup>29</sup>Then I said to them,<sup>w</sup> What meaneth the high place to which ye go? So it has been called a high place to this day."

Worship at the high places of Canaan

<sup>30</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Do ye defile yourselves after the manner of your fathers,<sup>x</sup> play the harlot after their abominations, <sup>31</sup>and defile yourselves with all your idols by offering your gifts, by making your sons to pass through the fire, even to this day? and shall I be consulted by you, O house of Israel? As I live," saith Jehovah, "I will not be consulted by you; <sup>32</sup>and that which cometh into your mind shall not be, in that ye say, We will be as the nations, as the families of the lands, to serve wood and stone."

Rejection of the rebellious people

<sup>33</sup>'As I live,' saith Jehovah, 'surely with a mighty hand and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out, will I be king over you; <sup>34</sup>and I will bring you out from the peoples, and will gather you out of the lands wherein you are scattered, with a strong hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out; <sup>35</sup>and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples, and there will I enter into judgment with you face to face. <sup>36</sup>Like as I entered into judgment with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I enter into judgment with you,'<sup>y</sup> saith Jehovah. <sup>37</sup>And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you by tale;<sup>z</sup> <sup>38</sup>and I will purge out from among you the rebels, and those who transgress against me; I will bring them forth out of the land where they sojourn, but they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.'

Jehovah to judge the guilty

<sup>39</sup>As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith Jehovah: 'Go, let every man serve his idols! But afterwards ye shall surely hear me; no more profane my holy name with your gifts and with your idols; <sup>40</sup>but on my holy mountain,' saith Jehovah, 'there shall all the house of Israel, all of them serve me;<sup>a</sup> there will I accept them and there will I require your offerings and the chief of your obligations with all your consecrated things. <sup>41</sup>Your sweet savors will I accept,<sup>b</sup> when I bring you out from the peoples, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered and through you my holiness will be made evident in the sight of the nations. <sup>42</sup>And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I bring you into the land of Israel, into the country which I swore to

Restoration and reconciliation for the faithful exiles

<sup>v</sup> 20<sup>28</sup> So Gk. Heb. has a conflate reading.

<sup>w</sup> 20<sup>29</sup> Possibly this vs. is secondary.

<sup>x</sup> 20<sup>30</sup> I. e., thus show their infidelity to Jehovah.

<sup>y</sup> 20<sup>36</sup> I. e., bring charges against.

<sup>z</sup> 20<sup>37</sup> So Gk., supported by the context. Heb., into the bond of the covenant, is obscure. The idea of the original evidently was that the restored exiles were to be sifted by being brought under the rod as a shepherd separates certain of his flock from the others.

<sup>a</sup> 20<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, in the land.

<sup>b</sup> 20<sup>11</sup> Heb., in sweet savor will I accept you.

give to your fathers. <sup>43</sup>And there ye shall remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have defiled yourselves; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evil deeds that ye have committed. <sup>44</sup>And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I have dealt with you for my name's sake, not according to your evil ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel,' saith Jehovah.

§ 113. The Certain Exile of King and People, Ezek. 12<sup>1-20</sup>

Command
to represent
the flight of fugitives

Ezek. 12 <sup>1</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>2</sup>Son of man, thou art dwelling in the midst of a rebellious house who have eyes to see, but they see not; ears to hear, but they hear not; for they are a rebellious house. <sup>3</sup>And do thou, O son of man, prepare by day in their presence goods for removal;<sup>c</sup> and remove from thy place to another place in their presence. Perhaps they may perceive although they are a rebellious house. <sup>4</sup>Bring out thy goods by day in their presence as though for removal, and do thou go forth in the evening in their presence, as one who goes forth into exile. <sup>5</sup>In their presence dig through the wall<sup>d</sup> and go out<sup>e</sup> through it. <sup>6</sup>In their presence take up thy goods<sup>f</sup> upon thy back. Go forth<sup>g</sup> in the dark, covering thy face, so that thou wilt not see the land; for I have appointed thee as a sign to the house of Israel.

The
symbolic
act

<sup>7</sup>Then I did as I was commanded. I brought out my goods by day, as though they were goods for removal, and in the evening I dug through the wall<sup>h</sup> and before their eyes I went forth in the dark, bearing them on my back.

Application
to the fate of Zedekiah
and his
people

<sup>8</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me in the morning, <sup>9</sup>Son of man, hath not the rebellious house of Israel said to thee: 'What art thou doing?' <sup>10</sup>Say to them: 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "This burden concerns the prince in Jerusalem and all the house of Israel, who are in her midst." <sup>11</sup>Say: 'I am a sign to you. As I have done, so shall it be done to them. They shall go into exile and captivity <sup>12</sup>and the prince who is in their midst shall bear a burden on<sup>i</sup> his back. He shall go forth<sup>j</sup> in the dark. He shall dig through the wall and go out through it with covered face, so that he shall not see the land; <sup>13</sup>and I will cast my net over him and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon, the land of the Chaldeans; and he shall not see it,<sup>k</sup> and there shall he die <sup>14</sup>And all who are about him, his supporters, and all his troops,

---

§ 113 The event recorded in this section must evidently be dated about 588 B.C., when the news came that Zedekiah and his followers were yielding to the solicitations of the neighboring peoples and were on the point of rebelling or had already rebelled against Nebuchadrezzar. Cf. Introd., § 102. Ezekiel's method of declaring that this act would result only in disaster was most impressive. There is little doubt that the object lesson here described was carried out in minute detail. Nothing could have aroused the curiosity of the people to a higher pitch than the prophet's strange procedure. When the minds of his hearers had been thus prepared, Ezekiel proclaimed his message with rare effectiveness.

<sup>c</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and go forth as an exile.

<sup>d</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> Probably the wall of soft clay which encircled the towns of southern Babylonia.

<sup>e</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So the vss.

<sup>f</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> Supplying the object implied by the context.

<sup>g</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ.

<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, by hand.

<sup>i</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Gk.

<sup>j</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Gk., Syr., Targ., and Lat. Heb. introduces, and, before the verb.

<sup>k</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> So Syr. Heb. adds, with his eyes.

will I scatter to every wind, and pursue them with the sword. <sup>15</sup>And they shall learn that I am Jehovah when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them throughout the countries. <sup>16</sup>And I will save a few of them from the sword, from famine and from pestilence, that they may recount all their abominations among the nations whither they shall go, and that they may know that I, indeed, am Jehovah.'

<sup>17</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>18</sup>Son of man, Eat thy bread with quaking and drink thy water with trembling and apprehension. And say to the people of this land: <sup>19</sup>Thus saith Jehovah concerning the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: "They shall eat their bread with apprehension and drink their water with dismay; that the land may be shorn of all that is therein because of the violence of all its inhabitants," <sup>20</sup>and that the inhabited cities may be laid waste and the land become a desolation. Thus shall ye learn that I am Jehovah."

Symbol of constant terror

§ 114. Condemnation of the False Prophets, Ezek. 12<sup>21</sup>–13<sup>23</sup>

Ezek. 12 <sup>21</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>22</sup>Son of man, what is this proverb which ye have in the land of Israel: 'The days go by and every vision faileth.' <sup>23</sup>Therefore say to them: 'Thus saith Jehovah: "I will make this proverb cease, and they shall no longer use it as a proverb in Israel." But say to them: "The days are at hand and the fulfilment of every vision. <sup>24</sup>For there shall be no longer any false vision or flattering divination within the house of Israel. <sup>25</sup>For I, Jehovah, will speak a word, and that word which I shall speak shall be performed and it shall be no longer delayed. For in your days, O rebellious house, I will speak a word and perform it," is the oracle of Jehovah.' <sup>26</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me, <sup>27</sup>Son of man, behold the house of Israel are saying: 'The vision which he utters is for many days to come, and he prophesies for times that are far off.' <sup>28</sup>Therefore say to them: 'Thus saith Jehovah: "None of my words shall be longer delayed, for I speak a word and it shall be performed," is the oracle of Jehovah.'

Refusal of the popular
scepticism

13 <sup>1</sup>Moreover this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>2</sup>Son of man, prophesy against<sup>m</sup> the prophets of Israel. Prophesy and say to them:<sup>n</sup> 'Hear the word of Jehovah: <sup>3</sup>"Thus saith Jehovah: Woe to the foolish prophets who prophesy according to their own mind<sup>o</sup> and to what they have not seen. <sup>4</sup>Like jackals on the ruins are thy prophets, O Israel. <sup>5</sup>Ye have not gone up into the breaches, nor built up a wall for the house of Israel, that ye may stand up in battle in the day of Jehovah. <sup>6</sup>They see false visions and divine<sup>p</sup> lies, saying, The oracle of Jehovah, when Jehovah hath not sent them. And they await

Undermining influence
of the popular
prophets

§ 114. Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, during the same period, turned with strong invective upon the false prophets and condemned them because they were encouraging the people in the fatal rebellion against Babylon. Cf. § 101. He recognized that they were archtraitors to the nation as well as to the God in whose name they spoke. In the same way he condemned the women of Judah, who trusted and encouraged their husbands to trust in heathen amulets and incantations to save them from Babylon.

<sup>1</sup> 12<sup>23</sup> So Gk. Heb adds, Lord, as frequently throughout the section.

<sup>m</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> Revising the Heb., as the context requires and the vss. indicate.

<sup>n</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb., to those who prophesy of themselves.

<sup>o</sup> 13<sup>3</sup> This phrase is omitted by the Gk. and O. Lat.

<sup>p</sup> 13<sup>6</sup> Correcting the Heb. according to the Gk., Targ., and Lat.

the fulfilment of their words. <sup>7</sup>Do ye not see a false vision and utter lying divinations?<sup>q</sup>

<sup>s</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, Because ye speak falsely and see lies, therefore behold I am against you, is Jehovah's oracle. <sup>9</sup>My hand shall be against the prophets who see false visions and utter lying divinations. They shall not be in the council of my people, nor inscribed in register of the house of Israel. And to the land of Israel they shall not come, that ye may know that I am Jehovah. <sup>10</sup>Inasmuch as they have led my people astray by saying, Peace, when there was no peace; and if some one build a wall, they daub it over with whitewash; say to those who daub with whitewash,<sup>r</sup> There shall be an overwhelming rain; and hailstones shall fall<sup>s</sup> and a tempestuous wind shall rend it. <sup>12</sup>And behold, when the wall is fallen, shall it not then be said to you, Where is the daubing with which ye daubed it? <sup>13</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, I will let loose a tempestuous wind in my wrath; and in mine anger there shall be an overwhelming rain, and in fury hailstones shall fall. <sup>14</sup>Thus will I tear down the wall which ye have daubed with whitewash and cast it to the earth, and its foundations shall be laid bare, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst of it; that ye may know that I am Jehovah. <sup>15</sup>Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon those who daub it with whitewash. And it shall be said<sup>t</sup> to you, Where<sup>u</sup> is the wall? where are those who daub it? <sup>16</sup>the prophets of Israel who prophesy concerning Jerusalem and see visions of peace for her when there is no peace," is the oracle of Jehovah.'

<sup>17</sup>And do thou, O son of man, set thy face against the daughters of thy people who prophesy out of their own hearts, and do thou prophesy against them, <sup>18</sup>and say, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Woe to the women who sew bands<sup>v</sup> on all wrists,<sup>w</sup> and prepare long veils for the heads of persons of every height, to hunt lives. Ye hunt souls from among my people, and keep alive souls for yourselves. <sup>19</sup>And ye profane me among my people, for handfuls of barley and bits of bread—to put to death those<sup>x</sup> who should not die, and to keep alive those who should not live, by lying to my people who listen to your lies."

<sup>20</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah, "Behold, I am against your bands, where-with<sup>y</sup> you hunt lives,<sup>z</sup> and I will tear them from your arms, and set free those whom ye hunt. <sup>21</sup>And I will tear off your long veils and deliver my people out of your hand and they shall no longer be as prey in your hand and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. <sup>22</sup>Because ye make sorrowful<sup>a</sup> the heart of

<sup>q</sup> 13<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, what is probably secondary, and say what is the oracle of Jehovah, though I have not spoken.

<sup>r</sup> 13<sup>11</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, and it shall fall.

<sup>s</sup> 13<sup>11</sup> Revising the corrupt Heb. as suggested by Targ. and Syr.

<sup>t</sup> 13<sup>15</sup> So Syr. and Targ., and the parallel in 12. Heb., I will say.

<sup>u</sup> 13<sup>16</sup> So Syr. and parallel in 12. Heb. text is corrupt.

<sup>v</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> The reference is evidently to certain forms of amulets which are supposed to exert a benign or malignant influence. Here, as elsewhere in the O.T., it is the women who practise divination and keep alive the old Heb. rites.

<sup>w</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> The Syr. and Targ. read simply, hands.

<sup>x</sup> 13<sup>19</sup> Lit., souls.

<sup>y</sup> 13<sup>20</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Syr. and Targ.

<sup>z</sup> 13<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. adds, as birds. The same phrase, which is found at the end of the verse, is also probably secondary.

<sup>a</sup> 13<sup>22</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the VSS.

the righteous with lies, when I have not made him sorrowful, and strengthen the hands of the wicked, so that he doth not turn from his evil way to save his life,<sup>23</sup> therefore ye shall no longer see idle visions and practice divinations, but I will deliver my people from your hands, and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.””

§ 115. Judah Sinful Beyond All Pardon, Ezek. 14

Ezek. 14 <sup>1</sup>Now when certain of the elders of Israel came<sup>b</sup> and sat before me, <sup>2</sup>this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>3</sup>Son of man, these men have taken their idols to their hearts and have set before themselves their iniquity as a stumbling block. Shall I let myself be consulted by them? <sup>4</sup>Therefore speak with them and say to them: ‘Thus saith Jehovah: “Any man of the house of Israel who shall take his idols to his heart and put in his way his iniquity as a stumbling block and betakes himself to a prophet, I, Jehovah, will myself answer him according to the multitude of his idols, <sup>5</sup>that I may lay hold of the hearts of Israel, because they have turned away from me for all their idols.”” <sup>6</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel: ‘Thus saith<sup>c</sup> Jehovah: “Turn ye, turn ye away from your idols and from all your abominations turn away your face. <sup>7</sup>For any man of the house of Israel or of the aliens who dwell in Israel who shall abandon thee and take his idols to his heart and set his iniquity as a stumbling block before him and shall go to a prophet, that the prophet may consult<sup>d</sup> me for him; I, Jehovah, will myself answer him; <sup>8</sup>and I will set my face against that man and I will make him a sign and a byword and cut him off from among my people, that ye may know that I am Jehovah.

Jehovah's refusal to be consulted by idolators

<sup>9</sup>When a prophet is deceived and speaks a word, I, Jehovah, have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand against him and destroy him out of the midst of my people Israel. <sup>10</sup>And they shall bear their iniquity; as the iniquity of him who consults, so shall be the iniquity of him who prophesies, <sup>11</sup>that the house of Israel may no longer go astray from me nor again be defiled with all their transgressions; but they shall be my people and I shall be their God, is the oracle of Jehovah.””

Punishment of an abetting prophet

<sup>12</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: <sup>13</sup>Son of man, if the land sin against me by acting faithlessly and I stretch out my hand against it and destroy its

A wicked land not delivered by a few good citizens

---

§ 115 Again the elders of the people turned to Ezekiel for an oracle regarding the rebels in distant Judah. Realizing that the men who stood before him, as well as those whom they represented, were given to idolatry, Ezekiel made his message to them one of warning and condemnation. His underlying thought is that the fate of a nation depends upon the character of its people. If the majority are corrupt, a few righteous men, even though they be as holy as Noah, Daniel, and Job, the heroes of ancient Heb. story, cannot deliver it. Evidently the popular tradition regarding Daniel, to which reference is here made, is not the later one found in the opening chapters of the book of Daniel, for Ezekiel was writing before the final fall of Jerusalem. The hero to whom the prophet refers is associated with Noah and Job. The nature of the tradition must be inferred from the present context. It is probable, however, that it is the prototype of the stories in later form and setting found in the book of Daniel. Cf. §§ 203-8. The Job in the mind of Ezekiel is obviously not the Job of the great poem found in Job 3-42, but rather is the blameless hero of the original prose story preserved in the prologue and epilogue of the book of Job. Cf. Vol. VI in loco.

<sup>b</sup> 14<sup>1</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by aid of six Heb. MSS.

<sup>c</sup> 14<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Lord, as often throughout the section.

<sup>d</sup> 14<sup>7</sup> Their crime is not consulting Jehovah and his prophet, but their preceding acts of idolatry. Jehovah's answer is one of judgment.

staff of life and send famine upon it,<sup>14</sup>if these three men were in its midst, Noah, Daniel, and Job, they would by their righteousness, save only<sup>e</sup> themselves, saith Jehovah.<sup>f</sup> <sup>15</sup>If I send evil beasts throughout the land and they depopulate it so that it become waste and no one pass through it because of the beasts—<sup>16</sup>though these three men were in it, as I live, is the oracle of Jehovah, they would not deliver either sons or daughters; they alone would be saved, and the land would be waste.<sup>17</sup>Or if I send a sword into that land, and say, ‘Sword, pass through the land,’ and I cut off from it man and beast—<sup>18</sup>though these three men were in it, as I live, is the oracle of Jehovah, they would not deliver either sons or daughters, but they alone would be saved.<sup>19</sup>Or if I send pestilence into that land and pour out my fury upon it in blood so as to cut off from it man and beast—<sup>20</sup>though Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, as I live, is the oracle of Jehovah, they would not save either son or daughter. They by their righteousness would save only themselves.

<sup>21</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, how much more when I send my four evil judgments: sword, famine, evil beasts and pestilence upon Jerusalem to destroy from her man and beast.<sup>22</sup>And should<sup>f</sup> there be left survivors in her, sons and daughters, who should escape and come forth to you, then, when ye see their conduct and their deeds, ye will be comforted for the evil which I have brought on Jerusalem, for all that I have brought on her; they will comfort you when ye see their conduct and their deeds, for ye will learn that it is not without cause that I did all that I have done to her, is the oracle of Jehovah.

§ 116. Jerusalem the Worthless Vine, Ezek. 15

Ezek. 15 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, of what use is the wood of the vine in comparison with all the branches<sup>g</sup> which are on the trees of the forest? <sup>3</sup>Doth one take<sup>h</sup> from it wood to make anything? Or doth one take from it even a peg on which to hang any kind of vessel?<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>Behold, it is put into the fire to be consumed; the fire consumes its two ends and its middle is burned up. Is it then fit for anything?<sup>j</sup> <sup>5</sup>Even when it is whole it is used for nothing; much less can it be used when fire hath consumed it, and it is burned up!

<sup>k</sup>Therefore,<sup>i</sup> thus saith Jehovah: Just as the wood of the vine of all the trees<sup>j</sup> of the forest is given up to the fire to be consumed, so I give up the inhabitants of Jerusalem to be destroyed.<sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>And I will set my face against them. They have come forth from the fire, and fire shall consume them and they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I set my face against them,<sup>m</sup> and make the land desolate because they have been faithless, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>e</sup> 14<sup>14</sup> Supplying the, only, implied by the context and found in the parallel passages.

<sup>f</sup> 14<sup>22</sup> So Lat. and Sym. Heb., behold.

<sup>g</sup> 116 Ezekiel here develops Jeremiah's figure in Jer. 2<sup>21</sup>. He likens the people of Judah to a wild vine whose wood was good for nothing but for fuel. In <sup>7</sup> he refers to the judgment that has already overtaken them, and predicts still more drastic judgment.

<sup>h</sup> 15<sup>2</sup> The Gk. omits this word and reads, of all the wood which is among the trees of the forest.

<sup>b</sup> 15<sup>3</sup> Following the Gk. and Targ.

<sup>i</sup> 15<sup>6</sup> Gk. adds, say.

<sup>j</sup> 15<sup>6</sup> So Lat. <sup>k</sup>The all is found only in the Gk. and Syr.

Especially true of Jeruusalem

A vine good only as fuel

So Judah is fit
only
for fuel

§ 117. Jerusalem's Shameful Moral Record, Ezek. 16

Ezek. 16 <sup>1</sup>Again this word of Jehovah came to me: O man, make known to Jerusalem: 'Thine origin and thy nativity are from the land of the Canaanite: thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother was a Hittite. <sup>2</sup>And as for thy nativity, in the day when thou wast born thy cord was not cut, thou wast not washed in water to cleanse thee; thou wast not at all salted or swaddled. <sup>3</sup>No eye pitied thee, to do any of these things out of compassion for thee; but thou wast cast forth into the open field, in contempt for thy person, on that day when thou wast born.

<sup>4</sup>And when I passed by thee, and saw thee weltering in thy blood, I said to thee, as thou wast thus writhing in thy blood, "Live;<sup>k</sup> <sup>5</sup>become great<sup>l</sup> as the growth of the field."<sup>m</sup> And thou didst become great and grown up and didst attain the age of marriage;<sup>n</sup> thy breast was formed and thy hair was grown; but thou wast naked and bare.

<sup>6</sup>Then I passed by thee and saw thee, and behold, thou hadst come to the time of marriage;<sup>o</sup> so I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness and pledged myself to thee, and entered into a covenant with thee,' is the oracle of Jehovah, 'and thou becamest mine.

<sup>7</sup>Then I bathed thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil. <sup>8</sup>I clothed thee also with embroidered work, and gave thee shoes of Egyptian leather,<sup>p</sup> and girded thee with fine linen, and covered thee with silk. <sup>9</sup>And I decked thee with ornaments, and put bracelets upon thy hands, and put a chain about thy neck. <sup>10</sup>And I put a ring in thy nose, and ear-rings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thy head. <sup>11</sup>Thus thou wert adorned with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and embroidered work; thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil; and thou didst become exceedingly beautiful.<sup>q</sup> <sup>12</sup>And thy renown went forth among the nations for thy beauty; for it was perfect, because of the splendor with which I endued thee,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>13</sup>But thou didst trust in thy beauty, and playedst the harlot by virtue of thy renown, and didst lavish thy harlotries on every one who passed by.<sup>r</sup> <sup>14</sup>And thou didst take thy garments, and madest thee gaily adorned high places, and didst play the harlot in them.<sup>s</sup> <sup>15</sup>Thou didst also take thy fair jewels of gold and of silver, which I had given thee, and madest thee images

Jerusalem's base origin

Adopted by Jehovah in Egypt

Wedded to him at Sinai

Endowed with the riches of Canaan

Faithless to Jehovah and bent on idolatry

§ 117 Ezekiel here takes up again a familiar theme. One of the great problems with which he was constantly struggling was the vindication of Jehovah's justice in destroying his people and sacred temple. That justification he found in abundant measure in the past crimes of the city and people. With a double purpose he held up the shameful record of the past before his contemporaries: (1) to vindicate Jehovah's justice in their minds, and (2) to warn them against committing similar crimes again.

<sup>k</sup> 16<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Syr. In the Heb. the last clause is repeated by mistake.

<sup>l</sup> 16<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>m</sup> 16<sup>3</sup> So Syr. Heb. adds, I have given thee.

<sup>n</sup> 16<sup>4</sup> Correcting by the analogy with <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 16<sup>5</sup> Lit., love.

<sup>p</sup> 16<sup>6</sup> The exact derivation of the word is not known. Sealskin is the ordinary rendering, but the Heb. probably simply reproduces an Egyptian term.

<sup>q</sup> 16<sup>7</sup> So Gk. In the Heb. a scribe, thinking of the historical facts, has added, and thou didst prosper to royal estate. Vs. <sup>14</sup> is the immediate sequel of the preceding.

<sup>r</sup> 16<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. adds the parallel in <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 16<sup>9</sup> So Syr. The Heb. adds, thou shalt not enter in neither shall it be; but this is probably a secondary gloss.

of men, and didst play the harlot with them. <sup>18</sup>And thou didst take thy embroidered garments, and didst cover them, and didst set mine oil and mine incense before them. <sup>19</sup>My bread also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou didst even set it before them as a sweet savor; and thus it was,' is the oracle of Jehovah. <sup>20</sup>Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne to me, and these hast thou sacrificed to them to be devoured. Were thy acts of harlotry so small a thing, <sup>21</sup>that thou must needs slay my children, and deliver them up, by causing them to pass through the fire for these? <sup>22</sup>And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast weltering in thy blood.

Eagerly adopting the religious rites of other nations

<sup>23</sup>And it is come to pass after all thy wickedness (woe, woe to thee!)<sup>t</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah), <sup>24</sup>that thou hast built thee a vaulted place, and hast made thee a high place in every street. <sup>25</sup>Thou hast built thy high place at every street corner, and hast made thy beauty an abomination, and hast offered thyself<sup>u</sup> to every one who passed by, and multiplied thine acts of harlotry. <sup>26</sup>Thou didst play the harlot with thy neighbors, the people of Egypt—sensual,<sup>v</sup> multiplying thine acts of harlotry, to provoke me to anger! <sup>27</sup>Behold, therefore, I stretched out my hand over thee, and diminished thy portion, and delivered thee to the will of those who hate thee, the daughters of the Philistines, who were ashamed of thy lewd conduct. <sup>28</sup>Thou hast played the harlot also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet thou wast not satisfied. <sup>29</sup>Thou hast moreover extended thy whoredom to the land of traffic, Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied with this.

Shameless as well as faithless

<sup>30</sup>'What shall I do with thy heart' is the oracle of Jehovah, 'seeing that thou didst all these things—the deed of an impudent harlot! <sup>31</sup>in that thou didst build thy vaulted place at every corner, and make thy raised place in every street? But thou hast not been as a harlot in that thou scornest hire. <sup>32</sup>An adulterous wife receives strangers instead of her husband!<sup>w</sup> <sup>33</sup>To all harlots gifts are given; but thou gavest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and didst bribe them that they might come unto thee on every side for thy harlotries. <sup>34</sup>And thou wast different from other women in thy acts of harlotry, in that none solicited thee to play the harlot, and in that thou gavest hire, although no hire was given thee; thus wert thou different.'

Conquest and exile the deserved and inevitable penalty

<sup>35</sup>Therefore, O harlot, hear the word of Jehovah. <sup>36</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: 'Because thy adultery was lavished<sup>x</sup> and thy nakedness uncovered through thy harlotries with thy lovers; and because of all thy abominable idols,<sup>y</sup> and the blood of thy children, that thou hast given to them; <sup>37</sup>therefore, I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all those whom thou hast loved, with all those whom thou hast hated; I will even gather them

<sup>t</sup> 16<sup>23</sup> Gk. omits this interjected clause.

<sup>u</sup> 16<sup>25</sup> Heb., opened thy feet.

<sup>v</sup> 16<sup>26</sup> Lit., great of flesh. Cf. 23.

<sup>w</sup> 16<sup>32</sup> This vs. interrupts the close connection of thought between <sup>31</sup> and <sup>33</sup> and may be a marginal note that has crept into the text.

<sup>x</sup> 16<sup>29</sup> Slightly correcting the text.

<sup>y</sup> 16<sup>30</sup> Possibly the clause is secondary.

against thee on every side, and will disclose thy nakedness to them, that they may see all thy nakedness. <sup>38</sup>And I will judge thee, as women who break wedlock and shed blood are judged; and I will bring upon thee the blood judgment of wrath and jealousy. <sup>39</sup>I will also give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down thy vaulted place, and break down thy high places; and they shall strip thee of thy clothes, and take thy fair jewels; and they shall leave thee naked and bare. <sup>40</sup>They shall also bring up a company against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords. <sup>41</sup>And they shall burn thy houses with fire, and so execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women; and I will stop thy harlotry, and thou shalt also give no more hire. So will I vent my wrath upon thee, until my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry. <sup>43</sup>Because thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast roused me to rage in all these things; therefore, behold,<sup>z</sup> I also will requite thee,<sup>z</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah; 'and thou shalt not commit this lewdness with all thine abominations.

<sup>44</sup>Behold, every one who uses proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, "As is the mother, so is the daughter." <sup>45</sup>Thou art the daughter of thy mother, who scorned her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters who scorned their husbands and their children: your mother was a Hittite, and your father an Amorite. <sup>46</sup>And thine elder sister is Samaria, with her daughters, who dwell to the north of thee; and thy younger sister, who dwelt to the south of thee, was Sodom and her daughters. <sup>47</sup>Yet thou hast not walked in their ways, nor done according to their abominations—that<sup>b</sup> would have been a small thing—but thou wast more corrupt in all thy ways than these. <sup>48</sup>As I live,' is the oracle of Jehovah, 'Sodom, thy sister, with her daughters hath not done as thou, with thy daughters, hast done. <sup>49</sup>Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom: pride, fulness of bread, and careless ease was in her and her daughters, neither did she reach out the hand to help the poor and needy. <sup>50</sup>And they were haughty, and committed abominations before me; therefore I took them away as soon as I observed it. <sup>51</sup>Neither hath Samaria committed half thy sins; but thou hast committed more abominations than they, and hast justified thy sisters by all thine abominations which thou hast done. <sup>52</sup>Thou also, bear thine own shame, in that by thy sins thou hast pleaded for thy sisters, in that thou hast acted more abominably than they; they are more righteous than thou; therefore, be thou also confounded, and bear thy shame in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

<sup>53</sup>And I will restore again their fortunes,<sup>c</sup> the fortunes of Sodom and her daughters, and thy fortunes together with theirs; <sup>54</sup>that thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be ashamed because of all thou hast done in consoling them. <sup>55</sup>And thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate; and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their

Judah's
crimes
worse than those of Sodom and Samaria

Restoration
after punishment

<sup>a</sup> 16<sup>33</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>b</sup> 16<sup>33</sup> Lit., give thy way upon thy (so Gk. and Syr.) head.

<sup>b</sup> 16<sup>47</sup> Gk. and Syr. omit. The translation is based on a restored text.

<sup>c</sup> 16<sup>33</sup> Lit., captivity.

former estate; and thou and thy daughter shall return to thy former estate.
<sup>56</sup>For thy sister Sodom was not mentioned by thee in the day of thy pride,<sup>57</sup>before thy nakedness<sup>d</sup> was uncovered, as now<sup>e</sup> thou art like her, an object of scorn to the daughters of Edom,<sup>f</sup> and of all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines round about, who scorn thee.<sup>58</sup>Thou hast borne thy lewdness and thine abominations,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

Re-newal
of the covenant

<sup>59</sup>For thus saith Jehovah: I will also deal with thee as thou hast done, in that thou has despised the oath by breaking the covenant.<sup>60</sup>Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish an everlasting covenant with thee.<sup>61</sup>Then shalt thou remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, the elder and the younger; when I give them to thee as daughters, though not because of thy covenant.<sup>62</sup>And I will re-establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah;<sup>63</sup>that thou mayest remember, and be confounded, and never again open thy mouth, because of thy shame, when I have forgiven thee all that thou hast done, saith Jehovah.

§ 118. Zedekiah's Breach of Faith, Ezek. 17

Nebu-chad-rezzar's deportation of Je-hoia-chin and appointment of Zede-kiah

Zede-kiah's fatal alliance with Egypt

Ezek. 17 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me,<sup>2</sup>O man, propound a riddle, and speak a parable to the house of Israel,<sup>3</sup>and say, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "A great eagle<sup>g</sup> with great wings and long pinions, with full plumage and of different colors, came to Lebanon, and took away the topmost of the cedar; <sup>4</sup>he cropped off the topmost of its young twigs, and carried it to the land of traffic; he set it in the city of merchants. <sup>5</sup>He took also some of the seed of the land, and planted it in fruitful soil; he planted<sup>h</sup> it beside abundant waters; he set it as a slip that it might sprout<sup>i</sup> and become a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches would turn toward him, and its roots be under him; that it might become a vine, and produce branches, and send forth boughs.

<sup>7</sup>There was also another great eagle with wide wings and many feathers; and, behold, this vine bent its roots toward him, and toward him sent forth its branches, from the bed in which it was planted, that he might water it.<sup>8</sup>It was planted in a good soil by abundant waters, that it might bring forth branches, and bear fruit and become a noble vine."<sup>9</sup>Say thou, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Shall it prosper? Shall he not pull up its roots, and cut off its fruit; so that all its sprouting leaves shall wither?<sup>i</sup> Will he not come with a

<sup>d</sup> 16<sup>57</sup> Restoring what was apparently the original text.

<sup>e</sup> 16<sup>57</sup> Slightly revising the text as demanded by the context and supported by the Gk.

<sup>f</sup> 16<sup>57</sup> Correcting a slight error in the Heb., which reads, Aram.

<sup>g</sup> 118. The date of this chapter is 588 B.C., when Zedekiah joined in the rebellion against Nebuchadrezzar. In an elaborate allegory, Ezekiel describes the fate of Jehoiachin and the princes deported with him in 597 B.C., likening them to the topmost branches of a cedar, carried away by the eagle, Nebuchadrezzar. Now, Zedekiah, who was established on his throne by Nebuchadrezzar, has entered into alliance with a rival eagle, Egypt, so that the first great eagle will again come and tear Zedekiah up by the roots and carry him away to the land of Babylon.

In this connection Ezekiel expresses the hope that Jehovah would yet take a branch from the lofty cedar, which symbolized Jehoiachin, or the Davidic royal house, and plant him again on Israel's mountain, so that again all people might dwell under the shadow of his branches. Cf. for further development of this messianic motif, §§ 218-227.

<sup>h</sup> 17<sup>3</sup> For the same figure of an eagle cf. Hos. 8<sup>1</sup>, Hab. 1<sup>8</sup>, Jer. 4<sup>13</sup>, 48<sup>40</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 17<sup>5</sup> The exact meaning of the Heb. is in doubt. The above is only a conjectural translation, supported by the context and suggested by Toy (Ezek., p. 26).

<sup>i</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> Heb. adds, it will wither; but this is not found in Gk.

strong<sup>j</sup> arm and much people to pluck it up<sup>k</sup> from its roots. <sup>10</sup>Behold, when planted, shall it prosper? Shall it not wither completely when the east wind strikes it? wither in the bed where it is growing?"'

<sup>11</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>12</sup>Say now to the rebellious house: "Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, Behold, the king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and took her king and princes, and brought them to him to Babylon.

<sup>13</sup>And he took one of the royal family, and made a covenant with him; he also imposed an oath upon him, and took away the mighty of the land; <sup>14</sup>that it might be a submissive kingdom, that it might not lift itself up, but that by keeping his covenant it might serve him.<sup>l</sup> <sup>15</sup>But he rebelled against him, sending ambassadors to Egypt, that they might give him horses and a large army.<sup>m</sup> Shall he prosper? shall he escape who doeth such things? shall he break the covenant, and yet escape?"'

<sup>16</sup>As I live, saith Jehovah, surely in the place where the king dwelleth who made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he broke, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die. <sup>17</sup>Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company help him in the war, when they cast up mounds and build forts, to cut off many persons. <sup>18</sup>For he hath despised the oath by breaking the covenant; and behold, he hath pledged himself, and yet hath done all these things; he shall not escape.

<sup>19</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: As I live, surely mine oath hath he despised, and my covenant hath he broken, I will even bring it upon his own head. <sup>20</sup>And I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and will enter into judgment with him there, for he hath been faithless to me. <sup>21</sup>And all his choice men<sup>n</sup> in all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they who remain shall be scattered toward every wind; and ye shall know that I, Jehovah, have spoken it.

<sup>22</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: I will also take a portion of the lofty head of the cedar, and will set it out; from the topmost of its tender twigs I will pluck off a tender one, and I will plant it upon a high and lofty mountain: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and become a goodly cedar; and under it shall dwell all birds of every feather; in the shade of its branches shall they dwell. <sup>24</sup>And all the trees of the field shall know that I, Jehovah, have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish; I, Jehovah, have spoken and have done it.

First
captivity

Zede-kiah's
rebellion against Nebuchad-rezzar

His punishment

Jeho-
vah's purpose
to restore
the David-ic kingdom

<sup>j</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> Supplying the verb implied by the context.

<sup>k</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> Gk., Syr., Targ., and Lat. imply that the original read, to cut it off.

<sup>l</sup> 17<sup>14</sup> So Syr., Lat., Targ., and a slightly revised text.

<sup>m</sup> 17<sup>15</sup> Heb., much people.

<sup>n</sup> 17<sup>21</sup> So Syr., Targ., and certain codices and supported by the parable in 23<sup>7</sup>. Heb., fugitives.

§ 119. The Methods of Divine Judgment, Ezek. 18

The
true law of moral
responsibility

Reward of individual virtue

Penalty
for individual sins

Moral guilt
not transferred to another

Ezek. 18 <sup>i</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>What do ye mean by using this proverb in the land of Israel: "The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge?" <sup>3</sup>As I live, is the oracle of Jehovah, never again shall ye use this proverb in Israel. <sup>4</sup>Behold all souls are mine—the soul of the father as well as the soul of the son is mine. The person who sins, he alone<sup>o</sup> shall die.

<sup>5</sup>But if a man be righteous, doing justice and what is right, <sup>6</sup>if he eat not upon the mountains<sup>p</sup> nor lift up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, nor defile his neighbor's wife, nor approach a woman in her impurity, <sup>7</sup>and wrong no one, restore to the debtor his pledge, take nought by robbery, give his bread to the hungry and clothe the naked, <sup>8</sup>lend not at interest, nor take any increase, keep his hand away from iniquity, execute true judgment between man and man, <sup>9</sup>follow my statutes, keep my commandments to do them;<sup>q</sup> he is righteous; he shall live, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>10</sup>But if ye beget a son that is a robber, a shedder of blood, who does<sup>r</sup> none of these things, <sup>11</sup>but eats upon the mountains, defiles his neighbor's wife, <sup>12</sup>wrongs the poor and needy, robs, restores not the pledge to the debtor, lifts up his eyes to idols, commits abomination, <sup>13</sup>lends on interest, and takes increase, shall he live? He shall not live. He hath done all these abominations. He shall die. His blood shall be upon him.

<sup>14</sup>And behold, if ye beget a son who sees all the things that his father has done, and fears<sup>s</sup> and does not do likewise, <sup>15</sup>does not eat upon the mountains, nor lifts up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, does not defile his neighbor's wife, <sup>16</sup>oppresses no one, exacts no pledge, takes nothing by robbery, gives bread to the hungry and clothes to the naked, <sup>17</sup>keeps his hand from iniquity,<sup>t</sup> takes no interest or increase, keeps my ordinances and follows

---

§ 119 The logical connection of this chapter with those which precede and follow is not entirely clear. The dogma of individual responsibility is developed at length in 33, and it is possible that this section also belongs in the period of doubt following 586 b.c. Their thought and language, however, are so closely parallel that it is difficult to see what motives could have induced Ezekiel to deliver in the same period two sermons so nearly identical. The central teaching of this section is first developed at the beginning of Ezekiel's ministry in chap. 3<sup>16-21</sup>. His own experience and that of his fellow-exiles brought the problem which this doctrine seeks to solve prominently to the front. The majority of the exiles felt themselves under the shadow of the divine displeasure. Our fathers have sinned and we bear the consequences, was the prevalent belief. The old theology had taught that each individual suffered for the guilt of the nation as a whole. In early times all members of a family and sometimes of a city were indiscriminately punished for a heinous crime committed by one of their number. The developing moral sense of the race had gradually modified this false dogma. In Dt. 24<sup>6</sup> the ancient custom of putting to death the families of a criminal is at last definitely set aside. As the exile, with its changed conditions, loomed clearly before the eyes of Ezekiel and Jeremiah they both rejected this dogma and declared, as Ezekiel does, in the present passage, that a man is simply responsible for the consequences of his own acts. Ezekiel also goes further and asserts that it is not a man's past acts but his present attitude and deeds that determine his innocence or guilt in the eyes of God. Ezekiel's ideas of righteousness are a blending of the ethical and ceremonial, the prophetic and the priestly standards which were characteristic of Ezekiel and his age.

<sup>o</sup> 18<sup>4</sup> Supplying the word, alone, implied by the context.

<sup>p</sup> 18<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Possibly this phrase here and elsewhere in the passage should be translated in keeping with the analogy in 33<sup>25</sup>, eat no meat with the blood. This act was definitely forbidden by the priestly law. Cf. Vol. IV, § 173. Ezekiel, however, was equally strenuous in his condemnation of worship at any shrine other than Jerusalem, so that there is no compelling reason for departing from the Heb. text.

<sup>q</sup> 18<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb., truth.

<sup>r</sup> 18<sup>10</sup> Through a scribal error, brother, has here been inserted in the Heb.

<sup>s</sup> 18<sup>14</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the VSS.

<sup>t</sup> 18<sup>17</sup> So Gk. Heb., poor.

my statutes—he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall live.
<sup>18</sup> His father, because he practiced oppression, committed robbery,<sup>u</sup> and did what was not good among my<sup>v</sup> people, died for his iniquity. <sup>19</sup> But ye say, Why should not the son bear the iniquity of his father? If the son execute justice and righteousness, keep all my statutes to do them, he shall surely live. <sup>20</sup> The person who sins shall die. A son shall not bear his father's iniquity, and a father shall not bear his son's iniquity. The righteousness of the righteous shall be to his credit, and the wickedness of the wicked to his discredit.

<sup>21</sup> If the wicked turn from all his sins which he has committed, and keep all my statutes, and execute justice and righteousness, he shall surely live; he shall not die. <sup>22</sup> None of the transgressions which he has committed shall be held against him. Because of the righteousness which he has done he shall live. <sup>23</sup> Have I any pleasure in the death of the wicked? is Jehovah's oracle. If he turn from his ways shall he not live?

<sup>24</sup> But if the righteous turn from his righteousness and commit iniquity, and practice all the abominations which the wicked do,<sup>w</sup> none of the righteous deeds which he has done shall be remembered. For the treason which he has committed, and for the sin of which he has been guilty, he shall die. <sup>25</sup> Yet ye say, 'The way of the Lord is not right.' Hear, O house of Israel, is not my way right? Is it not your way that is not right? <sup>26</sup> When a righteous man turns from his righteousness and does iniquity, for the iniquity he has done he shall die.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>27</sup> But if a wicked man turn from the wickedness which he has done and do justice and righteousness, he shall save his life. <sup>28</sup> He fears and turns from all the transgressions which he has committed, he shall surely live and not die. <sup>29</sup> Yet the house of Israel say, 'The way of the Lord is not right.' Is not my way<sup>y</sup> right, O house of Israel? Is it not your ways that are not right? <sup>30</sup> Therefore, O house of Israel, I judge each of you according to his ways, is the oracle of Jehovah. Repent and turn from all your transgressions, that they may not be a stumbling block of iniquity to you. <sup>31</sup> Put away from you all the transgressions which you commit against me, and make for yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. For why will ye die, O house of Israel? <sup>32</sup> For I have no pleasure in the death of him who dies, is the oracle of Jehovah. Therefore repent and live.<sup>z</sup>

For-give-ness for
the penitent sinner

Punishment
for the saint who sins

Call to individual
repentance
and
pardon

<sup>u</sup> 18<sup>18</sup> Heb. adds, brother.

<sup>v</sup> 18<sup>18</sup> So Gk. Heb., his.

<sup>w</sup> 18<sup>21</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Arab. The Heb. is expanded by the addition of, he shall do and live.

<sup>x</sup> 18<sup>26</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds the awkward phrase, for them.

<sup>y</sup> 18<sup>29</sup> So four Heb. MSS., Gk., O. Lat., and Arab., and the parallel passage in <sup>25</sup>. Heb., ways.

<sup>z</sup> 18<sup>32</sup> These last words are lacking in Gk. of Origen and are probably later additions.

§ 120. Jehovah's Vengeance upon Jerusalem and Ammon, Ezek. 20<sup>46</sup>–21<sup>32</sup>

Fire
about to consume
Judah

Ezek. 20 <sup>45</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>46</sup>Son of man, turn thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the field of the south; <sup>47</sup>and say to the forest of the south: 'Hear the word of Jehovah: "Thus saith Jehovah: Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree; the blazing flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from south to north shall be burned thereby. <sup>48</sup>And all mankind shall see that I, Jehovah, have kindled it; it shall not be quenched."'<sup>49</sup>Then I said, Ah, Lord Jehovah! they say of me, 'Is he not speaking riddles?'

21 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn thy face toward Jerusalem, and preach against the sanctuaries, and prophesy against the land of Israel,<sup>3</sup>and say to the land of Israel, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, I am against thee, and will draw my sword from its sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked. <sup>4</sup>Because I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore my sword goeth forth from its sheath against all mankind from south to north; <sup>5</sup>and all mankind shall know that I, Jehovah, have drawn my sword from its sheath; it shall not again be sheathed.

<sup>6</sup>Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with heartbreaking<sup>a</sup> and with bitterness, sigh before their eyes. <sup>7</sup>And when they say to thee, Why sighest thou? thou shalt answer, Because of the tidings, for it cometh; and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water; behold it cometh, and it shall be,<sup>b</sup> saith Jehovah.'<sup>c</sup>

<sup>8</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>9</sup>Son of man, prophesy, and say, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Say:<sup>c</sup>

A sword, a sword, sharpened and<sup>d</sup> polished.

<sup>10</sup>It is sharpened that it may make a slaughter;

It is polished as lightning<sup>e</sup> flashes forth.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>11</sup>And it is given<sup>g</sup> to a slayer to be grasped in the hand!

The sword it is sharpened, yea, it is polished!

To give it into the hand of the slayer!

<sup>12</sup>Shriek and wail, son of man, for it is against my people.

It is against all the princes of Israel;

They are delivered over to the sword together with my people;

Smite therefore upon thy thigh.

§ 120 The background of this prophecy was the rebellion of the Palestinian states against Nebuchadrezzar. In this rebellion Ammon and Judah were allies. In the form of a dramatic sword-song Ezekiel announces the judgment which will surely overtake these rebelling nations. Unfortunately the text has suffered in transmission, but with the aid of the different VSS. the poetic form and vigor of the original may be largely restored. It reveals the fierce zeal and earnestness of the prophet, in whose mind the end of Judah had already come.

<sup>a</sup> 21<sup>6</sup> Heb. idiom, breaking of loins.

<sup>b</sup> 21<sup>7</sup> Gk. omits this clause.

<sup>c</sup> 21<sup>9</sup> Here the prophecy passes into the poetic form.

<sup>d</sup> 21<sup>9</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb. adds, also.

<sup>e</sup> 21<sup>10</sup> Based on a revised text. The Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>f</sup> 21<sup>10</sup> The text of the rest of the vs. is hopelessly corrupt. It was probably a scribal gloss.

<sup>g</sup> 21<sup>11</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. as the context requires.

Jeho-
vah's aveng-
ing sword

Proph-
et's grief

The song of the sword

<sup>12</sup>For there is a trial, is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy,

And smite thy hands together;

And let the sword be doubled the third time.<sup>i</sup>

It is the sword of those mortally wounded!

It is the great sword of those mortally wounded!

<sup>15</sup>Fill them with terror<sup>j</sup> that their hearts may melt,

That the fallen may<sup>k</sup> be many at their gates;

They are given over<sup>l</sup> to the slaughter of the sword;<sup>m</sup>

Ah! it is made as lightning, it is sharpened for slaughter!

<sup>16</sup>Gather thee together, to the right,<sup>n</sup> to the left,

Whithersoever thine edge is appointed.

<sup>17</sup>I will also smite my hands together,

And I will cause my wrath to rest;

I, Jehovah, have spoken it.”

<sup>18</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: <sup>19</sup>Son of man, mark out for thyself two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come; let the two come forth from the same land; and mark out a sign-post, mark it out at the head of the road to [each] city. <sup>20</sup>Thou shalt mark out a way for the sword to come to Rabbah of the Ammonites, and to Judah,<sup>o</sup> and to Jerusalem in its midst.<sup>p</sup> <sup>21</sup>For the king of Babylon standeth at the parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination; he shaketh the arrows to and fro, he consulteth the teraphim, he looketh at the liver. <sup>22</sup>In his right hand is the lot for Jerusalem,<sup>q</sup> rams, to open the mouth with a cry,<sup>r</sup> to lift up the voice with a shout, to set battering rams against the gates, to cast up mounds, to build forts. <sup>23</sup>To them it appears as a false divination;<sup>s</sup> but he bringeth iniquity to remembrance, that they may be captured.

<sup>24</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are revealed, and in all your doings your sins appear because ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

<sup>25</sup>And thou who art mortally wounded, thou wicked one, the prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the final judgment for guilt, <sup>26</sup>thus saith Jehovah: ‘Remove the mitre, and take off the crown! This shall be no more the same! Exalt the low, and abase the high! <sup>27</sup>In ruin, ruin, ruin will I lay it low. This also shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.’

Nebu-
chad-rezzar's dec-sion to attack Jerusalem

Judah's merited
fate

Overthrow
of the king

<sup>h</sup> 21<sup>13</sup> Again the text is corrupt and has no meaning. The corruption is evidently due to a scribal note similar to that in <sup>10</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 21<sup>14</sup> The meaning of this vs. is not clear. The text may be corrupt.

<sup>j</sup> 21<sup>15</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>k</sup> 21<sup>15</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>l</sup> 21<sup>15</sup> So Gk.

<sup>m</sup> 21<sup>15</sup> Again following the Gk., which alone has meaning.

<sup>n</sup> 21<sup>16</sup> With Gk. and Lat., omitting, put.

<sup>o</sup> 21<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., to Judah in Jerusalem the fortified.

<sup>p</sup> 21<sup>20</sup> So Gk.

<sup>q</sup> 21<sup>22</sup> Heb. adds, to set battering rams, but cf. rest of vs.

<sup>r</sup> 21<sup>22</sup> So Gk.

<sup>s</sup> 21<sup>23</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, who have sworn solemn oaths.

The sword to fall also upon the Ammonites

<sup>28</sup> And thou, son of man, prophesy and say, ‘Thus saith Jehovah concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reviling; and say thou: “A sword, a sword is drawn to slay, polished to flash forth lightning;<sup>t</sup> <sup>29</sup> in false visions, in lying divination it was told thee that thou wouldest lay it<sup>u</sup> upon the neck of those mortally wounded, the wicked, whose day is come in the time of the final judgment for guilt. <sup>30</sup> Return it to its sheath. In the place where thou wast created, in the land of thy birth, will I judge thee. <sup>31</sup> And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee; I will blow upon thee the fire of my wrath; and I will deliver thee into the hand of brutish men, skilful in destroying. <sup>32</sup> Thou shalt be fuel for the fire; thy blood shalt be in the midst of the land, thou shalt not be remembered; for I, Jehovah, have spoken it.”’

§ 121. The Nation's Doom, Ezek. 7

Judah's judgment day is at hand

Ezek. 7 <sup>1</sup>Moreover this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>O thou son of man, thus saith Jehovah to the land of Israel, ‘An end is come! Say,<sup>v</sup> The end is come<sup>w</sup> on the four quarters of the land! <sup>3</sup>Now is the end upon thee, and I will vent mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy deeds; and I requite thee for all thine abominations. <sup>4</sup>And I will have no compassion on thee, neither will I pity;<sup>x</sup> but I will requite thee for thy deeds, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

<sup>5</sup> Thus saith Jehovah; Calamity follows<sup>y</sup> calamity! Behold it cometh! <sup>6</sup>An end is come; the end is come! it awaketh against thee! behold, it is come. <sup>7</sup>The doom is come upon thee, O inhabitant of the land! The time is come, the day is near, a day of tumult, and not of joyful shouting.<sup>z</sup> <sup>8</sup>Now will I shortly pour out my wrath upon thee, and accomplish mine anger against thee, and will judge thee according to thy deeds; and I will requite thee all thine abominations. <sup>9</sup>And I will not have compassion on thee, neither will I pity; I will bring upon thee according to thy ways; and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I, Jehovah, do smite.

<sup>t</sup> 21<sup>28</sup> Again the text is corrupt. Restoring as in <sup>11</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 21<sup>29</sup> Slightly revising the text. The meaning is not entirely certain. The reference seems to be to the fact that the Ammonites, like the people of Judah, were misled by the false prophets into entertaining vain hopes of victory over their foes.

§ 121 This chapter has no logical connection with those which immediately precede and follow it. The end of Judah is not distant but near. Chaldean armies are already in the land. Its points of contact with 21 are close. There is the same note of terror, of impending doom, and of divine judgment. It comes in all probability from the year 588 B.C. Unfortunately the text of this chapter is, like that of 21, somewhat corrupt. Vss. 3-9 are clearly an expanded duplicate of 2-4. The Gk. translators evidently recognized this and attempted to improve the text by arranging it in the order 1, 2, 6a, 7-9, 3, 4, 5a, 10<sup>b</sup>. The simplest solution of the problem is to recognize the presence of duplicates. It is difficult, however, to say what is the origin of these duplicates. Possibly they were taken from two early recensions of Ezekiel's prophecies. Contrary to Ezekiel's ordinary style, there is a strong poetic note running through the entire chapter. In this respect, also, it resembles 21; but is difficult to distinguish, on the basis of the present

<sup>v</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> Restoring, say, which has been retained in the Gk.

<sup>w</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> Following the Lat. and Targ., which are supported by the parallel version in <sup>6</sup> in inserting, come.

<sup>x</sup> 7<sup>3</sup> Heb., lit., mine eye shall not spare thee.

<sup>y</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> So Targ., lit., calamity after calamity. The Heb. is unintelligible, and the Gk. does not reproduce the vs.

<sup>z</sup> 7<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. adds, mountains.

<sup>10</sup>Behold, the day! behold, it has come! thy doom hath gone forth; the sin hath blossomed, pride hath budded. <sup>11</sup>The support of the wicked shall be taken away without tumult or haste.<sup>a</sup> <sup>12</sup>The time is come, the day draweth near, let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn; for wrath is upon all her multitude. <sup>13</sup>For the seller shall not return to that which is sold;<sup>b</sup> nor will the buyer retain what this morning he bought.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>14</sup>They have blown the trumpet, and have made all ready; but none goeth to the battle; for my wrath is upon all her pomp. <sup>15</sup>The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within; he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city—famine shall devour him. <sup>16</sup>But those of them who escape shall escape, and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them moaning, each because of his iniquity. <sup>17</sup>All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water. <sup>18</sup>They shall also gird themselves with sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon all faces, and baldness upon all their heads.

<sup>19</sup>They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be as an unclean thing; their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of Jehovah; they shall not satisfy their appetite, neither fill their stomachs; because these have been the occasion of their iniquity.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Its ornamental beauty they have made an object of pride, and from it they have made the images of their abominations and detestable things. Therefore I will make it to them as an unclean thing, <sup>21</sup>and I will give it into the hands of strangers as a prey, and to the wicked of the earth for a spoil; and they shall profane it. <sup>22</sup>My face will I turn also from them, and they shall profane my jewel; and robbers shall enter into it, and profane it. <sup>23</sup>Make a complete destruction,<sup>e</sup> for the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence. <sup>24</sup>Therefore I will bring the worst of the heathen nations, and they shall take possession of their houses; I will also make the pride of their strength to cease; and their holy places shall be profaned.

<sup>25</sup>Anguish cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none. <sup>26</sup>Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumor shall be upon rumor; and they shall seek a vision of the prophet; but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the elders. <sup>27</sup>And the prince<sup>f</sup> shall clothe himself with dismay, and the hands of the people of the land shall tremble; I will do to them after their way,<sup>g</sup> and according to their deserts will I judge them; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

---

text, a clear poetic structure. In several vss., as, for example, <sup>2b-4</sup>, the five-beat measure, expressive of deep emotion and usually that of sorrow, may be traced, but in the succeeding vss. this partially disappears. Either the prophet did not possess the skill or the desire to express his thought in pure poetic form, or else, as seems more probable, the text has suffered too much corruption to be satisfactorily restored.

Ezekiel here takes up Amos's, picture of the day of Jehovah and develops it at length. It is the eschatological note, the doctrine regarding the last things, which became the favorite theme of later Jewish writers.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>711</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has suffered from many scribal errors and repetitions, so that it is entirely unintelligible.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>713</sup> So practically the Gk. The Heb. text is exceedingly corrupt, abounding in repetitions and supplemented by the glosses, themselves corrupt, though he is yet alive, and, for wrath is upon all her multitude, are reproduced from <sup>12</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>715</sup> Restoring the Heb. in the light of the parallelism.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>719</sup> Lit., cause of stumbling.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>723</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., which reads, the chain.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>727</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the king shall languish.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>727</sup> So VSS.

No
security for life or property

No defence

All wealth
a spoil
to the conquerors

No
peace or comfort
from Jeho-
vah

§ 122. The Charge Against Jerusalem, Ezek. 22

Blood-shed
and idolatry

Cruelty of the rulers

Social
crimes

Jeho-
vah's righteous indigna-
tion

The furnace
of his wrath

Ezek. 22 <sup>1</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to me: Son of man, wilt thou judge<sup>h</sup> the bloody city, and show her all her abominations, <sup>3</sup>and say, ‘Thus saith Jehovah, “O city that sheddest blood in thy<sup>i</sup> midst that thy time may come; and makest idols for thyself that thou mayest be defiled; <sup>4</sup>for the blood which thou hast shed thou art guilty and because of the idols which thou hast made thou art defiled, and thou hast brought on thy day of judgment<sup>j</sup> and thy time of reckoning.<sup>k</sup> Therefore I give thee up to the scorn of the nations and to the mockery of all lands. <sup>5</sup>Those which are near and those which are far from thee shall mock thee, thou infamous one, abounding in tumults!

<sup>6</sup>Behold, the princes of Israel, each according to his power, have been in thee to shed blood. <sup>7</sup>In thee they have despised father and mother; in the midst of thee they oppressively deal with the resident alien; in thee they wrong the fatherless and the widow.

<sup>8</sup>Thou despisest my holy things, and profanest my sabbaths. <sup>9</sup>In thee are man who slander to shed blood; and in thee they eat upon the mountains; in the midst of thee they commit lewdness? <sup>10</sup>In thee they uncover their father's nakedness;<sup>l</sup> in thee they humble her who is unclean in her time of impurity. <sup>11</sup>And one committeth abomination with his neighbor's wife; and another lewdly defileth his daughter-in-law; and another in thee marrieth his sister, his father's daughter. <sup>12</sup>In thee they take bribes to shed blood; thou takest interest and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbors by oppression, and hast forgotten me,” is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13..</sup> Behold, therefore, I smite my hands<sup>n</sup> together because of the extortions thou hast practiced, and the blood which is in thy midst. <sup>14</sup>Will thy heart be firm, or can thy hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with<sup>o</sup> thee? I, Jehovah, have spoken it, and will do it. <sup>15</sup>And I will scatter thee among the nations, and disperse thee through the countries, and consume out of thee thy filthiness. <sup>16</sup>And thou shalt be put to shame<sup>p</sup> in the sight of the nations; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah.”

<sup>17</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>18</sup>Son of man, the house of Israel hath become dross to me; all of them are brass and tin and iron and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are the dross of silver. <sup>19</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah: ‘Because ye are all become dross, therefore, behold, I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. <sup>20</sup>As silver and brass and iron and lead and tin are gathered into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it to melt it, § 122 From the nation, as a whole, Ezekiel turns, in this section, to the crimes of the capital city. The theme and ideals here set forth have already been presented in 16–20. In unsparing terms he charges the city with the most heinous crimes known to the Heb. law. Undoubtedly there was a great basis of fact for Ezekiel's charges, and yet one cannot fail to recognize, in the form in which he presents them, the oriental hyperbole which is still more strikingly illustrated in the next section.

<sup>h</sup> 22<sup>1</sup> So Gk., Syr., and four Heb. MSS. Heb. repeats, judge.

<sup>i</sup> 22<sup>3</sup> Heb., her. So throughout the vs.

<sup>j</sup> 22<sup>4</sup> So the VSS. Heb., thy days.

<sup>k</sup> 22<sup>5</sup> So the VSS. The Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>l</sup> 22<sup>10</sup> I. e., take their father's wives as their own.

<sup>m</sup> 22<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Lord. So also in 19.

<sup>n</sup> 22<sup>13</sup> So Syr. I. e., in approval.

<sup>o</sup> 22<sup>14</sup> So Gk.

<sup>p</sup> 22<sup>16</sup> Correcting the Heb., which reads, thou shalt be profaned.

so will I gather you in my anger and in my wrath, and I will lay you therein and melt you. <sup>21</sup>Yea, I will gather you and blow upon you with the fire of my wrath, and there ye shall be melted in the midst. <sup>22</sup>As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted therein; and ye shall know that I, Jehovah, have poured out my wrath upon you.'

<sup>23</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>24</sup>Son of man, say to her, 'Thou art a land without rain<sup>q</sup> or shower in the day of indignation, <sup>25</sup>whose princes<sup>r</sup> in her midst are like a roaring lion that tears the prey; they devour men; they take treasure and precious things; they make many widows in her midst. <sup>26</sup>Her priests do violence to my law, and profane my holy things; they make no distinction between the holy and the common, neither do they teach men to discern between the unclean and the clean; and they hide their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them. <sup>27</sup>Her princes in her midst are like wolves who tear the prey, shedding blood, and destroying lives to get dishonest gain. <sup>28</sup>And her prophets daub for them whitewash, seeing false visions, and divining lies for them, saying, "Thus saith Jehovah," when Jehovah hath not spoken. <sup>29</sup>The people of the land practice oppression and robbery; yea, they wrong the poor and needy, and oppress the resident alien wrongfully. <sup>30</sup>And I sought for a man among them, who should build up the wall, and stand in the breach before men, in behalf of the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none. <sup>31</sup>Therefore I pour out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath; I bring the consequences of their own deeds upon their heads,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

§ 123. Faithless Samaria and Jerusalem, Ezek. 23

Ezek. 23 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>There were two women, daughters of one mother. <sup>3</sup>They played the harlot in Egypt in their youth,<sup>s</sup> there their breasts were pressed, and their virgin bosoms handled. <sup>4</sup>Their names were Oholah,<sup>t</sup> the elder, and Oholibah, her sister. They became mine and bore sons and daughters, and as for their names, Oholah was Samaria, and Oholibah was Jerusalem.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5</sup>And Oholah played the harlot, disloyal to me,<sup>v</sup> and she lusted after her lovers, after<sup>w</sup> the Assyrians, warriors,<sup>x</sup> clad in purple, prefects, and governors, attractive youths—all of them, horsemen riding on horses; <sup>7</sup>and she bestowed her harlotries upon them—choice men of Assyria, all of them, and after them she lusted,<sup>y</sup> with all their idols she defiled herself. <sup>8</sup>And she did not abandon

Total
depravity
of all classes

The two sisters

Samaria's
alliances
with Assyria
and
Egypt

<sup>q</sup> 22<sup>24</sup> Correcting the Heb., as the context demands.

<sup>r</sup> 22<sup>25</sup> So Gk. Heb., there is a conspiracy of the prophets.

<sup>s</sup> 123 Here Ezekiel develops in sickening detail the strong figure with which Hosea characterized the apostasy and infidelity of Northern Israel. Cf. § 17. The prophet clearly points out that Judah was more guilty than Northern Israel because she had before her the example of her sister state. Even as in the case of Northern Israel, Judah's judgment should come at the hand of the foreign nation with which she had played fast and loose.

<sup>t</sup> 23<sup>3</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>u</sup> 23<sup>4</sup> Lit., tent, or, abiding place. A designation of Northern Israel suggested by the fact that Jehovah dwelt in her midst. The corresponding name of Judah means, my tent is in her, referring to the fact that Jehovah's special dwelling-place was in the temple at Jerusalem.

<sup>v</sup> 23<sup>5</sup> Possibly this clause is secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 23<sup>5</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb. is defective.

<sup>x</sup> 23<sup>5</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>y</sup> 23<sup>6</sup> Revising Heb. in harmony with the parallel in 23.

<sup>z</sup> 23<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

her harlotries from the days when she was in Egypt; in her youth they have lain with her, and they have handled her virgin bosom, and lavished their harlotry upon her. <sup>9</sup>Therefore I gave her up into the hands of her lovers, into the hands of the Assyrians, after whom she lusted. <sup>10</sup>They uncovered her nakedness, they took her sons and her daughters, and her they slew with the sword, so that she became an example to women, and punishment<sup>z</sup> was inflicted upon her.

Judah's
disastrous alliances

<sup>11</sup>Her sister, Oholibah, saw, yet she carried her lust and her adulteries beyond those of her sister; <sup>12</sup>after the Assyrians<sup>a</sup> she lusted, prefects, warriors, clad in purple,<sup>b</sup> horsemen riding on horses, attractive youths, all of them. <sup>13</sup>And I saw that she was defiling herself; they both followed the same way. <sup>14</sup>But she carried her harlotries further; and when she saw men pictured on walls, figures of Chaldeans, pictured in vermillion, <sup>15</sup>their loins girded with sashes, their heads adorned with turbans, in appearance all of them like captains, portraits of Babylonians, whose native land was Chaldea, <sup>16</sup>she lusted after them, as she looked upon them, and sent messengers to them into Chaldea. <sup>17</sup>Then the Chaldeans went in to her, into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their harlotry, so that she was unclean because of them, and she loathed them. <sup>18</sup>Thus she<sup>c</sup> revealed her harlotries, and her nakedness was seen, and I loathed her, as I had loathed her sister. <sup>19</sup>But she increased her harlotries, remembering the days of her youth, when she committed harlotry in the land of Egypt, <sup>20</sup>and she lusted after her paramours, whose lust was like that of asses and stallions. <sup>21</sup>And thou soughtest the lewdness of thy youth, when<sup>d</sup> thy bosom was handled in Egypt, and thy youthful breasts were pressed.

Her
sentence

<sup>22</sup>Therefore, Oholibah, Thus saith Jehovah, Behold I am about to stir up thy lovers against thee, those whom thou loapest, and I will bring them against thee on every side, <sup>23</sup>Babylonians,<sup>e</sup> all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa,<sup>f</sup> all the Assyrians with them,<sup>g</sup> attractive youths, prefects and governors, all of them, captains and warriors, all of them riding on horses. <sup>24</sup>They shall come against thee with a multitude<sup>h</sup> of chariots and wagons<sup>i</sup> and with a host of peoples, with shields, buckler, and helmet, will they array themselves round about thee. And I will lay judgment before them, and by their sentence they shall condemn thee. <sup>25</sup>And I will pour out my jealous indignation upon thee, and they shall deal with thee in fury; they shall cut off thy nose and thine ears, and the rest of thee shall fall by the sword; they shall carry off thy sons and thy daughters, and the rest of thee shall be consumed with fire. <sup>26</sup>They shall strip thee of thy garments, and take away thy beautiful jewels. <sup>27</sup>So I will remove thy lewdness from thee, and thy harlot-

<sup>x</sup> 23<sup>10</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>a</sup> 23<sup>12</sup> This vs. may be secondary. It is little more than a repetition of 5. 6. In any case the initial word must be corrected in accordance with the Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 23<sup>12</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the parallel in 6.

<sup>c</sup> 23<sup>18</sup> So Targ. Heb., and thou shalt reveal.

<sup>d</sup> 23<sup>21</sup> So Gk. A., Syr., and Lat., and the parallel passages. Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>e</sup> 23<sup>23</sup> This vs. may well be a later addition.

<sup>f</sup> 23<sup>23</sup> Provinces on the eastern part of the Babylonian empire.

<sup>g</sup> 23<sup>23</sup> Correcting the Heb. according to the parallel and 25<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 23<sup>24</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the context.

<sup>i</sup> 23<sup>24</sup> Lit., wheel.

ries from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt not lift up thine eyes to them nor remember Egypt any more.

<sup>28</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, Behold I am about to give thee into the hands of those whom thou hatest, into the hands of those whom thou loapest,<sup>29</sup>and they shall deal with thee in hatred, and take away all the fruit of thy labor, and leave thee bare and naked, and the shame of thine adulteries shall be laid bare,<sup>30</sup>for thy lewdness<sup>j</sup> and thy harlotries have done this to thee, in that thou hast played the harlot with the nations by defiling thyself<sup>k</sup> with their idols.<sup>31</sup>In the way of thy sister hast thou gone, and I will give her cup into thy hands.

To drink
the cup
of Samaria

<sup>32</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:

Thy sister's cup<sup>l</sup> shalt thou drink, it is deep and large;
Thou shalt be an object of scorn and derision! it holds<sup>m</sup> much!

<sup>33</sup>Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and affliction—a cup of terror and desolation!

The cup of thy sister Samaria,<sup>34</sup>thou shalt drink it and drain it,
Thou shalt break it into fragments,<sup>n</sup> thou shalt tear thy breasts,<sup>o</sup>
For I myself have spoken, is the oracle of Jehovah.
Because<sup>p</sup> thou hast forgotten me and cast me aside,
Therefore thou also shalt bear thy lewdness and thy harlotries.

<sup>36</sup>And Jehovah said to me: Son of man, wilt thou judge Oholah and Oholibah? Then show them their abominations,<sup>37</sup>for they have committed adultery and blood is on their hands; also with their idols have they committed adultery, and their own sons, whom they bore to me, they have turned over to them to be devoured by fire.<sup>q</sup> <sup>38</sup>This also they have done to me: they have profaned my sanctuaries<sup>r</sup> and defiled my sabbaths,<sup>39</sup>for when they sacrificed their sons to their idols they entered my sanctuary on the same day to pollute it. Behold, thus they have done, within my house. <sup>40</sup>And moreover<sup>s</sup> they sent for men who came from afar, to whom the messengers were sent;<sup>t</sup> and behold, they came, for whom thou didst bathe<sup>u</sup> and paint thine eyes, and deck thyself with ornaments,<sup>41</sup>and didst sit on the beautiful divan, with table spread before it, and upon it thou didst put mine incense and mine oil,<sup>42</sup>and there was the sound of a joyful melody. They [also sent]<sup>v</sup> for men of the common type, drunkards, brought in from the wilderness, and they put

Shameless idolatry
and apostasy

<sup>i</sup> 23<sup>30</sup> Dividing the vs. as the context requires, and reading the following verb as a plural rather than a singular.

<sup>k</sup> 23<sup>30</sup> So Gk., Targ., and Syr.

<sup>l</sup> 23<sup>32</sup> I. e., conquest and exile at the hand of foreign power.

<sup>m</sup> 23<sup>32</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Lat. and Sym.

<sup>n</sup> 23<sup>34</sup> The text is here probably corrupt. Possibly it should be reconstructed to read,

and drain its dregs.

<sup>o</sup> 23<sup>34</sup> The Gk. omits this phrase. Possibly it is secondary.

<sup>p</sup> 23<sup>35</sup> Following the Syr. in omitting the unnecessary, therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah.

<sup>q</sup> 23<sup>37</sup> Lit., cause to pass through. The Gk. and Syr. supply the, with fire, at the end of the vs.

<sup>r</sup> 23<sup>38</sup> A scribe has, by mistake, introduced in the Heb., on the same day.

<sup>s</sup> 23<sup>40</sup> So Gk., A., and Syr.

<sup>t</sup> 23<sup>40</sup> Gk. and Syr., they sent messengers. Heb., a messenger was sent.

<sup>u</sup> 23<sup>40</sup> The sudden transition to the second person is abrupt. Possibly, in the original, the third person was continued in this and the following vss. Kraetzmar, Das Buch. Ezechiel, p. 193, suggests that vss. 40<sup>a</sup> and 40<sup>b</sup> through 42<sup>a</sup> are duplicates.

<sup>v</sup> 23<sup>42</sup> Supplying, they sent, from 40.

bracelets upon their hands and splendid crowns upon their heads.<sup>w</sup> <sup>44</sup>Men went<sup>x</sup> in unto them<sup>y</sup> as one goes in to a harlot; so they went in unto Oholah and Oholibah, to commit lewdness,<sup>z</sup> <sup>45</sup>but righteous men shall pronounce upon them the judgment of adulteresses, for they are adulteresses, and blood is on their hands!

The sweeping
judgment

<sup>46</sup>Thus<sup>a</sup> saith Jehovah: Bring up a host against them, and give them over to violence and plunder, <sup>47</sup>let them be stoned with stones,<sup>b</sup> and<sup>c</sup> cut down<sup>d</sup> with swords, let their sons and their daughters, and their houses be burned with fire. <sup>48</sup>Thus will I cause lewdness to cease in the land, and all women shall be instructed, and will not imitate your lewdness. <sup>49</sup>I will requite you for your lewdness. Ye shall bear the sins of your idols, and ye shall know<sup>e</sup> that I am the Lord Jehovah.

§ 124. Reception of the News that Jerusalem was Besieged, Ezek. 24

Par-ble of
the caldron

Ezek. 24 <sup>1</sup>Again in the tenth month of the ninth year, in the tenth day of the month, this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, write down the name<sup>f</sup> of this day; on this very day the king of Babylon began to lay siege to Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>And speak a parable to the rebellious house and say to them,

Thus saith Jehovah;<sup>g</sup>

'Set on the caldron, set it on, also pour water into it,
'Put the pieces<sup>h</sup> into it, every good piece,<sup>i</sup> thigh and shoulder;
Fill it with choice bones,<sup>j</sup> take of<sup>j</sup> the best of the flock;

<sup>w</sup> 23<sup>12</sup> The following vs. is hopelessly corrupt.

<sup>x</sup> 23<sup>14</sup> Following the VSS. and one Heb. MS.

<sup>y</sup> 23<sup>14</sup> Heb., to her.

<sup>z</sup> 23<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb., a woman of lewdness.

<sup>a</sup> 23<sup>16</sup> So Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> A reference to the well-known Heb. custom of putting adulterers to death by public stoning.

<sup>c</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> Deleting the incongruous word, assembly.

<sup>d</sup> 23<sup>17</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 23<sup>19</sup> So Syr. and the demands of the context.

§ 124 This prophecy is definitely dated in January, 588 B.C. At last the news had come that the army of Nebuchadrezzar had invested Jerusalem. What Ezekiel had long foreseen was now soon to be realized. Patriot though he was, he could not pray for deliverance, for Judah's guilt was too palpable. All he could do was to sing a song of divine vengeance. He had already used the figure of the caldron in 11<sup>1-13</sup>, but now he makes a different and even more dramatic use of it.

In the presence of the overwhelming calamity, even the death of his beloved wife seemed comparatively unimportant. In keeping with the tremendous moral earnestness and zeal of the man, he employed this event, as Hosea had the birth of his children, as an aid in driving home to the consciousness of his people the great truth which he was endeavoring to teach. Through all the tragic years intervening between the first and second captivity, Ezekiel asserted his divinely given convictions unflinchingly and with powerful effectiveness. In the moment of disaster there was no faltering. With Jeremiah he realized that his nation must pass through the dark valley of the shadow of death, and that the deeper the impressions which that experience made, the more fundamental would be the transformation in the character of the nation and the more certain and significant would be the ultimate restoration. It was this profound insight into the meaning of the movements of his day, the understanding of the soul of his race, and the clear appreciation of the greater divine purpose that was gradually unfolding that establish Ezekiel's title to a place among the great prophets of Israel.

<sup>f</sup> 24<sup>2</sup> So Syr. and Latt. Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>g</sup> 24<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the Lord. So also in 5, 9, 14, 21, 24.

<sup>h</sup> 24<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., its pieces.

<sup>i</sup> 24<sup>4</sup> Syr. omits, yielding a better metre but not as good sense.

<sup>j</sup> 24<sup>5</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. omits, of.<sup>p</sup>

Also kindle<sup>k</sup> wood<sup>l</sup> under it, make it boil vigorously.
Also let the bones seethe within it.'

<sup>6</sup>For thus saith Jehovah: 'Woe to the bloody city, that caldron full of rust,<sup>m</sup> from which the rust is not yet gone! <sup>7</sup>For her<sup>n</sup> blood is still in her midst. On the naked rock she hath placed it; she hath not poured it out on the ground, that the dust might cover it. <sup>8</sup>To stir up fury, to execute vengeance, I have put her blood upon the naked rock, that it may not be covered.' <sup>9</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, 'Woe to the bloody city! I myself will pile high the wood.<sup>o</sup> <sup>10</sup>Heap up the wood, kindle the fire, cook the flesh, brew the broth, and let the bones be burned. <sup>11</sup>Take out its pieces,<sup>p</sup> piece by piece, for them no lot is cast. <sup>11</sup>Then let it stand empty upon the coals, that it may be heated, that its copper may glow, that the impurity within it may be melted out, its rust cleansed away; <sup>12</sup>yet<sup>q</sup> its great rust is not removed from it by fire!

<sup>13</sup>Its rust<sup>r</sup> is thy impurity because of lewdness, because I have sought to cleanse thee and thou wouldest not become clean from thine uncleanness. Thou shalt be cleansed no more, until I satisfy my fury upon thee, <sup>14</sup>I, Jehovah, have spoken. It comes,<sup>s</sup> and I will do it! I will not turn back nor pity nor repent,<sup>t</sup> according to thy ways and thy deeds will I<sup>u</sup> judge thee,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>15</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>16</sup>Son of man, behold, I am about to take from thee the desire of thine eyes in an instant,<sup>v</sup> yet thou shalt not mourn nor weep nor shed tears. <sup>17</sup>Sigh in silence, mourn not<sup>w</sup> for the dead, put on thy turban, thy sandals on thy feet, do not cover thy beard, nor eat the bread of mourning.<sup>x</sup> <sup>18</sup>So I spoke to the people in the morning and in the evening my wife died, and on the morrow I did as I was commanded, <sup>19</sup>and the people said to me, Will you not tell us why you do so? <sup>20</sup>And I said to them, this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>21</sup>Say to the house of Israel, "Thus saith Jehovah: Behold, I am about to profane my sanctuary, the pride of your strength, the delight of your eyes, and the joy of your souls. And your sons and your daughters, whom you have left, shall fall by the sword. <sup>22</sup>Ye shall do as I have done, ye shall not cover your beard nor eat the bread of mourning;<sup>y</sup> <sup>23</sup>your turbans shall be upon your heads and your sandals upon your feet, ye shall not weep, but ye shall pine away because of your iniquities. And ye shall stare<sup>z</sup> in confusion at one another. <sup>24</sup>Ezekiel shall be a sign to

Jerusalem
the rusty caldron

The rust is impurity

Ezekiel's mourning a symbol of the fate awaiting the
people

<sup>k</sup> 24<sup>5</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Syr.

<sup>l</sup> 24<sup>6</sup> Leaving out one letter in the Heb. gives a consistent rendering.

<sup>m</sup> 24<sup>6</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>n</sup> 24<sup>7</sup> I. e., blood which Jerusalem has shed.

<sup>o</sup> 24<sup>10</sup> Gk. omits this phrase.

<sup>p</sup> 24<sup>10</sup> Following Toy in restoring this half-verse to its logical position.

<sup>q</sup> 24<sup>12</sup> Through a scribal error the preceding phrase has been repeated in corrupt form.

<sup>r</sup> 24<sup>12</sup> This rendering is derived by slightly revising the Heb. and by joining the last word in <sup>12</sup> to the first word in <sup>13</sup>. The entire clause may be secondary; in any case it was intended to connect the allegory with its practical application.

<sup>s</sup> 24<sup>14</sup> Possibly the clause, it comes, is secondary.

<sup>t</sup> 24<sup>14</sup> Gk. omits, I will not repent.

<sup>u</sup> 24<sup>14</sup> So the VSS. Heb., they shall judge thee.

<sup>v</sup> 24<sup>16</sup> Interpreting by the aid of the vss.

<sup>w</sup> 24<sup>17</sup> Restoring the original order of the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 24<sup>17</sup> So Targ. and Lat.

<sup>y</sup> 24<sup>22</sup> Correcting the Heb. as in <sup>17</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 24<sup>23</sup> Revising the Heb. The accepted text reads, ye shall comfort.

you, just as he does shall ye do when it comes. Then ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

<sup>25</sup>And thou, son of man, on the day<sup>a</sup> that I take from them their strength, their proud joy, and delight of their eyes, the joy of their souls, their sons and their daughters,<sup>26</sup>on that day shall one who has escaped come to thee to inform thee.<sup>b</sup> <sup>27</sup>On that day shall thy mouth be opened to the fugitive:<sup>c</sup> and thou shalt speak and be no longer silent, and thou shalt be a sign to them that they may know that I am Jehovah.

His public
vindi-
cation

VII

JEREMIAH'S WORK IN CONNECTION WITH THE FALL OF JERUSALEM

§ 125. Jeremiah's Reply to Zedekiah's Inquiry, Jer. 21<sup>1-10, 13-14</sup>

Zede-kiah's inquiry of Jeremiah

Dec-laration
that the city
will surely fall

Jer. 21 <sup>1</sup>The word which came to Jeremiah from Jehovah when King Zedekiah sent him to Pashhur the son of Malchiah and to Zephaniāh the son of Maaseiah the priest, to say: <sup>2</sup>Inquire of Jehovah for us, for the king of Babylon is making war against us. Perhaps Jehovah will deal according to all his wondrous works and that one will withdraw from us.

<sup>3</sup>Then Jeremiah said to them: Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah king of Judah:<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, the weapons of war with which ye are fighting<sup>b</sup> the Chaldeans who are besieging you without the walls, will I turn back"<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> 24<sup>25</sup> The Heb. makes this a question, but the above reading is probably original.

<sup>b</sup> 24<sup>26</sup> Lit., to cause ears to hear.

<sup>c</sup> 24<sup>27</sup> So Gk. The Heb. is slightly corrupt.

Jeremiah's Work in Connection with the Fall of Jerusalem—The final siege of Jerusalem appears to have lasted a year or more. Lachish and Azekah, two small cities on the western borders of Judah, also held out for a long time against the Chaldean invaders. The besieged were lured on by hopes of help from Egypt and driven to desperation by the knowledge that they could expect no pity from the conquerors. In this final rebellion Judah did not stand alone, but was apparently influenced to rebel by the neighboring states of Edom, Ammon, Moab, Tyre, and Sidon. Cf. § 120. Of these states Tyre alone offered serious opposition to the Chaldeans, and was not conquered for many years. From Riblah, on the upper Orontes, Nebuchadrezzar directed the campaign and at the same time kept in close touch with the rest of his empire.

The people of Judah hoped vainly for some divine interposition, but Jeremiah never questioned for a moment the outcome of the conflict. His words, therefore, during the tragic year preceding the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C., were simply those of warning and denunciation, but in the presence of the great calamity, they lost something of their earlier harshness, even though Jeremiah himself was a victim of the hatred of the leaders. As the final catastrophe drew near, the prophet turned his attention from present evils to the future of his nation and people. After the fall of Jerusalem he sought to arouse the faith and confidence of the remnant that were left behind in Judah. Thus the saddest chapter in Judah's history marked a turning point in Jeremiah's thought and teaching; for the destruction of Jerusalem was but the culmination which he had long foreseen and from the lessons which that disaster taught he hoped to see new and better fruits in the life of his people.

§ 125 The incident and words here recorded are clearly historical, although they belong to the secondary or narrative type of prophecy which is so common in the book of Jeremiah. Vss. 11-12 are very loosely connected with their context and are in reality but a free paraphrase of 22<sup>2, 3</sup>. In <sup>13</sup> the original structure of the poet's utterance has been preserved. The first line of <sup>14</sup> is not found, however, in the Gk. and the second line may be but an echo of 17<sup>27</sup>, so that the evidence would favor the conclusion that this vs. is a late addition.

<sup>a</sup> 21<sup>3</sup> So Gk. The Heb. omits, king of Judah, but it appears to have been original. Cf. <sup>7</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 21<sup>4</sup> The words, God of Israel, in your hands, and, king of Babylon, are not found in the Gk. The latter is clearly an addition in the Heb., as in <sup>7</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 21<sup>4</sup> So many of the Gk. texts supported by Origen's Hex. The Heb. adds that awkward and obscure phrase, and I will gather them.

into the midst of this city. <sup>5</sup>And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand and a strong arm,<sup>d</sup> in anger and in great wrath. <sup>6</sup>And I will smite all the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast, with a great pestilence so that<sup>e</sup> they shall die. <sup>7</sup>And afterwards, saith Jehovah, I will give Zedekiah the king of Judah and his servants and the people that<sup>f</sup> are left in this city from the pestilence and the sword and famine, into the hand<sup>g</sup> of the enemy and of those who seek their life, and they shall smite them with the edge of the sword, neither sparing them nor showing compassion."<sup>h</sup>

<sup>8</sup>And to this people shalt thou say: Thus saith Jehovah: 'Behold I set before you the way of life and of death; <sup>9</sup>whoever remains in this town shall die by the sword and by pestilence; but whoever goes out and surrenders to the Chaldeans, who are besieging you, shall live, and his life shall be to him for a prey, <sup>10</sup>for I have set my face against this city for evil and not for good;<sup>i</sup> it shall be given into the hands of the king of Babylon and he shall burn it with fire.

Only hope is submission

<sup>13</sup>Behold I am against thee, O inhabitress of the valley, rock of the plain,<sup>j</sup> Ye who say, "Who can come down against us, who can enter into our lairs,"<sup>k</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will visit you in punishment according to the fruit of your deeds, is Jehovah's oracle,
And I will kindle a fire in her forest and it shall devour all that is round about her,<sup>l</sup>

Jeho-
yah himself condemns

§ 126. The Promise to Zedekiah, Jer. 34<sup>1-7</sup>

Jer. 34 <sup>1</sup>The word which came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, while Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army and all the world that was subject to him were fighting against Jerusalem and against all the cities of Judah;<sup>m</sup>

Thus saith Jehovah, 'Go to Zedekiah king of Judah and tell him, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: Behold this city shall surely be given into the power of the king of Babylon that he may capture and burn it with fire. <sup>3</sup>And thou

Pre-
diction that Zede-kiah's life will be spared

<sup>d</sup> 21<sup>5</sup> For this late prophetic expression, cf. Dt. 4<sup>34</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 21<sup>6</sup> So Gk. The conjunction has been lost in the Heb.

<sup>f</sup> 21<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds by mistake, and.

<sup>g</sup> 21<sup>7</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon. Cf. 4.

<sup>h</sup> 21<sup>7</sup> Again following the more consistent and forcible Gk. The scribe who made the addition in the first part of the vs. has also made, he, referring to Nebuchadrezzar, the subject throughout the vs., and also added, nor have pity.

<sup>i</sup> 21<sup>10</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, as frequently, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>j</sup> 21<sup>13</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>k</sup> 21<sup>13</sup> So the vss. Heb., in our habitations.

<sup>l</sup> 21<sup>14</sup> Possibly the Heb. should be amended so as to read, branches, as in Is. 10<sup>24</sup>.

<sup>§ 126</sup> In this section Jeremiah's advice to king and people in the hour of siege is clearly formulated. Resistance is suicidal, the only hope is in submission. For Zedekiah Jeremiah felt both personal regard and pity. The king's intentions were evidently good and he had a great respect for Jeremiah's counsel, but he was a weak man and apparently almost helpless in the hands of his headstrong nobles. Against his better judgment he was forced to rebel and to maintain his hopeless resistance against Nebuchadrezzar. It is difficult to determine how far the details of Jeremiah's prediction against Zedekiah are due to the later historian, either Baruch or some other disciple—who has given us the present narrative. The fact that the shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken and delivered into his hand, and thine eyes shall behold his eyes and thou shalt go to Babylon."<sup>4</sup> Yet hear the word of Jehovah, O Zedekiah king of Judah: 'Thus saith Jehovah: <sup>5</sup>" Peacefully shalt thou die and like the funeral pyres for thy fathers, the kings before thee, so shall they make a funeral pyre for thee; and they shall lament for thee, saying: Alas, O Lord! for I have spoken the word," saith Jehovah.' <sup>6</sup> Then Jeremiah spoke all these words to Zedekiah king at Jerusalem, <sup>7</sup> while the king of Babylon's army was besieging Jerusalem<sup>n</sup> and Lachish and Azekah, for these remained among the cities of Judah as fortified cities.

<sup>m</sup> 34<sup>1</sup> The literary style and the spelling, Nebuchadnezzar (in the Heb.), and the fact that the fuller statement of the historical situation is found in <sup>7</sup> (§ 127) indicate that this note is secondary.

§ 127. Denunciation of the Perfidy of the People, Jer. 34<sup>8-22</sup>

Re-enslavement of the liberated Hebrew slaves

The
divine
judgment awaiting the faith-
less rulers of
Judah

Jer. 34 <sup>8</sup> The word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, after King Zedekiah had made a covenant with the people, to proclaim a general liberation, <sup>9</sup> that each should let his male and female slaves go free in case they were Hebrews or Hebrewesses; that none out of Judah should be a slave. <sup>10</sup> But all the princes and all the people who had entered into the covenant, that each should let his male and female slaves go free, brought them again into subjection as male and female slaves.

<sup>12</sup> Therefore the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, <sup>13</sup> Thus saith Jehovah: 'I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth from the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, saying, <sup>14</sup> "At the end of six years thou shalt set free the Hebrew brother, who has been sold to thee and has served thee six years, and thou shalt let him go free," but they neither hearkened to me nor inclined their ear. <sup>15</sup> And ye had now turned and done that which is pleasing to me, in proclaiming freedom each to his neighbor, and ye made a covenant before me in the temple which is called by my name. <sup>16</sup> But ye have changed your mind and profaned my name, and made each his male and female slaves, whom ye had let go free at their pleasure, return, to be male and female slaves again.' <sup>17</sup> Therefore thus saith Jehovah, 'Ye have not hearkened to me, to proclaim freedom, each to his neighbor—now I proclaim to you a freedom, to become the prey of the sword, the pestilence, and the famine; and I will make you an object of terror to all the kingdoms of the earth. <sup>18</sup> And I will deliver over the men who have transgressed my covenant, who have not performed the words of the covenant which they made before the calf which they cut in two and passed between its parts, <sup>19</sup> the princes of prediction says nothing about the fate of Zedekiah's sons and the fact that his eyes were later put out and he was condemned to imprisonment favor the conclusion that we have here the prophet's original words. The prediction was evidently based on the recognition of Zedekiah's good intentions and of the justice with which the Chaldeans treated individual malefactors.

---

Here again the slightly shorter and superior Gk. text has in general been followed. The additions in the Heb. are unimportant.

<sup>n</sup> 34<sup>7</sup> A scribe has added in the Gk., as well as the Heb., and against the cities of Judah, but this is contrary to the statement in the latter part of the vs., that only three cities were still able to resist the Chaldean army.

<sup>§ 127</sup> Again the slightly briefer Gk. text, which is superior to the Heb., has been followed. The incident here recorded turns upon the ancient law regarding the release of slaves, found in Ex. 21, Dt. 15. The Heb. text in <sup>14</sup> reads, at the end of seven years, but the Gk. makes the period, six years, which accords with the Heb. law. The perfidy of the Hebrews confirmed Jeremiah's estimate of the Jews who were left behind in Palestine, and justifies his sweeping condemnation. The detailed reasons why the leaders of the people indulged in the false confidence that they had been permanently delivered from the Chaldeans are given in the next section.

Judah, and the eunuchs, and the priests, and the people—<sup>20</sup>I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and their dead bodies shall be food for the birds of the heavens and the beasts of the earth. <sup>21</sup>And I will give Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes into the hand of their enemies, the forces of the king of Babylon who have gone away from you. <sup>22</sup>Behold, I will command,’ saith Jehovah, ‘and cause them to return to this city, and they shall besiege it and take it and burn it with fire; and I will make the cities of Judah an uninhabited desolation.’

§ 128. The Declaration that Nebuchadrezzar Would Surely Return, Jer. 37<sup>1-10</sup>

Jer. 37 <sup>1</sup>So Zedekiah the son of Josiah became king in the place of Coniah<sup>o</sup> the son of Jehoiakim, in that Nebuchadrezzar made him king so that he ruled over Judah; but neither he nor his servants nor the people of the land hearkened to the words of Jehovah, which he spoke through Jeremiah.

<sup>3</sup>And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucl the son of Shelemiah and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah, the priest, to Jeremiah, saying, Pray now to Jehovah for us. <sup>4</sup>Now in that time Jeremiah went in and out of the city, for they had not put him in prison. <sup>5</sup>And Pharaoh’s army had come forth from Egypt, and the Chaldeans had received a report regarding them, and had abandoned the siege of Jerusalem.

<sup>6</sup>Then the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah, <sup>7</sup>Thus shalt thou say to the king of Judah, who sent to me to inquire of me: “Behold, Pharaoh’s army, which has come out to help you, shall return to Egypt. <sup>8</sup>Then the Chaldeans shall come back and fight against the city and shall take it and burn it with fire.”” <sup>9</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, ‘Do not deceive yourselves with the idea that the Chaldeans will depart from you; for they shall not depart. <sup>10</sup>For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded men, yet would these rise up each in his tent, and burn this city with fire.’

Zede-kiah's rule

Zede-kiah's request

Jere-miah's prediction of Jero-salem's de-struction

§ 129. Jeremiah’s Confinement during the Final Siege, Jer. 37<sup>11-21</sup>, 38, 39<sup>15-18</sup>

Jer. 37 <sup>11</sup>Now when the army of the Chaldeans had abandoned the siege of Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh’s army, <sup>12</sup>Jeremiah went forth from Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin to receive his inheritance<sup>p</sup> there among the people. <sup>13</sup>And when he was in the Gate of Benjamin, a captain of the guard was there, Irijah the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah. And he laid hold on Jeremiah, saying, You are going over to the Chaldeans. <sup>14</sup>Then Jeremiah said, It is false; I am not going over to the Chaldeans. He, however, paid no heed to Jeremiah but brought him to the princes. <sup>15</sup>And the princes were angry with Jeremiah and smote him and put him in the house of Jonathan the chancellor, for they had made that the prison.

Jere-miah falsely accused of at-tempting to desert

§ 128 The superior Gk. text has been followed.

<sup>o</sup> 37<sup>1</sup> So Heb. Gk., in the place of Jehoiakim.

§ 129 Here, as in the preceding historical sections, the Gk. text has been followed, except when attention is called to the fact in the notes.

<sup>p</sup> 37<sup>12</sup> Cf. § 130. Translating the peculiar Heb. idiom with the aid of the VSS.

His secret interview with the king

In the court of the guard

The charge of the nobles

Jeremiah cast into a cistern to die

His rescue by Ebed-melech

<sup>16</sup>And thus Jeremiah came into the house of the cistern and into the cells; and he remained there many days. <sup>17</sup>Then Zedekiah sent and summoned him; and the king questioned him secretly and said, Is there any word from Jehovah? And Jeremiah said, There is. You shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. <sup>18</sup>Moreover Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, What crime have I committed against you or your servants or this people, that you have put me in prison? <sup>19</sup>Where now are your prophets, who prophesied to you, saying, 'The king of Babylon shall not come against this land?' <sup>20</sup>And now, O my lord the king; let my petition be presented before you, that you will not let me be taken back to the house of Jonathan the chancellor, lest I die there.

<sup>21</sup>Then the king gave command and they committed Jeremiah to the court of the guard, and they gave him daily a loaf of bread from the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city was gone. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

<sup>38</sup> <sup>1</sup>But when Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashhur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah and Pashhur the son of Malchijah,<sup>q</sup> heard the words that Jeremiah spoke to all the people, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'He that abideth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine; but he who goes over to the Chaldeans shall live and his life shall be to him as booty, and he shall live'; also, <sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'This city shall surely be given into the hand of the army of the king of Babylon and he shall take it,' <sup>4</sup>they said to the king, Let this man be put to death, since he weakens the hands of the soldiers who remain in this city and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words to them; for this man seeks not the welfare of this people but the hurt.

<sup>5</sup>Then Zedekiah the king said, See, he is in your hands, for the king was not able to do anything against them. <sup>6</sup>Thereupon they cast Jeremiah into the cistern of Malchijah the king's son, that was in the court of the guard, and let him down with cords. And in the cistern there was no water, but mire, and Jeremiah was<sup>r</sup> in the mire.

<sup>7</sup>Now when Ebed-melech the Cushite, a eunuch,<sup>s</sup> who was in the royal palace heard that they had put Jeremiah in the cistern, while the king was sitting in the Gate of Benjamin, <sup>8</sup>Ebed-melech went out to him and said to the king, <sup>9</sup>My lord the king, these men have done wrong in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the cistern; and he must soon die in the place where he is, because of the famine, for there is no more bread in the city<sup>t</sup>. <sup>10</sup>Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Cushite, saying, Take from here three men with you and draw up Jeremiah<sup>u</sup> from the cistern before he dies. <sup>11</sup>So Ebed-melech took the men with him<sup>v</sup> and went into the royal palace below the treasury and took from there rags and worn-

<sup>q</sup> 38<sup>1</sup> So Heb., which has preserved the name of Pashhur, which has apparently been lost in the Gk.

<sup>r</sup> 38<sup>6</sup> Gk. omits, Jeremiah. Heb., sank.

<sup>s</sup> 38<sup>7</sup> So Heb. Gk. omits. The statement that Ebed-melech was a eunuch is probably historical.

<sup>t</sup> 38<sup>9</sup> So Heb. The Gk. reads simply, you have done wrong in that you allow this man to die of hunger.

<sup>u</sup> 38<sup>10</sup> Gk., him.

<sup>v</sup> 38<sup>11</sup> Gk. omits, with him; lit., by his hand.

out garments, and let them down by cords to Jeremiah in the cistern. <sup>12</sup>And Ebed-melech said to Jeremiah, Put now these rags and worn-out garments below your armpits under the cords.<sup>w</sup> And Jeremiah did so. <sup>13</sup>Then they drew him up with the cords and took him out of the cistern. And Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

<sup>14</sup>Then the king sent and took Jeremiah<sup>x</sup> to him into the third entry which leads into the temple of Jehovah. And the king said to Jeremiah, I should like to ask you something, conceal nothing from me. <sup>15</sup>Then Jeremiah said to the king, If I declare it to you, will you promise not to put me to death? And if I give you counsel, you will not hearken to me. <sup>16</sup>Then the king swore to Jeremiah, saying, As Jehovah liveth, who has given us this life, I will not put you to death, neither will I give you into the hand of these men.

<sup>17</sup>Then Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, Thus saith Jehovah, 'If thou wilt give thyself up to the princes of the king of Babylon, then thy life shall be preserved and this city shall not be burned with fire, and thou shalt live, together with thy household. <sup>18</sup>But if thou wilt not give thyself up, then this city shall be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, who will burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape from their hand.'<sup>y</sup> <sup>19</sup>Then the king said to Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews who have gone over to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand and they mock me. <sup>20</sup>But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver you. Obey the voice of Jehovah, in that which I speak to you; so it shall be well with you. <sup>21</sup>But if you refuse to give yourself up, this is the revelation that Jehovah has showed me: <sup>22</sup>Behold, all the women who are left in the king of Judah's palace shall be brought forth to the princes of the king of Babylon, singing:

They have betrayed thee; they have overcome thee, thy familiar friends!
They have caused thy feet to sink in the mire; they turn back!

<sup>23</sup>They shall also bring out your sons to the Chaldeans.

You yourself shall not escape out of their hand, but shall be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon; and this city shall be burned.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Then the king said to Jeremiah,<sup>a</sup> Let no man know of these words, or you may die? <sup>25</sup>But if the princes hear that I have talked with you, and come to you, and say to you, 'Declare to us what you have said to the king—hide it not from us, otherwise we will put you to death—also what the king said to you,' <sup>26</sup>then say to them, 'I presented my petition before the king, that he would not make me return to Jonathan's house, to die there.' <sup>27</sup>Then all the princes came to Jeremiah and inquired of him; and he told them these words just as the king had commanded him. So they ceased questioning him, for the word of Jehovah<sup>b</sup> was not reported. <sup>28</sup>But Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard until the day that Jerusalem was captured.

The king's inquiries and assurance of protection

Jeremiah's reiterated declaration that surrender alone would save

Secrecy regarding the interview

<sup>w</sup> 38<sup>12</sup> Gk., and he said, Lay this under the cords.

<sup>x</sup> 18<sup>14</sup> Gk., him.

<sup>y</sup> 38<sup>18</sup> Gk. omits, from their hand.

<sup>z</sup> <sup>23</sup>Jeremiah's original speech probably ended with <sup>22</sup>, and <sup>23</sup> seems to be a later expansion based on subsequent events.

<sup>a</sup> 38<sup>24</sup> Gk., him.

<sup>b</sup> 38<sup>27</sup> The Heb. has simply word or matter.

The reward promised Ebed-melech

39 <sup>15</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah<sup>e</sup> in the court of the guard: <sup>16</sup>Go, and say to Ebed-melech the Cushite, ‘Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel: “Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil and not for good. <sup>17</sup>But I will deliver thee in that day, and I will not let thee fall<sup>d</sup> into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid. <sup>18</sup>For I will surely save thee and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be as booty to thee, because thou hast put thy trust in me,” saith Jehovah.’

§ 130. Symbolic Prediction of a National Restoration, Jer. 32

The occasion

Jer. 32 <sup>1</sup>This word came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, in the tenth year [587 b.c.] of Zedekiah the king, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar, <sup>2</sup>when the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem and Jeremiah was shut up in the guard-house, which was by the royal palace where Zedekiah the king had shut him up: Why dost thou prophesy and say, ‘Thus saith Jehovah: “Behold, I will give this city into the hands of the king of Babylon so that he shall conquer it.” <sup>4</sup>And Zedekiah shall not escape out of the hands of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him, mouth to mouth, and look upon him, eye to eye. <sup>5</sup>And he will lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he remain.”’

Invitation to buy family lands

<sup>6</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah:<sup>e</sup> Behold Hanamel, the son of Shallum thine uncle is coming to thee to say: ‘Buy my field that is in Anathoth; for thou, as the nearest relative, hast the right of buying it.’ <sup>8</sup>And Hanamel, mine uncle’s son, came to me into the guard court and said: Buy my field that is in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin; for the right of inheritance is thine and the redemption is thine.<sup>f</sup>

Significance of the purchase

Then I knew that it was Jehovah’s word. <sup>9</sup>And I bought the field of Hanamel, mine uncle’s son, and weighed out to him seventeen shekels<sup>g</sup> of silver.

<sup>e</sup> 39<sup>15</sup> Heb., while he was shut up.

<sup>d</sup> 39<sup>17</sup> Heb., thou shall not be given.

§ 130 This passage is significant because it expresses, by means of a striking object lesson, Jeremiah’s belief in the future restoration of his people. Vss. 2-5 contain an historical introduction based on chaps. 37, 38. It was probably added by a later editor of the chapter. The narrative in 6-15 is one of the most authentic in the book of Jeremiah. It is circumstantial and in harmony with the facts stated elsewhere in the book. According to 37<sup>12</sup> Jeremiah went out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin to receive there his portion in the midst of the people. The occasion was a brief intermission in the final siege of Jerusalem when the Chaldeans had temporarily withdrawn. This final siege was evidently the background of the present incident. Jeremiah had already proclaimed repeatedly the certain conquest and overthrow of the city. Events were now rapidly leading to that consummation. It was natural that in these circumstances the prophet should begin to think of the future. Already he had declared that the exile was to be only temporary. Now he proclaimed in terms, which every one could understand, that the fields of Judah were yet again to be tilled and to possess a marketable value.

The prayer and the promises contained in the remainder of the chapter represent a more detailed statement of the great fact set forth in the preceding vss. Many noble thoughts are expressed in this second part of the chapter and many of Jeremiah’s ideas reappear, but the style and contents of the section, as a whole, mark it as the work of a later disciple. Its style is not only prosaic, but verbose and loosely connected, in striking contrast to the words that come directly from the lips of the great poet-prophet. It is also shot through with words and phrases from Dt. and the Deuteronomic school of writers. It adds little to the statements found in the passages attributed by common consent to Jeremiah. Rather it is of the nature of a hortatory sermon based on texts drawn from the prophet’s writings.

Again the Gk. has preserved a slightly shorter and, in almost every case, superior text. This has been followed in the translation given above. The additions in the Heb. are not of sufficient importance to require special comment, since they are readily discovered by comparing the standard Eng. translations, which are based on the Heb. text, with the present rendering.

<sup>g</sup> 32<sup>6</sup> The Gk., Syr., and Arab. have here evidently preserved the original, as given above. The editor who added the historical introduction, 2-5, has, in the Heb., expanded this vs. so as to read, this word of Jehovah was to me.

<sup>f</sup> 32<sup>8</sup> Cf., for Heb. laws of inheritance, Vol. IV §§. 30-32.

<sup>g</sup> 32<sup>9</sup> The price paid was between eleven and twelve dollars, although the purchasing value of this sum represented a much larger amount, measured by modern standards. In any case, the lot was probably small and the purchasing price, in view of the circumstances, exceedingly low.

PREDICTION OF NATIONAL RESTORATION [JER. 23<sup>10</sup>

<sup>10</sup>And I signed the deed and sealed it and took witnesses, weighed out the money to him in the balances. <sup>11</sup>Then I took the sealed purchase deed <sup>12</sup>and gave it to Baruch the son of Neriah the son of Mahseiah, in the presence of Hanamel my uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses who had signed the purchase deed, and in the presence of the Jews in the guard court. <sup>13</sup>And I gave this charge to Baruch in their presence; <sup>14</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'Take this purchase deed and put it in an earthen vessel,<sup>h</sup> that it may remain for years to come.' <sup>15</sup>For thus saith Jehovah: 'Houses and fields and vineyards shall yet again be bought in this land.'

<sup>16</sup>Now after I had given the purchase deed to Baruch, the son of Neriah, I prayed this prayer to Jehovah: <sup>17</sup>Ah, Jehovah! thou hast made the heavens and the earth by thy great power and thine outstretched arm, there is nothing too difficult for thee,<sup>18</sup> who shonest kindness to thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them;<sup>j</sup> the great, the mighty God, <sup>19</sup>great in counsel and mighty in deed, whose eyes are open to the ways of the sons of men, who givest to each one according to his conduct; <sup>20</sup>who didst do signs and wonders in the land of Egypt,<sup>i</sup> even to this day both in Israel and among mankind, and madest thee a name as at this time.<sup>k</sup> <sup>21</sup>And thou didst bring forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs and with portents, with a strong hand and with an outstretched arm,<sup>l</sup> <sup>22</sup>and gavest them this land which thou didst swear to their fathers, a land flowing with milk and honey. <sup>23</sup>And they came in and took possession of it, but they harkened not to thy voice, nor walked according to thy law; they did not do all which thou hadst commanded them, and so thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them. <sup>24</sup>See the siege-mounds have come already to the city to take it, and the city is given into the hands of the Chaldeans, who are fighting against it, to the sword, famine, and pestilence. As thou hast said, so has it come to pass, thou thyself seest it. <sup>25</sup>And thou hast said, Buy the field for money. And I wrote the purchase deed and sealed it and took for myself witnesses,<sup>m</sup> when the city was already given over into the hands of the Chaldeans.

<sup>26</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>27</sup>Behold, I am Jehovah, the God of all flesh, is there anything too difficult for me? <sup>28</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel: Verily this city will be given<sup>n</sup> into the hands of the<sup>o</sup> king of Babylon and he shall conquer it, and the Chaldeans who fight against this city will come and set this city on fire, and burn the houses, on the roofs of which they offered sacrifice to Baal; and poured out libations to other gods. <sup>29</sup>For the Israelites and the Judahites from their youth have been doing only that which is evil in my sight; for this city hath provoked mine anger and my fury from the day when I built it until now, so that I must remove it from my presence, <sup>30</sup>on account of all the wickedness of the Israelites and Judahites which they have done to vex me—they, their kings, their princes, their priests and prophets, the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. <sup>31</sup>And they have turned to me the back and not the face, and though I taught them faithfulness, yet they no more harkened to receive correction; <sup>32</sup>but they have set up their detestable things in the temple which bears my name to defile it. <sup>33</sup>And they have built the high places of Baal in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, to consecrate<sup>p</sup> their sons and their daughters to their king,<sup>q</sup> which I commanded them not, neither did it come into my mind that they should do this abomination, nor cause Judah to sin.

<sup>34</sup>And now thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, concerning the city of which thou sayest, It has been given into the hand of the king of Babylon, to the sword, famine, and pestilence; <sup>35</sup>Behold, I will gather them out of all the countries whither I have driven them in mine anger and fury and great wrath, and I will bring them back to this place and will cause them to dwell in safety, <sup>36</sup>and they shall be to me a people and I shall be to them a God. <sup>37</sup>And

The prophet's prayer

Jehovah's review of the causes of Judah's coming overthrow

His promises of national restoration

<sup>h</sup> 32<sup>14</sup> The present passage contains the clearest statement found in the O. T. of the Heb. customs of making and recording a sale of property. The care with which the deed of sale was guarded recalls the ancient law of Hammurabi, which enacted that any one losing his copy of the written contract should forfeit the rights therein recorded.

<sup>i</sup> 32<sup>15</sup> Cf. Dt. 5<sup>1b</sup>, 1<sup>a</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 32<sup>20</sup> Cf. Dt. 6<sup>22</sup>, Neh. 9<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 32<sup>20</sup> I. e., remembered even to this day.

<sup>l</sup> 32<sup>21</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, with great terror. Syr. and Targ., appearance. Possibly the latter is the original reading.

<sup>m</sup> 32<sup>25</sup> Heb., take witnesses, but the Gk., which passes from the direct address to Jeremiah's act, is probably the original.

<sup>n</sup> 32<sup>28</sup> So Gk. Heb., I am about to give.

<sup>o</sup> 32<sup>28</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, Chaldeans and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar.

<sup>p</sup> 32<sup>35</sup> Lit., to cause to pass over. From the analogy in 7<sup>4</sup> it would appear that the reference is to human sacrifice.

<sup>q</sup> 32<sup>35</sup> So Gk. Heb., to Molech.

I will give them one heart and one way that they may fear me at all times and that it may go well with them and their children after them. <sup>40</sup>And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn back from them, and I will put the fear of me in their hearts, that may not turn away from me; <sup>41</sup>and I will rejoice over<sup>r</sup> them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land in faithfulness, with my whole heart and soul. <sup>42</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, Just as I have brought upon this people all of this great misfortune, so will I now bring upon them all the good which I have promised them, and fields shall again be bought in the land of which thou sayest, 'It is desolate, without man or beast; it is given over to the hands of the Chaldeans.' <sup>43</sup>Men shall buy fields for money, and write deeds, and seal them, and take witnesses, in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, of the hill-country, of the lowland, and of the South Country, for I will bring back their captivity.

§ 131. The Later Popular Version of Jeremiah's Prediction, Jer. 33

Jeho-
vah's strong assurance Restoration
and glory for Je-rusa-
lem

Repopulation
of
Judah

Jer. 33 <sup>1</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah a second time, while he was yet shut up in the guard-house. <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, who hath created the earth<sup>a</sup> and formed it, that it might stand fast, Jehovah is his name: <sup>3</sup>Call upon me and I will answer thee and I will declare to thee great and hidden things<sup>t</sup> which thou knowest not.'

<sup>4</sup>For thus saith Jehovah<sup>u</sup> concerning the houses of this city and concerning the houses of the king of Judah, which shall be torn down for mounds and for the barricade <sup>b</sup>when they begin to fight with the Chaldeans, and which are to be filled with the dead bodies of men, <sup>v</sup>whom I have smitten in mine anger and fury, and from whom I have hidden my face, because of<sup>w</sup> all their wickedness. <sup>6</sup>Behold, I will make new flesh to grow on her, and healing so that I will heal her,<sup>x</sup> and I will reveal to them treasures<sup>y</sup> of peace and stability. <sup>7</sup>And I will bring back the captivity of Judah and Israel, and I will build them again as before; <sup>8</sup>and I will cleanse them from all their iniquity<sup>z</sup> whereby they have sinned against me, and I will cleanse them<sup>a</sup> from all their iniquities wherewith they have sinned against me and<sup>b</sup> transgressed against me. <sup>9</sup>And she shall be a joy and a praise and glory to all the nations of the earth when they shall hear all the good which I am doing;<sup>c</sup> and they shall fear and tremble because of all the good and all the peace that I will procure for her.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'Yet again shall it be heard in this place of which you say, "It is waste, without man or beast," even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, which are desolate, without man<sup>e</sup> or beast, <sup>11</sup>the cry of joy and gladness,<sup>f</sup> the voice of the bridegroom and the bride, the voice of those who say, "Give thanks to Jehovah of hosts, for Jehovah is good, for his mercy endureth forever," and<sup>g</sup> who bring sacrifices<sup>h</sup> of thanksgiving to Jehovah's house; for I will bring back the captivity of the land as at first,' saith Jehovah.

<sup>r</sup> 32<sup>4</sup> So Heb. Gk., I will visii them. The latter idiom is on the whole the more common and may represent the original, although the Heb. is the stronger.

<sup>§ 131</sup> This passage, like the latter part of chap. 33, presents fundamental variations from Jeremiah's ordinary thought and form of expression. It is a composite of the thoughts and teachings of Jeremiah, e. g., Jer. 10<sup>12</sup>, 32<sup>17, 18</sup>, of the II Isaiah, e. g., 45<sup>18</sup>, 48<sup>6</sup>, 65<sup>24</sup>, of certain of Ezekiel's teachings, e. g., Ezek. 36<sup>22</sup>, of the liturgical invocation found in many post-exilic Pss., e. g., 106<sup>1</sup>, 107<sup>1</sup>, 136<sup>1-3</sup>, and of free quotations from other late Jewish writings. The nucleus of the promises found in this section is from Jeremiah, but the passage in its present form can not be dated earlier than the Gk period, somewhere between 300 and 200 B.C. The remainder of the chapter, vss. 14-26, is not found in the Gk. text. It is clearly a late addition to the Heb. text. Its promise of the permanence of the Davidic and the Levitical priesthood reflects the thought of exilic or post-exilic period. Cf. § 223.

<sup>s</sup> 33<sup>2</sup> So Gk. The Heb. is evidently corrupt.

<sup>t</sup> 33<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb., cut off.

<sup>u</sup> 33<sup>4</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, God of Israel.

<sup>v</sup> 33<sup>5</sup>. <sup>b</sup> The above rendering is based upon a slightly revised Gk. text. A more fundamental revision of the text, suggested by Cornill (Jer., p. 368) gives the rendering, which should be torn down, against which the Chaldeans are coming, with mounds and weapons, to fight against it, and to fill with the bodies of those, etc. In favor of the latter translation is the fact that mounds were thrown up rather by invaders than by defenders.

<sup>w</sup> 33<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb., from this city.

<sup>x</sup> 33<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb., them.

<sup>y</sup> 33<sup>8</sup> Correcting an obvious error in the Heb.

<sup>z</sup> 33<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb., their iniquities.

<sup>a</sup> 33<sup>10</sup> So Heb. Gk. and Arab., I will not remember it.

<sup>b</sup> 33<sup>11</sup> So Gk. and Lat.

<sup>c</sup> 33<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, them.

<sup>d</sup> 33<sup>13</sup> So Heb., which gives the clearer meaning. The vss. read, to them.

<sup>e</sup> 33<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds the incongruous phrase, and without inhabitants.

<sup>f</sup> 33<sup>15</sup> Cf., for the opposite picture, Jer. 7<sup>34</sup>, 16<sup>9</sup>, 25<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 33<sup>16</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat.

<sup>h</sup> 33<sup>17</sup> So Gk. and the implications of the context.

<sup>12</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts; 'Yet again shall there be in this place which is waste, without man or beast, and in all these cities, a pasture for shepherds, who will cause their flocks to lie down. <sup>13</sup>In the cities of the hill-country and of the lowland and of the South Country, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places round about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks again pass by him who counts them,'<sup>i</sup> saith Jehovah.

Re-newed proper-ty

§ 132. Jeremiah's Vision of the Future, Jer. 31<sup>31-40</sup>

Jer. 31 <sup>31</sup>Behold, the days are coming, is Jehovah's oracle,
That I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel.<sup>j</sup> <sup>32</sup>Not like the covenant which I made with their fathers,
In the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt,

The
new personal covenant
between
God
and each individual

<sup>i</sup> 33<sup>13</sup> Lit., sheep shall pass by the hands of him who counts. I. e., the sheep shall again be counted as they are brought back from the pasture, which is a graphic way of declaring that the former pastoral prosperity shall be restored.

<sup>j</sup> 32 In recent years the Jeremiatic authorship of this passage has been stoutly contested. It has been urged that it has few if any points of contact with Jeremiah's other teachings and that it reflects the interest and point of view of the post-exilic rather than the pre-exilic period. No one can seriously urge that <sup>33-40</sup> are from Jeremiah. The prose style, the wide variations between the Heb. and Gk. text, the phrases and ideas peculiar to the II Isaiah and the post-exilic writers, the assertion of Israel's nationalistic hope, rather than the spiritual and ethical ideas that Jeremiah emphasized, and the concluding prediction that Jerusalem itself should be rebuilt on a larger scale, all suggest the work of a later disciple of Jeremiah, who was interpreting the hopes of the great prophet in a more material and concrete term.

Very different is the classic passage in <sup>31-34</sup>. It proclaims that the day is coming when instead of the old covenant at Sinai between Jehovah and his people, whose terms were formulated in definite laws, which were taught and interpreted to the people by their religious teachers, a new covenant or bond should be established, closer, more spiritual, and individual. Not in the hearts of a chosen few, but in the mind of every one, Jehovah would implant the knowledge of his divine character and will and the way in which these demands should be met by the individual, so that the work of the earlier teachers should be unnecessary. Each man should have that knowledge of Jehovah which is the essence of religion. Nothing is said of detailed forms and ceremonies. The earlier kindergarten methods are no longer necessary, for the nation and individual are to become the disciples of the divine Teacher, and truth is to be imparted directly to all who seek it.

A careful student of the earlier prophecies of Jeremiah recognizes in this culminating passage, the blending of his characteristic teachings. He, it was, who declared that the temple should be destroyed, that the ark should pass away, and that truth and love and service alone should abide. He was the first to declare that Josiah's reformation, based on the book of the covenant, was in a sense a failure. By observation and by the personal experiences of his long ministry, Jeremiah had been led to the conviction that a relationship more fundamental than that of a formal covenant between a nation and its God was required. The whole trend of his teaching pointed to that deeper, more personal relationship which is set forth in the present passage. His parting message, in the name of Jehovah, to the first group of exiles had been, I will give them a heart to know me that I am Jehovah and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, for they shall return to me with their whole heart, 24<sup>7</sup>. This vs. contains in essence the pregnant ideas developed in the present passage, which has been truly designated as "Jeremiah's spiritual testament to the race." Hosea's characteristic phrase, to know Jehovah, Hos. 41, 6<sup>6</sup>, was frequently used by Jeremiah to embody one of his most fundamental teachings, 28, 4<sup>22</sup>, 9<sup>3</sup>, 6, 24. In his teaching this knowledge describes not only intimate-personal acquaintance with Jehovah and his purpose, but also the doing of that will in thought and word and deed. Without this intimate practical knowledge formal religion was but hypocrisy, and with it Jehovah's forgiveness and approval were assured. In Jeremiah's thought the difference between the old and the new covenant was apparently not so much a difference of terms, for he conceived of the old covenant as ethical and practical, but in the method in which it was to be made practically effective, and in that personal and spiritual relationship which it should establish between the divine Father and his children.

In making the distinction between the old and new covenant, Jeremiah gave to religion the two terms which, through the Lat. translation, have become the designation of the two collections of writings, known as the Old and New Testaments. The titles are also appropriate, for the Old Testament records the origin and terms of the ancient covenant or basis of agreement between Jehovah and his nation, Israel, while the New describes the origin, terms and practical application of the newer and more personal covenant or basis of relationship between God and every individual who accepts these requirements and lives in accordance with their demands. At the moment, also, when the old national life was dissolving and the old covenant had been set aside through the persistent infidelity of the people, and through Jehovah's signal judgment upon the nation, Jeremiah held up before the doubting, despondent, scattered exiles the possibility and certainty of a new and more glorious covenant. With Jeremiah also the religion of the Hebrews began to burst its national bonds and to become a universal world-religion.

<sup>i</sup> 31<sup>31</sup> Following the analogy of <sup>33</sup> and the requirements of the metre.

My covenant which they themselves broke and I was displeased with them;<sup>k</sup> <sup>33</sup>But this is the covenant which I will make with the house of Israel:
 After those days, is the oracle of Jehovah,
 I will<sup>l</sup> put my teaching in their breast and on their heart will I write it;
 And I will be to them a God and they shall be to me a people.
<sup>34</sup>And they shall not teach any more every man his neighbor,
 And every man his brother, saying, 'Know Jehovah,'
 For they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest;
 For I will forgive their iniquities and remember their sins no more.<sup>m</sup>

Israel's
perpetuity

Rebuilding of Jerusa-
lem

<sup>35</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, who giveth the sun for a light by day and the<sup>n</sup> moon and the stars for a light by night, who stirreth up the sea, so that its waves roar; Jehovah of hosts is his name: <sup>36</sup>If these ordinances depart from before me, saith Jehovah, then the race of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me forever. <sup>37</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, then will I also cast off<sup>o</sup> the race of Israel for all that they have done, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>38</sup>Behold, the days are coming, is the oracle of Jehovah, when the city shall be built to Jehovah from the tower of Hananel<sup>q</sup> to the corner gate.<sup>r</sup> <sup>39</sup>And the measuring line shall go out<sup>s</sup> straight onward to the hill Gareb,<sup>t</sup> and shall turn about to Goah. <sup>40</sup>And the whole valley,<sup>u</sup> and all the fields<sup>v</sup> to the Brook Kidron, to the corner of the Horse Gate toward the east, shall be holy to Jehovah; it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more forever.

§ 133. Jeremiah's Liberation, Jer. 39<sup>1-7, 11-14</sup>, 40<sup>1-6</sup>

Flight,
capture, and final fate of Zedekiah

Jer. 39 <sup>1</sup>In the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah [586 B.C.] in the tenth month, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army came against Jerusalem and besieged it. <sup>2</sup>In the eleventh year of Zedekiah on the ninth day of the fourth month, a breach was made in the city. <sup>3</sup>Tben all the princes of the king of Babylon came and sat in the middle gate:<sup>w</sup> Nebushazban the chief of the eunuchs, and Nergal-sharezer the chief of the magicians, with all the rest of the princes of the king of Babylon. <sup>4</sup>And when Zedekiah the king of Judah and all the warriors saw them, they fled

<sup>k</sup> 31<sup>32</sup> Following the Gk. Heb. adds, it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>l</sup> 31<sup>33</sup> Following the superior reading of twenty-four Heb. MSS. Traditional Heb., I have put.

<sup>m</sup> 31<sup>34</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. A scribe has inserted in the Heb., it is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>n</sup> 31<sup>35</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the ordinances of.

<sup>o</sup> 31<sup>37</sup> This vs. stands in the Gk. immediately after <sup>34</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 31<sup>37</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, are.

<sup>q</sup> 31<sup>38</sup> Directly north of the temple. Cf., Neh. 3<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 31<sup>38</sup> The corner gate was apparently on the northwest.

<sup>s</sup> 31<sup>39</sup> So Gk.

<sup>t</sup> 31<sup>39</sup> This probably marks the western boundary. The places referred to are mentioned nowhere else.

<sup>u</sup> 31<sup>40</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added, in the Heb., the dead bodies and ashes.

<sup>v</sup> 31<sup>40</sup> This apparently refers, not to the valley of Ben-hinnom, but to the eastern slope of Zion or the western hill, including the upper Tyropeon valley.

<sup>§ 133</sup> The original nucleus of this section is found in <sup>3-14</sup>. Vss. 39<sup>1-2</sup> are a rather cumbersome introductory note from some editor and 39<sup>11-12</sup> was taken from II Kgs. 25<sup>4-12</sup>. It is important because it gives the historical setting of the remainder of the passage. It is not found in the Gk. and was evidently added by a later reviser of the Heb. text.

Jeremiah's consistent and strenuous opposition to rebellion against the Chaldeans doubtless became known to the conquerors. The Chaldeans, like the ancient Babylonians, maintained very high standards of justice and sought to deal with each personal offender according to his personal record. The liberation was therefore not only an act of justice measured by their own standards but was as potent in its effect on the action of possible future rebels as was the severe punishment of the guilty offenders. The short paragraph, 40<sup>1-6</sup>, is apparently a later form of the same tradition, for it bears the mark of popular transmission. Here the word of Jehovah to Jeremiah comes not, as ordinarily, to the prophet's inner consciousness but is put in the mouth of the Chaldean commander of the guard, who is thus made to preach like a Heb. prophet.

<sup>w</sup> 39<sup>3</sup> The repetitious form of the Heb. text indicates that it is here corrupt. The revision followed above is based on the parallel passage in <sup>13</sup>.

and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the king's garden, through the gate between the two walls, and went out toward the Arabah. <sup>5</sup>But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after them and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. Then they took and brought him up to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; and he passed judgment upon him. <sup>6</sup>And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes; also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah. <sup>7</sup>Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes and bound him in chains, to carry him to Babylon.

<sup>8</sup>Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had given the following command concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzaradan the commander of the body-guard: <sup>9</sup>Take him, and look well to him, and do him no harm; but do to him as he shall direct you. <sup>10</sup>So Nebuzaradan the commander of the body-guard, and Nebushazban the chief of the eunuchs, and Nergal-sharezer the chief of the magicians, and all the chief officers of the king of Babylon <sup>11</sup>sent and took Jeremiah out of the court of the guard and gave him into the charge of Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home; so he dwelt among the people.

40 <sup>1</sup>The word which came to Jeremiah from Jehovah after Nebuzaradan the commander of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he had taken him<sup>x</sup> in chains among the captives of Judah<sup>y</sup> who were carried away to Babylon. <sup>2</sup>And the commander of the guard took him<sup>z</sup> and said to him, Jehovah, your God pronounced evil upon this place; <sup>3</sup>and Jehovah hath<sup>a</sup> done just as he said, for you have sinned against Jehovah and have not obeyed his voice.<sup>b</sup> <sup>4</sup>Now behold, I loose you this day from the chains which are upon your hand. If it seem good to you to come with me to Babylon, come, and I will look out for you. But if not<sup>c</sup> do not come; <sup>d</sup>but go back to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon has made governor over the land<sup>e</sup> of Judah, and dwell with him among the people or go wherever it seems right to you to go. So the commander of the body-guard gave him provisions and a present, and sent him away. <sup>f</sup>Then Jeremiah went to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah, and dwelt with him among the people who were left in the land.

§ 134. Jeremiah's Advice to the Remnant in Judah, Jer. 40<sup>7</sup>, 8<sup>3</sup>, 41<sup>1-3</sup>, 42<sup>1-43<sup>7</sup></sup>

Jer. 40 <sup>7</sup>When all the commanders of the forces that were in the fields, together with their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land and had committed to him men, women, and children, and of the poorest of the land, such as were not carried away captive to Babylon, <sup>8</sup>they came to Gedaliah at Mizpah, . . .

Special provisions made for Jeremiah

Set free and allowed to return to Gedaliah

Gathering of the local chiefs

- * 40<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and he was bound.
- y 40<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb., all of the captivity of Jerusalem and Judah.
- * 40<sup>2</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. is corrupt and reads, to Jeremiah.
- * 40<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, let it come.
- b 40<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb., then this thing will come to you.
- c 40<sup>4</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds a long repetitious gloss.
- d 40<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb., in the cities of Judah.

§ 134 This section records the last tragic chapter in the history of the Judean kingdom. Nebuchadrezzar showed excellent judgment in attempting to maintain a local government in Judah under a native prince, even though the capital at Jerusalem was in ruins and a large part of the population deported. His object was to preserve the natural resources of Judah, and to maintain the strength of this western outpost of his empire. He was also aware of its strategic importance as a base for the invasion of Egypt, which he, probably even at this time, contemplated. In setting aside the worthless house of David, and in appointing Gedaliah, the grandson of Josiah's faithful counsellor, Shaphan, Nebuchadrezzar acted wisely, although in the end it was apparently the murderous jealousy of a scion of the royal house which resulted in the overthrow of Gedaliah and his little kingdom.

The seat of government was at Mizpah, a few miles north of Jerusalem. The survivors and the returning exiles quickly rallied about Gedaliah. Under his wise and benign rule and the protecting arm of Babylon, there was great promise of a new period of peace and prosperity; but Gedaliah's faith in men cost him his life, and the glad hope which had filled the minds of his followers was suddenly changed to dismay and terror.

Under Gedaliah's rule Jeremiah evidently entered into that heritage of popular confidence and honor which he had earned through the long years of discouragement, public disgrace, and bitter persecution. In the crisis resulting from the death of Gedaliah, the people turned to Jeremiah, as Jehovah's representative, for counsel. It is impossible to determine why the prophet, at this crisis, delayed for ten days before giving an answer. In any case it would seem that the proper course of action was not clear in his own mind, for the delay only tended to increase the impatience and excitement of the people, so that, when the final decision was given, they were not in a state to appreciate his wisdom nor to act in accord with his advice. If

Ish-mael's treacherous murder of Gedaliah and his men

The request of the people

The divine command to remain in the land

41 <sup>1</sup>But afterwards in the seventh month, Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the royal line, with ten men, came to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam at Mizpah; and there they were eating together in Mizpah. <sup>2</sup>Then Ishmael the son of Nethaniah and the ten men who were with him rose up and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword and thus slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land. <sup>3</sup>Ishmael also slew all the Jews who were with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans who were found there. . . .

42 <sup>1</sup>Then all the commanders of the forces and Johanan the son of Kareah and Azariah the son of Maaseiah,<sup>e</sup> and all the people small and great came near, <sup>2</sup>and said to Jeremiah the prophet, Permit us to bring our petition before you that you may supplicate Jehovah your God for us, even for<sup>f</sup> this remnant, for we are left but a few out of many—you yourself see us here—<sup>3</sup>that Jehovah your God may show us the way wherein we should walk, and the thing that we should do. <sup>4</sup>Then Jeremiah<sup>g</sup> said to them, I have heard you; behold I will pray to Jehovah our<sup>h</sup> God according to your words, and whatever Jehovah shall answer you, I will declare it to you; I will keep nothing back from you. <sup>5</sup>Then they said to Jeremiah, Jehovah be a true and faithful witness against us, if we do not according to all the word with which Jehovah<sup>i</sup> shall send<sup>j</sup> to us. <sup>6</sup>Whether it be good or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of Jehovah our God, to whom we send you, that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of Jehovah our God.

7 And after ten days the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah. <sup>8</sup>And he called together Johanan the son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces that were with him and all the people small and great,<sup>k</sup> and said to them, Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup>If ye will still abide in this land, then will I build you and not pull you down, and I will plant you and not pluck you up; for I am sorry for the evil that I have done to you. <sup>11</sup>Be not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; fear not, is the oracle of Jehovah, for I am with you to save you and to deliver you from his hand. <sup>12</sup>And I will grant you mercy, that he may have mercy upon you and let you return<sup>l</sup> to your own land. <sup>13</sup>But if ye say, ‘We will not dwell in this land’; so that ye obey not the voice of Jehovah,<sup>m</sup> <sup>14</sup>thinking, ‘No; but we will go to the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war nor hear the sound of the trumpet nor be hungry, and there will we remain’; <sup>15</sup>then hear the word of Jehovah:<sup>n</sup> Thus saith Jehovah,<sup>o</sup> ‘If

Jeremiah was dependent simply on a supernatural revelation, it is difficult to see why this, in divine justice, was withheld. The simpler and more natural explanation is that he was taking time for consideration and awaiting further data and possibly certain developments to guide him in giving authoritative counsel.

Here, as elsewhere, the Gk. has a somewhat shorter text, which may well be the original, but at a number of points the fuller Heb. text is more satisfactory. Inasmuch as this material has been already given in Vol. II, §§ 140, 141, the unimportant passages have here been omitted.

<sup>e</sup> 42<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb. text is corrupt.

<sup>f</sup> 42<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, all.

<sup>g</sup> 42<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the prophet.

<sup>h</sup> 42<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and the demands of the context. Heb., your.

<sup>i</sup> 42<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, your God.

<sup>j</sup> 42<sup>6</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, your.

<sup>k</sup> 42<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to present your supplication before him.

<sup>l</sup> 42<sup>12</sup> So the superior reading of the Gk.

<sup>m</sup> 42<sup>13</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, your God.

<sup>n</sup> 42<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, O remnant of Judah.

<sup>o</sup> 42<sup>16</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of hosts, the God of Israel.

ye have indeed determined to enter into Egypt and go to reside there,<sup>16</sup> then shall the sword, which ye fear, overtake you there in the land of Egypt; and the famine, of which ye are afraid, press hard upon you there in Egypt, so that ye shall die there.<sup>17</sup> Thus all the proud<sup>p</sup> men who have determined to go into Egypt to reside there, shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, and none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them.'

<sup>18</sup>For thus saith Jehovah,<sup>q</sup> 'As mine anger and my wrath have been poured out upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so shall my wrath be poured out upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt; and ye shall be an object of execration, of astonishment, of cursing, and of reproach, and ye shall never see this place again.'<sup>r</sup> <sup>19</sup>Jehovah hath spoken concerning you, O remnant of Judah, 'Go ye not into Egypt.' Know certainly that I have testified to you this day.<sup>s</sup> <sup>20</sup>For you have deceived yourselves, for you sent me,<sup>t</sup> saying, 'Pray for us to Jehovah our God, and just as Jehovah our God shall say, so declare to us, and we will do it.'<sup>21</sup> And I have this day declared it to you, but you have not obeyed the voice of Jehovah your God in anything for which he hath sent me to you.<sup>22</sup> Now therefore know certainly that you shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence, in the place whither you desire to go to sojourn.

43 <sup>1</sup>But when Jeremiah had ceased speaking to the people all the words of Jehovah their God, with which Jehovah their God had sent him to them, even all these words, <sup>2</sup>Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men spoke, saying to Jeremiah, You speak falsely; Jehovah our God hath not sent you to say, 'Ye shall not go into Egypt to sojourn there.'<sup>3</sup> But it is Baruch the son of Neriah who stirs you up against us, to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they may put us to death, and carry us away captives to Babylon.<sup>4</sup> So Johanan the son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces and all the people did not obey the voice of Jehovah, to dwell in the land of Judah.<sup>5</sup> But Johanan the son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces took all the remnant of Judah, who had returned from all the nations whither they had been driven to sojourn in the land of Judah,<sup>6</sup> the men, the women, the children, the king's daughters, and every person whom Nebuzaradan the commander of the body-guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet and Baruch the son of Neriah,<sup>7</sup> and they came into the land of Egypt; for they did not obey the voice of Jehovah; and they came to Tahpanhes.

Certain judgment upon the disobedient people

Departure of all the people to Egypt

<sup>p</sup> 42<sup>17</sup> Adding the word suggested by the revised Gk. text and the parallel in 43<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 42<sup>18</sup> So Gk.

<sup>r</sup> 42<sup>20</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to Jehovah your God.

§ 135. The Message to Baruch, Jer. 45

Ba-ruch's
complaint

Jer. 45 <sup>1</sup>The words which the prophet Jeremiah spoke to Baruch the son of Neriah when he wrote these words in a book from the mouth of Jeremiah:

<sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah,<sup>s</sup> O Baruch: <sup>3</sup>Thou hast said:

“Woe to me, now, that Jehovah hath added sorrow to my pain,
I am weary with my groaning so that I find no rest.”

Jeho-
vah's warning and promise

<sup>4</sup>Thus<sup>t</sup> saith Jehovah:

‘Behold, that which I have built will I overthrow,
And that which I have planted will I pluck up.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5</sup>And seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not,
For, behold I am about to bring misfortune upon all flesh, is Jehovah's oracle.

But thy life will I give to thee as a prey,<sup>v</sup> wherever thou mayest go.’

§ 135 This short section presents many problems. The first vs. closes with the apparently conclusive statement, In the fourth year of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah. If this date were certain it would fix the date of this prophecy in the year 605 B.C., when Baruch made the first and second copies of Jeremiah's sermons, (cf. § 88); but nothing is known about the situation in that year which would justify the allusions which the prophet makes in the present oracle. The reference in <sup>5</sup> is very clearly to the exile, which is not far distant but immediately imminent. The reference to Baruch in the preceding section makes it clear that he remained close to Jeremiah even after the first and second captivities had carried many of the Jews into exile. For Jeremiah and Baruch alike the final catastrophe came when they were dragged away into enforced exile into Egypt, not by the Chaldeans or Egyptians, but by their own countrymen. That Baruch himself was strenuously opposed to the flight into Egypt is shown by the words of the people in 43<sup>a</sup>. Possibly he aspired to an important position in the little Judean state, and this may be the meaning of Jeremiah's statement in <sup>5</sup>. In any case the situation explains Baruch's words of lamentation in <sup>3</sup>. Studied therefore in the light of the events following 586, this unique personal prophecy is full of interest and significance. It also suggests that not only the collection of Jeremiah's earlier sermons but also many of the later sermons as well as the vivid historical narratives in the book of Jeremiah may come from the hand of Baruch. What Boswell was to Johnson, Baruch was to his master Jeremiah. He would seem to have been more than a mere scribe. The fugitive references reveal a man of courage and initiative, of ambition and deep feeling, a devoted friend, who remained true to Jeremiah through all his periods of unpopularity, and was favored with one of the latest messages that came from the lips of the great prophet. Later generations paid tribute to Baruch by ascribing to him the so-called “Apocalypse of Baruch,” which is a prophecy cast in apocalyptic form. It is tradition's characteristic way of declaring that Baruch as well as Jeremiah was a prophet.

In the light of these facts, it would seem clear that the chronological note in <sup>1b</sup> was added by a later scribe, who was influenced by the reference to Baruch's activity as Jeremiah's scribe, in order to connect the prophecy with the record of Baruch's work in 605 B.C.

<sup>a</sup> 45<sup>a</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, God of Israel.

<sup>t</sup> 45<sup>t</sup> This vs. begins, This shalt thou say to him, but this would seem to be either a scribal addition or a mistaken repetition of the following sentence.

<sup>u</sup> 45<sup>u</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds the awkward clause, even all the earth is it.

<sup>v</sup> 45<sup>v</sup> So Gk. Heb., upon all the places.

B.C.

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE

JEREMIAH, EZEKIEL, AND THE AUTHOR OF ISAIAH 13, 14

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE

I

JEREMIAH'S SERMONS TO THE EXILES IN EGYPT

§ 136. Nebuchadrezzar's Conquest of Egypt, Jer. 43<sup>8-13</sup>

Jer. 43 "Then the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah in Tahpanhes saying, "Take great stones in thy hand, and bury them secretly<sup>a</sup> in the brick-covered place before the door of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes in the sight of the men of Judah; <sup>10</sup>and say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel, "Behold, I will send and bring Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and he<sup>b</sup> will set his throne upon these stones that you<sup>c</sup> have buried, and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them. <sup>11</sup>And he shall come and shall smite the land of Egypt; such as are for death shall be given to death and such as are for captivity shall be given to captivity, and such as are for the sword shall be given to the sword. <sup>12</sup>And he<sup>d</sup> will kindle a fire in the

Pre-diction
of Egypt's down-fall

Jeremiah's Sermons to the exiles in Egypt.—The Chaldean conquest of Judah left the Jews who survived in three great centres, Palestine, Egypt, and Babylonia. There are strong indications that after the fall of Gedaliah's kingdom more Jews were to be found in Egypt than in any other centre. The land of the Nile was the one friendly asylum in all the world where the members of the afflicted race could live without persecution. Egypt was only two or three days' journey from Jerusalem and therefore easily accessible. Since the days of the fall of the northern kingdom many of the Hebrews had found a home in this land of peace and prosperity, so that the attraction was doubly strong. Undoubtedly before the final fall of Jerusalem many political refugees had fled thither, and the followers of Gedaliah turned without question to Egypt as the one place to escape from the power of the Chaldeans.

A majority of the later group of refugees had found a home at Tahpanhes, the Greek Daphne, situated to the south of Lake Menzaleh, on the great caravan route which led from Southwestern Asia through the Isthmus of Suez to the Nile Delta. Recent excavations and the historical records indicate that this frontier city was built by Psamtik I, the father of Necho, and was largely colonized by foreigners. An Egyptian garrison consisting largely of Greek and Carian mercenaries was stationed here throughout this period. Here and at the neighboring fortress of Migdol many of the Jews seem for a time to have settled, waiting a favorable opportunity to return to their homes in Judah.

§ 136. In the light of recent discoveries there is every reason for believing that this account of Jeremiah's symbolic action is substantially historical, even though it comes from the hand of a later historian rather than from Jeremiah himself. The scene was apparently a large raised platform or terrace, made of dried brick, which stood before a royal building probably used by the Pharaoh when he visited the place. It corresponded to the mastaba, which stood before most private as well as public buildings in Egypt. It was the common gathering-place and therefore sufficiently public for the prophet's purpose. Adopting the translation given above, Jeremiah's action is entirely intelligible. It was an effective declaration of his conviction that, in fleeing to Egypt, his countrymen were not escaping the arm of the Chaldeans. His further acquaintance with Egypt had apparently only confirmed him in his previous impression of its inherent weakness and in the belief that it would be helpless against the strong arm of Nebuchadrezzar. Tahpanhes also lay in the direct line of advance of an Asiatic conqueror who, in the event of a capture of the city, would make his head-quarters at the royal building and hold court on the great platform which stood before it.

<sup>a</sup> 43<sup>9</sup> Following Aquila, Sym., Theod., and the Lat., which give a clear meaning in keeping with the context. The Heb. text is evidently corrupt and is not supported by any of the VSS.

<sup>b</sup> 43<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., I will place.

<sup>c</sup> 43<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb., I have buried.

<sup>d</sup> 43<sup>12</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. Heb., I will kindle.

temples of the gods of Egypt, and will burn them and carry them away. And he shall wrap himself in the land of Egypt, as a shepherd puts on his mantle, and shall go forth from there in peace. <sup>13</sup>He shall also break the obelisks of Heliopolis<sup>e</sup> and the temples of the gods of Egypt shall he burn with fire.””

§ 137. Apostasy and Punishment of the Jews in Egypt, Jer. 44

Failure
of the Jews to learn the lessons
from
the past

Jer. 44 <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews who dwelt in the land of Egypt, who dwelt at Migdol, Tahpanhes, Memphis,<sup>f</sup> and in upper Egypt, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel: ‘Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem and upon all the cities of Judah; and there they are this day a desolation, and no man dwelleth in them,’ <sup>3</sup>because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger in that they went to offer sacrifices<sup>g</sup> to other gods, that they knew not.<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>However, I constantly sent to them<sup>i</sup> all my servants the prophets, saying, “O, do not this abominable thing that I hate.” <sup>5</sup>But they neither hearkened nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to offer no sacrifice to other gods. <sup>6</sup>And so my wrath and mine anger was poured forth

<sup>a</sup> 43<sup>13</sup> So Gk. Heb., which are in the land of Egypt.

<sup>§ 137</sup> The numbers and importance of the Jews in Egypt have been revealed by the recent discoveries on the island of Elephantine, in the upper Nile, near the modern Assuan. These records consist of a series of legal documents, written in Aramaic on papyrus, which record important contracts between the Jews resident on the island of Elephantine and their Egyptian, Persian, Babylonian, Phoenician, and Greek neighbors. The familiar names of Zadok, Isaiah, Hosea, Zechariah, Shallum, and Uriah appear in these documents. They are supplemented by a letter, written in Aramaic, in November, 408 b.c., by the Jewish colonists at Elephantine to the Persian governor of Judah. From these records it appears that at this ancient site, which is probably to be identified with the Syene of Ezekiel and the II Isaiah, there was a strong Jewish colony dating from the beginning of the Babylonian exile. Here they enjoyed great privileges, held property, and entered into business competition with natives and foreigners. Ordinarily they married within their race, but one or two cases of intermarriage are recorded. One Jewess, who married a foreigner, is on record as having sworn by the Egyptian goddess Saty, indicating that there was a good basis for Jeremiah's severe arraignment of the Jews of Egypt.

Before the close of the Babylonian exile the Jews of Elephantine reared a temple to their God Yahu (Jehovah) on the King's street, one of the main thoroughfares of the city. The Aramaic letter indicates that when the Persians conquered Egypt this temple was left uninjured even though the Egyptian temples were destroyed. The temple of Yahu was built of hewn stone, with pillars of stone in front, with seven great gates also built of hewn stone, having doors with bronze hinges. Its roof was wholly of cedar, probably brought from distant Lebanon. Here the devout Jews offered to their God cereal offerings, burnt offerings, and frankincense. It is also significant that in the Aramaic letter Yahu is spoken of as the God of Heaven.

These discoveries indicate that while the ceremonial custom of the Jews of Egypt did not meet the demands of the Deuteronomistic law, many of the exiles at least remained true to the God of their fathers, and endeavored to adapt their religious life to the new conditions among which they found themselves. Among the peasants who carried Jeremiah away with them, against his will, to Egypt, undoubtedly many heathen rites were still practised. Their attitude toward him was also contemptuous, giving ample grounds for the prophet's words of denunciation. It would seem probable, however, that his original utterances have been supplemented in 20-23, 27-28<sup>a</sup> by some later editor, for these vss. are very loosely connected with the context and even contradict, at one or two points, the teachings of the section as a whole. In the light of the recent discoveries it would seem probable that Jeremiah's teachings were later more favorably received by the Jews of Egypt, and it is possible that in his closing years the aged prophet enjoyed the appreciation and affection of his fellow-countrymen, rather than the martyrdom at their hands, as a very late Jewish tradition states.

The Gk. has a rather widely variant and shorter text. In many cases this undoubtedly represents the original, but elsewhere it appears that the Gk. translators have deliberately abbreviated a longer original. The variations are comparatively unimportant. For additional notes, cf. Vol. II, § 141.

<sup>f</sup> 44<sup>1</sup> This word is not found in the Gk. and may be secondary.

<sup>g</sup> 44<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to serve, but without a conjunction.

<sup>h</sup> 44<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds the awkward phrase, they, you, and your fathers.

<sup>i</sup> 44<sup>4</sup> Correcting the Heb., which reads, to you.

and was kindled against the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, and they were wasted and desolate, as is now the case.'

<sup>7</sup>Therefore now thus saith Jehovah, the God of hosts, the God of Israel: 'Why do ye commit a great crime against yourselves to cut off from you man and woman, infant and sucking child, out of the midst of Judah so that ye leave none remaining,<sup>i</sup> in that ye provoke me to anger with the work of your hands, offering sacrifice to other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye have gone to reside, that ye may be cut off, and that ye may be an object of cursing and a reproach among all the nations of the earth? <sup>9</sup>Have ye forgotten the crimes of your fathers, and the crimes of the kings of Judah, and the crimes of their princes,<sup>j</sup> which they committed in the land of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? <sup>10</sup>They are not humbled even to this day, neither have they feared nor walked in my law nor in my statutes that I set before you and<sup>k</sup> before your fathers.'

<sup>11</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I set my face against you for evil to cut off <sup>12</sup>the remnant of Judah<sup>l</sup> who have determined to go to the land of Egypt to reside there, they shall all be consumed in the land of Egypt, and they shall fall by the sword and by famine; they shall die, small and great, and they shall be an object of execration, of astonishment, of cursing, and of reproach. <sup>13</sup>For I will punish those who dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence,<sup>m</sup> so that none of the remnant of Judah, who have gone into the land of Egypt to reside there, shall escape or be left to return to the land of Judah, to which they have a desire to return;<sup>n</sup> for none shall return except fugitives.

<sup>15</sup>Then all the men who knew that their wives offered sacrifices to other gods and all the women who stood by, a great assembly<sup>o</sup> answered Jeremiah, saying, <sup>16</sup>In regard to the demand that you have made upon us in the name of Jehovah, we will not hearken to you. <sup>17</sup>But we will rather fulfil every word that is gone forth from our mouth, to offer sacrifices to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her, as we have done, along with our fathers, our kings and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem; for then we had plenty of food and were well and experienced no misfortune. <sup>18</sup>But since we ceased offering sacrifices to the queen of heaven, and pouring out libations to her, we have wanted all things and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine. <sup>19</sup>And when we offered sacrifices to the queen of heaven, and poured out libations to her, did we make cakes<sup>p</sup> and pour out libations to her without the approval of our husbands?

<sup>20</sup>Then Jeremiah said to all the people, to the men and to the women, even to all the people who had given him that answer, saying, <sup>21</sup>Did not Jehovah remember the savor of the sacrifices that you burned in the streets of Jerusa-

Fate awaiting the refugees in Egypt

Their determination to persist in their heathen practices

<sup>i</sup> 44<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, your crimes and the crimes of your princes.

<sup>k</sup> 44<sup>10</sup> The Gk. deletes the phrase, before you and.

<sup>l</sup> 44<sup>12</sup> Possibly the Gk. which omits the first part of this vs., has the original.

<sup>m</sup> 44<sup>13</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, to rest.

<sup>n</sup> 44<sup>15</sup> The Heb. adds, and all the people who dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, but apparently it is the addition of a later scribe, for those to whom Jeremiah directly spoke were the members of the Tahpanhes colony.

<sup>o</sup> 44<sup>19</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. has what was probably originally a scribal witticism, to do her good.

Calamities of the past in punishment of their idolatry

lem, you and your fathers, your kings and your princes, and the people of the land, and did it not come to his mind? <sup>22</sup>And so Jehovah could no longer endure, because of the evil of your doings and because of the abominations which you have committed; therefore your land has become a desolation and an object of astonishment, and of cursing, without inhabitant, as it is to-day. <sup>23</sup>Because you have offered sacrifices and because you have sinned against Jehovah and have not obeyed the voice of Jehovah nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this calamity has overtaken you, as is now the case.

<sup>24</sup>Moreover Jeremiah said to all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of Jehovah, all Jews who were in the land of Egypt: <sup>25</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel: " You and your wives have spoken with your mouths, and with your hands have carried out this resolution: We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to offer sacrifices to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her. Confirm them and perform your vows!"'

<sup>26</sup>Therefore hear the word of Jehovah, all ye Jews who dwell in the land of Egypt, 'I have sworn by my great name,' saith Jehovah, 'that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any Jew in all the land of Egypt, in the oath, "As the Lord Jehovah liveth." ' <sup>27</sup>Behold, I will watch over them for evil and not for good, and all the men of Judah who are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there is an end of them. <sup>28</sup>And some who escape the sword shall return from the land of Egypt to the land of Judah, few in number, and all the remnant of Judah, who have gone into the land of Egypt to reside there shall know whose word shall be confirmed, mine or theirs.'

<sup>29</sup>And this shall be the sign to you,' saith Jehovah, 'that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely be confirmed against you for evil.' <sup>30</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies and into the hand of those who seek his life, as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, who was his enemy and sought his life.'

The
judgment
upon the defiant
people

Hoph-ra's fate to be a sign

II

EZEKIEL'S MESSAGES OF ENCOURAGEMENT TO HIS SCATTERED COUNTRYMEN

§ 138. The Overthrow and Restoration of Egypt, Ezek. 29

Ezek. 29 <sup>1</sup>In the tenth year, on the twelfth day of the tenth month, this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt, <sup>3</sup>and<sup>a</sup> say: 'Thus saith Jehovah:

Egypt,
like a crocodile,
to be drawn forth by Jeho-
vah

“Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt,
The great monster<sup>b</sup> that lieth in the midst of his river,
And hath said, The river is mine<sup>c</sup> and I made it.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>4</sup>And I will put hooks in thy jaws,
And I will cause the fish of thy river to stick to thy scales;
And I will draw thee up out of the midst of thy river, with all the fish of thy river.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>5</sup>And I will cast thee forth into the wilderness, together with all the fish of thy river;

Thou shalt fall upon the open field, thou shalt not be gathered up nor buried.<sup>f</sup>

Ezekiel's Message of Encouragement to his Scattered Countrymen.—Even before the final news of the destruction of Jerusalem was brought to Ezekiel, he abandoned to a certain extent his earlier note of warning and bitter denunciation and began to look forward to the spiritual regeneration and final restoration of his people. The real transition, therefore, between his earlier and later sermons is at the twenty-fifth chapter in which he begins to proclaim that overthrow of Israel's foes which he deemed essential for the triumphant restoration of his people. In point of date the majority of the foreign prophecies found in 25-32 belong a little before the final destruction of Jerusalem, but in spirit and theme they are far more closely connected with those which follow. This is evidently the significance of their present position, which is due either to Ezekiel or some intelligent editor. Ezekiel proved himself the great prophet of the exile. His prophecies lack the spirituality and universality of Jeremiah and the II Isaiah, but they are closely in touch with the point of view of those to whom he spoke, and by their concreteness and graphic symbolism they evidently made a profound impression upon his contemporaries. Ezekiel spoke not only to the exiles in Babylon but also to all the scattered members of his race. He felt himself called to be the watchman for his race, and the spiritual welfare of every discouraged tempted fellow-exile rested upon his own prophetic heart.

§ 138 This prophecy was written seven months before the final destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. In Ezekiel's eyes Egypt's guilt consisted in her boastful claims and in her having led Judah into rebellion against Nebuchadrezzar. Egypt had indeed proved, through all her history, a staff of reed to the house of Israel. As a careful student of history, Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, was well aware of the weakness of this boastful world-power, and better even than his contemporary in Egypt he knew the strength of Nebuchadrezzar. In 30 he declares clearly that Nebuchadrezzar is to be Jehovah's weapon of judgment to destroy the Egyptian Pharaoh (Hophra), whom he likens in 31 to a mighty cedar of Lebanon. In 32 the prophet still further amplifies the same theme and pictures the overthrow of Pharaoh, and his descent to Sheol and the accompanying desolation that is to come to the land of the Nile. These foreign prophecies, however, have been omitted in the text because they add little to Ezekiel's message to his race.

<sup>a</sup> 29<sup>3</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, speak.

<sup>b</sup> 29<sup>3</sup> So certain MSS. Egypt is here likened to one of the huge crocodiles found in the Nile.

<sup>c</sup> 29<sup>3</sup> So Syr. and Lat. Heb., my rivers. The river, of course, is the Nile. The plural of the Heb. probably refers to the many streams of the delta.

<sup>d</sup> 29<sup>3</sup> So Gk. and demands of the context. Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>e</sup> 29<sup>4</sup> Heb. adds, probably from the first part of the vs., which stick to thy scales, but Gk and Arab. omit this and also, with all the fish of thy river.

<sup>f</sup> 29<sup>4</sup> So certain MSS. and Targ. Heb., gathered.

EZEK. 29<sup>5</sup>] EZEKIEL'S MESSAGES OF ENCOURAGEMENT

I have given thee as food to the beasts of the earth and to the birds of the heavens.

<sup>6</sup>And all of the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am Jehovah,

Because they have been a staff of reed to the house of Israel;

<sup>7</sup>When they took hold of thee by the hand, thou didst break, and didst tear the whole hand;<sup>g</sup>

And when they leaned upon thee, thou didst break, and make<sup>h</sup> all their loins shake."

Land
to be desolate for forty years

<sup>8</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, I will bring a sword upon thee, and will cut off from thee man and beast. <sup>9</sup>And the land of Egypt shall be a desolation and a waste; and they shall know that I am Jehovah. Because thou<sup>i</sup> hast said, The river is mine and I made it;<sup>j</sup> therefore behold, I am against thee, and against thy river,<sup>k</sup> and I will make the land of Egypt an utter waste<sup>l</sup> and<sup>m</sup> desolation, from Migdol to Syene<sup>n</sup> even to the border of Ethiopia. <sup>11</sup>No foot of man shall pass through it, no foot of beast shall pass through it, neither shall it be inhabited for forty years. <sup>12</sup>And I will make the land of Egypt a desolation among the countries that are desolate; and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be a desolation for forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them among the lands."

To be
restored
but not to former
strength

<sup>13</sup>Thus<sup>p</sup> saith Jehovah: "At the end of forty years<sup>p</sup> I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples whither they were scattered; <sup>14</sup>and I will restore the fortunes of Egypt, and will cause them to return to the land of Pathros,<sup>q</sup> into the land of their birth; and there they shall be a weak kingdom. <sup>15</sup>It shall be the weakest of the kingdoms; neither shall it any more lift itself above the nations; and I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations. <sup>16</sup>And it shall be no more the reliance of the house of Israel, suggesting iniquity<sup>r</sup> when they turn to it for help; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

§ 139. The Judgment against Israel's Malignant Foes, Ezek. 25<sup>1</sup>-26<sup>14</sup>, 2S<sup>20-26</sup>

Ammon to be conquered
and devastated

Ezek. 25 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me again, <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn thy face toward the Ammonites, and prophesy against them, <sup>3</sup>and say to the Ammonites: 'Hear the word of Jehovah: "Thus saith Jehovah, Because thou

<sup>g</sup> 29<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., all their shoulder.

<sup>h</sup> 29<sup>7</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>i</sup> 29<sup>9</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. Heb., he saith.

<sup>j</sup> 29<sup>9</sup> So Syr. and Lat.

<sup>k</sup> 29<sup>10</sup> So Syr.

<sup>l</sup> 29<sup>10</sup> So Gk., Syr. and Targ.

<sup>m</sup> 29<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, and.

<sup>n</sup> 29<sup>10</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. Migdol was in the extreme northeast, while Syene was the modern Assuan in the south, both sites of early Jewish colonies.

<sup>o</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> So Gk. of Origen and Syr.

<sup>p</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> A round number.

<sup>q</sup> 29<sup>13</sup> Upper Egypt.

<sup>r</sup> 29<sup>16</sup> Lit., a remembrance of iniquity, i. e., as in the past.

<sup>§ 139</sup> This group of foreign prophecies dates, for the most part, before the final destruction of Jerusalem. They are grouped together because they deal with the same general theme. The point of view of the prophet is distinctly nationalistic; the crimes with which these nations are charged are either participation in Judah's overthrow or else malicious joy over the downfall of their ancient rival. Incidentally Ezekiel gives, in these sections, clear insight into the woes which came to those who survived the final catastrophe of 586 B.C. His ultimate motive, however, was to encourage the survivors of that disaster, for he and they regarded a signal

JUDGMENT AGAINST MALIGNANT FOES [EZEK. 25<sup>3</sup>

saidst, Aha, over my sanctuary when it was defiled, and over the land of Israel when it was laid waste, and over the house of Judah when it went into captivity,<sup>4</sup> therefore I am about to give thee to the sons of the East<sup>s</sup> as a possession. They shall pitch their tents in thee, and set up in thee their dwellings; they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk;<sup>5</sup> and I will make Rabbah<sup>t</sup> a pasture for camels, and the cities<sup>u</sup> of the Ammonites a grazing place for flocks, that ye may know that I am Jehovah.”

<sup>6</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, “Because thou didst clap thy hands and stamp thy feet, and didst rejoice<sup>v</sup> maliciously over the land of Israel; <sup>7</sup>therefore I will stretch<sup>w</sup> out my hand against thee, and make thee the spoil<sup>x</sup> of the nations, and I will cut thee off from the peoples and cause thee to perish out of the lands; I will destroy thee that thou mayest know that I am Jehovah.”

<sup>8</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Because Moab saith<sup>y</sup> ‘Behold the house of Judah has become like all the nations,’ <sup>9</sup>therefore behold, I will lay open the flank of Moab, from the cities<sup>z</sup> of its borders to the glory of the land, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon,<sup>a</sup> and Kiriathaim,<sup>b</sup> and I will give it,<sup>c</sup> together with the Ammonites,<sup>e</sup> to the sons of the East as a possession, that Rabbath<sup>d</sup>-ammon may be no more remembered among the nations. <sup>11</sup>And on Moab will I execute judgment, that they may know that I am Jehovah.

<sup>12</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Because Edom hath acted revengefully toward the house of Judah, and hath incurred great guilt by taking bitter<sup>e</sup> revenge, <sup>13</sup>therefore thus saith Jehovah, ‘I will stretch out my hand against Edom and I will cut off from it man and beast, and make it desolate; from Teman to<sup>f</sup> Dedan they shall fall by the sword. <sup>14</sup>And I will execute my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel and they shall do to Edom according to my anger and my fury, and she shall know my vengeance,’ is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>15</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Because the Philistines acted revengefully, and took

---

judgment upon these heathen foes as necessary to the vindication of Jehovah's justice and the preparation for the establishment of Jehovah's new and more glorious kingdom with Jerusalem as its centre. Cf., for further discussion of Ezekiel's messianic hopes, Introd., p. 44.

In the latter part of 26 Ezekiel further describes the overthrow of Tyre. Chap. 27 is devoted to an elaborate description of the commerce of Tyre, which is of great value and interest to the student of ancient history and archaeology. In 28 he proclaims the overthrow of the king of Tyre, even as that of Pharaoh of Egypt, 31, 32. This extreme elaboration of the prophecies regarding Egypt and Tyre is probably due to the relatively large importance of these two states in the broader world which lay within Ezekiel's horizon. Detailed descriptions of the fate of Tyre have been omitted because they do not contribute materially to Ezekiel's teaching as a whole. The culmination of the prediction regarding Judah's foes is found in 28<sup>24-26</sup>, in which the prophet predicts a glorious restoration of the scattered Jews after the punishment of their malicious neighbors is complete.

<sup>s</sup> 25<sup>1</sup> The designation of the Arab tribes living east of Palestine. Cf. Judg. 6<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> 25<sup>2</sup> The famous capital of the Ammonites.

<sup>u</sup> 25<sup>3</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>v</sup> 25<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and Syr. The Heb. adds, in all thy spite. This was probably from the hand of a scribe who had in mind <sup>15</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 25<sup>5</sup> So Gk.

<sup>x</sup> 25<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>y</sup> 25<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and Seir, but Seir was the home of the Edomites and the present paragraph is dealing with the Moabites.

<sup>a</sup> 25<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. is corrupted by a scribal repetition.

<sup>b</sup> 25<sup>9</sup> These are important cities east of the Jordan in the territory of Eastern Moab.

<sup>c</sup> 25<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and Syr., omitting the connective of the Heb.

<sup>d</sup> 25<sup>11</sup> Possibly this clause was secondary, as it is not relevant.

<sup>e</sup> 25<sup>12</sup> Following a felicitous suggestion of the Syr. Heb., sons of Ammon, is impossible, since the verb is in the feminine singular.

<sup>f</sup> 25<sup>13</sup> So Gk.

<sup>g</sup> 25<sup>14</sup> Reading as the context demands.

For wrong done to Judah

Moab to be conquered

Edom at the hand of Judah

Destruction for the Philistines revenge in a spirit of spite to destroy in perpetual hate,<sup>16</sup> therefore thus saith Jehovah, 'Behold, I will stretch out my hands against the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethites,<sup>g</sup> and destroy the rest of the sea-coast,<sup>17</sup> and execute great vengeance upon them,<sup>h</sup> that they may know that I am Jehovah, when I execute my vengeance upon them.'

<sup>26</sup> In the eleventh year, the first day of the first<sup>i</sup> month, this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, because Tyre hath said concerning Jerusalem:

'Aha, the gate of the nations is broken,
It is open to me; I shall be full<sup>j</sup> she is laid waste!'

<sup>3</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah:

'Behold, I am against thee, O Tyre, and I will bring against thee
Many nations, as the sea brings up its waves, <sup>4</sup>And they shall destroy the walls of Tyre and break down her towers,
And I will scrape her dust from her and make her a bare rock;
<sup>5</sup>She shall be a place in which to spread nets in the midst of the sea,
For I have spoken, is the oracle of Jehovah.<sup>k</sup>
<sup>6</sup>Her daughters<sup>l</sup> which are on the mainland shall be slain by the sword,
And they shall know that I am Jehovah.'

For thus saith Jehovah: 'Behold, I am about to bring against Tyre Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, the king of kings,<sup>m</sup> from the north with horses and chariots and horsemen and a host of<sup>n</sup> many peoples. <sup>8</sup>Thy daughters on the mainland he will slay with the sword, and he will build a tower against thee, and raise up a mound against thee, and raise up shields<sup>o</sup> against thee; <sup>9</sup>and he will direct the shock of his battering rams against thy walls, and hew down thy towers with his axes. <sup>10</sup>Because of the vast number of his horses, their dust shall cover thee; at the sound of horsemen, and wheels, and chariots thy walls shall shake, when he enters thy gates as one enters the city that is taken by storm. <sup>11</sup>With the hoofs of horses he will trample all thy streets, he will slay thy people with the sword and thy strong pillars shall go down<sup>p</sup> to the ground. <sup>12</sup>They will despoil thee of thy riches and take thy merchandise as booty, break down thy walls, and tear down thy pleasant houses; and thy stones and thy timber and thy dust they will cast<sup>q</sup> in the midst of the waters. <sup>13</sup>And I will still the sound of thy songs, the music of thy harps shall be heard no more. <sup>14</sup>I will make thee a bare rock; thou shalt be

<sup>g</sup> 25<sup>16</sup> Cherethites is an old designation of the Philistines, and occurs in the name of David's Philistine body-guard.

<sup>h</sup> 25<sup>17</sup> Following the Gk. in omitting, with furious rebukes.

<sup>i</sup> 26<sup>1</sup> So Gk. A. The Heb. has lost the number of the month.

<sup>j</sup> 26<sup>2</sup> Syr., laid waste. Tyre's rejoicing was because the power of her eastern neighbors was broken, leaving the way open for unrestricted commerce.

<sup>k</sup> 26<sup>3</sup> Heb. adds, and it shall be a spoil to the nations, but this clause at this point is out of harmony with the logical and metrical structure of the passage and is probably the addition of some later scribe.

<sup>l</sup> 26<sup>4</sup> I. e., her outlying villages.

<sup>m</sup> 26<sup>5</sup> A title used by some of the Assyrian kings and later very commonly by the kings of Persia.

<sup>n</sup> 26<sup>6</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the aid of the Gk.

<sup>o</sup> 26<sup>8</sup> A protection against the shafts of the besieged probably made by holding together the shields of the advancing warriors.

<sup>p</sup> 26<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Heb., thou shalt go down.

<sup>q</sup> 26<sup>12</sup> Following the superior Gk. reading. Heb., they shall put.

Tyre's selfishness

Her punishment

Nebuchadrezzar to be Jehovah's agent of destruction

a place in which to spread nets; thou shalt never again be rebuilt, for I, Jehovah, have spoken,' is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>28</sup> <sup>20</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>21</sup>Son of man, set thy face against Sidon, and prophesy against her <sup>22</sup>and say, 'Thus saith Jehovah, "Behold, I am against thee, O Sidon, and I will show forth my glory in thy midst, and thou <sup>r</sup> shalt know that I am Jehovah, when I execute judgment upon thee, <sup>r</sup> and show forth my sanctity within thee." <sup>23</sup>And into thee <sup>r</sup> I will send pestilence, and into thy streets blood, and the slain shall fall in thy <sup>r</sup> midst, by the sword round about within thee, and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah. <sup>24</sup>Of all the malignant neighbors<sup>s</sup> of the house of Israel, none shall any longer be to them an irritating briar or a piercing thorn, and they shall know that I am Jehovah.''

<sup>25</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'When I gathered<sup>t</sup> the house of Israel from the peoples among which they are scattered, and show forth my sanctity through them in the sight of the nations, then shall they dwell in the land which I gave to their father Jacob; <sup>26</sup>and they shall dwell therein securely, and build their houses and plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell securely, when I execute judgment upon all their neighbors, who treat them despitefully, and they shall know that I am Jehovah their God.

§ 140. Nebuchadrezzar's Conquest of Egypt, Ezek. 29<sup>17-21</sup>

Ezek. <sup>29</sup> <sup>17</sup>In the twenty-seventh year on the first day of the first month, this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>18</sup>Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a long<sup>u</sup> service against Tyre; every head was made bald and every shoulder was galled; yet neither he nor his army had any wages from Tyre for the services that he had rendered against her. <sup>19</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: 'Behold, I will give the land of Egypt to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall carry off her multitude, <sup>v</sup> and take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages of his army. <sup>20</sup>I have given him the land of Egypt as his pay for the service which he rendered<sup>w</sup> me,' saith Jehovah.

<sup>21</sup>In that day I will cause a horn to bud forth to the house of Israel, and I will give thee freedom of speech<sup>x</sup> among them; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.'

Res-
tor-
ation
of Jeho-
vah's
people

Tyre to fall at last before Nebu-
chad-rezzar

Honor for Je-
hovah's
people
and prophet

<sup>r</sup> 28<sup>22</sup> Following the Gk. here and in the next vs. in reading, thou and thy, rather than they and her of the Heb.

<sup>s</sup> 28<sup>23</sup> So Gk. and the demands of the context.

<sup>t</sup> 28<sup>24</sup> Gk., and I will gather.

<sup>u</sup> 29<sup>14</sup> Although this prophecy comes from the year 570 B.C., and is one of Ezekiel's latest, it logically belongs in its present setting, because of its close connection with the preceding section. In 586 B.C. Ezekiel had distinctly declared, 26<sup>7-18</sup>, that Nebuchadrezzar would speedily conquer and destroy Tyre and its dependent cities on the mainland. As a matter of fact, Tyre successfully resisted Nebuchadrezzar's attack from 585 to 572 B.C. Ezekiel's frankness is demonstrated in the present section, in which he admits that his prediction was not realized. He reasserts, however, his earlier declaration that Egypt should fall into the hands of the Chaldeans. The prophecy is very significant, for it is the plainest possible evidence that the prophets themselves did not anticipate that even their most definite predictions would necessarily be realized, and more important still, that they were not greatly surprised when the fulfillment failed to come.

<sup>v</sup> 29<sup>15</sup> Lit., great.

<sup>w</sup> 29<sup>16</sup> The Gk. omits, he shall carry off her multitude. This may be secondary.

<sup>x</sup> 29<sup>20</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, because they wrought for me.

<sup>y</sup> 29<sup>21</sup> Lit., opening of mouth; Cf., 33<sup>22</sup>.

§ 141. The New Epoch in Ezekiel's Work, Ezek. 33

Duties and responsibi-li-ties of a watchman

Of a prophetic
watchman

Forgive-ness for
the penitent

Guilt
and punish-
ment determined
by present
attitude
and acts

Ezek. 33 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>2</sup>Son of man, speak to the sons of thy people, and say to them, 'When I bring the sword upon a land, and the people of the land take one of their number and make him their watchman; if, when he sees the sword coming upon the land, he blow the trumpet and warn the people; <sup>4</sup>then whoever hears the sound of the trumpet, and does not take warning and the sword come and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. <sup>5</sup>He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him; whereas if he had taken warning he would have saved his life. <sup>6</sup>But if the watchman, when he sees the sword coming, blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned, and the sword come and take one of them; he is taken away on account of his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

<sup>7</sup>As for thee, son of man, I have set thee as a watchman to the house of Israel; therefore when thou hearest the word at my mouth, give them warning from me. <sup>8</sup>When I say to the wicked,<sup>y</sup> "Thou shalt surely die," and thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way; he<sup>z</sup> shall die for his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thy hand. <sup>9</sup>Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it, and he turn not from his way; he shall die for his iniquity, but thou hast saved thyself.'

<sup>10</sup>And thou, son of man, say to the house of Israel: 'Thus ye say:<sup>a</sup> "Our transgressions and our sins are upon us, and through them we pine away; how can we live?"' <sup>11</sup>Say to them, 'As I live, saith Jehovah, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?'

<sup>12</sup>And thou, son of man, say to the sons of thy people, 'The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: and as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness: neither shall he that is righteous be able to live thereby in the day that he sinneth. <sup>13</sup>When I say to the righteous, "Thou<sup>b</sup> shalt surely live," and he trusts in his righteousness, and commits iniquity, none of his righteous deeds shall be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die. <sup>14</sup>Again, when I say to the wicked, "Thou shalt surely die;" if he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right, <sup>15</sup>and restores the pledge,<sup>c</sup> gives again that which he had taken by robbery, and walks in the statutes of life, committing no iniquity; he shall surely live, he shall not die. <sup>16</sup>None of his sins that he hath committed shall be remembered against him; he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely

§ 141 As has always been noted, the news of the final fall of Jerusalem marked a great turning point in Ezekiel's work and thought. Instead of being the predictor of disaster and the strenuous opponent of popular policies, he became henceforth the prophet of hope and of national restoration, and a comforter of the discouraged and oppressed. At last the people had learned by bitter experience that there was a prophet among them. The present section records the significant psychological experience through which the prophet passed. In a sense, a new prophetic call came to him. It was to guide his race through the dark valley through which they were passing into that nobler future which he firmly believed lay beyond.

<sup>y</sup> 33<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, O wicked man. Cf. 31<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 33<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, the wicked man.

<sup>a</sup> 33<sup>10</sup> So Gk.

<sup>b</sup> 33<sup>13</sup> So Gk. A. O. Lat., Syr. of Origen, and Arab. Cf. 14.

<sup>c</sup> 33<sup>15</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, the wicked.

live. <sup>17</sup>Yet the sons of thy people say, "The way of the Lord is not right;" but it is their way that is not right. <sup>18</sup>When the righteous turns from his righteousness, and commits iniquity, he shall even die thereby. <sup>19</sup>And when the wicked turns from his wickedness, and does that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby. <sup>20</sup>Yet ye say, "The way of the Lord is not right." O house of Israel, I will judge each of you according to his acts.'

<sup>21</sup>In the twelfth year of our captivity, in the fifth day of the tenth month, one who had escaped from Jerusalem came to me, saying, The city is smitten. <sup>22</sup>Now the hand of Jehovah had been upon me in the evening, before the one who had escaped, came; and he had opened my mouth, in expectation of his coming to me in the morning; and my mouth was open and I was no more dumb.

<sup>23</sup>This word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>24</sup>The inhabitants of the<sup>d</sup> ruins in the land of Israel are saying, 'Abraham was but one man,<sup>e</sup> and he received the whole land as a possession, while we are many, the land is given to us as a possession.'<sup>f</sup> <sup>25</sup>Therefore say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Ye eat with the blood,"<sup>g</sup> and worship idols, and commit acts of bloodshed;<sup>h</sup> shall ye possess the land? <sup>26</sup>Ye depend upon your swords, ye<sup>i</sup> commit abomination and ye defile one another's wives, shall ye possess the land?"' <sup>27</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'As I live, those who are in the ruins shall fall by the sword, and those who are in the open field<sup>j</sup> shall be given to the wild beasts to devour,<sup>k</sup> and those who are in the strongholds and in the caves shall die of the pestilence; <sup>28</sup>and I will make the land waste and desolate, and the pride of its might shall cease, and the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, with no one passing through them; <sup>29</sup>and they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I make the land desolate and waste, for all the abominations which they have done.'

<sup>30</sup>As for thee, son of man, the sons of thy people talk about thee beside the walls, and at the doors of their houses, and say<sup>l</sup> one to another, "Come, hear! what is the word that cometh forth from Jehovah?" <sup>31</sup>They come in to thee as people come, and sit before thee,<sup>m</sup> and hear thy words, and do them not. Falsehoods<sup>n</sup> are in their mouths,<sup>o</sup> and their hearts are set on their own gain. <sup>32</sup>Behold, thou art to them as a love song, of beautiful tone and excellently played; they hear thy words, but do them not. <sup>33</sup>But when it comes to pass—behold, it comes! they will know that there was a prophet among them.'

Effect
of the news of Jeru-salem's
fall

Complete-
ness of Judah's
destruk-
tion

The coming event
to vindicate Ezekiel's predictions

<sup>d</sup> 33<sup>22</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, these.

<sup>e</sup> 33<sup>24</sup> Lit., Abraham was one, and possessed the land.

<sup>f</sup> 33<sup>24</sup> Syr. reads, shall we not possess it.

<sup>g</sup> 33<sup>25</sup> I. e., eat flesh with the blood, which was contrary to the law.

<sup>h</sup> 33<sup>25</sup> Lit., ye have shed blood.

<sup>i</sup> 33<sup>26</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of certain MSS. and the context.

<sup>j</sup> 33<sup>27</sup> So Gk.

<sup>k</sup> 33<sup>27</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. Heb., to eat it.

<sup>l</sup> 33<sup>28</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has been corrupted by a scribal repetition.

<sup>m</sup> 33<sup>29</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds by mistake, my people.

<sup>n</sup> 33<sup>30</sup> So Gk. and Syr. and the demands of the context. A scribe has, in the Heb., by mistake copied a word from the following line.

<sup>o</sup> 33<sup>31</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, they themselves are doing.

§ 142. Lament over Judah's Rulers, Ezek. 19

Fate of Jehoahaz

Ezek. 19 <sup>1</sup>Do thou<sup>p</sup> utter a lament over the prince<sup>q</sup> of Israel <sup>2</sup>and say:
How like<sup>r</sup> a lioness was thy mother among the lions!

She crouched among the young lions, she reared her whelps,

<sup>3</sup>And one of her whelps she brought up, he became a young lion,
He learned to seize prey, and men he devoured.

<sup>4</sup>Against him the nations raised a cry,<sup>s</sup> in their pit he was taken;
They led him away with hooks<sup>t</sup> to the land of Egypt.

<sup>5</sup>When she saw that she but waited,<sup>u</sup> her hope perished,

And she took another of her whelps, she made him a young lion,

<sup>6</sup>He went about among the lions, he became a young lion,
He learned to seize prey, men he devoured.

<sup>7</sup>He ravaged<sup>v</sup> their<sup>w</sup> palaces, and their cities he wasted;

Dismayed was the land and all that was within it, at the sound of his roaring.

<sup>8</sup>The nations gathered together<sup>x</sup> against him, from the provinces round about,

About him they spread their net, in their pit he was taken,

<sup>9</sup>They led<sup>y</sup> him away with hooks to the king of Babylon,
They brought him into strongholds, in a cage they confined him,<sup>z</sup>
That his voice no more should be heard on the mountains of Israel.

Might
of Je-hoiachinHis capture
and banish-mentJudah's former strength
and
glory

<sup>10</sup>Thy mother was like a vine in a vineyard, planted by waters,<sup>a</sup>
She was fruitful and full of branches, because of the many waters.

§ 142 This section contains one of the most carefully worked out poems to be found in Ezekiel's prophecies. It is a lament over Judah's three kings, Jehoahaz, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah, who were carried into captivity, the one into Egypt and the other two into Babylon. In contrast to Jehoiakin, who is not mentioned, because he was not carried into captivity, these three kings represent the better type of Judah's rulers. The mention of the fate of Zedekiah indicates that the elegy was not written until after the fall of Jerusalem. It was probably uttered, however, after the news came of Jerusalem's fall. Because of its reference to Jehoahaz and Zedekiah, it was probably placed by Ezekiel or an editor of his prophecies in its present position in the first part of his book, but it belongs, logically and chronologically, after 33. Restored to this position it presents a logical contrast to Judah's false rulers in 34.

The mother in <sup>b</sup> is probably the nation, who is spoken of as a lioness among the lions, which would represent the neighboring nations. By some commentators, however, she is identified with Hamutal, the wife of Josiah, II Kgs. 24<sup>18</sup>, who was the mother of the three kings here mentioned and who exerted a powerful influence in the last eventful quarter century of Judah's existence.

<sup>p</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> The Gk. adds, son of man.

<sup>q</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb., princes.

<sup>r</sup> 19<sup>2</sup> Adding one letter, as in the parallel passage in <sup>10</sup>. The nation was the mother of the kings who were in succession placed on the throne of Judah.

<sup>s</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> Lit., cause to be heard against him. The reference, of course, is to the Egyptians.

<sup>t</sup> 19<sup>1</sup> Possibly to complete the metre the phrase, in his jaws, or, in his nose, should be added, after the analogy of 29<sup>4</sup>, 38.

<sup>u</sup> 19<sup>6</sup> The Heb. text here, is doubtful. The above rendering follows the Heb. A slight change gives the reading, acted foolishly. The general meaning, however, is clear from the context.

<sup>v</sup> 19<sup>7</sup> The Heb. reading, and he knew, is impossible. The Gk. suggests the error and gives the reading, lit., he pastured.

<sup>w</sup> 19<sup>7</sup> Slightly revising the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 19<sup>8</sup> So Syr., Targ., and Lat. Possibly the Heb. is to be retained and translated, cried out against him.

<sup>y</sup> 19<sup>9</sup> Gk. omits, and this is in harmony with the metrical demands of the vs., although it is implied by the sense.

<sup>z</sup> 19<sup>9</sup> The Heb. in this vs. is greatly confused. The phrase, in a cage they placed him, is evidently out of its logical order at the beginning of the vs. Transferred to the latter part of the vs. it completes the otherwise incomplete line and gives a clear reading.

<sup>a</sup> 19<sup>10</sup> Following two Heb. MSS. in restoring the text.

LAMENT OVER JUDAH'S RULERS [EZEK. 19<sup>11</sup>

<sup>11</sup> And she had a mighty branch,<sup>b</sup> which became a ruling sceptre,<sup>c</sup>
And its stature rose up into the midst<sup>d</sup> of the clouds;
And it appeared in its full stature amidst the mass of its boughs.

<sup>12</sup> But in wrath was the vine<sup>e</sup> plucked up, cast down to the ground,
And the east wind withered its fruit in its beauty,<sup>f</sup>
And its mighty branch was withered,<sup>g</sup> fire consumed it,
<sup>13</sup> And now it is planted in the wilderness, in a dry<sup>h</sup> land.
<sup>14</sup> Fire hath gone forth from its branch, hath consumed its<sup>i</sup> boughs,
Now it has no mighty branch, no royal sceptre.
This is a lament and has become a lament!

Overthrow
of Judah
and deportation
of Zedekiah

§ 143. Israel's Traitorous Rulers and the Future Restoration, Ezek. 34

Ezek. 34 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy and say to<sup>j</sup> the shepherds, 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "Woe to the shepherds of Israel who only fed themselves. Should not shepherds feed the flock? <sup>3</sup>Ye have eaten the milk<sup>k</sup> and clothed yourselves with the wool, ye have killed the fatlings, but my flock<sup>l</sup> ye have not fed. <sup>4</sup>The weak ye have not strengthened, the sick ye have not healed, the crippled ye have not bound up, ye have not brought back that which was driven away, ye have not sought that which was lost, and the strong<sup>m</sup> ye have ruled<sup>n</sup> harshly."<sup>5</sup> So my flock has been scattered because there was no shepherd, and has become food for all the wild beasts of the field."<sup>o</sup> My flock hath wandered on all the mountains and on every high hill, and they were scattered<sup>p</sup> over all the face of the earth with none who searched and sought for them."

Greed
and cruelty
of Israel's
rulers

"Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of Jehovah, As I live, is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah, inasmuch as my flock has become the prey and food of all the beasts of the field, because there was no one to shepherd them, for my shepherds cared not for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and my flock they did not feed, <sup>q</sup>therefore, O shepherds,<sup>q</sup> <sup>10</sup>thus saith the Lord

Their
rejection by Jeho-
vah

<sup>b</sup> 19<sup>11</sup> Following a revised Heb. text.

<sup>c</sup> 19<sup>11</sup> So Gk. and the demands of the context.

<sup>d</sup> 19<sup>11</sup> So Gk.

<sup>e</sup> 19<sup>12</sup> The subject of this verb is clearly, vine, and the present defective metrical structure of the vs. suggests that it was found in the original.

<sup>f</sup> 19<sup>12</sup> Revising the Heb., which is here very corrupt.

<sup>g</sup> 19<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has a pl. verb.

<sup>h</sup> 19<sup>13</sup> So Gk. A scribe has added in the Heb., and thirsty, but this destroys the regular metre of the line.

<sup>i</sup> 19<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, fruit.

<sup>j</sup> 143 Ezekiel here develops Jeremiah's figure, 23<sup>1, 2</sup>, of the greedy shepherds, who prey upon the flock, and pictures the restoration of his people by Jehovah, the Good Shepherd. It would seem that, from this figure, the author of Ps. 23 derived the suggestion which he has developed with such skill and beauty. In this connection Ezekiel also introduces his promise of a Davidic prince who should act as Jehovah's servant in shepherding his flock. The passage is one of the most important in the O. T. in tracing the developments of Israel's messianic hopes. Cf. Introd., 44, 45.

<sup>k</sup> 34<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to them.

<sup>l</sup> 34<sup>3</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Lat. Heb., fat.

<sup>m</sup> 34<sup>4</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg. Heb., the flock.

<sup>n</sup> 34<sup>4</sup> So Gk. The Heb. text is corrupt.

<sup>o</sup> 34<sup>5</sup> Again correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>p</sup> 34<sup>6</sup> So Syr.

<sup>q</sup> 34<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, my flock.

<sup>q</sup> 34<sup>9</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds here, the word of Jehovah, but this is apparently only a scribal expansion.

Jehovah: 'Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will require my flock at their hands, and I will cause them to cease from<sup>r</sup> tending my flock;<sup>s</sup> no longer shall the shepherds feed themselves, for I will rescue my flock from their mouths, that it may no longer be food for them.'

<sup>11</sup>For thus saith the Lord Jehovah: 'Behold, I myself, will seek for my flock and search them out,<sup>t</sup> as a shepherd searches for his flock on the day when his sheep are scattered,<sup>t</sup> so will I search for my flock, and deliver them from all the places whither they have been scattered in the day of cloud and darkness.<sup>13</sup> And I will take them from among the peoples, and will gather them from the lands, and bring them into their own habitable land, and feed them on<sup>u</sup> the mountains of Israel, in the valleys, and in all the habitable parts of the land.<sup>14</sup> With good pasture will I feed them, and on the high mountains of Israel shall be their pasture. There they shall lie down in a good habitation, and feed on rich pasturage in the mountains of Israel.<sup>15</sup> I myself will be the shepherd of my flock, and I will lead them to pasture,' is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.<sup>16</sup> The lost I will seek, what is driven away I will bring back, the crippled I will bind up, the sick I will restore to strength, over the fat<sup>v</sup> and the strong I will watch,<sup>w</sup> I will be a righteous shepherd to them.

<sup>17</sup>As for you,<sup>x</sup> my flock,' thus saith the Lord Jehovah: 'I will judge between the sheep and the rams<sup>y</sup> and the he-goats.<sup>18</sup> Is it not enough for you to feed on the good pasture, that ye must trample with your feet the rest of the pasture? And to drink of clear water, that ye must foul the rest with your feet,<sup>19</sup> so that my flock must eat what ye have trampled down and drink what ye have fouled with your feet?<sup>20</sup> Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah:<sup>z</sup> 'Behold I myself will judge between the fat<sup>a</sup> sheep and the lean sheep<sup>b</sup> because ye push with side and shoulder, and thrust with your horns, all the feeble sheep, until ye scatter them abroad.<sup>22</sup> And I will deliver my flock and they shall no longer be a prey, and I will judge between sheep and sheep.

<sup>23</sup>And I will set up over them one shepherd, he shall feed them, namely, my servant, David. And he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.<sup>24</sup> And I, Jehovah, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them; I, Jehovah, have spoken.<sup>b</sup> <sup>25</sup>And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will put away wild beasts from the land, so that they may dwell securely in the wilderness, and sleep in the forests.

<sup>26</sup>And I will give them showers of rain<sup>c</sup> in its season, and I will send the

<sup>r</sup> 34<sup>10</sup> Syr. and Lat. add, longer.

<sup>s</sup> 34<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., flock.

<sup>t</sup> 34<sup>12</sup> Restoring what appears to have been the original Heb. text. The accepted Heb. text reads, in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered, but this does not carry out the comparison implied by the latter part of the vs. Syr. reads, in the day of tempest. Another possible reconstruction of the Heb. would give, in the day of calamity, when he is in the midst of his sheep that are scattered.

<sup>u</sup> 34<sup>13</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. The same error is found in the Heb. of <sup>14</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 34<sup>16</sup> This word is lacking in the Gk. and may be secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 34<sup>16</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Lat. The Heb. reading is due to a common scribal error.

<sup>x</sup> 34<sup>17</sup> Gk. and Arab., and ye, O flock.

<sup>y</sup> 34<sup>17</sup> Heb., between sheep and sheep, but the context implies that Jehovah is to protect the weaker members of the flock from their greedy, grasping leaders.

<sup>z</sup> 34<sup>20</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, to them.

<sup>a</sup> 34<sup>20</sup> Following certain MSS. in correcting the corrupt Heb.

<sup>b</sup> 34<sup>21</sup> Syr. omits this sentence.

<sup>c</sup> 34<sup>26</sup> Following the vss. in correcting this corrupt passage. Heb. also here adds, a blessing, which the Gk. omits.

Jehovah himself to shepherd his scattered flock

And deliver from those who prey upon them

Appointment of a Davidic ruler

Plenty and prosperity

dashing rain in its time, rains of blessing shall there be;<sup>d</sup> <sup>27</sup>and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit, and the earth shall give its increase, and they shall be secure in their habitable land, and know that I am Jehovah, when I break the frame of their yoke, and deliver them from the hands of those who have made them slaves. <sup>28</sup>They shall no longer be afraid of the nations, the beasts of the field shall not devour them, and they shall dwell securely with none to make them afraid. <sup>29</sup>And I shall provide for them a successful<sup>e</sup> planting, so that they shall no longer be consumed by hunger in the land, and shall never again receive the reproach of the nations. <sup>30</sup>And they shall know that I, Jehovah, am their God,<sup>f</sup> and that they, the house of Israel, are my people,' is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah. <sup>31</sup>'My flock are ye, the flock that I tend,<sup>g</sup> and I am your God,' is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.

§ 144. Edom's Desolation, Ezek. 35

Ezek. 35 <sup>1</sup>Moreover this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn thy face against Mount Seir, and prophesy against it, <sup>3</sup>and say to it, 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah:

Edom's overthrow

"Behold, I am against thee, Mount Seir!
I will stretch out my hand against thee,
And make thee waste and desolate;
<sup>4</sup>I will make thy cities a waste,
And thou shalt be a desolation,
So that thou shalt know that I am Jehovah.

<sup>5</sup>Because thou didst cherish eternal enmity and didst deliver over the Israelites to the sword in the time of their calamity,<sup>h</sup> at the time of their final punishment,<sup>i</sup> <sup>6</sup>therefore as I live, is the oracle of Jehovah,<sup>j</sup> thou art guilty<sup>k</sup> of blood, and blood shall pursue thee,<sup>l</sup> and I will make Mount Seir a waste and desolation, and I will cut off from it those who come and go therefrom,<sup>m</sup> and I will fill its mountains with the<sup>n</sup> slain.<sup>m</sup> On thy hills and thy valleys and all thy watercourses shall fall those slain with the sword; <sup>o</sup>and I will make thee

Blood
for blood

<sup>d</sup> 34<sup>26</sup> This verb is omitted by the Gk. and may be secondary.
<sup>e</sup> 34<sup>29</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Syr.
<sup>f</sup> 34<sup>30</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, ye.
<sup>g</sup> 34<sup>31</sup> So Gk. Through a scribal repetition or corruption of the text, the Heb. adds, man, but this makes no sense in its context.

§ 144 Apparently, from the time of the fall of Jerusalem and the deportation of the Jews to Babylon, the Edomites, attracted by the more fertile territory of Judah, began that northern movement which left them, at the middle of the Persian period, in possession of the southern borders of Palestine. Possibly even at this early period they began to feel the pressure of the south Arabian tribes that ultimately dispossessed them of their own territory and forced them to find a home in Southern Judah. This fact may be the background of Ezekiel's prophecy of the desolation of Mount Seir. Of all the hostile nations which surrounded Judah, the Edomites, at this time of calamity, proved the most malignant. Since the days of David the Edomites had been the almost constant victims of Hebrew conquest, and now that the tide of fortune had turned, it was not strange that they wreaked pitiless vengeance upon their former conquerors. Henceforth, in the thought of the Jews, the Edomites became a type of the arrogant cruel foes of Jehovah, and their overthrow is regarded as essential to the restoration of the chosen people.

<sup>h</sup> 35<sup>1</sup> Gk. omits this phrase and it may be secondary.
<sup>i</sup> 35<sup>2</sup> Lit., iniquity.
<sup>j</sup> 35<sup>3</sup> So Gk. A scribe has repeated, in corrupt form, the latter part of the vs.
<sup>k</sup> 35<sup>4</sup> Correcting the Heb. after the analogy of 22<sup>4</sup> and the Gk.
<sup>l</sup> 35<sup>5</sup> So Gk. Heb., his slain.
<sup>m</sup> 35<sup>6</sup> In 7, <sup>sa</sup> the person suddenly changes from the second to the third and these vss. are but a repetition of the thought of <sup>4</sup>. They are either secondary or else taken from another context.

an everlasting desolation<sup>n</sup> and thy cities shall not be inhabited,<sup>o</sup> that thou<sup>p</sup> mayest know that I am Jehovah.

Recompense
for greed
and malice

<sup>10</sup>Because thou saidst, the two nations and the two<sup>q</sup> lands shall be mine, and I take possession of them<sup>r</sup> (although Jehovah was there), <sup>11</sup>therefore, as I live, is the oracle of Jehovah, I will deal with thee<sup>s</sup> according to the anger and jealousy wherewith, because of thy hatred, thou didst deal with them, and I will make myself known in thee when I judge thee, <sup>12</sup>and thou shalt know that I, Jehovah, have heard all thy revilings, which thou utteredst against the mountains of Israel, saying, 'They<sup>t</sup> are desolate, they are given to us to devour, <sup>13</sup>and thou<sup>u</sup> spakest arrogantly against me!<sup>v</sup> I heard it!' <sup>14</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, "As thou didst rejoice over my land, because it was desolate, thus will I deal with thee.<sup>w</sup> <sup>15</sup>Desolate shalt thou be, Mount Seir, and all Edom, all of it, that thou<sup>x</sup> mayest know that I am Jehovah."

§ 145. Restoration of the Land of Judah, Ezek. 36

Judah's
foes to be punished

Ezek. 36 <sup>1</sup>And thou son of man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of Jehovah. <sup>2</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "Because the enemy hath said against you, Aha! and the ancient high places have become our possession, <sup>3</sup>therefore prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Inasmuch as they have made you desolate, and crushed you on every side,<sup>y</sup> that ye might become the possession of the rest of the nations,<sup>z</sup> and ye are the popular talk and gossip, <sup>4</sup>therefore, O mountains of Israel, hear the word of Jehovah: Thus saith Jehovah to the mountains and to the hills, and to the watercourses and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes and to the deserted cities which have become a prey and a derision to the rest of the nations, which are around about you—<sup>5</sup>therefore thus saith Jehovah, verily, in the heat of my jealousy have I spoken against the rest of the nations and against all Edom, that have appropriated my land to themselves as a possession, with heartfelt<sup>a</sup> joy, with malicious spite, in order to take its common pasture land<sup>b</sup> as prey. <sup>6</sup>Therefore prophesy concerning the

<sup>n</sup> 35<sup>9</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb., desolations.

<sup>o</sup> 35<sup>9</sup> Correcting the Heb. with the aid of the vss.

<sup>p</sup> 35<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., ye shall know.

<sup>q</sup> 35<sup>10</sup> The vss. omit, two. Judah alone was overrun by the Edomites.

<sup>r</sup> 35<sup>10</sup> So the vss. Heb., they shall possess it.

<sup>s</sup> 35<sup>11</sup> So Gk.

<sup>t</sup> 35<sup>12</sup> So Syr. and certain marginal readings of the Heb.

<sup>u</sup> 35<sup>13</sup> So Gk. Heb., ye speak arrogantly against me with your mouth.

<sup>v</sup> 35<sup>13</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, ye have multiplied your words against me.

<sup>w</sup> 35<sup>14</sup> A scribe has repeated <sup>14</sup>, in corrupt form, in <sup>15a</sup>. What was clearly the original reading has been restored above.

<sup>x</sup> 35<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb., ye.

<sup>y</sup> 145 The figure of speech in this section is that already used in 6<sup>2</sup>, where Ezekiel addressed the mountains or hills of Palestine. It is the antithesis to the preceding section which describes the desolateness of the land of Edom. It is significant that Ezekiel's hope of national restoration was not the deserts of the people; he was too deeply impressed with the guilt of the nation to make for it a plea for divine mercy. The Jehovah of Ezekiel's thought was pre-eminently a God of justice. The basis of his hope was rather the belief in the divine destiny of his race. They were Jehovah's representatives before the world, and therefore the divine King could not allow them to remain in shameful captivity. This idea is in germ in the doctrine gloriously developed by the II Isaiah.

<sup>z</sup> 36<sup>1</sup> Heb. and uncertain Gk., because they have dishonored and hated you.

<sup>a</sup> 36<sup>1</sup> I. e., especially the Edomites. Cf. <sup>5</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 36<sup>2</sup> Gk. reads simply, joy of heart. Heb., of all their heart.

<sup>c</sup> 36<sup>2</sup> Following Kraetzchmar (Ezechiel, 248), in transferring the last two Heb. words in the vs.

land of Israel, and say to the mountains and to the hills, to the watercourses and to the valleys, Thus saith Jehovah: Behold, I speak in my jealousy and in my wrath, because ye have borne the reproach of the nations. <sup>7</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah: I swear that the nations that are round about you shall surely bear their own shame.

<sup>8</sup>But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall put forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people Israel; for they will quickly come. <sup>9</sup>For, behold, I am with you, and I will turn toward you, and ye shall be tilled and sown; <sup>10</sup>and I will make the men upon you many, all the house of Israel, even all of it; and the cities shall be inhabited and the waste places rebuilt: "and I will make the men and beasts upon you many, and they shall increase and be fruitful; and I will cause you to be inhabited as in your former estate, and I will do better for you than in your beginnings; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. <sup>12</sup>Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more bereave them of children. <sup>13</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because they say to thee, <sup>c</sup> Thou hast devoured men, and bereaved thy nation, <sup>14</sup>therefore thou shalt devour men no more, nor bereave thy nation any more, saith the Lord Jehovah. <sup>15</sup>I will no longer let the reproach of the nations be heard against<sup>d</sup> thee, neither shalt thou bear the shame of the peoples any more,<sup>e</sup> saith the Lord Jehovah."

<sup>16</sup>Moreover this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>17</sup>Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their ways and by their deeds; their ways before me were as the uncleanness of a woman in her impurity. <sup>18</sup>Therefore I poured out my wrath upon them for the blood which they had poured out upon the land, and because they had defiled it with their idols. <sup>19</sup>I scattered them among the nations and they were dispersed among the countries; according to their ways and deeds I judged them. <sup>20</sup>But when they<sup>f</sup> came to the nations, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, in that men said of them, 'These are the people of Jehovah, and they have come forth out of his land.' <sup>21</sup>But I had regard for my holy name, which the house of Israel profaned among the nations whither they went.

<sup>22</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "I act not for your sake, O house of Israel, but for my holy name, which ye have profaned among the nations whither ye have gone." <sup>23</sup>And I will make sacred my great name which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, when through you I shall be sanctified in their sight. <sup>24</sup>For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all the countries and will bring you into your own land. <sup>25</sup>And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be cleansed from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you. <sup>26</sup>I will also give you a new heart, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away your stony heart, and I will give you a heart of flesh. <sup>27</sup>And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to live according to my statutes,

Judah itself
to be rebuilt
and repopulated

Judah's
calamities well
deserved

But Jeho-
vah will restore for his own sake

<sup>c</sup> 36<sup>13</sup> Restoring the Heb. by aid of context and Gk. and Syr.

<sup>d</sup> 36<sup>15</sup> So Gk.

<sup>e</sup> 36<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb. repeats, through a scribal error, the next to the last clause in <sup>14</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 36<sup>20</sup> So VSS.

and ye shall keep mine ordinances and do them. <sup>28</sup>And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people and I will be your God. <sup>29</sup>And I will save you from all your uncleannesses; and I will call for the grain, and make it plentiful, and inflict no famine upon you. <sup>30</sup>And I will make plentiful the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye may receive no more the reproach of famine among the nations. <sup>31</sup>Then shall ye remember your evil ways, and your deeds that were not good; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight because of your iniquities and your abominations. <sup>32</sup>Not for your sake do I do this, saith the Lord Jehovah, be it known to you; be ashamed and confounded for your ways, O house of Israel.”

The restoration to bring him world-wide honor

<sup>33</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: ‘In the day that I cleanse you from all your iniquities, I will cause the cities to be inhabited, and the waste places shall be rebuilt. <sup>34</sup>And the land that was desolate shall be tilled, instead of being a desolation in the sight of all those who passed by. <sup>35</sup>And they shall say, “This land that was desolate is become like the Garden of Eden; and the waste places and desolate and ruined cities are fortified and inhabited.” <sup>36</sup>Then the nations that are left round about you shall know that I, Jehovah, have rebuilt the ruined places, and planted that which was desolate; I, Jehovah, have spoken it, and will do it.’ <sup>37</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: ‘This petition also will I grant to the house of Israel, that I may do it for them; I will increase their men like a flock, <sup>38</sup>Like the sacrificial flock,<sup>g</sup> like the flock of Jerusalem at her festivals, so the waste cities shall be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.’

§ 146. The Resurrection of the Nation, Ezek. 37

Vision of the dead bones representing the scattered people

Ezek. 37 <sup>1</sup>The hand of Jehovah was upon me, and he brought me by the spirit<sup>h</sup> and set me down in the midst of the valley; and it was full of bones. <sup>2</sup>And he caused me to pass by them round about; and, behold, there were very many on the surface of the valley; and, lo, they were very dry. <sup>3</sup>And he said to me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord Jehovah, thou knowest. <sup>4</sup>Again he said to me, Prophesy over these bones, and say to them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of Jehovah. <sup>5</sup>Thus saith Jehovah to

<sup>g</sup> 36<sup>38</sup> I. e., the large flocks of animals that were brought up to Jerusalem to be used for the extra sacrifices on the great feast days.

<sup>h</sup> 146 A careful study of this section shows that Ezekiel is here dealing not with an individual but a national resurrection. The great problem in the minds of the people was, How were Jehovah's promises to be realized in the life of a nation crushed and scattered? Ezekiel's reply was that Jehovah was able and would gather and raise to new life the scattered remnants of the nation. It is also significant that he expected that not only the exiles from Judah but also the survivors of the northern kingdom would be raised up to participate in this glorious national restoration.

The boldness of the prophet's figures and the strength of his faith are exceedingly impressive. His pictures of the future are clearly the product of meditation and careful elaboration. At heart Ezekiel, like all the true prophets, was an optimist and his hopes crystallized into predictions and his predictions were presented with the minute detail which characterized him. The future failed to bring the full realization of these detailed predictions. In many ways the prophet's point of view was limited and his grasp of Jehovah's purpose to be realized in human history was only partial; but at a gravely critical period in Israel's life he performed an inestimable service in turning the eyes of his countrymen from the discouragements of the present to the possibilities of the future, in setting before them certain definite ideals which they in time realized, and, above all, in keeping alive their faith in the one God who rules supreme over all mankind.

<sup>b</sup> 37<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds, of Jehovah.

these bones: "Behold I am about to put breath into you, that ye may live.
<sup>6</sup>And I will put sinews on you, and will clothe you with flesh, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, that ye may live; and know that I am Jehovah."

<sup>7</sup>So I prophesied as he<sup>i</sup> commanded me: and as I prophesied, there was<sup>j</sup> an earthquake; and the bones came together, bone to its bone. <sup>8</sup>And I beheld, and, lo, there were sinews upon them, and flesh had clothed them, and skin covered them; but there was no breath in them. <sup>9</sup>Then he said to me, Prophesy to the breath, prophesy, son of man, and say to the breath, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live."<sup>k</sup>' <sup>10</sup>So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood upon their feet, an exceedingly great host.

<sup>11</sup>Then he said to me, O man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, 'Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are completely ruined.' <sup>12</sup>Therefore prophesy, and say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, I will open your graves, and raise you from your graves, O my people; and I will bring you into the land of Israel. <sup>13</sup>And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I have opened your graves, and raised you from your graves, O my people. <sup>14</sup>And I will put my spirit<sup>l</sup> in you, that ye may live, and I will restore you to your own land: that ye may know that I, Jehovah, have spoken it and performed it,"—is the oracle of Jehovah.'

<sup>15</sup>This word also came to me from Jehovah: <sup>16</sup>Do thou, O man, take a stick, and write upon it, JUDAH AND THE ISRAELITES ASSOCIATED WITH HIM: then take another stick, and write upon it, JOSEPH,<sup>1</sup> AND ALL THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL ASSOCIATED WITH HIM. <sup>17</sup>Then join them together, so that they may become one stick in thy hand.<sup>m</sup> <sup>18</sup>And when the children of thy people shall say to thee, 'Wilt thou not show us what this means?' <sup>19</sup>say to them, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, I am about to take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel associated with him; and I will unite them with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be united in my hand."<sup>n</sup>' <sup>20</sup>And let the sticks on which thou writest be in thy hand before their eyes. <sup>21</sup>And say to them, 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "Behold, I am about to take the Israelites from among the nations, whither they are gone, and gather them from all sides, and bring them into their own land: <sup>22</sup>and I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel; and there shall be one king over them all; and they shall be no longer two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any longer; <sup>23</sup>nor shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them from all their apostasies<sup>o</sup> wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.'

Re-vival
of the scat-tered
bones

Symbolic
of the revival
of the nation

Union
of the southern and northern Israelites

<sup>i</sup> 37<sup>7</sup> So certain MSS. and all the VSS. Heb., I was commanded.

<sup>j</sup> 37<sup>7</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, a voice . . . and.

<sup>k</sup> 37<sup>14</sup> The Heb. word for breath and spirit is the same.

<sup>l</sup> 37<sup>16</sup> Making a slight correction. Heb., stick of Ephraim. Possibly this was added by a scribe who recalled that Ephraim, as in Hos., was the chief tribe of the south.

<sup>m</sup> 37<sup>17</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the Syr.

<sup>n</sup> 37<sup>23</sup> So Sym. and the corrected Heb.

Role
of the heathen conquerors in Jehovah's plan

<sup>21</sup>And my servant David shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in mine ordinances, and observe my statutes, and do them. <sup>25</sup>And they shall dwell in the land that I have given to my servant Jacob, wherein their fathers dwelt: and they shall dwell therein, they and their sons, forever: and David my servant shall be their prince forever. <sup>26</sup>Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will establish them, and multiply them, and set my sanctuary in the midst of them forevermore. <sup>27</sup>My dwelling place also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. <sup>28</sup>And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah who sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them forevermore."

§ 147. Jehovah's Ultimate Victory over the Hostile Heathen Powers,
Ezek. 38, 39

Ezek. 38 <sup>1</sup>This word of Jehovah also came to me, <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn thy face against Gog,<sup>3</sup> prince of Rosh, Meshach, and Tubal, and prophesy against him, <sup>4</sup>and say, 'Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, prince of Rosh, Meshach, and Tubal, <sup>4</sup>and I will turn thee about,<sup>4</sup> and I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will lead thee forth together with all

<sup>o</sup> 37<sup>25</sup> So Gk. Heb., your.

§ 147 These chapters mark the culmination of Ezekiel's predictions regarding the future. In his characteristic way the prophet here teaches the omnipotence and universality of Jehovah's rule in the world. Its ultimate object was to strengthen the faith of his countrymen in the hour of their greatest humiliation. A fundamental canon in Israel's early religion had been that Jehovah's authority was limited to the land of Israel, and that his glory was manifested simply through the achievements of his chosen people. In the presence of the great national calamity Jehovah's authority in the world seemed to the popular mind to have suffered eclipse. Prophets like Jeremiah never lost sight of Jehovah's ethical and spiritual rulership. Ezekiel, however, whose point of view was much closer to that of the masses, felt the need of some signal, objective demonstration of that divine rulership. In this section he therefore revives the popular belief in Jehovah's judgment day alluded to by Amos and Zephaniah. Cf. §§ 9, 23. Ezekiel, however, was apparently the first to make this overthrow of Israel's heathen foes not a prelude but a sequel to the restoration of the chosen people. There were four distinct stages in his programme of the future: (1) the destruction of Judah's immediate foes, such as the Edomites and Ammonites; (2) the restoration of the chosen people; (3) the rebuilding of the temple and the apportionment of the land of Canaan (outlined in detail in 40-48. Cf. Vol. IV. §§ 141-147, 153-155); and (4) the advance of the heathen hordes into Palestine and their complete overthrow by Jehovah, as predicted in the present section.

The general purport of these chapters is clear but the identification of the individual actors is exceedingly difficult. Ezekiel's youthful memories of the dread Scythian invasion in the days of Josiah, and his later observation of the conquests of the mighty armies made up of many different peoples under the leadership of Nebuchadrezzar, evidently influenced and determined the details of the dramatic scenes which he here paints on the canvas of the future. Gog can scarcely be identified with the Lydian king Gyges (Assyrian, Gugu) or with any of the earlier conquerors of similar name, for he belongs to the future rather than to the past. It is possible that Ezekiel derived it from the name of the country Magog, and regarded the first two letters as the Heb. prefix commonly used in the name of countries. In any case Gog stands as the typical leader of the heathen forces near and far. Of the countries over which he rules, Meshach and Tubal were countries north of Syria. Rosh was not the modern Russia, nor Rosh on the borders of Elam, but was probably some land in the north on Ezekiel's extreme northern horizon. Togarmah is probably an Armenian name. Paras is very probably the Parsua of the Assyrian inscriptions, and Comer has been very plausibly identified with a Cimmerian people near the Black Sea, designated on the inscriptions of Assurbanipal, by the name Gumur. Hence the wild barbarian host which Ezekiel here pictures represent in his thought the entire heathen world, and their overthrow marks the establishment of Jehovah's authority over the whole world to its uttermost bounds.

<sup>p</sup> 38<sup>2</sup> The words, land of Magog, which are found in the Heb., appear to be due simply to a corruption and repetition of the preceding word, and in <sup>3</sup> and <sup>39</sup> Gog is spoken of as the king, not of the land of Magog, but of Rosh, Meshach, and Tubal.

<sup>q</sup> 38<sup>4</sup> This rendering does not altogether fit the context. The Syr., I will gather thee, suggests a possible restoration of the Heb. text; but cf. <sup>39</sup>.

thine army, horses, and horsemen, clad in complete<sup>t</sup> armor, a mighty host with shield and buckler, all of them armed with swords.<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>Paras, Cush, and Put with them, all with buckler and helmet, "Gomer and all its hordes, the house of Togarmah, from the extreme<sup>t</sup> north, and all his hordes, many peoples with thee. <sup>7</sup>Be prepared, yea, hold thyself ready, thou and all thy host assembled with thee, and be a reserve for me<sup>u</sup>, <sup>8</sup>after many days thou wilt be mustered forth, after<sup>v</sup> many years thou shalt come against<sup>w</sup> the land that has been restored from desolation, to a people<sup>x</sup> gathered from many nations, against the mountains of Israel which were a continual desolation; but she has been brought out from the nations,<sup>y</sup> and all of them are dwelling in safety. <sup>9</sup>Thou shalt go up like a storm, like a cloud shalt thou cover the land,<sup>z</sup> thou and all thy host, and the many peoples with thee."

<sup>10</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: "On that day plans<sup>a</sup> will come into thy mind and thou wilt form an evil design,<sup>b</sup> and say, I will go up into a land of villages, I will go to those who are friendly, who dwell in security, all of them, dwelling without walls, and having no bars or gates—<sup>c</sup>to take spoil, to carry off prey, to turn thy hand against the wastes that have been repopled, against the people gathered from the nations, having acquired<sup>d</sup> possessions and property, dwelling at the centre of the earth. <sup>13</sup>Sheba and Dedan and their merchants,<sup>e</sup> Tarshish and all her traders will say to thee, Art thou come to get spoil? Hast thou gathered thy host to carry off spoil, to take silver and gold, to seize possessions and property, to gather much plunder?"

<sup>14</sup>Therefore prophesy, O son of man, and say to Gog, "Thus saith Jehovah: "Wilt thou not at that time, when my people Israel are dwelling in security, bestir thy self,<sup>f</sup> <sup>15</sup>and come from thy place, from the extreme north, thou and many peoples with thee, all riding on horses, a mighty host, a vast army?<sup>g</sup> <sup>16</sup>And wilt thou not come up after many days against my people Israel like a cloud to cover the land? Yea, I will bring thee up against my land, that the nations may know what I am, when through thee I show myself to be holy in their sight."<sup>h</sup>"

<sup>17</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: 'Art thou not he of whom I declared in former days, through my servants, the prophets of Israel, who in those days prophesied through the years<sup>i</sup> that I would bring thee against them?<sup>j</sup> <sup>18</sup>And on that day, the day when Gog cometh against the land of Israel,' is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah, 'then will my fury be thoroughly aroused,<sup>k</sup> <sup>19</sup>yea, in my

Their
motive merely plunder

Jeho-
val's motive

Overthrow
of these heathen
powers
the fulfilment
of
prophecy

<sup>a</sup> 38<sup>4</sup> So Gk. and Lat., which have evidently retained the original.

<sup>b</sup> 38<sup>4</sup> Lit., take hold of swords.

<sup>c</sup> 38<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and the parallel in <sup>16</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 38<sup>7</sup> So Gk. supported by the subsequent context. Heb., to them.

<sup>e</sup> 38<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>f</sup> 38<sup>8</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the context.

<sup>g</sup> 38<sup>8</sup> Supplying the antecedent implied by the form of the participle.

<sup>h</sup> 38<sup>9</sup> This clause is not found in the Syr. and may be secondary.

<sup>i</sup> 38<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, thou shall be.

<sup>j</sup> 38<sup>10</sup> Lit., things, or words.

<sup>k</sup> 38<sup>12</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ.

<sup>l</sup> 38<sup>13</sup> Slightly restoring the Heb., which reads merchants of Tarshish. These nations were the great traders of antiquity and therefore especially rich in plunder.

<sup>m</sup> 38<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb., thou shall know.

<sup>n</sup> 38<sup>16</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds, O Gog.

<sup>o</sup> 38<sup>17</sup> Syr., During these years.

<sup>p</sup> 38<sup>17</sup> I. e., the Hebrews.

<sup>q</sup> 38<sup>18</sup> Lit., my fury shall go up in my nostrils.

jealousy, the heat of my wrath I declare: Verily on that day there shall be a great earthquake upon the land of Israel; <sup>20</sup>all the fishes of the sea and the birds of the heavens, and the beasts of the fields, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all men, who are on the face of the earth, shall tremble at my presence. And the mountains shall be torn apart and the cliffs shall topple over, and every wall shall fall to the ground. <sup>21</sup>And I will summon every terror against him,' is the oracle of Jehovah; 'every man's sword shall be against his brother.<sup>i</sup> <sup>22</sup>And with pestilence and with blood will I enter into judgment against him; and I will rain upon him and upon his hordes and upon the many peoples that are with him, an overflowing flood, and hailstones, fire, and brimstone. <sup>23</sup>And I will show my greatness and sanctity in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am Jehovah.'

<sup>39</sup> <sup>1</sup>And thou, Son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, 'Thus saith Jehovah: "Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, prince of Rosh, Meshach and Tubal; <sup>2</sup>and I will turn thee about and lead thee forth, and will cause thee to come up from the extreme north, and I will bring thee against the mountains of Israel; <sup>3</sup>And I will smite thy bow from thy left hand, and will cause the arrows to fall from thy right hand. <sup>4</sup>Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel—thou, and all thy hordes, and the peoples that are with thee. I will give thee to the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field to be devoured. <sup>5</sup>Thou shalt fall upon the open field; for I have spoken it," saith Jehovah. <sup>6</sup>"And I will send a fire on Gog,<sup>j</sup> and on those who dwell securely in the coast-lands; and they shall know that I am Jehovah. <sup>7</sup>And my holy name will I make known in the midst of my people Israel; neither will I suffer my holy name to be profaned any more; and the nations shall know that I, Jehovah, am holy in Israel.

<sup>8</sup>Behold, it cometh, and it shall be done," is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah; "this is the day of which I have spoken. <sup>9</sup>And they who dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall make fires of the weapons, and burn them, both the bucklers and the shields, the bows and arrows, the pikes and spears, and they shall use them as firewood seven years, <sup>10</sup>so that they shall take no wood out of the forests; for they shall use the weapons as firewood; and they shall plunder those who plundered them, and prey upon those who preyed upon them, is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>11</sup>And in that day I will give to Gog a renowned<sup>k</sup> place as a grave in Israel, the valley of Abarim<sup>l</sup> on the east of the sea; and there shall they bury Gog and his multitude; and they shall call it the valley of Hamon-Gog.<sup>m</sup> <sup>12</sup>And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying them, that they may cleanse the land. <sup>13</sup>Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall bring to them renown in the day when I show forth my glory," is the oracle of Je-

<sup>i</sup> 38<sup>21</sup> So Gk. Heb., a sword on all my mountains.

<sup>j</sup> 39<sup>1</sup> So Gk. Heb., Magog.

<sup>k</sup> 39<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Lat. Heb., place there, but the difference is simply one of vocalization. The place was to be rendered memorable by the burial there of the heathen host.

<sup>l</sup> 39<sup>1</sup> Slightly revising the Heb., which reads, of the passers through. Abarim was the name of the Moabite highland east of the northern end of the Dead Sea. Cf. Nu. 27<sup>12</sup>, Dt. 32<sup>19</sup>, Jer. 22<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 39<sup>1</sup> I. e., multitude of Gog. A scribe, possibly trying to explain the name of the valley, has added, and it shall stop those who pass through. The Gk., they shall build up the mouth of the valley round about, may perhaps preserve an original reading.

By the completeness of the disaster Jehovah shall be vindicated

Extent of the destruction

Burial of the host

hovah. <sup>14</sup>"And they shall set apart men who shall be continually employed in passing through the land, and in bringing<sup>n</sup> those who remain on the face of the land in order to cleanse it," is the oracle of Jehovah. "After the end of seven months they shall search. <sup>15</sup>And they who pass through the land shall pass through, and when anyone sees a man's bone, he shall set up a sign by it until the buriers bury it in the valley of Hamon-Gog. <sup>16</sup>And Hamonah shall also be the name of a city.<sup>o</sup> Thus they shall cleanse the land."

<sup>17</sup>And thou, son of man, speak to birds of every sort and to every beast of the field, 'Thus saith Jehovah:<sup>p</sup> "Assemble, and come; gather from every side to my sacrifice, that I am about to sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh and drink blood. <sup>18</sup>Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, of goats, and of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan. <sup>19</sup>And ye shall eat fat till ye be full and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrificial feast which I have prepared for you. <sup>20</sup>And ye shall be filled at my table with horses and riders, with mighty men and all men of war," is the oracle of Jehovah.

<sup>21</sup>"Thus I will establish my glory among the nations; and all the nations shall see the judgment which I execute, and the hand which I lay upon them. <sup>22</sup>So the house of Israel shall know that I am their God, from that day and forward. <sup>23</sup>And the nations shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity, because they trespassed against me, and I hid my face from them; so I gave them into the hands of their adversaries and they all fell by the sword; <sup>24</sup>according to their uncleanness, and according to their transgressions I punished them, and hid my face from them."

<sup>25</sup>Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah; 'Now I will bring back the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel; and I will be jealous for my holy name. <sup>26</sup>And they shall forget<sup>q</sup> their shame and all their infidelity which they showed toward me, when they dwell securely in their land, with none to make them afraid, <sup>27</sup>when I bring them back from the peoples, and gather them out of the lands of their enemies, and through them show my sanctity in the sight of many<sup>r</sup> nations. <sup>28</sup>And they shall know that I am Jehovah their God, in that I caused them to go into captivity among the nations, and have gathered them to their own land; and I will leave none of them any more there; <sup>29</sup>neither will I hide my face any longer from them; for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel,' is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.

The
ghastly feast

Effect of this signal demonstration

Revelation
of Jehovah's
character
and gracious
purpose

<sup>n</sup> 39<sup>14</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb. adds the meaningless gloss, those who pass through.

<sup>o</sup> 39<sup>16</sup> This sentence is probably secondary. It may be a late scribe's attempt to identify Scythopolis.

<sup>p</sup> 39<sup>17</sup> So Syr. and the demands of the context. A scribe by mistake has inserted this clause in Heb. after, son of man.

<sup>q</sup> 39<sup>26</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. to conform to the context. Traditional Heb. text, bear.

<sup>r</sup> 39<sup>27</sup> Gk. omits, many.

III

SONGS OVER BABYLON'S APPROACHING FALL

§ 148. Prediction of Babylon's Fall, Is. 13

Rallying the hosts against Babylon

Effect of their advance

Is. 13 <sup>a</sup>Upon a treeless mountain lift up a signal,<sup>a</sup> raise a cry to them,<sup>b</sup> Wave the hand that they may enter the princely gates.<sup>c</sup> <sup>d</sup>I myself have given command to my consecrated ones, to execute my wrath,<sup>d</sup> I have also summoned my heroes, my proudly exultant<sup>e</sup> ones.

<sup>f</sup>Hark, a tumult on the mountains, as of a mighty multitude!
Hark, an uproar of kingdoms, of gathered nations!
It is Jehovah of hosts mustering the martial hosts.

<sup>g</sup>They are coming from a distant land, from the end of heaven, Jehovah and his instruments of wrath, to destroy the whole earth.
<sup>h</sup>Wail, for Jehovah's day is at hand; as destruction from the Almighty Destroyer it comes.

<sup>i</sup>Therefore all hands hang down helpless,<sup>g</sup>
Therefore every human heart doth melt,<sup>j</sup> and men are dismayed.

---

§ 148 The half-century represented by the Babylonian exile was marked by but one event deemed worthy of record—the liberation of Jehoiachin from prison by Evil-merodach on his accession to the throne of Babylon in 561 B.C. For most of the surviving members of the Jewish race, the Babylonian period was one of mingled discouragement and hope. While Chaldeans continued to rule, there was little prospect of the restoration which Ezek. had proclaimed. Inasmuch as Babylon was the great bar in the way of Israel's hopes, the Jews in the homeland, as well as the exiles, viewed with satisfaction and thanksgiving the weakness of the empire during its closing years. Its last king, Nabonidus, was more successful as an antiquarian than as a ruler. He was more interested in excavating ancient temples than in maintaining the integrity of his empire. Meantime Cyrus the Persian had overthrown the older Medean conquerors and was rapidly building up in the north a great empire, which promised soon to absorb that of the Chaldeans.

As ever the Heb. prophets watched the political horizon with the closest scrutiny, and were quick to interpret the divine purpose unfolding in human history. Babylon's downfall meant to the Jews the opening of a new door of opportunity. Ezek. had regarded the Babylonians as Jehovah's agents of judgment and nowhere predicted their overthrow, although that was essential for the realization of the hopes he carried. The present prophecy and that which follows clearly come from a later period in the exile, when the injustice of Babylon's treatment of captive peoples had become more glaringly apparent. Its author also, like Ezek., has nothing to say about the guilt of the Jews, but, like Nahum, sees in the overthrow of Judah's oppressors the signal evidence of Jehovah's rulership of the world.

In their literary form Is. 13, 14 are among the strongest products of the Heb. prophets. Each, in its original form, was written in the impassioned five-beat measure, and apparently in strophes of seven lines each. The name of the author is unknown. They have many literary points of contact with II Is., but the thought is much more nationalistic and less spiritual. Also in Is. 47, which deals with the same theme, Babylon's downfall is not regarded as something yet to take place but is already an accomplished fact. The date of these prophecies therefore may be fixed as not long before Babylon's fall in 538 B.C.

To the superscription, An oracle on Babylon, a later scribe has added the words, which Isaiah the son of Amoz saw. In <sup>k</sup> the text has in part been lost, but otherwise the prophecy in 13 is remarkably well preserved.

<sup>a</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> I. e., so that the signal could be seen.

<sup>b</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> I. e., to Jehovah's agents of judgment, the Medes and Persians under Cyrus.

<sup>c</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> Lit., the gates of the princes. I. e., the lordly Babylonians.

<sup>d</sup> 13<sup>3</sup> Transferring, for metrical and logical reasons, the clause, to execute my wrath, from the second to the first line.

<sup>e</sup> 13<sup>3</sup> I. e., exulting in their pride and strength.

<sup>f</sup> 13<sup>5</sup> The Heb. contains a play on words, shod mishshadai.

<sup>g</sup> 13<sup>7</sup> This line is short, and apparently a word has been lost at the end, as also in the following line.

Pains and throes seize them; like a woman in travail they writhe;
Astounded they gaze at each other; their faces glow like flames.

<sup>9</sup>Behold, Jehovah<sup>h</sup> cometh, pitiless, with fury and burning anger,
To make the earth a desolation, and to destroy the sinners thereon.

Jeho-
vah's advent

<sup>10</sup>For the heavens<sup>i</sup> and its Orions cease to shed their beams,
The sun is darkened at his rising, and the moon gives no brilliant light.

<sup>11</sup>I will punish the earth for its wickedness, and the wicked for their iniquity,
I will still the arrogance of the proud, and lay low the presumption of tyrants.

<sup>12</sup>I will make mortals rarer than gold, and men than the fine gold of Ophir.

<sup>13</sup>Therefore I will make heaven tremble, and the earth shall shake in its place,

His day of
judgment

Because of the fury of Jehovah of hosts, and in the day of his burning anger.

<sup>14</sup>And then like a hunted gazelle, or a sheep with none to fold them,

They will turn each to his own people, and flee each to his own land;

<sup>15</sup>Whoever is found will be thrust through, and whoever is caught will fall by the sword,

<sup>16</sup>And their children shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes.<sup>j</sup>

Their houses shall be plundered, and their wives shall be ravished.

<sup>17</sup>Behold, I stir up against them the Medes,

Horrors of Babylon's
conquest

Who consider not silver, and take no pleasure in gold,

<sup>18</sup>[They lay hold on] bow [and spear, they are cruel],

[They break in pieces all] the young men, [and the maidens] shall be dashed in pieces.<sup>k</sup>

On children they will look with no pity, they have no compassion on the fruit of the womb,

<sup>19</sup>And Babylon, the most beautiful of kingdoms, the proud glory<sup>l</sup> of the Chaldeans shall be,

As when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah.

<sup>20</sup>It shall be uninhabited forever, and tenantless age after age;

Effects
of that conquest

No nomad shall pitch there his tent, nor shepherds let their flocks lie down
there,

<sup>21</sup>But wild cats<sup>m</sup> shall lie down here, and their houses shall be full of jackals;<sup>n</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 13<sup>9</sup> Heb., day of Jehovah, probably taken from <sup>e</sup> by a scribe.

<sup>i</sup> 13<sup>10</sup> Heb., stars of heaven, but Orion was one of the heavenly constellations, so that the original probably read as above.

<sup>j</sup> 13<sup>16</sup> This line lacks a word to make the metre complete.

<sup>k</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> Only fragments of this vs. are preserved, and these fragments do not cohere, for a masculine noun stands in conjunction which is in a feminine form. The standard Heb. text reads simply, and bows, youths, they (feminine) shall be ravished. The above conjectural reconstruction, based on Jer. 50<sup>2</sup>, 51<sup>20-2</sup>, was suggested by Duhm and Marti.

<sup>l</sup> 13<sup>19</sup> Lit., beauty of pride.

<sup>m</sup> 13<sup>21</sup> The identification of the animals mentioned in this vs. is doubtful. A derivation of the first suggests that it means desert-dwellers. The above reading is based upon the meaning of the word in the Arab.

<sup>n</sup> 13<sup>21</sup> Sometimes translated, hyenas.

Ostriches shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there, <sup>22</sup>Howling beasts shall cry to each other in its castles, and wolves in its revelling halls;
 Its time is near at hand, its day shall not be extended.

§ 149. Exultation over Babylon's Downfall, Is. 14<sup>1-21</sup>

Uni-
ver-sal peace
and rejoicing
over Babylon's
fall

Is. 14 <sup>4</sup>How still the oppressor hath become, stilled too the insolent raging!<sup>10</sup> <sup>5</sup>Jehovah hath broken the staff of the wicked, the sceptre of tyrants, <sup>6</sup>That smote peoples in fury, with stroke unceasing,
 That trampled down the nations in anger, unchecked was his trampling!<sup>11</sup> <sup>7</sup>All the earth was at rest and quiet, they break out into triumphant songs, <sup>8</sup>Even the pine trees rejoice over thee, and Lebanon's cedars [saying],
 Now that thou art at rest, no woodman comes up against us.

Baby-
lon's reception
in Sheol

<sup>9</sup>Sheol beneath is stirred on thy account, to greet thy coming,
 Arousing for thee the shades, all the leaders<sup>9</sup> of the earth,
 Making rise from their thrones all the kings of the nations, <sup>10</sup>All of them make answer, and say to thee:
 Thou too art powerless like us, to our level hast thou been brought!
<sup>11</sup>Thy majesty is brought down to Sheol, the melody of thy harps;
 Beneath thee corruption is spread, and thy covering<sup>t</sup> is worms.

Contrast
with earlier ambitions

<sup>12</sup>How art thou fallen from heaven, radiant one,<sup>s</sup> son of the dawn!
 How<sup>t</sup> art thou struck down to the ground, prostrate upon corpses!<sup>11</sup> <sup>13</sup>And thou hast said in thy heart, I will scale the heavens, Above the stars of God I will exalt my throne,

---

§ 149 This chapter is closely connected with the preceding, both in theme, literary form, and date. It is practically certain that both chapters come from the same author. The first proclaims, in the form of a prediction, the fall of Babylon, while the second announces the same fact in the graphic form of a song of triumph over the fallen city. This was a common motif, especially with the prophets of this period. It seems clear, however, that Babylon's downfall is still future rather than past. The author also follows Ezek. (Cf. Ezek. 32) in picturing the life of the dying kingdom in Sheol, the abode of the shades. Language and literary figures are exceedingly graphic and original. The prophecy is the product of genius as well as of careful, artistic elaboration. Its dominant thought is, of course, that Jehovah, in overthrowing their Chaldean masters, was preparing the way for the triumphant restoration of his people. To the powerful ancient poem a later editor has added a prologue embodying this thought: For Jehovah will have compassion upon Jacob, and will yet again choose Israel, and establish them upon their own land; and resident aliens will join them, and attach themselves to the house of Jacob. And the people shall take them and bring them to their place, and the house of Israel shall enter into possession of them, in Jehovah's land, as male and female servants, and they will become the captives of their captives, and they shall rule over their taskmasters.

And then Jehovah, having given thee rest from thy painful service and from thy unrest, and from the hard slavery, wherein thou wast made to serve, thou wilt take up this taunt-song over the king of Babylon, and say: This prologue was probably added in the post-exilic period, for it reflects the ideas of the Is. II. and the hope that was cherished during the early half of the Persian period.

<sup>o</sup> 14<sup>4</sup> Following the Gk., Syr., and Targ. in correcting the Heb. text, which is untranslatable.

<sup>p</sup> 14<sup>6</sup> Following the Targ. in correcting a slight error in the Heb.

<sup>q</sup> 14<sup>9</sup> Lit., he goats, or wethers, i. e., the leaders of the flock. Cf. Jer. 50<sup>8</sup>, Zech. 10<sup>9</sup>. The shades are here conceived of, like the Titans of Gk. mythology, as mighty beings who once lived on earth but are now condemned to dwell in Sheol.

<sup>r</sup> 14<sup>11</sup> Following the reading of a large number of MSS. Accepted Heb., thy coverings.

<sup>s</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> Following the reading of the Gk. and Lat. The reference is to the morning star, the Lucifer of Roman mythology.

<sup>t</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> Adding the word, how, which is required by the metre and sense.

<sup>u</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. text, which reads, nations.

EXULTATION OVER BABYLON'S DOWNFALL [Is. 14<sup>13</sup>

And I will sit on the mountain of assembly, in the furthermost north,<sup>v</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will mount above the lofty banks of cloud, I will be like the Most High.
<sup>15</sup>Yet to Sheol art thou brought down, to the lowest depths of the pit!<sup>w</sup>

<sup>16</sup>They that see thee, gaze at thee, they look at thee closely, with the question :
 Is this he who startled the earth, who made kingdoms shake, <sup>17</sup>Who made the habitable world like a desert, and broke down its<sup>x</sup> cities,
 Who let not his captives go free<sup>y</sup> to their homes, <sup>18</sup>all the kings of the nations ?
 All of them repose in honor, each in his abode, <sup>19</sup>But thou art cast down among the slain, among those who are pierced with
 the sword,
 Who go down to the very foundations of the pit,<sup>z</sup> as a carcass, trodden under foot.

[How art thou cut off] from thy grave, as a scion abhorred,<sup>a</sup>
 [How thou liest there, without honor] clothed [with shame!]

<sup>20</sup>[As for thy fathers],<sup>b</sup> thou mayest not be joined in burial with them.
 Because thou hast wasted thy land and slain thy people.
 May it never again be named, the race of evildoers!

<sup>21</sup>For his sons prepare shambles, because of the guilt of their fathers,<sup>c</sup>
 That they rise not and possess the earth and fill the whole world.<sup>d</sup>

Contrast
with former hopes

Disgraced even in death

<sup>v</sup> 14<sup>13</sup> This passage is rich in its suggestion regarding the popular Heb. beliefs. As in Ezek. the Heb. Olympus was on a mountain far in the north, possibly at the North Pole, about which the stars seemed to circle.

<sup>w</sup> 14<sup>15</sup> A synonym for Sheol.

<sup>x</sup> 14<sup>17</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>y</sup> 14<sup>17</sup> Again emending the Heb. to conform to the context.

<sup>z</sup> 14<sup>19</sup> Lit., stones of the pit.

<sup>a</sup> 14<sup>19</sup> This vs. has been almost hopelessly corrupted through the telescoping of three or four lines. The first two lines can be readily restored, as they have been entirely preserved in the text. Of the two remaining lines required by the strophic structure of the poem, only two fragments are left, from thy grave as a scion abhorred, and, clothed. The conjectural reconstruction followed above is that of Duhm.

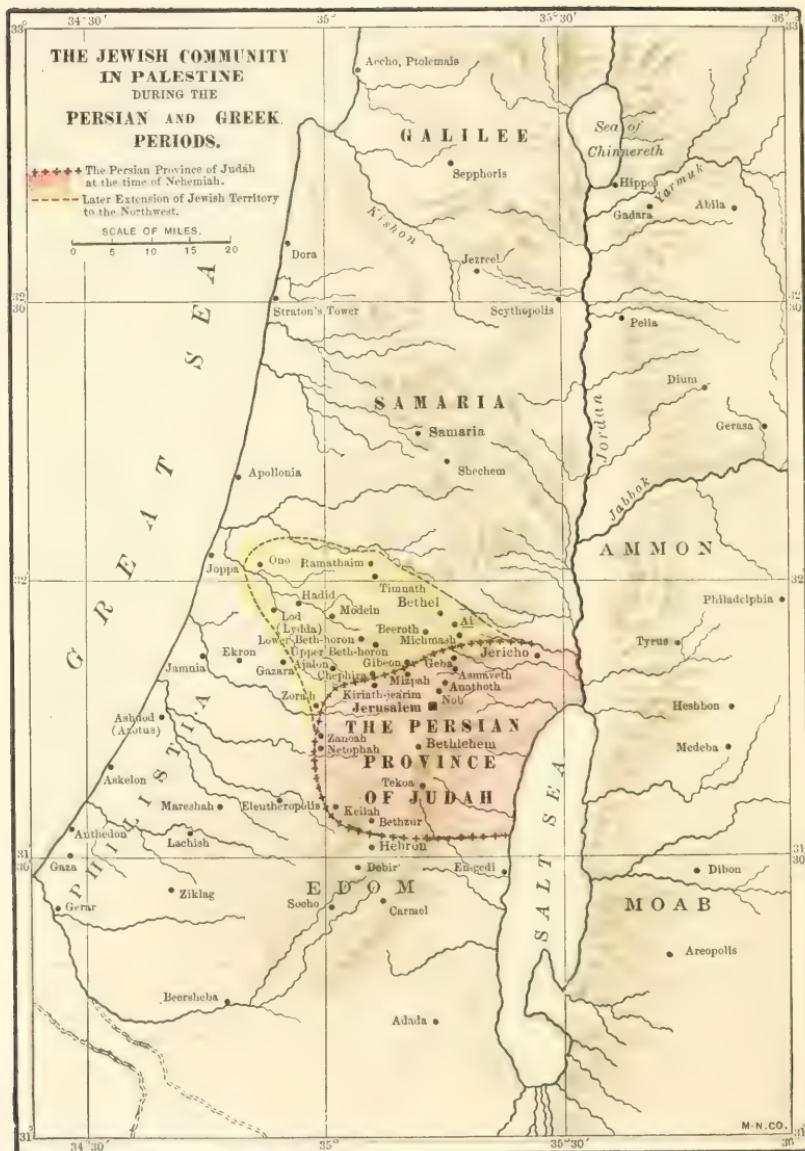

<sup>b</sup> 14<sup>20</sup> This vs., in common with the preceding, has suffered through transmission. The word, fathers, is implied by the context and is required by the metre.

<sup>c</sup> 14<sup>21</sup> So Gk.

<sup>d</sup> 14<sup>21</sup> Lit., face of the habitable world. A scribe has added, cities, in the Heb.

THE PROPHETS OF THE PERSIAN PERIOD

THE PROPHETS OF THE PERSIAN PERIOD

I

THE ADDRESSES OF HAGGAI TO THE TEMPLE BUILDERS

§ 150. The Call to Rebuild the Temple, Hag. 1<sup>1-15a</sup>

Hag. 1 <sup>1</sup>In the second year of Darius the king, in the first day of the sixth month, this word of Jehovah came by Haggai the prophet: Speak to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Jehozadak the high priest, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, "This people say: The time has not yet come to rebuild the temple of Jehovah." <sup>3</sup>Then this word of Jehovah came by Haggai the prophet: <sup>4</sup>Is it a time

Jehovah's
disapproval of the delay in rebuilding
the temple

The Addresses of Haggai.—After the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. the city appears to have lain for a time in ruins, but the people from the neighboring cities continued to present their offerings at the great rock altar which stood before the ruined temple. Cf. Introd., p. 26. In time the Jews who had found temporary refuge on the borders of Egypt began to return, so that probably by the middle of the Babylonian period Jews were to be found living among the ruins of the ancient city.

When Cyrus conquered Babylon in 538 B.C. he gave full permission, and even encouraged the conquered peoples whom he found there to return to their homes and rebuild their cities and temples; but the attractions and opportunities in Babylon itself, the terrors of the long journey across the desert, and, above all, the barren hills and malicious foes of Palestine deterred the majority of the Jewish exiles in the East. As has been shown (Vol. II, notes §§ 144, 165), the census in Ezra 2 clearly represents the population of the Judean community during the latter part of the Persian period rather than the list of those who returned immediately after 538 B.C. The conditions of the Judean community reflected in the sermons of Hag. and Zech. and the memories of Nehemiah indicate conclusively that there had been no general return of the exiles from Babylon. Rather the hope of a general return was still in the future.

The audience to which the prophets Hag. and Zech. spoke was the little community which had grown up about the ruins of the temple. With Sheshbazzar and Zerubbabel, the descendants of the Judean royal house, who had been appointed governors of the Judean community, doubtless a few exiles came back, preferring to share the hardships of the life in Palestine rather than the ease and plenty of Babylonia. The reference in Zech. 6<sup>10</sup> to the three men of the captivity who had evidently returned, bringing presents from the Jews in Babylon, indicates that the news of the attempt to rebuild the temple had aroused the interest of certain of the distant exiles. The eighteen years of Persian rule had brought, however, only discouragement and disaster to those in Palestine. The death of Cambyses, the son of Cyrus, in 521 B.C., was the occasion of a general revolt throughout the Persian empire. The Babylonians, the Susanians, and the Medes each revolted. There seemed little hope that Darius, who had been raised to the kingship by the nobles, would ever succeed in restoring and maintaining the integrity of the empire. From the allusions in the prophecies of both Hag. and Zech. it is evident that these great political upheavals were among the factors that aroused the prophets and people to action and kindled within them the hopes of independence and of re-establishing a powerful Jewish kingdom.

§ 150 Haggai began his preaching in September, 520 B.C., when the rebellions in the Persian empire were still at their height. As a practical man of affairs he appealed to the people with arguments which they could easily understand and with difficulty confute. The belief that misfortune was a sign of divine displeasure was still universally accepted. The reason which he urged for that divine displeasure seemed obvious. The appeal, therefore, was to their personal interests as well as to their patriotism and loyalty to Jehovah. The plan which he proposed was also definite and practicable. The great foundation stones of the original temple were doubtless still standing. The task was simply to rebuild the upper walls and to provide the roof, porch, and interior furnishings. Response on the part of the people was instantaneous. Thus at the instigation of a layman-prophet the second temple, destined to play such an important rôle in the history of Judaism, began to rise above the ruins of ancient Jerusalem.

for you yourselves to dwell in your own ceiled houses, while this temple lies in ruins? <sup>5</sup>Now therefore, thus saith Jehovah of hosts, 'Consider your past experiences. <sup>6</sup>Ye sow much, but bring in little; ye eat, but ye do not have enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled; ye clothe yourselves, but not so as to be warm; and he that earneth wages, earneth wages in a bag with holes.'

Re-build
the temple
and prosperity
will follow

<sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, 'Consider your experiences. <sup>8</sup>Go up to the mountains, and bring wood and rebuild the temple; then I will be pleased with it, and I will reveal my glory,' saith Jehovah. <sup>9</sup>'Ye looked for much, and it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I blew upon it. Why?' saith Jehovah of hosts. 'Because of my temple that lieth in ruins, while ye are running each to his own house. <sup>10</sup>Therefore the heavens withhold the dew, and the earth withholdeth its fruit. <sup>11</sup>And I have called forth a drought upon the land and upon the mountains, and upon the grain and the new wine and the oil and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men and animals, and upon all the labor of the hands.'

Initia-
tion of
the
work

<sup>12</sup>Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel and Joshua the son of Jehozadak the high priest, with all the rest of the people, obeyed the command of Jehovah their God and the words of Haggai the prophet, as Jehovah their God had sent him to them. The people also feared before Jehovah. <sup>13</sup>And Jehovah stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Jehozadak the high priest, and the spirit of all the rest of the people, so that they came and worked on the temple of Jehovah of hosts, their God, <sup>14</sup>in the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month.

§ 151. The Future Glory of the New Temple, Hag. 1<sup>15b</sup>-2<sup>9</sup>

Assur-
ance
of Jehovah's
approval

Hag. 1 <sup>15b</sup>In the second year of Darius the king, <sup>2</sup>on the twenty-first day of the seventh month, this word from Jehovah came by Haggai the prophet: <sup>3</sup>'Speak to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua, the son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and to all<sup>a</sup> the remnant of the people, saying, <sup>4</sup>Who is left among you that saw this temple in its former glory? and how do you see it now? <sup>5</sup>Is it not in your eyes as nothing? <sup>6</sup>Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel,' is the oracle of Jehovah; 'and be strong, O Joshua, son of Jehozadak, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land,' is the oracle of Jehovah, and work, for I am with you, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts, <sup>7</sup>and<sup>b</sup> my spirit abideth in your midst; fear not.'

Promises of rich blessings

<sup>c</sup>For thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'Yet a little while, and I will shake<sup>c</sup> the

---

§ 151 As the work of rebuilding the temple progressed, many began to compare the necessarily rude equipment of the structure that was rising with the traditional glories of Solomon's sanctuary. To overcome the influence of this discouraging comparison, Hag. again, early in November of the same year, 520 B.C., addressed the rulers and the people urging them not to lose courage, and promising them that Jehovah, the supreme ruler of the universe, would care for the glory of the new temple. Hag. also voices the popular hope, strong at this time, that the ultimate result of the upheaval of the nations would be that again, as in the days of Solomon, the wealth of distant nations would come pouring into Jerusalem, and that when once the temple was rebuilt prosperity would take the place of grinding poverty.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>22</sup> Following the Gk. in restoring, all, as in 1<sup>12</sup>, 14.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>23</sup> Following the Gk. An awkward scribal gloss has been inserted in the Heb., the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>24</sup> Two variant readings have evidently here been combined in the Heb. The one is that found in the Gk., Yet once again will I shake. The other, Yet a little and I will shake, is probably the original reading of the Heb.

heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land. <sup>7</sup>And I will shake all nations, and the precious things<sup>d</sup> of all nations shall come; and I will fill this temple with glory,' saith Jehovah of hosts. <sup>8</sup>'The silver is mine, and the gold is mine,' is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts. <sup>9</sup>'The later glory of this temple shall be greater than the former,' saith Jehovah of hosts; 'and in this place will I grant prosperity,' is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts.

§ 152. Jehovah's Former Displeasure and the New Promise of Blessings, Hag. 2<sup>10-13</sup>

Hag. 2 <sup>10</sup>In the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, this word of Jehovah came by Haggai the prophet: <sup>11</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'Ask of the priests a decision, saying, <sup>12</sup>If one bear holy flesh<sup>e</sup> in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any food, shall it become holy?' <sup>13</sup>And the priests answered and said, No. <sup>14</sup>Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by reason of a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. <sup>15</sup>Then answered Haggai and said, So is this people and so is this nation before me, is the oracle of Jehovah; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

<sup>15</sup>And now, I pray you, think back from this day, before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of Jehovah: <sup>16</sup>how were ye? <sup>f</sup> When ye came<sup>g</sup> to a heap of twenty measures, there were but ten; when ye came to the wine vat to draw out fifty vessels, there were but twenty. <sup>17</sup>I smote with blasting and with mildew and with hail all the work of your hands; yet ye turned<sup>h</sup> not to me, is the oracle of Jehovah. <sup>18</sup>Think back from this day, I think! <sup>19</sup>Is the seed yet in the granary, yea, the vine and the fig tree and the pomegranate and the olive tree have not brought forth; from this day will I bless you.

Past
pollution
of the nation

Its cause
the failure
to rebuild
the temple

§ 153. Overthrow of the Heathen and the Exaltation of Zerubbabel, Hag. 2<sup>20-23</sup>

Hag. 2 <sup>20</sup>This word of Jehovah came the second time to Haggai in the twenty-fourth day of the month: <sup>21</sup>Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah and say: 'I will shake the heavens and the earth; <sup>22</sup>and I will overthrow the

Worldwide upheaval

<sup>d</sup> 27 Following the Gk. as the context demands.

§ 152 Haggai followed very closely the pulse of the Jewish community. Each sign of discouragement was met with a message of encouragement. His reasoning is on the same level as that of the common people. Their misfortunes he attributes to the fact that the polluted sanctuary had hitherto defiled the community in the midst of which it stood, but henceforth it shall be a purifying agent. Therefore the Jews now have good ground to expect the proofs of Jehovah's favor.

The date of this prophecy was early in January, 519 B.C.

<sup>e</sup> 212 I. e., flesh used in sacrifice.

<sup>f</sup> 215 Restoring the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the Gk., which reads, who were ye.

<sup>g</sup> 216 Slightly revising the punctuation of the Heb. in accord with 1<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 217 Following the Gk. and Am. 4<sup>9</sup> in restoring the Heb.

<sup>i</sup> 218 At this point a detailed and distracting chronological note has been introduced in the Heb., from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month since the day that the foundation of Jehovah's temple was laid.

§ 153 Haggai here voices the popular hope that filled the minds of the patriotic members of the community. The upheavals in the Persian empire seemed to them to be but the beginning of that overthrow of heathenism which was deemed necessary to the establishment of Jewish rule in the world. Haggai is purposely vague in his prediction regarding Zerubbabel, the dethrone of kingdoms; and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the nations; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those who ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, each by the sword of his brother.

Rôle of Zerubbabbel

<sup>23</sup> In that day,' is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts. 'I will take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant,<sup>j</sup> the son of Shealtiel,' is Jehovah's oracle, 'and will make thee as a seal-ring,<sup>k</sup> for I have chosen thee,' is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts.

II

ZECHARIAH'S SERMONS AND VISIONS

§ 154. The Lesson from the Past, Zech. 1<sup>1-5</sup>

Jeho-
vah's
promises
and laws
alone
abide

Zech. 1 <sup>1</sup>In the eighth month in the second year of Darius, this word of Jehovah came to the prophet Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo: <sup>2</sup>Jehovah was greatly displeased with your fathers. <sup>3</sup>Therefore, say thou to them: 'Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: "Turn to me," saith Jehovah of hosts. <sup>4</sup>Be ye not as your fathers to whom the former prophets cried, saying, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil deeds; but they did not heed nor listen to me, saith Jehovah. <sup>5</sup>Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, do they live forever? <sup>6</sup>But did not my words and my statutes with which I charged my servants the prophets overtake your fathers? and they turned and said, Just as Jehovah of hosts purposed to do to us, according to our ways, and according to our deeds, so hath he dealt with us.'" scendant of David, about whom the national hopes gathered. As the seal-ring of the divine king he was to represent Jehovah and to play a most important part in the new régime soon to be established.

---

<sup>j</sup> <sup>23</sup> My servant is a very common term in the writings of the Persian period. Cf. Neh. 1 and Is. 40-53.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>23</sup> Cf. Jer. 22<sup>24</sup>. The seal-ring with which the owner affixed his signature to all official documents.

Zechariah's Sermons and Visions.—Zechariah's prophetic work bears the stamp of his priestly origin. In his opening and closing sermons, <sup>11-6, 7, 8</sup>, he shows himself a preacher of ethical righteousness and the master of a plain direct literary style. In his remaining sermons, however, he is chiefly concerned with the temple service and employs the apocalyptic form of prophecy. By an impressive word-symbolism, which recalls the symbolism of the priestly ritual, he presents his message of encouragement. Interpreted into plain words, his message would have been regarded as treasonable by the Persian authorities. Cf. Introd., p. 56. The carefully developed form, the obvious adaptation of form to aim, and the clear portrayal of existing conditions and problems, all indicate that these so-called visions come not from the dream state, or a trance, but are the result of careful elaboration. The messianic hopes are very similar to those of the earlier priest-prophet Ezekiel. Cf. Introd., p. 45.

§ 154. This brief sermon is dated in December, 520 B.C., a little before Haggai's last addresses. It is significant that the prophet looks backward for his message and illustration. The events of the exile had fully confirmed the truth of the teachings of the earlier prophets, even in the minds of the people who had earlier rejected them.

§ 155. Jehovah's Jealous Love for Zion, Zech. 1<sup>7-17</sup>

Zech. 1 <sup>7</sup>In the twenty-fourth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Shebat,<sup>a</sup> in the second year of Darius, this word of Jehovah came to the prophet Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo: <sup>8</sup>I saw in the night and there was a man<sup>b</sup> standing among the myrtle trees<sup>c</sup> that were in the valley-bottom, and behind him there were horses, red, sorrel, and white. <sup>9</sup>Then said I, O my Lord, what are these? And the angel who talked with me said to me, I will show you what these are. <sup>10</sup>And the man who was standing among the myrtle trees answered and said, These are they whom Jehovah hath sent to go to and fro through the earth. <sup>11</sup>And they answered the angel of Jehovah who was standing among the myrtle trees and said, We have gone up and down through the earth and behold, all the earth is still and at peace.

<sup>12</sup>Then the angel of Jehovah answered and said, O Jehovah of hosts, how long hast thou no pity for Jerusalem and the cities of Judah with which thou hast been wroth these seventy years?<sup>d</sup> <sup>13</sup>And Jehovah answered the angel who was talking with me with good words, even comforting words. <sup>14</sup>So the angel who was talking with me said to me, Proclaim now, 'Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: "I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy. <sup>15</sup>But with great wrath am I wroth with the arrogant nations; for I was but a little angry [with Israel], but they helped to make greater the calamity."<sup>e</sup> <sup>16</sup>Therefore, thus saith Jehovah: "I am turning to show mercy to Jerusalem; <sup>f</sup> my temple shall be built in it," saith Jehovah of hosts, "and a measuring line shall be stretched over Jerusalem.<sup>g</sup> <sup>17</sup>Proclaim again, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: My cities shall yet overflow with prosperity; and Jehovah shall yet comfort Zion and choose Jerusalem.'"

Report of universal
peace

Jeho-
vah's
promise yet to exalt and bless
his holy city

§ 156. Destruction of the Heathen Powers, Zech. 1<sup>18-21</sup>

Zech. 1 <sup>18</sup>Now I lifted up mine eyes and looked, and there were four horns. <sup>19</sup>And I said to the angel who was talking with me, 'What are these?' And he assured me, 'These are the horns with which he scattered Judah.'<sup>h</sup>

Israel's hostile
foes

§ 155 This first vision is dated in February, 519 B.C., when Darius's supremacy was beginning to be established in the East. It was evidently intended to dispel the disappointment of the people because the uprisings of 521-20 B.C. had not resulted in the overthrow of the Persian rule. The horsemen suggest the Persian messengers who bore the royal commands and reports throughout the empire. The prophet's message is that Jehovah still purposes to overthrow the heathen nations and to bless his people. Now that the temple is being rebuilt and Jehovah can again take up his abode in Jerusalem, its desolate ruins shall be covered with dwellings and the old prosperity will come back to the cities of Judah.

<sup>a</sup> 17 Shebat was the Babylonian name for the seventh month. Possibly this clause, or even the entire vs., is a later editorial addition. The proper name Iddo is also spelt as in Ezra 5<sup>1</sup> rather than as elsewhere in Zech.

<sup>b</sup> 18 Heb., a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood. This statement is contradictory in itself and with <sup>10, 11</sup>, and therefore must be regarded as due to a scribal error.

<sup>c</sup> 18 Gk., mountains. Cf. 6<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 12 I. e., from 586 B.C., the date of the destruction of Jerusalem, to 519 B.C., about seventy years.

<sup>e</sup> 15 Helped to evil. For the same idea, cf. Is. 10<sup>5-15</sup>, Hab. 1<sup>11, 12b, 17</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 16 Lit., I am turning to Jerusalem with mercies.

<sup>g</sup> 16 I. e., its desolate ruins shall again be purchased and filled with inhabitants.

§ 156 This vision develops the earlier promise that Jehovah would destroy the heathen nations, <sup>15</sup>. The four horns represent the four hostile peoples at the four quarters of the heavens which have attacked or still threaten Judah. The smiths represent the nations, or agencies, that are to destroy Israel's foes on every side.

<sup>h</sup> 19 The Heb. adds, Israel and Jerusalem; but in the light of the context and the parallel in <sup>20</sup> it is clear that these words are a scribal addition. They are lacking in certain Gk. codices.

Their
promised destruk-
tion

<sup>20</sup>Then Jehovah showed me four smiths. <sup>21</sup>And I said, What are these coming to do? And he said, These are the horns which scattered Judah, so that none lifted up his head; but these are come to terrify<sup>i</sup> them, to strike down the horns of the nations,<sup>j</sup> which lifted up their horn against the land of Judah<sup>k</sup> to scatter it.

Jerusalem
to be populous
and well guarded

§ 157. Promise that Jerusalem Shall be Gloriously Restored, Zech. 2

Zech. 2 <sup>1</sup>Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and there was a man with a measuring line in his hand. <sup>2</sup>Then I said, Where are you going? And he said to me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is its breadth and length. <sup>3</sup>Thereupon the angel who talked with me stood still,<sup>l</sup> and another angel went out to meet him, <sup>4</sup>and said to him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, 'Jerusalem shall be inhabited as villages without walls, because of the multitude of men and cattle in her midst. <sup>5</sup>For I,' saith Jehovah, 'will be a wall of fire round about her, and I will be the glory in the midst of her.'

Summons
to the exiles
to return

<sup>6</sup>Ho, ho,<sup>m</sup> flee from the land of the north,<sup>n</sup> is Jehovah's oracle.
For I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heavens,<sup>o</sup> is Jehovah's oracle.
<sup>7</sup>Ho, escape to Zion,<sup>p</sup> ye who dwell in Babylon.<sup>q</sup>
<sup>8</sup>For thus saith Jehovah of hosts<sup>r</sup> to the nations which plundered you:
He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of mine<sup>s</sup> eye.
<sup>9</sup>For, behold, I am about to shake my hand over them,<sup>t</sup>
And they shall be a spoil to those who served them; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>i</sup> 1st Gk., sharpen. Possibly the original read, destroy them.

<sup>j</sup> 1st Gk., four horns. Possibly the original text was simply, These are come to cast down the four horns.

<sup>k</sup> 1st Gk., Jehovah's land. This may be the original reading.

<sup>l</sup> 157 This section develops the promise in the first vision that Jehovah would bless his city and people, 1st, 17. It is therefore the complement of the preceding vision. Zech. comforts the people because the population of their city is so small and because it is protected by no encircling walls. Jehovah will himself protect it, and its population shall yet be so great that it shall spread, as does modern Jerusalem, far beyond its ancient walls.

In conclusion, the prophet breaks out into a song of exultation over the coming restoration. The theme and style strongly suggest II Is., and for this reason it has by many modern critics been regarded as a later interpolation, modelled after the writings of the II Is. As has been shown (Introd., pp. 27-29), II Is. probably followed rather than preceded Zech. The poem is also the culmination of Zechariah's predictions. Its thought is closely identical with the predictions of Hag. and Zech. which come from this period. Its literary style is also that of Zech., so that there is every reason for regarding it as the precursor of those immortal songs in II Is.

<sup>m</sup> 2nd So Gk. Heb., went forth, probably a scribal repetition of the following verb.

<sup>n</sup> 2nd The analogy with Is. 55<sup>1</sup> is very close, but the present passage is probably the older.

<sup>o</sup> 2nd I. e., from Babylon.

<sup>p</sup> 2nd Or, correcting the text as suggested by the Gk. and context, I will gather you from the four winds of heaven.

<sup>q</sup> 2nd Following the Gk. Heb., O Zion, escape.

<sup>r</sup> 2nd Through a scribal repetition, the Heb. reads, daughter of Babylon.

<sup>s</sup> 2nd What appears to be an awkward gloss, after honor hath he sent me, has here been inserted.

<sup>t</sup> 2nd Heb., his. The apple (or pupil) of the eye was that which each man guarded most carefully. Cf. Dt. 32<sup>10</sup>, Pr. 7<sup>2</sup>, Ps. 17<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 2nd For the same idea, cf. Is. 49<sup>22, 23</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 2nd Possibly this last clause and its duplicate in 11<sup>b</sup> are secondary. It also destroys the metrical harmony of the line.

<sup>10</sup>Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion, for, lo, I come,
And I will dwell in the midst of thee, is Jehovah's oracle.

<sup>11</sup>And many nations shall join themselves to Jehovah in that day,
And shall be his<sup>y</sup> people, and he<sup>w</sup> will dwell in the midst of thee,
And thou shalt know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me to thee.

<sup>12</sup>And Jehovah shall inherit Judah as his portion in the holy land,
And he shall yet comfort Zion and choose Jerusalem.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Be silent, all flesh, before Jehovah;
For he hath waked up out of his holy habitation.

Jehovah's return to dwell among his people

§ 158. Purification of the Priesthood and Nation, Zech. 3.

Zech. 3 <sup>1</sup>Then he showed me Joshua, the high priest, standing before the angel of Jehovah and the adversary standing at his right hand to accuse him. <sup>2</sup>And the angel<sup>y</sup> of Jehovah said to the adversary, Jehovah rebuke thee, O adversary; yea, Jehovah, who hath chosen Jerusalem, rebuke thee. Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? <sup>3</sup>Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments and was standing before the angel.

The polluted priesthood and nation

<sup>4</sup>And [the angel] answered and spoke to those who stood before him,<sup>z</sup> <sup>2</sup>saying, Take the filthy garments from off him, and clothe him with robes of state; <sup>5</sup>set a clean turban upon his head.<sup>a</sup> So they set<sup>b</sup> a clean turban upon his head, and clothed him with garments; and the angel of Jehovah was standing by.

Their reconssecration

<sup>6</sup>And the angel of Jehovah testified to Joshua, saying, <sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou also shalt rule<sup>c</sup> my house and shalt also keep my courts and I will give thee a place of access<sup>d</sup> among these that stand by. <sup>8</sup>Hear now, O Joshua the Promise of an established kingdom and king-dom

<sup>v</sup> 21 So Gk., Heb., my.

<sup>w</sup> 21 Following the context and a suggestion of the Gk. in correcting the, I., of the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 22 Completing the line by the aid of the exact parallel in 1<sup>7</sup>. This correction is also demanded by the metre.

§ 158 This and the following vision deal with certain problems which arose in connection with the restored temple of Israel. According to the thought of many of Zech.'s contemporaries, the priesthood and sanctuary had been defiled by the heathen during the exile. This belief is symbolized by the filthy garments worn by Joshua, who represents the temple ritual. The adversary, or Satan, figures in the same rôle as in the prologue to the book of Job. He is not conceived of as the malign enemy of mankind as in later Jewish theology, but as the regularly accredited prosecuting attorney in Jehovah's court. His duty is to call attention to the sins of mankind. There is possibly a suggestion of his later character in his zeal in pointing out the uncleanness of the high priest and in Jehovah's rebuke. The divine command to take off the filthy garments symbolized the purification of the temple and its service and the formal reinstatement of the priesthood. The obscure oracle which follows was evidently directed to Zerubbabel. The designation, Branch, here used in describing Zerubbabel as a descendant of the royal Davidic house, was eminently appropriate. The term was probably original with Zech. and was later used to describe the coming Davidic king by the prophet who added the supplementary passages in Jer. 23<sup>5</sup>, 33<sup>15</sup>. Zech. here gives command to intrust to Joshua, the priest, the precious stone which was apparently to be set in the royal diadem. This crown the prophet later, in 6<sup>9-15</sup>, commands to be made and also intrusted to the same priestly official that it might be ready for the head of Zerubbabel when the moment should come to proclaim him king. The prophecy closes with a picture of the peace and prosperity which all should enjoy under the rule of their own Davidic king.

<sup>y</sup> 32 Angel has fallen out of the Heb.

<sup>z</sup> 34 I. e., to the attendants at the divine tribunal.

<sup>a</sup> 34 So Gk. and the demands of the context. In the Heb. the marginal note, And to him he said, See, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, was introduced into the text and led to a change in the person and number of the following verb.

<sup>b</sup> 35 Again following the Gk. Heb., and I said, let them set.

<sup>c</sup> 37 Lit., judge.

<sup>d</sup> 37 I. e., Joshua should have access at all times to Jehovah's presence.

high priest, thou and thy associates who sit before me;<sup>e</sup> for they are men who are a sign;<sup>f</sup> for behold, I am about to bring forth my servant the Branch.<sup>g</sup> For, behold, the stone that I have set before Joshua; upon one stone are seven facets;<sup>h</sup> behold, I will engrave it,<sup>i</sup> saith Jehovah of hosts, 'and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day.' <sup>j</sup>In that day,' saith Jehovah of hosts, 'ye shall each invite his neighbor under the vine and under the fig tree.'

§ 159. The Supporters of the Temple Service, Zech. 4.

Zech. 4 <sup>1</sup>Then the angel who talked with me came again and waked me, as a man who is wakened out of his sleep. <sup>2</sup>And he said to me, What seest thou? And I said, I see there a candlestick, all of gold, with a bowl upon the top of it, and its seven lamps<sup>j</sup> upon it; there are seven pipes to each of the lamps, which are upon the top of it,<sup>3</sup> and two olive trees by it, one on the right side<sup>k</sup> of the bowl, and the other on its left side. <sup>4</sup>And I spoke and said to the angel who talked with me, What are these, my lord? <sup>5</sup>Then the angel who talked with me answered and said to me, Knowest thou not what these are? And I said, No, my lord. <sup>6</sup>Then he answered and spoke to me, saying, The eyes of Jehovah, which rove to and fro through the whole earth.

<sup>11</sup>Then I answered, and said to him, What are these two olive trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon its left side?<sup>l</sup> <sup>13</sup>And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these are? And I said, No, my lord. <sup>14</sup>Then said he, These are the two anointed ones, who stand by the Lord of the whole earth.

<sup>6b</sup>This is the word of Jehovah regarding<sup>l</sup> Zerubbabel, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts, <sup>7</sup>will<sup>m</sup> I make the great mountain before Zerubbabel a plain; and he shall bring forth the top stones with shoutings of, 'Grace, grace, to it.' <sup>8</sup>Moreover this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>9</sup>The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this temple; his hands shall also finish it; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Slightly correcting the text.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> I.e., an assurance of a brighter era.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Lit., eyes.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Lit., engrave its engraving. Perhaps the original added, Zerubbabel. The passages predicting his accession have been obscured by a later scribe.

<sup>11</sup> 159 This vision deals with the question of how the newly established temple service was to be supported. The golden candlestick with its seven lamps symbolized the temple service which represented Jehovah's presence in the midst of his people. The two olive trees stood for Zerubbabel, the civil head of the community, and Joshua, the high priest, who by their wealth and by their service supported the temple ritual. The independent oracle in 6<sup>b</sup>-10 has evidently been introduced out of its original context. It comes more naturally at the end of the section. It is a definite promise that Zerubbabel, who had been active in laying the foundation of the restored temple, should live to complete the building of the sacred structure.

<sup>12</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> Solomon's temple was provided with a candlestick with ten lamps, I Kgs. 7<sup>9</sup>. The late priestly law of Ex. 25<sup>31-40</sup> follows the post-exilic fashion and specifies that there shall be seven lamps. Cf. also 1 Mac. 1<sup>23</sup>, 4<sup>49</sup>, 5<sup>0</sup> and the seven-branched candlesticks pictured on the Arch of Titus.

<sup>j</sup> 4<sup>3</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. to conform with <sup>11</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> The answer to the question in <sup>11</sup> is found in <sup>13</sup>. In <sup>12</sup> a scribal amplification of the question in <sup>11</sup> has been added, And I answered the second time, and said to him, What are these two olive-branches, which are the two golden spouts, that empty the golden oil out of themselves?

<sup>l</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> Heb., to; but the context demands a slight change.

<sup>m</sup> 4<sup>7</sup> Restoring to the Heb., which is ungrammatical, elliptical, and obviously corrupt, the end of <sup>6</sup>.

Jehovah's presence
in the midst
of his people

The two leaders

Zerubb-babel to complete
the temple

sent me to you.<sup>n</sup> <sup>10</sup>For who hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel.<sup>o</sup>

§ 160. The Flying Roll, Zech. 5<sup>1-4</sup>

Zech. 5 <sup>1</sup>Then again I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and there was a flying roll. <sup>2</sup>And he said to me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; its length is twenty cubits, and its breadth ten cubits.<sup>p</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then he said to me, This is the curse that goes over the whole land; for every thief and every one who swears falsely,<sup>q</sup> has, for a long time, remained unpunished.<sup>r</sup> <sup>4</sup>I will cause it to go forth, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him who swears falsely by my name; and it shall abide in the midst of his house and shall consume it with its timber and its stones.

Curse
of sin to rest only on the sinner

§ 161. The Woman in an Ephah, Zech. 5<sup>5-11</sup>

Zech. 5 <sup>5</sup>Then the angel who talked with me went forth, and said to me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this ephah<sup>s</sup> that goeth forth. <sup>6</sup>And I said, What is it? And he said, This ephah that goeth forth,<sup>t</sup> is their iniquity<sup>u</sup> in all the land. <sup>7</sup>And behold, a round leaden cover<sup>v</sup> was lifted up,<sup>w</sup> and there was a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah. <sup>8</sup>And he said, This is Wickedness. And he cast her down into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the round leaden cover upon its mouth. <sup>9</sup>Then lifted I up mine eyes and saw, and there came forth two women, and the wind was in their wings. Now they had wings like the wings of a stork: and they lifted up the ephah between them. <sup>10</sup>Then I said to the angel who talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah?<sup>x</sup> <sup>11</sup>and he said to me, To build her a house in the land of Shinar; and when it is prepared,<sup>y</sup> they shall cause her to rest<sup>y</sup> in her own place.

Removal
of guilt
and tempta-
tion

<sup>n</sup> 4<sup>9</sup> Possibly this clause is secondary.

<sup>o</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> Suggesting that the temple was complete.

<sup>§ 160</sup> The belief that a curse, as well as a blessing, was a potent factor in the life of the one upon whom it was pronounced was widely held in antiquity. The Heb. sages simply modified this popular belief by declaring that the curse uttered without cause came back upon the head of the one who uttered it. A curse written out was thought to be doubly effective because more permanent. In the prophet's symbolism the roll represents the divine curse upon the Judean community because of its moral crimes, just as Joshua's filthy garments represented its ceremonial uncleanness. Zech. here teaches Ezek.'s doctrine of individual responsibility; not all the community, but the individual offenders, shall suffer the penalty for their crimes.

<sup>p</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> About 30 x 15 feet, suggesting the greatness of the crime.

<sup>q</sup> 5<sup>3</sup> Heb. reads, simply, swears, but from <sup>4</sup> and the usage of the idiom elsewhere the text must be restored as above. Possibly, by my name, should be added, as in <sup>4</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 5<sup>3</sup> Translating the verb as in Joel 3<sup>21</sup>. R. V., cut off.

<sup>§ 161</sup> In this section the prophet is still dealing with the problem of the moral guilt of the community. He employs figures, however, which frequently reappear in the later folk-lore, as, for example, the conception of a jinn or evil spirit shut up in a flask or bowl. The woman in the ephah or large measure represents the sin of the community which is carried away to the land of Shinar (Babylonia), Israel's oppressor, the symbol in later Jewish thought of guilt and corruption. Cf. Is. 11<sup>11</sup>, Dan. 1<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 5<sup>5</sup> Supplying, ephah, required by the context.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Omitting, and he said this, which is due to a scribal error.

<sup>u</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. according to the Gk., as the context demands. Traditional Heb. text makes no sense.

<sup>v</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> Or, weight; the Heb. word, however, means something round, and the context indicates that it was the cover of the ephah.

<sup>w</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., this.

<sup>x</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> Possibly the clause, and when it is prepared, is secondary.

<sup>y</sup> 5<sup>11</sup> So Gk. and a revised Heb. text.

§ 162. The War-Chariots of Jehovah, Zech. 6<sup>1-8</sup>

Jeho-
vah's omnipotent rule
over all the earth

Zech. 6 <sup>1</sup>Again I lifted up mine eyes and looked, and four chariots came out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass. <sup>2</sup>On the first chariot were red horses; and on the second chariot black horses; and on the third chariot white horses; and on the fourth chariot dappled<sup>z</sup> horses. <sup>3</sup>Then I spoke and said to the angel who talked with me, What are these, my lord? <sup>4</sup>And the angel answered and said to me, These go forth to<sup>a</sup> the four winds of heaven, after standing before the Lord of all the earth. <sup>5</sup>The<sup>b</sup> black horses are going forth toward the north country; and the white went forth toward the land of the east; and the dappled went forth toward the south country. <sup>6</sup>And<sup>c</sup> the red went forth, and sought to go<sup>d</sup> that they might walk to and fro through the earth. And he<sup>e</sup> said, Go forth, walk to and fro through the earth. <sup>8</sup>Then he cried, and said to me, Behold, they that go toward the north country will quiet<sup>f</sup> my spirit<sup>g</sup> in the north country.

§ 163. Preparations for the Crowning of Zerubbabel, Zech. 6<sup>9-15</sup>

Making
the crown

Zech. 6 <sup>9</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to me: <sup>10</sup>Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah of Jedaiah and of Josiah the son of Zephaniah who have come from Babylon, <sup>11</sup>yea, take of them silver and gold § 162 The meaning of this vision is reasonably clear. The four chariots, with the horses of four different colors, represent Jehovah's messengers which come from the four quarters of the heavens. The four colors, perhaps, correspond to the colors of the four planets, Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, which were conceived of by the ancient Semites as presiding over the different quarters of the heavens. The culmination of the prophecy is in <sup>8</sup>, where the promise is given that the divine messengers will execute Jehovah's judgments and so assuage his wrath in the north, which represents the Persian empire. Thus, in vague but unmistakable terms, Zech. voiced that hope of the speedy downfall of Persia which was the basis of the prediction of a Davidic king on the throne of Judah, found in the next section.

* <sup>6<sup>1</sup></sup> Through a scribal error the word, strong, has also been added, although the different pairs of horses are simply distinguished by their colors. Cf. 6, 7.

<sup>a</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> Supplying a letter that has been lost but is implied by the context.

<sup>b</sup> 6<sup>6</sup> Heb. adds, on which; but this appears to be a later note added by a scribe who had in mind the chariots.

<sup>c</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Heb., strong. This is due to the error of a scribe who had in mind the earlier error in <sup>3</sup>. The analogy in <sup>2</sup> calls for the above correction.

<sup>d</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Possibly, toward the west, has dropped out.

<sup>e</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> I. e., God.

<sup>f</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> Following the Gk. and the demands of the context.

<sup>g</sup> 6<sup>8</sup> I. e., anger, as in Is. 25<sup>1</sup>, 30<sup>2</sup>.

§ 163 The vague hopes voiced by Hag. in 2<sup>23</sup> and by Zech. in 3<sup>8-10</sup>, that Zerubbabel would become king of the restored Judean community, are here expressed in very definite form. It is probable that the words here recorded were uttered several days, if not months, after the visions found in the preceding sections. Their immediate occasion was the arrival of a deputation from Babylon, bringing gifts from the Jews in the East. Possibly conditions in the Persian empire again promised deliverance.

The original text has obviously been fundamentally revised by a later scribe, who knew that the hopes here expressed regarding Zerubbabel were not realized, and that the high priesthood was ultimately vested with the authority held by the pre-exilic kings. At the end of <sup>13</sup>, however, the present Heb. text speaks of two men rather than one. In the light of the preceding references, 3<sup>8</sup>, 4<sup>9</sup>, it is clear that the Branch referred to in <sup>12</sup> is none other than Zerubbabel. Restoring the text with the aid of these indications and of the superior reading of the Gk., the thought in the mind of the prophet is clear. He gave command that the crown be made and placed in the care of the high priest, until the opportune moment should arrive when Zerubbabel could be crowned.

Biblical history is silent regarding events in the Judean community in the years immediately following the completion of the second temple. Whether or not the Jews attempted to make Zerubbabel king with disastrous results is not known. The ultimate victories of Darius probably anticipated such a consummation. His policy of reconstruction included the setting aside of native princes and the appointment of Persian governors. In this process of reconstruction the descendants of the house of David were probably quietly set aside and so disappear from the pages of Heb. history.

in order to make a crown and set it on the head of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel.

<sup>12</sup>Thou shalt also say to them: ‘Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: “Behold, the man whose name is the Branch; and he shall grow up out of his place; and he shall build the temple of Jehovah; <sup>13</sup>and he shall bear the glory and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and Joshua, the son of Jehozadak shall be a priest upon his right, and the counsel of peace shall be between them both. <sup>14</sup>And the crown shall be to Heldai and Tobijah and Jedaiah, and Josiah the son of Zephaniah, as a memorial in the temple of Jehovah. <sup>15</sup>And they who are far off shall come and build in the temple of Jehovah; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me to you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of Jehovah your God.”’

Predictions concerning the glory of Zerubbabel's rule

§ 164. Jehovah's Real Demands, Zech. 7

Zech. 7 <sup>1</sup>In the fourth year King Darius,<sup>h</sup> on the fourth day of the ninth month,<sup>i</sup> <sup>2</sup>the city of Bethel<sup>j</sup> sent Sharezer and Regem-melech and their men, to entreat the favor of Jehovah,<sup>k</sup> and to speak to the priests of the house of Jehovah of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, should<sup>l</sup> I weep in the fifth month,<sup>l</sup> separating myself, as I have done these many years? <sup>4</sup>Then this word of Jehovah of hosts came to me: <sup>5</sup>Speak to all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, ‘When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth and in the seventh month,<sup>m</sup> even these seventy years, did ye at all fast to me, even to me? <sup>6</sup>And when ye eat and when ye drink, do ye not eat for yourselves, and drink for yourselves?

Jehovah asks not for formal worship

<sup>7</sup>Should ye not hear these words which Jehovah cried by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and her cities round about her, and the South Country, and the lowland were inhabited? <sup>8</sup>Exe-

Only for deeds of justice and mercy

§ 164 In the addresses found in this and the following sects, Zech. abandons the symbolic type of prophecy and speaks plainly and directly to the people. The date was 518 B.C. The occasion was the visit of a deputation either from Bethel, the site of the ancient sanctuary, a few miles north of Jerusalem, or, as many modern interpreters hold, from some official who spoke in behalf of the people to inquire whether or not they should continue, now that the temple was wholly or in part rebuilt, to wail and fast over the destruction of Jerusalem and the murder of Gedaliah. The prophet's reply indicates that he was more of a prophet than a priest; eating and fasting have no intrinsic merit in themselves; the past experience of your race, as well as the plain teachings of your prophets, have taught you clearly that Jehovah supremely desires not ceremonial forms but deeds of justice and mercy.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>71</sup> In 4, 6<sup>g</sup>, 8<sup>18</sup> the first person is used in the superscriptions. A scribe who had before him the corrupt Heb. text of <sup>2</sup> probably added the words, the word of Jehovah came to Zechariah.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>71</sup> A scribe has added the name of the month.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>72</sup> Possibly the original read, Bethel-sharezer, or, Belsharezer (cf. Dan. 5) with Regem-melech and his men; but the verbs are in the singular here and in <sup>3</sup>, and strongly support the accepted reading. Since the days of Josiah the people of Bethel appear to have worshipped at Jerusalem, just as the Samaritans, in the days of Nehemiah, desired but were refused the same privilege. In 8<sup>13</sup> Zech. addresses the remnant of the house of Israel, as well as of the house of Judah; and Jer. and Ezek. had pictured the future restoration as a union of the peoples both of the north and of the south. The only strong objection to the traditional reading is that the name of a town is not used thus collectively. Jerusalem, however, is frequently used in the collective sense.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>73</sup> The question is asked in the name of the community and the answer is given to the people of the land.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>73</sup> The fast day in the fifth month was in memory of the destruction of the temple on the seventh day of the fifth month, 586 B.C. (II Kgs. 25<sup>8, 9</sup>).

<sup>m</sup> <sup>75</sup> The fast in the seventh month was in memory of the murder of Gedaliah. Cf. Jer. 41, § 134.

cute<sup>n</sup> true judgment,<sup>o</sup> and show kindness and pity each to his brother;<sup>10</sup> and oppress not the widow nor the fatherless, the resident alien nor the poor; and let none of you devise evil against your brother in his heart.<sup>11</sup> But they refused to heed, and turned a stubborn shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they might not hear.<sup>12</sup> Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant<sup>p</sup> lest they should hear the teaching, and the words which Jehovah of hosts had sent by his spirit through the former prophets. Therefore there came great wrath from Jehovah of hosts.<sup>13</sup> And it came to pass, that, as I<sup>q</sup> cried and they would not hear, so they cried and I did not hear, saith Jehovah of hosts.<sup>14</sup> So I scattered them by a whirlwind among the nations which they did not know. Thus the land was left desolate behind them, so that no man passed to or fro; for they made the pleasant land a desolation.

§ 165. Promises that the Scattered Exiles Will Return and Jehovah's Rule be Widely Acknowledged, Zech. 8

Zech. 8 <sup>1</sup>Now this word of Jehovah of hosts came to me:

<sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts,

'I cherish for Zion a great jealousy,

And I am jealous for her with great indignation.'

<sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, 'I have returned to Zion,

And will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem;

And Jerusalem shall be called, "The City of Truth";

And the mountain of Jehovah of hosts, "The Holy Mountain."

<sup>4</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:

'Old men and old women shall again sit in the broad places of Jerusalem,

Each man with his staff in his hand because of old age.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>5</sup>And the streets<sup>s</sup> of the city shall be full of boys,

And of girls playing in its broad places.'

<sup>n</sup> <sup>7<sup>o</sup></sup> A later scribe has here introduced a new and incongruous superscription which reads: And this word of Jehovah came to Zechariah, <sup>saith</sup>, Thus hath Jehovah of hosts spoken, saying.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>7<sup>o</sup></sup> This and the following vss. are based on Am., Hos., and Is.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>7<sup>12</sup></sup> Lit., diamond. Cf. Ezek. 11<sup>19</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>7<sup>13</sup></sup> Heb., he cried. The form is due to the attraction of the preceding verb, but the subsequent context shows that it should be interpreted as above.

<sup>r</sup> § 165 This section is closely connected with the preceding and in all probability they were parts of one single address, for the latter completes the prophet's answer to the question about the fasts,<sup>18, 19</sup> and contains a brighter counterpart to the dark picture of the past in 7. Its theme, however, is distinct. With the exception of one or two short glosses, the chapter is, without doubt, all from the pen of Zech. For this reason it is one of the most important chapters in the O.T. in determining the development of Israel's messianic hopes and in dating the II Is., with which it has many points of close contact.

The date is probably December, 518 B.C. Zerubbabel and the hopes of a Davidic king have evidently vanished. The simplest and most natural explanation was that the victories of Darius had established the Persian rule in Palestine and quenched the patriotic aspirations which had for a time blazed up so fiercely in the minds of the Jews. Instead, Zech.'s conception of the future restoration and mission of his race has greatly broadened and deepened. The belief in the general return of the exiles is even stronger and the promise of universal prosperity is more definite than before; but the disappointment of his earlier hopes has spiritualized and universalized his message and the missionary motif, which is developed into marvellous effectiveness by the II Is., now occupies the central place. The moment was almost ripe for the noblest interpretation of Israel's destiny that ever came from the inspired soul of an O.T. prophet.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>8<sup>1</sup></sup> Heb., because of multitude of days.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>8<sup>2</sup></sup> Lit., broad places. The same word is repeated at the end of the vs.

<sup>6</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:

Because it seemeth impossible to<sup>t</sup> the remnant of this people,<sup>u</sup>
Is it also impossible for me? saith Jehovah of hosts.

<sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:

I am about to rescue my people,

From the land of the east and the land of the west,<sup>v</sup>

<sup>8</sup>And I will bring them and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem.
And they shall be my people in truth and righteousness,<sup>w</sup>
And I will in turn be their God.

Jeho-
vah himself
to gather
his
people

<sup>9</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Let your hands be strong, ye who hear in these days the words of the prophets.<sup>x</sup> <sup>10</sup>For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beasts, neither was there any peace to him who went out or came in, because of the foe; for I set each against his neighbor. <sup>11</sup>But now I will not be to the remnant of the people as in former days, saith Jehovah of hosts. <sup>12</sup>For I will scatter prosperity<sup>y</sup> broadcast; the vine shall bear its fruit and the ground shall yield its increase, and the heavens shall give their dew, and I will cause the remnant of this people to inherit all these things. <sup>13</sup>And it shall come to pass that, as ye were accursed among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel,<sup>z</sup> so will I save you and ye shall be a blessing.<sup>a</sup> Fear not, but let your hands be strong. For thus saith Jehovah of hosts: As I thought to do evil to you when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith Jehovah of hosts, and I relented not, <sup>15</sup>so again have I thought in these days to do good to Jerusalem and to the house of Judah; fear ye not.

And
give them
prosperity
and
honor

<sup>16</sup>These are the things that ye shall do; Speak ye every man the truth with his neighbor;<sup>b</sup> render peaceful decisions in your gates; <sup>17</sup>and let none of you devise evil in his heart against his neighbor; and love no false oath; for all these are things<sup>c</sup> I hate, saith Jehovah.

If they but do
right

And this word of Jehovah of hosts came to me, <sup>19</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'The fast of the fourth month,<sup>d</sup> and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be for the house of Judah joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love truth and peace.'

Fasts
to become feasts

<sup>20</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Peoples, and the inhabitants of many cities shall come; <sup>21</sup>and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying,

Jehovah to be universally worshipped

<sup>t</sup> 8<sup>5</sup> Lit., is marvellous in the eyes of.

<sup>u</sup> 8<sup>6</sup> A scribe has apparently added, from <sup>10</sup>, in those days. The clause is inconsistent with the present context.

<sup>v</sup> 8<sup>7</sup> Cf. Mal. 1<sup>11</sup>, Is. 59<sup>19</sup>, Ps. 50<sup>1</sup>. The superior Gk. text has been followed.

<sup>w</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> Transposing these words from the end of the vs. as the metre and sense require.

<sup>x</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> A later scribe has added the awkward note, whoever in the day that the foundation of the temple of Jehovah of hosts was laid, even the temple, that it might be built.

<sup>y</sup> 8<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb., seed of peace.

<sup>z</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> Possibly, O house of Judah and house of Israel, is a later addition. It is found, however, in all the important VSS.

<sup>a</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> I. e., so prosperous that all nations shall ask for themselves a like prosperity. Cf. Gen. 48<sup>20</sup>, Jer. 29<sup>22</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> A scribe has apparently repeated, by mistake, the word, truth, from the first part of the vs.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, that.

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>19</sup> The fast of the fourth month was held on the ninth day in commemoration of the capture of Jerusalem (Jer. 39<sup>2</sup>), the fast of the seventh month recalled the murder of Gedaliah (II Kgs. 25<sup>25</sup>, Jer. 41<sup>1-3</sup>) and the fast of the tenth the beginning of the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadrezzar (II Kgs. 25<sup>1</sup>).

'Let us go speedily to entreat the favor of Jehovah, and to seek Jehovah of hosts; I will go also.' <sup>22</sup>Yea, many peoples and strong nations shall come to seek Jehovah of hosts in Jerusalem, and to entreat the favor of Jehovah. <sup>23</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: In those days ten men shall take hold out of all the languages of the nations, they shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, 'We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.'

III

THE DESTINY OF THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

§ 166. Proclamation of the Speedy Restoration of Jehovah's People, Is. 40<sup>1-11</sup>

Prologue:
the message of
comfort

Preparations
for the restoration

Is. 40 <sup>1</sup>Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God, <sup>2</sup>Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and declare to her,
 That her hard service is accomplished, her guilt<sup>a</sup> is expiated,
 That she hath received from Jehovah's hand double for all her sins.

<sup>3</sup>A voice is proclaiming: In the wilderness prepare the way of Jehovah,
 Make straight in the desert a highway for our God!
<sup>4</sup>Let every mountain and hill sink down,<sup>b</sup> and every valley be lifted up,
 And the crooked be made straight and the rough ridges a plain,
<sup>5</sup>And the glory of Jehovah will be revealed,

The Destiny of the Chosen People.—As has already been indicated in the Introd., pp. 27-29, on the whole the most satisfactory setting of these chapters is found in the seventy years following the rebuilding of the temple. Here the hopes and promises expressed by Zech. §§ 157, 165, are expanded into a series of majestic poems intended to inspire both faith and action. The tolerant policy of the Persians and the rebuilding of the temple had prepared the way for that general return of the exiles which had not yet been realized in the times of Hag. and Zech., but for which they ardently hoped. The one great deterrent force which prevented a general return of the exiles was the lack of faith and the spirit of patriotic self-sacrifice within their hearts. The primary aim of the great prophet of the restoration was clearly by argument, by historical illustration, and by impassioned appeal to kindle the faith and patriotism of his fellow-countrymen and to stir them to action.

Inasmuch as these different sections apparently represent repeated appeals issued at different times, the same arguments and illustrations are frequently repeated and expanded. One theme, however, binds together all these different fragments. It is the destiny of Jehovah's chosen people. In broad outlines the prophet traces this destiny in the leading forth of Abraham in the great deliverances of Israel's early history, in its victories over neighboring nations, and the training of the nation in its present hour of humiliation. On this background he traces the greater and nobler destiny of which the earlier experiences were but the suggestion. Long years of preparation have been for a definite purpose. Sometimes he pictures Israel, that is, the true Israel, responsive to the divine call, as an agent of judgment upon the wicked nations; sometimes as the saviour of waiting peoples, perfecting its service through suffering and shame. The dominant thought is that Israel, by virtue of its training, is called to represent Jehovah before the world. The realization of the destiny which still awaits his people is the ultimate basis of the prophet's conviction that there will yet be a wide-spread and glorious restoration of his scattered and down-trodden countrymen.

§ 166 In his opening words the prophet strikes a characteristic note in the teaching of Zech. and especially in 7, 8. The divine message contained in the present chapter is addressed primarily to Jerusalem. At last her guilt is expiated (cf. the same teaching in Zech. §§ 155-8), and Jehovah is about to return, bringing with him, as a shepherd, the scattered exiles. The figure is that of Ezek. Cf. § 143. In strong, poetic language the prophet seeks to dispel the fears aroused by the dangers and hardships of the desert journey which is necessary before the exiles could return to Jerusalem. All things are possible because Jehovah is again reconciled to his people and will remove all obstacles that might deter their return.

<sup>a</sup> 40<sup>2</sup> Or, punishment; lit., guilt is accepted.

<sup>b</sup> 40<sup>4</sup> Transposing the two clauses <sup>4a</sup> as the metre demands and the parallelism favors.

And all flesh shall see it together,
For the mouth of Jehovah hath spoken it.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>6</sup>A voice is saying, Proclaim! and I<sup>d</sup> said, What shall I proclaim?
All flesh is grass and all its beauty like a flower of the field.

Jeho-vah alone infinite and eternal

<sup>7</sup>Grass withers, flower fades, when Jehovah's breath blows upon it,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Grass withers, flower fades, but the word of our God<sup>f</sup> endureth forever.

<sup>9</sup>To a high mountain, get thee up, Zion's herald of good news;<sup>g</sup>
Lift up mightily thy voice, Jerusalem's herald of good news, Lift up fearlessly, say to the cities of Judah: Behold your God!

Com-mand to an-nounce the good news Jehovah's deliver-ance of his people

<sup>10</sup>Behold,<sup>h</sup> Jehovah cometh in might, and his arm is maintaining his rule;<sup>i</sup>
Behold, his reward is with him and his recompense is before him,

<sup>11</sup>As a shepherd he will tend his flock, with his arm he will gather it,
The lambs in his bosom<sup>j</sup> he will bear, the ewe-mothers he will lead.

§ 167. Restoration Certain because of Jehovah's Character,
Is. 40<sup>12-19</sup>, 41<sup>6-7</sup>, 40<sup>20-31</sup>

Is. 40 <sup>12</sup>Who hath measured in the hollow of his hand the waters,
And ruled off the heavens with a span,
Or enclosed the dust of the earth in a measure,<sup>k</sup>
And weighed the mountains in scales,
And the hills in a balance?

Jeho-vah's incom-parable super-i-ority to nature

<sup>13</sup>Who hath determined the spirit of Jehovah,
And as his counsellor advised him?

To man

<sup>14</sup>With whom hath he consulted for enlightenment,
And to be instructed in the right,<sup>l</sup>
And to be shown the way of discernment?

<sup>c</sup> 40<sup>5</sup> This is perhaps a later addition in the spirit of Gen. 1, for it is in a very different metre from that which prevails throughout the prophecy and has no close connection with the context.

<sup>d</sup> 40<sup>6</sup> So Gk. and Lat. and the demands of the context. Heb., he said.

<sup>e</sup> 40<sup>7</sup> The Heb. adds the explanatory note, Surely the people are grass. The entire vs. is lacking in the Gk.

<sup>f</sup> 40<sup>8</sup> Gk. and Lat., Jehovah.

<sup>g</sup> 40<sup>9</sup> Or, Zion, herald of good news . . . Jerusalem, etc.

<sup>h</sup> 40<sup>10</sup> Heb. adds, Lord, but the metrical structure of the vs. suggests that it is a later gloss.

<sup>i</sup> 40<sup>10</sup> I. e., overthrowing foes and preparing the way for the deliverance of his people.

<sup>j</sup> 40<sup>11</sup> Omitting, and, before, in his bosom.

§ 167 The thought of this section is closely connected with that of the preceding. Jehovah's omnipotence and incomparable superiority to all things in the universe and to the gods of the heathen nations who had, and who still oppress the Jews, was the supreme evidence that he was able to lead back his people to the realization of the glorious destiny which the prophet declared awaited them. This is one of the sublimest passages in the O.T. Exalted description, irony, dramatic question are all employed with superlative effectiveness. The three-beat measure prevails, with an occasional four-beat line when an earnest question is asked, and an occasional two-beat line at the end of a stanza.

<sup>k</sup> 40<sup>12</sup> Lit., in a third, probably a standard measure containing one-third of an ephah or bushel.

<sup>l</sup> 40<sup>14</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and teach him knowledge, repeating the preceding verb.

To the nations

<sup>15</sup>Lo the nations! as a drop from a bucket,<sup>m</sup>
And as dust on a balance are they reckoned.
Lo the isles!<sup>n</sup> as a mote he uplifteth, <sup>16</sup>And Lebanon is not enough for fuel,
And its wild beasts for a burnt-offering.<sup>o</sup>
<sup>17</sup>All the nations are as nothing before him,
They are reckoned by him as void and nothingness.

To hea-then gods

<sup>18</sup>To whom then will ye liken God,
And what likeness place beside him?
<sup>19</sup>An image! a craftsman cast it,
And a smelter overlays it with gold.<sup>p</sup>
41 <sup>6</sup>Each one helps the other,<sup>q</sup>
And says to his fellow, Be courageous!
<sup>7</sup>So the craftsman encourages the smelter,
The smoother with the hammer him who smites the anvil,
Saying of the plating,<sup>r</sup> It is good;
And he fastens it securely with nails.<sup>s</sup>
40 <sup>20</sup>He who is too poor to do this<sup>t</sup> Chooses a tree that is not decayed,
Seeks for himself a skilled craftsman,
To set up an image that shall not totter.<sup>u</sup>

To the uni-verse

<sup>21</sup>Do ye not know? Do ye not hear?
Hath it not been told you from the beginning?
Have ye not been aware from the founding<sup>v</sup> of the earth?
<sup>22</sup>It is he who is enthroned above the vault of the earth,
And its inhabitants are as locusts;
Who stretcheth out the heavens as a thin veil,<sup>w</sup>
And spreadeth them out like a habitable tent.<sup>x</sup>

23It is he who bringeth princes to naught,
The rulers<sup>y</sup> of the earth he maketh as waste.

<sup>m</sup> 40<sup>15</sup> I. e., as a drop hanging ready to fall from the bottom of a swinging bucket.

<sup>n</sup> 40<sup>15</sup> I. e., the peoples inhabiting the islands and coast lands.

<sup>o</sup> 40<sup>16</sup> I. e., the wood on thickly wooded Mount Lebanon and all the wild animals that roam over its rocky heights do not furnish victims and fuel enough for a fitting offering to Jehovah.

<sup>p</sup> 40<sup>19</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, and chains of silver a goldsmith.

<sup>q</sup> 41<sup>6</sup>. 7 These vss. have no logical connection with their context. Restored to what was probably their original position, as above their meaning is clear and the sequence of thought is complete.

<sup>r</sup> 41<sup>7</sup> The Heb. word usually interpreted, soldering, means, lit., that which cleaves. The reference evidently is to the thin layer of gold which is first beaten out smooth on the anvil and then shaped to the wooden image and fastened on with nails.

<sup>s</sup> 41<sup>7</sup> The Heb. adds, that it may not totter; but this anticipates 40<sup>20</sup> and was probably added as an explanatory gloss by a scribe after 41<sup>6</sup>. 7 had been accidentally transposed to their present place in the book of Is.

<sup>t</sup> 40<sup>20</sup> Lit., He that is too poor for an oblation. The Gk. omits it, but adds at the end of <sup>19</sup>, He prepares him a likeness.

<sup>u</sup> 40<sup>20</sup> This vs. apparently refers to the pedestal to which the image was fastened.

<sup>v</sup> 40<sup>21</sup> Lit., foundations, i. e., the laying of the foundations.

<sup>w</sup> 40<sup>22</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has apparently a slightly corrupted text.

<sup>x</sup> 40<sup>22</sup> Lit., to dwell in.

<sup>y</sup> 40<sup>23</sup> Lit., judges, but the oriental judge was primarily a civil officer and, as in the book of Judg., it is his political rather than judicial functions that the author clearly has in mind.

<sup>24</sup>Scarcely have they been planted, scarcely have they been sown, Scarcely hath the stock taken root in the earth,
 But he bloweth upon them and they wither,
 And a whirlwind carries them away like stubble.

<sup>25</sup>To whom then will ye liken me.
 That I should equal him? saith the Holy One.

To the stars

<sup>26</sup>Lift up your eyes on high and see:
 Who hath created these?<sup>22</sup>
 He who bringeth forth their host by number,
 And calleth each by his name;
 Of the many mighty and strong,<sup>23</sup>
 Not one is missing.

Jeho-vah's ability to save his people

<sup>27</sup>Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel:
 My way is hid from Jehovah
 And my right is unnoticed by my God?

<sup>28</sup>Hast thou not known? Hast thou not heard?
 An everlasting God is Jehovah.

The creator of the ends of the earth.
 He fainteth not, neither is he weary,
 His wisdom is unfathomable,

<sup>29</sup>He giveth vigor to the fainting,
 And upon the powerless he lavisheth strength.

<sup>30</sup>Young men may faint and grow weary,
 And the strongest youths may stumble,

<sup>31</sup>But they who trust in Jehovah renew their vigor,
 They mount on pinions like eagles,<sup>b</sup>
 They run but are never weary,
 They walk but never faint.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> 40<sup>26</sup> I. e., the stars.

<sup>a</sup> 40<sup>26</sup> Or with Duhm revising the text to read, For fear of him who is of great might and strong power. The translation given above best conforms to the requirements of the context.

<sup>b</sup> 40<sup>31</sup> Lit., griffin-vulture.

<sup>c</sup> 40<sup>31</sup> The last two lines may be later additions, since they change the strong figure of the first part of the vs. They, however, establish the nexus between the ideal and the real and make the application of the glorious truth practical.

§ 168. Proofs and Assurances of Jehovah's Power and Purpose to Deliver
His People, Is. 41

Jeho-
vah's leadership of his people
in the past

Is. 41 <sup>1</sup>Listen to me in silence, ye coastlands,<sup>d</sup>
Let the peoples come near; then let them speak;<sup>e</sup> Together let us approach the tribunal.
<sup>2</sup>Who raised up that one from the east
Whose steps victory<sup>f</sup> ever attended,
Giving up peoples before him,
And letting him trample<sup>g</sup> down kings?
His sword made them as dust,<sup>h</sup>
And his bow like driven stubble;
<sup>3</sup>He pursued them, passing on in safety,
Not treading the path with his feet.<sup>i</sup>
<sup>4</sup>Who hath wrought and accomplished this?
He who called the generations from the beginning,<sup>j</sup>
I, Jehovah, who am the first,
And with those who come after I am the same.<sup>k</sup>

§ 168 The doubts of the despairing exiles regarding Jehovah's power and desire to deliver them are dealt with in this section. Vss. <sup>1-4</sup> contain one of the crux passages in the II Is. Commentators in the past, almost without exception, have identified the one therein described with Cyrus. This identification was clearly prompted by the occurrence of the name Cyrus in the traditional text of 45<sup>1</sup>. A closer study of the chapter, however, and of those which follow, reveals the difficulties in this identification. As Professor Torrey has shown (in an unpublished work), in the closely parallel passage in <sup>9</sup> of the same chapter, the one whom Jehovah brought from the ends of the earth is none other than his chosen people. According to <sup>15</sup> it is his people Israel whom Jehovah is about to make an instrument of judgment, to thresh mountains and crush them, to make the hills like chaff. Even as Israel, under the leadership of David, conquered their foes and trampled down kings, so, in the new era that was dawning, Jehovah would again make them a conquering power. Israel, not Cyrus, was the one whom Jehovah had called from the beginning, <sup>4</sup>.

In the closely parallel passage in <sup>25</sup> the identification with Israel is even more unmistakable. The one whom Jehovah hath raised up from the north, and who has called on the divine name from the rising sun, must, as in <sup>9</sup>, be Abraham and his descendants, for in the light of Gen. 4<sup>26</sup> the idiom, he hath called upon my name, was applied only to open and avowed worshippers of Jehovah. This certainly could not be asserted of Cyrus. Recognizing this fact, modern commentators have been forced to change the reading of the text, although without any textual support, in order to connect the portrait with Cyrus. In this passage the militant functions of Jehovah's servant Israel are asserted. This review of Israel's task illustrates Jehovah's omnipotent rulership, and is evidence of his ability to prepare the way for the restoration of his people. In terms of tenderest endearment and encouragement the prophet in Jehovah's name also recalls his divine leadership of his people in the past and assures them of his care and protection in the present crisis. In conclusion he challenges the gods of the heathen nations whom the

<sup>d</sup> 41<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds, probably by mistake, from the preceding vs., 40<sup>31</sup>, they shall renew vigor. It is not supported by the context and the various emendations suggested are only conjectures and not satisfactory.

<sup>e</sup> 41<sup>1</sup> I. e., appeal to facts for the decision.

<sup>f</sup> 41<sup>2</sup> Lit., righteousness, i. e., victory, the divine confirmation of the rightness of the cause of the conqueror.

<sup>g</sup> 41<sup>2</sup> Or, following the Gk., terrifieth kings. The verbs in this vs. indicate repeated action in past time.

<sup>h</sup> 41<sup>2</sup> The current translations are unjustified by the Heb. The above rendering is based on a slight correction of the text and is supported by the context.

<sup>i</sup> 41<sup>3</sup> I. e., so rapid was his pursuit and conquests that he seemed to fly rather than walk.

<sup>j</sup> 41<sup>4</sup> The one who not only inaugurated but has directed the course of human history from the first.

<sup>k</sup> 41<sup>4</sup> As has already been noted, <sup>6, 7</sup> have through a scribal error been transferred from the preceding section. In the process of displacement <sup>5</sup> has apparently been introduced in this context, although, as Duhm, Cheyne, and others recognize, <sup>8</sup> is the logical and probably the original sequel of <sup>4</sup>. Restoring the text of <sup>5</sup> by the aid of the Gk., it reads,

*The coastlands saw it and were afraid,
The ends of the earth trembled,
They approached and came together.*

<sup>8</sup>And thou Israel, my servant
 Jacob, whom I have chosen,
 Offspring of Abraham, my friend,<sup>1</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Thou, whom I brought<sup>m</sup> from the ends<sup>n</sup> of the earth,
 And called from its most distant parts;
 To whom I said, Thou art my servant,
 I have chosen and have not rejected thee.
<sup>10</sup>Fear not, for I, indeed, am with thee,
 Be not terrified, for I am thy God.
 I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee;
 Yea, I will uphold thee with my righteous hand.<sup>o</sup>

Jeho-
 vah's assurance of help
 in the present
 and
 future

<sup>11</sup>Behold, all who are enraged at thee will be ashamed and confounded,<sup>p</sup>
 They shall become as nothing and perish, the men who strive with thee, <sup>12</sup>Thou wilt seek them and not find them, the men who contend with thee,
 They shall become as nought and nothingness, the men who war on thee, <sup>13</sup>For I, Jehovah, thy God, hold fast thy right hand.
 It is I who say to thee, Fear not, I myself will help thee!
<sup>14</sup>Fear not, thou worm Jacob, thou insignificant worm<sup>q</sup> Israel, It is I who hold thee, is Jehovah's oracle, thy redeemer is the Holy One<sup>r</sup> of Israel.

No
 heathen foes shall harm
 his
 people

<sup>15</sup>Behold I make of thee a threshing-sledge, Yea, a new sledge<sup>s</sup> furnished with teeth.
 Thou shalt thresh mountains and crush them,
 And thou shalt make the hills like chaff.
<sup>16</sup>Thou shalt winnow them and the wind shall carry them away,
 And the tempest shall scatter them,
 But thou shalt exult in Jehovah,
 In Israel's Holy One shalt thou glory.

Israel
 again
 to be come an instrument
 of judgment

<sup>17</sup>The afflicted<sup>t</sup> who seek water but there is none,
 Their tongue is parched with thirst—<sup>u</sup>

Afflicted to be relieved

exiles fear to produce proofs that they are able to do any deeds comparable to those which he has performed in the past and present. The section is a powerful blending of argument, consolation, and promise. The three-beat measure prevails but passes over at times to the five-beat line. The different themes are treated in stanzas of approximately eight lines each.

<sup>1</sup> 41<sup>8</sup> Not merely, the one who loved me, but also, the object of my love. In II Chr. 20<sup>7</sup> and Koran Sur. 41<sup>24</sup> Abraham is thus called the friend of God.

<sup>m</sup> 41<sup>9</sup> Lit., take fast hold of.

<sup>n</sup> 41<sup>9</sup> Lit., corners.

<sup>o</sup> 41<sup>10</sup> Lit., right hand of my righteousness, i. e., that demonstrates Israel's right by a signal deliverance.

<sup>p</sup> 41<sup>11</sup> Vss. 11-16 refer to the malignant heathen foes of the Jews in Palestine as well as Babylonia.

<sup>q</sup> 41<sup>14</sup> Correcting the Heb. as suggested by the Gk. and demanded by the context.

<sup>r</sup> 41<sup>14</sup> Gk. omits, Holy One.

<sup>s</sup> 41<sup>15</sup> A scribe has added the explanatory gloss, a pointed instrument.

<sup>t</sup> 41<sup>17</sup> A scribe, recalling the familiar idiom, has added, and the needy; but this adds nothing to the thought and destroys the regular metre and parallelism and the play on the Heb. on the similar root for the words, needy and answer.

<sup>u</sup> 41<sup>17</sup> Again the point of view and atmosphere is that of the Pss., which voice the misfortunes of the party of the people in the Judean community during the first half of the Persian period.

I, Jehovah will answer them,
 I, Israel's God will not forsake them.
<sup>18</sup>I will open rivers on the bare hills,
 And fountains in the midst of the valleys.
 I will make the wilderness a pool of water,
 And the arid land gushing springs.

Prosper-ity
of Jehovah's
people
to reveal
his power

<sup>19</sup>I will set in the barren wilderness the cedar,
 The acacia, the myrtle and the oleaster;
 I will put in the desert the pine,
 The plane tree and the cypress together,
<sup>20</sup>In order that men may see and know,
 And consider and perceive at once,
 That Jehovah's hand hath done this,
 That the Holy One of Israel hath brought it to pass.<sup>v</sup>

Hea-
then gods helpless to foretell
the future

<sup>21</sup>Bring forward your champion,<sup>w</sup> saith Jehovah, the one God, Produce your idols,<sup>x</sup> saith Jacob's King, <sup>22</sup>Let them draw near<sup>y</sup> and announce to us what is to happen;
 How former events were made known,<sup>z</sup> declare, that we may reflect upon
 them;
 Or else declare to us the future events, that we may know their issue:<sup>a</sup> <sup>23</sup>Announce things to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods; Yea, do something, be it good or bad, that we may both stare and have something to see.
<sup>24</sup>Behold, ye are nought<sup>b</sup> and your work is nothingness.<sup>c</sup>

Jeho-
vah
alone knows because he directs events

<sup>25</sup>I have roused up one from the north and he is come,
 From the rising sun one who calls upon my name,<sup>d</sup>
 He shall trample<sup>e</sup> the princes like mire,
 And as a potter treads the clay.
<sup>26</sup>Who announced this from the beginning that we might know,
 And from aforetime that we might say, Right?
 None was there who announced it, none who declared it,
 Yea, none was there who heard your words.

<sup>v</sup> 41<sup>20</sup> Lit., be wise together, i. e., have the knowledge which comes from knowledge.

<sup>w</sup> 41<sup>21</sup> Reading with Torrey, champion, instead of the usual translation, suit, which does not satisfy the context.

<sup>x</sup> 41<sup>21</sup> Following the Lat. in correcting the Heb. text. Possibly the Heb. word which does not occur elsewhere, may mean in the light of the Arab. parallels, proofs; but the context calls for active spokesmen. Cf. <sup>23</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 41<sup>22</sup> So Gk., Syr., Lat., and Targ. Heb., bring near.

<sup>z</sup> 41<sup>22</sup> Lit., the former events what they were.

<sup>a</sup> 41<sup>22</sup> Transposing the opening clause of this vs. to the end as the context demands.

<sup>b</sup> 41<sup>24</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>c</sup> 41<sup>24</sup> A scribe having in mind his Jewish readers has added the note, an abomination is he who choose you.

<sup>d</sup> 41<sup>25</sup> Heb., he calls upon my name; in the light of Gen. 4<sup>26</sup> this idiom can refer only to an open and avowed worshipper of Jehovah, i. e., Israel, or Jehovah's ideal servant.

<sup>e</sup> 41<sup>25</sup> This vs. has evidently further suffered in transmission, for the idiom demands the verb given above instead of the Heb., he shall come.

<sup>27</sup>I, the first one, announced it to Zion,
And to Jerusalem I gave the joyful message.<sup>f</sup>

Silence of the heathen
gods

<sup>28</sup>But when I looked there was no one,
And among these [idols] there was none to give counsel,
That I might ask them and they might give answer.

<sup>29</sup>Behold, they are all but vanity!
Completely worthless are their deeds;
Wind and emptiness their molten images!<sup>g</sup>

§ 169. Contrast between Jehovah's Ideal and Real Servant Israel, Is. 42<sup>1</sup>–43<sup>7</sup>

Is. 42 <sup>1</sup>Behold,<sup>h</sup> my servant whom I uphold,
My chosen, in whom I take delight;
I have put my spirit upon him,
That he may set forth law<sup>i</sup> to the nations.

Type of servant
Jeho-
vah
desires

<sup>2</sup>He will not cry aloud nor roar,<sup>j</sup>
Nor let his voice be heard in the street.

His
method

<sup>3</sup>A crushed reed he will not break,
And a dimly burning wick he will not quench.

Faithfully will he set forth law;

His
work

<sup>4</sup>He will not lose vigor nor be crushed,
Until he establish law in the earth,
And for his teaching the coastlands<sup>k</sup> are waiting.

<sup>f</sup> 41<sup>27</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the Gk., Lat., and context. Another possible reading would be, one who brings good news.

<sup>g</sup> 41<sup>29</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. text.

§ 169 In three-beat stanzas of four lines each the prophet suddenly introduces the full portrait of the type of servant whom Jehovah desires to represent him before the nations. The present and subsequent context indicates that the prophet hoped that his race, Israel, would prove that faithful servant and perform the great service which its early training, the needs of the situation, and Jehovah's purpose demanded. The use of the collective singular is characteristic of the prophet. The behold of the Heb. is like an index finger calling attention to the noble figure that is here vividly portrayed. The term servant of Jehovah largely takes the place of the designation Messiah which was associated with Israel's kings and the house of David. The majority of Judah's later kings had proved unworthy representatives of Jehovah. It is evidently to avoid that misleading suggestion and effectively to present his new and more exalted ideal of service that the prophet adopts the term servant of Jehovah hitherto applied only to such worthy kings as David and the great prophets and spiritual heroes of Israel's history. The Heb. word means, literally, slave, but it is the Heb. slave, best represented in our western civilization by the trusted household servant, faithful and devoted to the interests of the master and in turn cherished and entrusted with full authority by the head of the household. It was also assumed by the loyal subjects or ministers of earthly kings, and was a most felicitous designation of the one who was to perform a great and difficult service for Israel's divine King. The servant, as here portrayed, is above all a teacher. In 50<sup>4</sup> <sup>b</sup> his training as a disciple is clearly pictured. His task is to proclaim and interpret Jehovah's law, which embodies the fundamental principles of Israel's faith to all mankind. His method is not that of a prophet preaching aloud in public, depending largely upon denunciation and warning, but the quiet method of the teacher who is considerate of the limitations of those whom he would teach and skilful and patient in adapting his message to the capacities of his pupils.

In the remainder of the section, in stanzas of four, six, or eight lines, the prophet proclaims Jehovah's might and his purpose to lead forth his blind and craven people. Their lack of confidence and courage is thus brought into strong contrast to what Jehovah would accomplish through them if they but prove responsive to the call to service.

<sup>h</sup> 42<sup>1</sup> Gk. adds, Jacob and Israel in the next line. The additions are significant because they reveal the interpretation of early commentators.

<sup>i</sup> 42<sup>1</sup> Not merely the law, but the demands and promises of the Jehovah religion. The Heb. word means, lit., judgment or a judicial decision.

<sup>j</sup> 42<sup>2</sup> So Targ. and a slightly revised Heb. text. Trad. Heb. text, lift up.

<sup>k</sup> 42<sup>4</sup> I. e., the distant lands on the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean.

His
commission
from Jeho-
vah

Jeho-
vah's just claims

All peoples to join in praising
him

For he is the champion
of the oppressed

Jeho-
vah's battle-
song

<sup>5</sup>Thus saith the one God, Jehovah,
He who spread out the heavens and stretched them forth,
Who created<sup>l</sup> the earth and its products,
Who giveth breath to the people upon it,
And spirit to those who walk upon it:
<sup>6</sup>I, Jehovah, have called thee in righteousness,
I have taken thee by the hand and kept thee,
I have made thee a pledge to the people,<sup>m</sup> a light to the nations, <sup>7</sup>To open eyes that are blind,
To bring captives out from confinement,
From the prison-house dwellers in darkness.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>I am Jehovah, that is my name,
Mine honor I will not give to another,
Nor my praise to idols.
<sup>9</sup>The first things—see, they have come,
And new things I am about to announce;<sup>o</sup>
Before they spring forth I declare them.

<sup>10</sup>Sing to Jehovah a new song,
And his praises from the ends of the earth;
Those who go down to the sea and all that are on it,
The coastlands and their inhabitants.
<sup>11</sup>Let the wilderness and its towns rejoice,<sup>p</sup> Villages which Kedar<sup>q</sup> inhabits.
Let the dwellers in Sela exult,
From the top of the mountains let them shout.
<sup>12</sup>Let them render glory to Jehovah,
And declare his praises in the coast-lands.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Jehovah goeth forth as a hero,
As a warrior he stirreth up zeal,<sup>s</sup>
He shouteth and uttereth the battle-cry,
Against his foes he showeth himself a hero.

<sup>14</sup>I have long kept silent,
I have been still and restrained myself;

<sup>1</sup> 42<sup>5</sup> Transposing the verbs in the first two lines as the context and the parallel in 40<sup>22</sup> require.

<sup>m</sup> 42<sup>6</sup> Gk., peoples, but the reference is probably to the re-establishment of a covenant between Jehovah and his own people.

<sup>n</sup> 42<sup>7</sup> In the light of the parallel in <sup>16</sup> it would seem that the Heb. is to be interpreted as above and that Jehovah, not his servant, is the subject in this vs.

<sup>o</sup> 42<sup>8</sup> I, e., not only the deliverance and restoration of Jehovah's people, but the redemption of all nations. Cf. v. 10-12.

<sup>p</sup> 42<sup>9</sup> So Gk., Lat., and Targ. Heb., lift up.

<sup>q</sup> 42<sup>10</sup> Kedar was the Heb. designation of the north Arabian tribes. They and the dwellers in Sela represent the peoples living east of Palestine, in contrast to those of the coast-lands to the west.

<sup>r</sup> 42<sup>11</sup> This vs. repeats the thought of 10<sup>a, b</sup> and may be a later gloss.

<sup>s</sup> 42<sup>12</sup> Or, rage.

Like a woman in travail will I groan,
I will both pant and gasp.

<sup>15</sup>I will lay waste mountains and hills,
And all their herbage will I wither,
I will turn rivers into islands,
And marshes will I dry up.

<sup>16</sup>I will lead the blind on the way,<sup>t</sup>
By a path they know not will I guide them,
I will make darkness light,
And the rough land level before them.<sup>u</sup>

These things will I do;<sup>v</sup>
<sup>17</sup>But<sup>w</sup> they will be filled with shame
Who put their trust in a graven image,
Who say to the molten images, Ye are our gods.

<sup>18</sup>Ye who are deaf hear,
And ye blind look up that ye may see,
<sup>19</sup>Who is blind but my servants,
And deaf as their rulers?
<sup>20</sup>Much have ye<sup>x</sup> seen, without observing it, Though your ears were open, ye did not hear.

Blindness of Jehovah's
people

<sup>21</sup>Jehovah was pleased for his righteousness' sake
To make his teaching great and glorious,
<sup>22</sup>Yet it is a people spoiled and plundered,
They are all snared in holes,<sup>y</sup>
And hidden in prison houses,
They have become a spoil, with none to rescue,
An object of plunder, with none to say, Restore.

Consequences
of their blind-
ness

<sup>23</sup>Who among you will give ear to this,<sup>z</sup>
Will attend and hear for time to come?
<sup>24</sup>Who gave up Jacob to plunderers,<sup>a</sup>

Israel's
calamities
due to Jeho-
vah's
judgments

<sup>t</sup> 42<sup>16</sup> A copyist has also introduced in the first part of the vs. the phrase, which they know not, found in its proper place later.

<sup>u</sup> 42<sup>16</sup> Transposing the clause, before them, to the fourth line as the sense and metre of the vs. demand.

<sup>v</sup> 42<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk. in translating the verb as referring to the future rather than the past. The Heb. adds what is apparently a gloss, And will not leave undone.

<sup>w</sup> 42<sup>17</sup> The Heb. text appears to be corrupt and opens with the disconnected words, They draw back.

<sup>x</sup> 42<sup>20</sup> Following the Gk. and Targ., which have retained the plural form of the verb, as demanded by the context. The scribal error in <sup>19</sup>, which gave the reading, servant of Jehovah, led to the corresponding error in <sup>20</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 42<sup>22</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., as the context requires.

<sup>z</sup> 42<sup>23</sup> i. e., Jehovah's direction and care for his people.

<sup>a</sup> 42<sup>24</sup> Following the marginal reading of the Heb.

And Israel to those who spoiled him,<sup>b</sup>
<sup>25</sup>And poured out upon him the heat of his anger,
 And his violence like a flame,<sup>c</sup>
 So that it scorched him round about, but he knew it not,
 And it burned him, but he laid it not to heart?

By Jehovah
Israel will be protected

43 <sup>1</sup>And now thus saith Jehovah,
 He who created thee, O Jacob, and formed thee,<sup>d</sup>
 Fear not, O Israel, for I redeem thee,
 I call thee by name, thou art mine.
<sup>2</sup>When thou passeth through the waters, I will be with thee,
 Through<sup>e</sup> the rivers, they shall not overflow thee;
 When thou goest through the fire, thou shalt not be scorched,
 Neither shall the flame burn thee.

3 For I, Jehovah am thy God.
 I, Israel's Holy One, am thy deliverer;
 I give Egypt as thy ransom,
 Ethiopia and Seba<sup>f</sup> for thee.
<sup>4</sup>Because thou art precious in mine eyes,
 Art honored and I love thee,
 I will give lands<sup>g</sup> in thy stead,
 And peoples for the sake of thy life.

5 Fear not for I am with thee,
 From the east I will bring thine offspring,
 And from the west I will gather thee;
<sup>6</sup>I will say to the north, Give up!
 And to the south, Withhold not!
 Bring my sons from afar,
 And my daughters from the ends of the earth,
 Every one who is called by my name,
 Whom for my glory I have created and formed.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 42<sup>24b</sup> The direct continuation of the question in <sup>24a</sup> is in <sup>25</sup>. A later scribe, with a different vocabulary and style, has introduced with a didactic purpose the prose gloss, Was it not Jehovah, he against whom we sinned and in whose ways they would not walk and to whose instruction they did not heed?

<sup>c</sup> 42<sup>25</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with Klostermann and Cheyne. Trad. Heb., might of war.

<sup>d</sup> 43<sup>1</sup> Following the superior text of the Gk., Lat., and Targ.

<sup>e</sup> 43<sup>2</sup> So Gk., in the rivers.

<sup>f</sup> 43<sup>3</sup> Josephus and later commentators have identified this place with Meroe, about one hundred miles north of Khartoum, but there is no evidence to support the hypothesis. The reference is probably to some Semitic people, like the Ethiopians, living west of the Red Sea.

<sup>g</sup> 43<sup>4</sup> Slightly revising the text, which reads, a man. Gk., men.

<sup>h</sup> 43<sup>7</sup> Heb. adds, and made.

§ 170. Israel Jehovah's Witness before the Heathen, Is. 43<sup>s</sup>-44<sup>t</sup>

Is. 43 <sup>s</sup>Bring forth a people<sup>i</sup> that is blind but hath eyes, Deaf and yet hath ears;
<sup>g</sup>Gather together,<sup>j</sup> all ye nations,
And let the peoples assemble.
Who among them can announce this,<sup>k</sup>
And declare to us the former predictions,<sup>l</sup>
Let them bring their witnesses to justify them,
Let them hear and say, It is the truth!

Exordium

<sup>10</sup>Ye are my witnesses, is Jehovah's oracle,
And my servants,<sup>m</sup> whom I have chosen,
That ye<sup>n</sup> may acknowledge and believe me,
And that ye may perceive that I am ever the same,<sup>o</sup>
Before me no God was formed,
Nor shall there be after me,
<sup>11</sup>I, even I, am Jehovah,
And beside me there is no deliverer.

Israel's
supreme
task

<sup>12</sup>It was I who announced and brought deliverance,
And I declared, and there was no strange god among you,
Ye are my witnesses, is Jehovah's oracle,
I am God, <sup>13</sup>yea, from henceforth the same;
And there is none who can snatch from my hand,
When I work, who can reverse it?

Jeho-
vah's irrevocable
purpose

<sup>14</sup>Thus saith Jehovah,
Your redeemer, Israel's Holy One,

Revealed
in the
overthrow
of Babyl-
on

§ 170 In this section the prophet brings out clearly one of his fundamental teachings, namely, that the supreme task of Jehovah's people is to be his witnesses to all the world. They alone, through experience and the inspired minds of their prophets, have grasped the great truth that one supreme God rules the universe, and that Jehovah is that God. All their past history had been to them the revelation of Jehovah's character and power. The overthrow of Babylon and the signal judgment upon their former oppressors, the Chaldeans, <sup>14</sup>, is the latest and in many ways the most significant proof of Jehovah's omnipotent rulership. The coming restoration of his people and the world-wide acknowledgment of his rule are to be the culminating acts in his revelation of himself to humanity. The moment is ripe for the great dénouement. The only source of doubt as to its immediate realization is found in the character and attitude of Jehovah's own people. They are apathetic in their worship, 43<sup>22-24</sup>, and their past record has been one of infidelity and failure to rise to the great opportunities which Jehovah has offered them, 43<sup>25-28</sup>. Hence all the strength of the prophet's marvelous logic and exhortation are enlisted in the effort to arouse Jehovah's servant Israel to the great task which lies before him. Cf. for the same idea 42<sup>4, 6</sup>.

The passage is also significant because in 43<sup>9</sup> and elsewhere the prophet identifies Jehovah's servant with his witnesses, the survivors of the chosen people to whom the prophet addressed his message. From 43<sup>14</sup> it is also clear that Babylon had already fallen and that therefore these prophecies must be dated not before, but after, 536 B.C.

<sup>i</sup> 43<sup>s</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. A more fundamental revision would give the reading, Ho, ye people. The passage appears to picture a great judgment scene.

<sup>j</sup> 43<sup>9</sup> So Targ. and Syr.

<sup>k</sup> 43<sup>9</sup> I. e., the predictions given in the preceding section.

<sup>l</sup> 43<sup>9</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the context. Heb. lit., the first things.

<sup>m</sup> 43<sup>10</sup> Heb., servant.

<sup>n</sup> 43<sup>10</sup> Possibly the original read, they, referring to the heathen.

<sup>o</sup> 43<sup>10</sup> Lit., that I am that one. Cf. 41<sup>4</sup>.

For your sake I have sent to Babylon,
 And have brought them all down as fugitives.<sup>p</sup>
 Even the Chaldeans with their piercing cries of lamentation,<sup>q</sup> <sup>15</sup>It is I, Jehovah, your Holy One,
 The Creator of Israel, your King.

In the
deliverance
from Egypt

In the new deliv-erance
awaiting
his people

All nature
subservient to Jehovah's
purpose

Israel
alone faith-
less

<sup>16</sup>Thus saith Jehovah,
 He who openeth a way in the sea,
 And a path in the mighty waters,
<sup>17</sup>Who maketh an end<sup>r</sup> of chariot and horse,
 A host both strong and mighty;<sup>s</sup>
 They lie down, they cannot rise,
 They are quenched, extinguished like a wick!

<sup>18</sup>Remember not former events,
 Consider not the things of old!
<sup>19</sup>See, I am about to do a new thing,
 Already it springs forth; do ye not know it?
 Yea, I will establish a road in the wilderness,
 Streams in the barren desert.

<sup>20</sup>The beasts of the field will honor me,
 The jackals and the ostriches,
 For I give water in the wilderness,
 Streams in the barren desert,
 To provide drink for my people, my chosen.
<sup>21</sup>The people which I have formed for myself,
 They will recount my praise.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>22</sup>But thou, O Jacob, hast not called upon me, Nor<sup>u</sup> hast thou wearied thyself about me, O Israel;
<sup>23</sup>Thou hast not brought me the sheep of thy burnt-offerings,
 Nor honored me with thy sacrifices.
 With offerings I have not burdened thee,
 Nor with incense wearied thee.
<sup>24</sup>Thou broughtest me no sweet cane with thy money,
 Nor with the fat of thy sacrifices sated me.

<sup>p</sup> 43<sup>14</sup> So Gk. The text and meaning are doubtful.

<sup>q</sup> 43<sup>14</sup> Again the meaning of the Heb. is not certain. The current translation, with the ships of their rejoicing, is unintelligible. The Gk. reads, The Chaldeans are bound with neck-chains. A fundamental revision of the text gives the reading, I will turn their rejoicing into lamentations. The above translation is based on a very slight revision of the current Heb. text. Possibly this last line is an explanatory scribal gloss.

<sup>r</sup> 43<sup>17</sup> Lit., causeth to go forth. A reference to the overthrow of the Egyptian army at the exodus.

<sup>s</sup> 43<sup>17</sup> Lit., war-host and strong ones together.

<sup>t</sup> 43<sup>20-21</sup> By many recent interpreters, <sup>2-c, d, 21</sup>, because of their loose connection with the context, are regarded as secondary. The evidence, however, is not conclusive.

<sup>u</sup> 43<sup>22</sup> Following the Gk. and Lat.

Rather thou hast only burdened me with thy sins,
And wearied me with thine iniquities.

<sup>25</sup>But it is I alone<sup>v</sup> who blot out thy transgressions,<sup>w</sup>
And I do not remember thy sins.
<sup>26</sup>Remind me, let us plead together,
Do thou set forth the matter that thou mayest be justified:
<sup>27</sup>Thy first father<sup>x</sup> sinned,
And thy mediators<sup>y</sup> rebelled against me.
<sup>28</sup>Thy rulers profaned my sanctuary,<sup>z</sup>
And I gave up Jacob to the ban,<sup>a</sup>
And Israel to revilings!

Israel's
disasters
the result of past
sins

44 <sup>1</sup>But now hear, O Jacob my servant,
And Israel whom I have chosen;
<sup>2</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, thy maker,
Even he who formed thee from the womb, who helpeth thee:
‘Fear not, my servant Jacob,
And thou, Jeshurun,<sup>b</sup> whom I have chosen;
<sup>3</sup>For I will pour water upon the thirsty land
And streams upon the dry ground,<sup>c</sup>

Jeho-
vah
now ready to restore

I will pour out my spirit upon thy posterity,
And my blessing upon thy descendants,
<sup>4</sup>So that they shall spring up as grass in the midst of waters,<sup>d</sup>
As willows by water-courses.
<sup>5</sup>One shall say, “I am Jehovah’s,”
And another shall call himself,<sup>e</sup> “Jacob,”
And another will inscribe on his hand, “Jehovah’s,”
And receive the surname,<sup>f</sup> “Israel.””

Eager
to honor
his people before
all men

<sup>v</sup> 43<sup>25</sup>, <sup>26</sup> Possibly these vss. are secondary, as <sup>27</sup> carries on immediately the thought of <sup>24</sup>.
<sup>w</sup> 43<sup>24</sup> Amending in accordance with the requirements of the sense and metre. Heb. adds, or mine own sake.

<sup>x</sup> 43<sup>27</sup> Not Adam, nor Abraham, the friend of God, but Jacob, the immediate traditional ancestor of the twelve tribes. Cf. Hos. 12<sup>3</sup>, <sup>4</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 43<sup>27</sup> I. e., the false and misleading prophets. Cf. Jer. 23<sup>11-18</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 43<sup>28</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr.
<sup>a</sup> 43<sup>28</sup> I. e., placed under the ban. Cf. Josh. 6<sup>24</sup>, 7<sup>1</sup>. The reference is to Israel’s experiences after the fall of Jerusalem.

<sup>b</sup> 44<sup>2</sup> This designation, meaning, the righteous or pious, is found elsewhere only in Dt. 32<sup>15</sup> and 33<sup>5</sup>, <sup>26</sup>. It was probably coined by the prophet as the opposite of Jacob (the tricky). Cf. 43<sup>29</sup>, Hos. 12<sup>3</sup>, <sup>4</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 44<sup>3</sup> I. e., a poetic picture of Israel and its scattered people.

<sup>d</sup> 44<sup>4</sup> Following the Gk. and a corrected Heb. text.

<sup>e</sup> 44<sup>5</sup> Following the Syr., which reads literally, will name himself by.

<sup>f</sup> 44<sup>5</sup> Following the Targ. Lit., is betitled by the name.

§ 171. Jehovah's Incomparable Superiority to the Heathen Gods, Is. 44<sup>6-23</sup>

Jeho-
vah
the one supreme ruler in the universe

Shame awaits
all worshippers
of idols

Inanity of worshipping man-made
gods

Is. 44 <sup>e</sup>Thus saith<sup>g</sup> the King of Israel, Even his Redeemer, Jehovah of hosts:
I am the first and I am the last,
And beside me there is no God.
<sup>7</sup>And who like me<sup>h</sup> could proclaim,
Could declare it and set it in order before me.
Announcing the future long ago,<sup>i</sup>
And declaring to me the things which are to come?
<sup>8</sup>Be not terror-stricken nor afraid; Did I not long ago declare to you,<sup>j</sup>
And announce it, and ye are my witnesses,
Is there a god beside me?
Yea, there is no Rock beside me.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Makers of idols are all of them as nothing,
Those things in which they delight<sup>l</sup> are utterly worthless!
Their witnesses<sup>m</sup> they see not,
Neither do they know enough to be ashamed.
<sup>10</sup>Who has ever fashioned a god,
Or cast an image to no profit?
<sup>11</sup>Behold, all its worshippers<sup>n</sup> shall be put to shame,
And the artificers—they are but men;<sup>o</sup>
Let them all assemble<sup>p</sup> and stand forth—
They shall be both terror-stricken and ashamed!

<sup>12</sup>The smith<sup>q</sup> prepares it on the coals,
With hammers he fashions it,
He forges it with his strong arm,
He becomes hungry also and has no strength,
He drinks no water and is faint.

§ 171 In this section a theme, already touched upon in § 167, is now developed in detail; it is the obvious and convincing evidence of Jehovah's omnipotence and omniscience contrasted with the inanimate gods of wood in which Israel's heathen foes put their trust. Vss. 9-20 have been regarded as later additions by many critics because of the obscurities in style and the absence of the ordinary regular metrical structure. The terse style, the biting sarcasm, and the unusual terms required by the nature of the subject-matter have given rise to scribal errors in transmission that largely explain these obscurities and metrical irregularities. When the text is restored and the obviously late gloss in <sup>20</sup> removed, there remain five stanzas, each containing nine or ten lines, in the powerful style of the great prophet-poet of the restoration. The section concludes with an appeal to Israel, and a closing doxology.

<sup>g</sup> 44<sup>6</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, Jehovah.

<sup>h</sup> 44<sup>7</sup> Gk. adds, Let him stand forth and.

<sup>i</sup> 44<sup>7</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the context.

<sup>j</sup> 44<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb., thine.

<sup>k</sup> 44<sup>8</sup> The Heb. text is unintelligible and is due to certain obvious scribal errors which, when corrected, give the above reading.

<sup>l</sup> 44<sup>9</sup> I. e., their idols.

<sup>m</sup> 44<sup>9</sup> I. e., those who worship the idols, corresponding to Jehovah's witnesses, the Israelites.

<sup>n</sup> 44<sup>10</sup> Lit., fellows or those bound to him. Possibly the Heb. should be translated, charmers.

<sup>o</sup> 44<sup>11</sup> Or fundamentally revising the text, will be confounded.

<sup>p</sup> 44<sup>11</sup> So Gk. The Heb. omits, and. So also in the next line.

<sup>q</sup> 44<sup>12</sup> The Heb. has a gloss, ax, apparently intended to explain the preceding word.

<sup>13</sup>The carpenter stretches out a line,
Traces it in outline with a stylus,
Shapes it with scraping tools and a compass,<sup>r</sup>
And makes it like a human figure,
Like the beauty of a man, to dwell in a house!

<sup>14</sup>One cuts down<sup>s</sup> cedar trees for his use,
And chooses a cypress or oak,
He lets it grow up among the trees of the forest,
Or plants a pine, and the rain makes it grow.

<sup>15</sup>So it becomes fuel for man,
And he takes<sup>t</sup> some therefrom and warms himself,
He also sets it ablaze and bakes bread,
Yea, he makes a god and worships it!
Makes an image and bows before it!

Idols
mere wood
that burns
in the fire

<sup>16</sup>Half of it he burns in the fire,
And upon its coals<sup>u</sup> he roasts<sup>v</sup> flesh!
He eats the roast and is satisfied!
He warms himself and says, Aha!
I am warm and see the glow.

<sup>17</sup>The rest of it he makes into a god,
He bows down to his image and worships it,
And prays to it and says:
Deliver me, for thou art my god!

Of the same material with which
the worshipper cooks
his meal

<sup>18</sup>They have no knowledge nor discernment,
For their eyes are besmeared<sup>w</sup> past seeing,
And their minds past comprehending.

<sup>19</sup>And he takes it not to heart,
Nor is there any knowledge or sense to say:
Half of it I have burned in the fire,
I have also baked bread upon the coals,
I have roasted flesh and have eaten;
And of the rest of it shall I make an abomination,
To a block of wood shall I bow down?<sup>x</sup>

Blindness of those who worship
idols

<sup>21</sup>Remember these things, O Jacob,
Yea, Israel, for thou art my servant;

Jeho-
vah's intimate relation to his
people

<sup>r</sup> 44<sup>13</sup> Translating the Heb. word (which occurs only here) by the aid of the context. Through a scribal error the verb, traces it in outline, has been repeated.

<sup>s</sup> 44<sup>14</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the Gk. and Lat.

<sup>t</sup> 44<sup>15</sup> Some Gk. MSS., one kindles.

<sup>u</sup> 44<sup>16</sup> So Gk., Syr., and the parallel passage in <sup>19</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 44<sup>16</sup> Transposing the verbs to their logical place in accord with the order in the parallel passage in <sup>19</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 44<sup>18</sup> Heb., he hath shut; the text is plainly corrupt.

<sup>x</sup> 44<sup>19</sup> A later scribe, commenting on this pitiable picture, has added the sententious criticism, One who feeds on ashes! A deluded heart has caused him to sin and he cannot save his life, nor say: Is not there falsehood in my right hand?

I have formed thee; thou art my servant,
Israel, thou wilt not renounce me.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>22</sup>I have blotted out as a mist thy transgressions,
And as a cloud thy sins;
Return to me, for I have redeemed thee.

<sup>23</sup>Cry aloud, O heavens, for Jehovah hath accomplished it, Shout, O ye depths of the earth!
Break forth, O mountains, into cries of exultation,
O forest and all the trees therein,
For Jehovah hath redeemed Jacob,
And glorified himself in Israel!

§ 172. Jehovah's Promises to His Servant Israel, Is. 44<sup>24</sup>–45<sup>25</sup>

Is. 44 <sup>24</sup>Thus saith Jehovah thy Redeemer, Even he who formed thee from the womb;
I am Jehovah, maker of all things,
Who stretcheth forth the heavens—I alone,
Who spreadeth out the earth—who beside me?<sup>z</sup>
<sup>25</sup>Who bringeth to nought the omens of the impostors,
And maketh sport of the diviners,

<sup>y</sup> 44<sup>21</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb.

§ 172 In this section the prophet reasserts Jehovah's promises to Israel, the servant nation, and recounts what he has done for his people in the past. It is parallel in many ways to 41, § 168. The two chapters interpret each other. When 44<sup>28</sup> and the word Cyrus, found in the traditional Heb. text of 45<sup>1</sup>, is deleted, no one would suspect that this section contained a reference to any other than Jehovah's servant Israel. Professor Torrey, of Yale, in a work yet to be published (cf. also Cobb, Jour. Bib. Lit., XXVII, 48–64), has shown that 44<sup>28</sup>, which reads, Who saith to Cyrus, My servant, and all my purposes will he realize, was in all probability added by a scribe in the third or second century B.C., who had been reading the opening chapters of Ezra. The same scribe probably inserted Cyrus in 45<sup>1b</sup>. This insertion is entirely out of harmony with the regular metrical structure of the vs. The term, Jehovah's anointed, is always applied in the O.T. either to an Israelitish king or Messiah or else to the messianic nation. Furthermore the phrase, whose hand I hold, on the lips of Jehovah is used by the prophet only in referring to Jehovah's servant Israel. Cf. 41<sup>9</sup>, 10, 13, 42<sup>9</sup>. There is little doubt, in the light of these cumulative facts, that the word Cyrus, which has so largely influenced the interpretation of Is. 40–66, was added by a later scribe, even as the word Assyrian was inserted in the prophecies of Is. 7<sup>17</sup>, 15, 20, 87.

In the light of the parallel passages it is clear who was Jehovah's anointed, whose hand he held. Closely parallel to 45<sup>c, d, e</sup> is the promise in 14, which is universally recognized as addressed to Jehovah's servant Israel. The same is true of the thought in 2, 3. Cf. also 14. In 4 the idea is further developed that because of all that Jehovah has done for his people in the past he will still care for them in the future. From their earliest history, even before they were conscious of his guidance, he was preparing them for their destiny.

At first glance<sup>13</sup> would seem to be a reference to Cyrus, but it is imbedded in the midst of a passage which describes Jehovah's dealings with Israel, and there is not the slightest indication in this vs. of a change of antecedent. Furthermore the thought of this vs. is closely parallel to 49<sup>8</sup>, which describes the work of Jehovah's servant as being, to raise up the land, to reapportion the desolate heritages, saying to those that are bound, Go forth, to those in darkness, Show yourselves. Cf. also 41<sup>2, 21</sup>. The parallelism is so close that it leaves little doubt that in<sup>13</sup> the prophet is describing one of the many tasks of the ideal servant, a task which Nehemiah, with his full consciousness of being a servant of Jehovah (cf. Neh. 1), in a measure performed.

In this section the prophet gathers up and reiterates many of his teachings presented in preceding chapters. Occasionally in exultation he breaks out into glowing doxologies, as in 45<sup>8</sup>. The joy and adoration expressed in the three-beat measure in the first part of the section pass into a message of comfort and invitation to the scattered exiles and even to distant heathen nations. The poem closes with a sublime picture of the day when all peoples shall acknowledge and revere Jehovah.

* 44<sup>24</sup> So Gk., Lat., and many MSS. The vocalization of the Heb. is defective

Who turneth backward the wise,
And maketh their knowledge folly.

<sup>26</sup>Who establisheth the word of his servants,<sup>a</sup>
And perfecteth the counsel of his messengers.<sup>b</sup>
Who saith to Jerusalem, ‘Be inhabited,’
And of the cities of Judah, ‘Let them be built,’
And her ruins will I raise up.
<sup>27</sup>Who saith to the deep, ‘Be dry!
And thy streams will I dry up.’<sup>c</sup>

45 <sup>1</sup>Thus saith Jehovah to his anointed,<sup>d</sup>
To him whose right hand I hold,
To subdue nations before him,
And that I may ungird the loins of kings,
To open doors before him,
And that gates may not be closed:
<sup>2</sup>I myself will go before thee,
Mountains<sup>e</sup> will I make level,
Doors of bronze will I break in pieces,
And bars of iron will I sunder.

<sup>3</sup>And I will give thee the treasures<sup>f</sup> of darkness,
And the hoards in secret places,
That thou mayest know that it is I, Jehovah,
He who called thee by name, I, the God of Israel.

<sup>4</sup>For the sake of Jacob my servant,
And of Israel my chosen,
I called to thee by thy name,
I gave thee a surname,<sup>g</sup> though thou knewest me not.
<sup>5</sup>I am Jehovah and there is none other,<sup>h</sup>
Beside me there is no God.

I girded thee while yet thou knewest me not,
<sup>i</sup>That men might know from the east,
And also from the west that there is none beside me.

In the life of his people

His
promises
of victory to his anoint-ed

Of riches
and noble service

Jeho-
vah's character
revealed
by his acts

<sup>a</sup> 44<sup>26</sup> So Gk. A., and Targ. and the demands of the context. Under the influence of the common phrase the Heb. has servant.

<sup>b</sup> 44<sup>26</sup> I. e., that of the prophets who stand in contrast to the false religious teachers of Babylonia.

<sup>c</sup> 44<sup>27</sup> A later scribe who recalled the rebuilding of the temple in the years following the conquests of Cyrus, and especially the decree of Darius regarding the rebuilding of the temple, has added, saying to Jerusalem, Be built, and of the temple, Let its foundations be laid. The first part is but a repetition of <sup>26c</sup> and the whole is out of its natural setting.

<sup>d</sup> 45<sup>1</sup> Or, Messiah, i. e., one called and commissioned by Jehovah to do a special work.

<sup>e</sup> 45<sup>2</sup> So Gk. The meaning of the Heb. word is unknown. Possibly in the light of <sup>13</sup> it originally read, ways.

<sup>f</sup> 45<sup>3</sup> I. e., treasures hoarded up in dark vaults.

<sup>g</sup> 45<sup>4</sup> Cf. 44<sup>5</sup> for the same verb. The meaning would be, gave thee, a new title descriptive of the new and more intimate rôle. Possibly the Gk. should be followed, I delight in thee.

<sup>h</sup> 45<sup>7</sup> Gk. omits, author, lit., creator. It destroys the regular metre and may be due to a scribal error.

I am Jehovah, and there is none other.
<sup>7</sup>Maker of light and creator of darkness,
 Bringer of good fortune and author of evil,
 I, Jehovah, perform all this.

The
coming salva-
tion

<sup>8</sup>Shower ye heavens from above and let thy clouds rain righteousness;
 Let the earth open its womb<sup>i</sup> and salvation blossom forth,
 And let righteousness spring up at once; I, Jehovah, have created it.

Folly
of questioning God's ways

<sup>9</sup>Woe to him who strives with his Maker,
 A potsherds among the potsherds of earth!
 Saith clay to its Maker, What canst thou do?
 Or his handwork, Thou hast no hands!<sup>k</sup>
<sup>10</sup>Woe to him who saith to a father, What begettest thou?
 And to a woman, What bringest thou forth?<sup>l</sup>
<sup>11</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Israel's Holy One and Maker:
 Of the things to come will ye question<sup>m</sup> me!
 Concerning the work of my hands will ye command me!

His rule in
the world
and in
the history
of his
people

<sup>12</sup>It was I who made the earth,
 And mankind upon it I created,
 It was my hands<sup>o</sup> that stretched out the heavens,
 And upon all their host I laid commands.
<sup>13</sup>I, it was who raised him up in righteousness,
 And make level all his ways;
 He it is who will build my city,
 And my exiled ones will be set free,
 Not for price and not for reward,
 Saith Jehovah of hosts.<sup>p</sup>

Nations
to pay homage to Israel
and Israel's
God

<sup>14</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts,<sup>q</sup> The labor of Egypt
 And the merchandise of Ethiopia and the Sabeans, men of stature, Shall pass before thee and be thine;<sup>r</sup> they shall go after thee in chains,<sup>s</sup>
 And to thee will they bow down, to thee will they pray:
 'Surely God is with thee and there is none other God at all;
<sup>15</sup>Truly God hideth himself with thee,<sup>t</sup> the God of Israel is a deliverer!'

<sup>i</sup> 45<sup>8</sup> Supplying the object implied in the Heb.

<sup>j</sup> 45<sup>8</sup> Heb., and let them bring forth salvation.

<sup>k</sup> 45<sup>9</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Lat.

<sup>l</sup> 45<sup>10</sup> This vs. introduces a new figure and breaks the close connection between <sup>9</sup> and <sup>11</sup>. It may be simply a later scribal amplification.

<sup>m</sup> 45<sup>11</sup> Restoring the text as the context demands. The Heb. has an imperative form of the verb in this line.

<sup>n</sup> 45<sup>11</sup> A scribe with <sup>10</sup> in mind has added, concerning my children.

<sup>o</sup> 45<sup>12</sup> Heb., I—my hands.

<sup>p</sup> 45<sup>13</sup> It is possible that these last two lines are later additions as they are not altogether consistent with the thought of 43<sup>3, 4</sup> and the vss. which follow in the present context.

<sup>q</sup> 45<sup>14</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, of hosts.

<sup>r</sup> 45<sup>14</sup> The exact meaning of this passage is not certain. Possibly the text is corrupt. In general the thought appears to be parallel to that of 43<sup>3, 4</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 45<sup>15</sup> The Heb. repeats the verb, shall pass before thee.

<sup>t</sup> 45<sup>15</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. text as the context requires and certain Latin MSS. read.

<sup>16</sup>Ashamed, yea confounded are all who rose up<sup>u</sup> against him;<sup>v</sup>
They have gone off in confusion, the makers of idols.

<sup>17</sup>But Israel hath received from Jehovah an everlasting deliverance;
Ye shall not be put to shame nor confounded to all eternity.

<sup>18</sup>For thus saith Jehovah<sup>w</sup>—he is the one God;
The former and maker of the earth—he established it,
Not as a waste did he create it, to be inhabited he formed it.
I am Jehovah and there is none else, no God beside me,<sup>x</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Not in secret have I spoken,<sup>y</sup> in the land of darkness, Nor have I said to the descendants of Jacob, ‘Seek me in chaos,’<sup>z</sup>
I, Jehovah speak the truth and<sup>a</sup> announce what is right.

<sup>20</sup>Assemble and come; draw near together, ye of the nations who have escaped!

Senseless are they who bear about their wooden idols,<sup>b</sup>      His promises clear and sure
And pray to a God that cannot deliver.

<sup>21</sup>Announce ye and produce your idols;<sup>c</sup> let them also take counsel together.
Who hath declared this of old and announced it long ago?
Is it not I, Jehovah, and there is none else, no God beside me?
A God who is righteous and delivereth, there is none except me!

<sup>22</sup>Turn to me and be delivered, all ye ends of the earth!
For I am God and there is none other,<sup>d</sup> by myself have I sworn,
Truth hath gone forth from my mouth, a word which will not be recalled,
That to me every knee shall bow,<sup>e</sup> every tongue shall swear.

<sup>24</sup>And it shall be said: ‘Only through Jehovah are victories and might,<sup>e</sup>
To him shall they<sup>f</sup> come and be put to shame, all who were incensed against him;

<sup>25</sup>In Jehovah shall triumph and boast all the descendants of Jacob.

His
promises clear
and sure

He alone
delivers

Deliver-
ance
for all through ac-knowl-
edging
his rule

<sup>u</sup> 45<sup>16</sup> So Gk.

<sup>v</sup> 45<sup>16</sup> Again correcting what appears to be a slight error in the Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 45<sup>18</sup> Omitting the phrase, the creator of the heavens, which destroys the logical and metrical unity of the line.

<sup>x</sup> 45<sup>18</sup> Apparently the last two words of this line have been lost. They may be restored from the otherwise parallel line <sup>21c</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 45<sup>19</sup> Omitting, in a place, which is probably due to a scribal error.

<sup>z</sup> 45<sup>19</sup> I. e., given no indefinite promises.

<sup>a</sup> 45<sup>19</sup> So Gk. The Heb. omits the and.

<sup>b</sup> 45<sup>20</sup> A reference to the Babylonian custom of carrying the gods in a sacrificial procession, especially at the great New Year's feast.

<sup>c</sup> 45<sup>22</sup> Supplying the object demanded and implied by the context.

<sup>d</sup> 45<sup>23</sup> I. e., in worship. Cf. I Kgs. 19<sup>18</sup>; also Phil. 2<sup>10, 11</sup>; Rom. 14<sup>11</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 45<sup>24</sup> Gk., saying; Heb., he said to me. Cheyne suggests a revision of the text which gives the reading, Only through Jehovah hath Jacob victories and strength.

<sup>f</sup> 45<sup>24</sup> Following several MSS. in reading the verb as a plural.

§ 173. Contrast between the Heathen Gods and Israel, Is. 46

Impo-
tence
of the heathen
gods

Jeho-
vah's omnipotent care
for his people

Contrast
between
the living
God
and mere idols

Jeho-
vah
alone
rules supreme
in human history

Is. 46 <sup>1</sup>Bel is bowed down, Nebo<sup>g</sup> stoops!

Their idols are consigned to the beasts and cattle,
They are lifted<sup>h</sup> up as a burden for tired animals!
<sup>2</sup>They stoop, and are bowed down together!
They are unable to rescue the burden,
But themselves are gone into captivity!

<sup>3</sup>Hearken to me, O house of Jacob,
And all the remnant of the house of Israel,
Who have been carried as a burden from birth,
Who have been borne from the mother's womb:
<sup>4</sup>Even to old age I am the same,
Until ye are gray-haired I will support you.
It is I who have borne the burden<sup>k</sup> and will still carry it;
It is I who bear and I will deliver.

<sup>5</sup>To whom will ye liken me and make me equal?
To whom compare me that I may be similar?
<sup>6</sup>They who freely give gold from a purse,
And weigh out silver with the balance
Hire a goldsmith that he may make a god of it,
Then they fall down and worship it.
<sup>7</sup>They lift it up on the shoulder they bear it,
And they rest it upon its base,
And it stands, not moving from its place.
Verily if a man cries to it, it answers not,
Nor does it deliver man from his distress.

<sup>8</sup>Remember this and consider,<sup>l</sup>
Lay it to heart ye evil-doers!
<sup>9</sup>Remember the former things of old,
For I am God and there is none other,

§ 173 This brief section develops the themes already suggested in 40<sup>17-26</sup>, 41<sup>21-24</sup>, 43<sup>8-13</sup>, and 44<sup>8-23</sup>. The aim is to emphasize the weakness and helplessness of the gods of the heathen, especially as represented by the deities of Babylon. Their images are fallen and have become but prey for the conquerors. These inert gods of stone must be borne about, as in the sacred processions, or as spoil on the backs of their captive subjects. Jehovah in contrast has borne his people in the past and now will deliver them in their time of need. As in 43<sup>4</sup>, Babylon has already fallen and the fate of its gods is made the basis of the comparison.

<sup>g</sup> 46<sup>1</sup> The Mercury and Jupiter of the Babylonian pantheon. Bel is evidently the prophet's designation of Marduk the chief god of Babylon, and Nebo is the god of learning worshipped at Borsippa, the western suburb of Babylon. The text of these opening lines is possibly corrupt and the metre is irregular.

<sup>h</sup> 46<sup>1</sup> Omitting the explanatory word, burden, and correcting the corrupt Heb.

<sup>i</sup> 46<sup>1</sup> Lit., for the tired; but this word is used collectively.

<sup>j</sup> 46<sup>2</sup> I. e., the idols borne away on the backs of beasts of burden to grace the temples of the conquerors.

<sup>k</sup> 46<sup>4</sup> Correcting the Heb. so as to carry on the figure.

<sup>l</sup> 46<sup>8</sup> Slightly revising the uncertain Heb. Another possible reconstruction gives the reading, own yourselves guilty. Possibly this vs. is a hortatory note similar to the index fingers recurring throughout the prophetic books.

Divine and there is none other like me.

<sup>10</sup>Who hath announced the outcome from the first,
And aforetime those things which had not yet taken place,
Who hath said, My counsel shall stand,
And all my pleasure will I accomplish?
<sup>11</sup>Who hath called from the east a bird of prey,<sup>m</sup>
From a distant land the man of my counsel?<sup>n</sup>
Verily I have spoken, and I will bring it to pass;
I have planned, and I will indeed accomplish it.

<sup>12</sup>Hearken to me, ye down-hearted,<sup>o</sup> who are far from the hope of salvation:
<sup>13</sup>I have brought near my salvation, it is not far off, and my deliverance shall not tarry;
For I will establish deliverance in Zion, my glory for Israel.

Therefore let his people trust him

§ 174. Triumph Song over Babylon's Downfall, Is. 47

Is. 47 <sup>1</sup>Come down and sit in the dust, O virgin Babylon!
Throneless sit on the ground, O daughter of the Chaldeans!
For thou shalt no longer be called, The Tender and The Dainty!
<sup>2</sup>Take the mill-stones and grind meal,<sup>p</sup> put back the veil,<sup>q</sup>
Lift up the skirt, bare the leg, wade through streams!
<sup>3</sup>Thy nakedness shall be uncovered and thy shame shall be seen.<sup>r</sup>
Vengeance<sup>s</sup> will I take, nor will I be entreated, saith<sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>our Redeemer;
Jehovah of hosts is his name, Israel's Holy One.

Babylon's hour of conquest and enslavement

<sup>5</sup>Sit silent and shrouded<sup>u</sup> with darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans!
For never again shall they call thee, Mistress of Kingdoms.
<sup>6</sup>I was wroth with my people, I profaned my heritage,
I gave them into thy power,<sup>v</sup> but thou didst show them no mercy;
On the aged thou madest press thy heavy yoke,
<sup>7</sup>And thou saidst, I shall exist forever, a queen for all time;
Thou didst not lay these things to heart, nor think of their issue.

Punished for its cruelty to Jehovah's people

<sup>m</sup> 46<sup>11</sup> I. e., the Israelite race viewed in its conquering aspect as best illustrated in the days of David. Cf. 45<sup>1, 2</sup>. The prevailing identification with Cyrus is not impossible, for the general theme is Babylon's overthrow, which the prophet regards as an already accomplished fact.

<sup>n</sup> 46<sup>11</sup> Heb., his counsel, i. e., the one to realize the divine purpose, the nation with a unique destiny represented in its earliest days by Abraham.

<sup>o</sup> 46<sup>12</sup> So Gk. and the demands of the context. Heb., courageous. Cf. Ps. 76<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>§ 174</sup> Babylon here stands, as frequently in late Jewish and Christian literature, as a type of the proud, arrogant world powers that have oppressed Israel. There is no note of hatred against the heathen; the prophet simply proclaims the fact that their guilt and pride have at last called down Jehovah's wrath and that the day of their overthrow is near at hand.

<sup>p</sup> 47<sup>2</sup> This was the work of the humblest slaves.

<sup>q</sup> 47<sup>2</sup> I. e., put off the garb of the noble woman.

<sup>r</sup> 47<sup>3</sup> This line is not altogether consistent with the context and may be secondary.

<sup>s</sup> 47<sup>3</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the aid of the Gk. and the context.

<sup>t</sup> 47<sup>3</sup> So Gk. A. Through a common scribal error the Heb. reads, man.

<sup>u</sup> 47<sup>5</sup> Lit., enter into.

<sup>v</sup> 47<sup>6</sup> The reference to the fortunes of the exiles in Bab. suggests that the poet was writing long after the event.

Disaster
impending

The
cause:
false pride

And trust
in magic
and false guides

Exordium:
address to Je-
hovah's
people

<sup>8</sup>Now hear this, O voluptuous one, who dwellest self-confident, Thou who sayest in thy heart, I am and there is none other,
 I shall not sit in widowhood, nor know the loss of children.
<sup>9</sup>Therefore these two shall have overtaken thee in a moment, at one blow;
 Bereavement and widowhood to the full;<sup>w</sup> they have come upon thee,
 Despite thy many spells and the great might of thine incantations;
<sup>10</sup>Though thou wast secure in thy wickedness and saidst, None seeth me!
 Thy wisdom and thy knowledge<sup>x</sup>—these have led thee astray,
 So that thou saidst in thy heart, I am and there is none other!
<sup>11</sup>Therefore calamity shall come upon thee which thou shalt not know how to avert,<sup>y</sup>
 And disaster shall fall upon thee, thou canst not appease it,
 And ruin shall come upon thee suddenly without thy knowing.
<sup>12</sup>Pray, persist in thy incantations and in thy many enchantments,<sup>z</sup>
 Perhaps thou mayest succeed, perhaps thou wilt inspire terror!
<sup>13</sup>Thou hast wearied thyself with thy many counsels; let them stand forth!
 Yea, let them deliver thee, the mappers of the heavens and the star-gazers,<sup>a</sup>
 They who make known each month what<sup>b</sup> shall befall thee!
<sup>14</sup>Behold, they have become like stubble, the fire consumes them,
 They cannot save their own life from the power of the flame,
 There is not a coal to give warmth nor a fire to set before!<sup>c</sup> <sup>15</sup>Such have they become to thee, about whom thou didst weary thyself<sup>d</sup> from thy youth;
 They fall in confusion before him; there is none to help thee!

§ 175. Recapitulation of the Preceding Arguments, Is. 48

Is. 48 <sup>1</sup>Hear this, O house of Jacob,
 Who are called by the name of Israel,
 And sprang from the loins<sup>e</sup> of Judah,

<sup>w</sup> 47<sup>9</sup> Gk. A., and Syr., suddenly. In the traditional Heb. text some of the verbs are in the past and others in the future tense. Those in the future are the result of a mistaken vocalization. The reading of the original was probably as above.

<sup>x</sup> 47<sup>10</sup> These words are of course used in irony.

<sup>y</sup> 47<sup>11</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. text with the aid of the Targ.

<sup>z</sup> 47<sup>12</sup> A scribe has introduced from <sup>15</sup> the note, about whom thou didst trouble thyself from thy youth. It is out of harmony with the metre and context.

<sup>a</sup> 43<sup>13</sup> I. e., the Baby. astrologers who claimed that they could predict the future from the movements of the stars.

<sup>b</sup> 43<sup>13</sup> Heb., from which.

<sup>c</sup> 43<sup>14</sup> By many scholars this vs., which is loosely connected with the context, is regarded as secondary, but it appears rather to be an example of the grim humor of the poet. The fires of Gehenna are not useful for warmth!

<sup>d</sup> 43<sup>15</sup> A scribe has inserted, traffickers.

<sup>§ 175</sup> This passage is significant because it contains a recapitulation of the different arguments in the preceding chapters and is the conclusion of 40–48. The evidence of Jehovah's power to deliver his people, based on the fact that through his earlier prophets he had announced significant events of the past century, is again strongly emphasized. Jehovah's marvellous leadership of his people is also recorded. The only thing which has deterred them from accomplishing still greater marvels in the past and the present has been their lack of faith and responsiveness to his divine commands. Cf., e.g., <sup>18, 19</sup>. It is evident here, as throughout these stirring chapters, that the prophet is not merely dealing with a great problem, but is also endeavoring, with all his remarkable powers, to arouse his contemporaries to noble action.

<sup>e</sup> 48<sup>1</sup> Correcting the Heb. in the light of the parallel in Gen. 15<sup>1</sup> and other similar passages.

Who swear by the name of Jehovah,
And invoke the God of Israel—
Not in truth nor by right—
<sup>2</sup>For after the holy city they call themselves,
And put their reliance in Israel's God,
Whose name is Jehovah of Hosts.

<sup>3</sup>The former things I announced of long ago,
From my mouth they came forth and I delivered them;
Suddenly I wrought and they came to pass;
<sup>4</sup>For I knew that thou wast stubborn,
And thy neck an iron band,
And thy forehead brass.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>5</sup>Yea, I announced it to thee long ago,
Before it came to pass I declared it to thee,
Lest thou shouldst say, My idol<sup>g</sup> wrought them,
My molten and graven image<sup>h</sup> commanded them.

Earlier
predictions
and their fulfil-
ment

<sup>6</sup>Thou didst hear, behold all this,<sup>i</sup>
And wilt thou<sup>j</sup> not proclaim<sup>k</sup> it?
New things I am about to declare to thee,
Yea, hidden things which thou hast not known.
<sup>7</sup>Now, not long ago, were they created,
Heretofore thou didst not hear them,
Lest thou shouldst say, Behold I knew them.
<sup>8</sup>Thou, indeed, hast neither heard nor known,
Nor was thine ear open<sup>l</sup> long ago,
For I knew how treacherous thou art,
That from birth thou wast called, Transgressor!

The
new revelation
about
to be given

<sup>9</sup>For my name's sake I restrain mine anger,
And for my praise I bridle it,<sup>m</sup> so as not cut thee off.
<sup>10</sup>Behold I have refined thee but not as silver,<sup>n</sup>
I have tried thee in the furnace of affliction.
<sup>11</sup>For my name's sake<sup>o</sup> I will do it,
For how should my name<sup>p</sup> be profaned?
And my glory I will not give to another.

Not
deserved but because
Jeho-
vah
wills it

<sup>f</sup> 48<sup>4</sup> Possibly this vs. is secondary.

<sup>g</sup> 48<sup>5</sup> Heb., my pain; a scribal substitute for the similar Heb. word, idol.

<sup>h</sup> 48<sup>5</sup> This reference to idolatry is paralleled by many others in the writings of the prophets.

<sup>i</sup> 48<sup>6</sup> The text here is very doubtful; but the VSS. afford no aid.

<sup>j</sup> 48<sup>6</sup> Restoring the corrupt text by the aid of the parallel passage in <sup>8</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 48<sup>6</sup> Again correcting the Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>l</sup> 48<sup>8</sup> Gk., nor have I opened.

<sup>m</sup> 48<sup>9</sup> Restoring the impossible Heb. text as the context and parallelism demand.

<sup>n</sup> 48<sup>10</sup> The text is uncertain.

<sup>o</sup> 48<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>p</sup> 48<sup>11</sup> The subject is evidently Jehovah's name, which in the Heb. has fallen out of the preceding line.

Jeho-
vah's rule in the universe

Jeho-
vah's
faithful servant
to carry out the divine
purpose

If Israel
would only be faithful to Jehovah's leadership

The second exodus

<sup>12</sup>Hearken to me, O Jacob,
And Israel whom I have called:
It is I, even I, who am the first,
I also am the last,

<sup>13</sup>It was my hand that founded the earth,
And my right hand spread out the heavens,
When I to them<sup>q</sup> do call,
They stand forth together.

<sup>14</sup>Assemble all of you<sup>r</sup> and hear,
Which one of them<sup>s</sup> foretold these things?<sup>t</sup>
That one whom Jehovah loveth,<sup>u</sup>
He will execute his pleasure and his might.
<sup>15</sup>I myself have spoken, yea, I have called him,
I have brought him and made his way prosperous.<sup>v</sup> <sup>16</sup>Draw ye near to me and hear ye this,
From the first I have not spoken in secret,
From the time that it happened I announced<sup>w</sup> it.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel,
I am Jehovah thy God, Who teachest thee to succeed,
Who leadeth thee in the way thou shouldst go. <sup>18</sup>If thou hadst but heeded my commands!
Then thy peace would have been like a river, and thy salvation like the waves of the sea.
<sup>19</sup>Thine offspring would have been as many as the sand, and thy descendants<sup>y</sup> as the dust;
Then neither be cut off nor destroyed would thy<sup>z</sup> name be before me!

<sup>20</sup>Go forth, fly with a shout of joy;<sup>a</sup>
Declare, make this known,

<sup>q</sup> 48<sup>13</sup> The reference is to the heavenly host which respond to Jehovah's commands. Cf. Ps. 58<sup>1, 2</sup>, 82<sup>1</sup>, 103<sup>20, 21</sup>, 104<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 48<sup>14</sup> In the new stanza the nations are evidently addressed, as so often in the writings of the prophet.

<sup>s</sup> 48<sup>14</sup> I. e., the gods of the heathen nations. Cf. 41<sup>22, 26</sup>, 44<sup>7</sup>, 45<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>t</sup> 48<sup>14</sup> I. e., the facts that follow.

<sup>u</sup> 48<sup>14</sup> This passage is unintelligible in its present Heb. form. With emendations it might read, Jehovah loveth him; he will do his pleasure on Babylon and his might on the Chaldeans; but Babylon and the Chaldeans are obvious insertions, and when they are removed a regular metre and what was probably the original text remains. As the variations in the versions indicate, the first part of the vs. has suffered in transmission. The above reading is based on the demands of the context, which requires an answer to the preceding question. The subsequent context and the parallel passages indicate that the reference is to the nation Israel, and especially the faithful within the nation, 43<sup>1-3</sup>, 44<sup>1-8</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 48<sup>15</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr., which have preserved the original text.

<sup>w</sup> 48<sup>16</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 48<sup>16</sup> The line, And now the Lord Jehovah hath sent me and his spirit, if original, was clearly introduced here through a scribal error.

<sup>y</sup> 48<sup>19</sup> Through a scribal repetition the Heb. adds, of thy loins. The last word in this line has also been corrupted to read, as its grains; but Gk., dust of the earth.

<sup>z</sup> 49<sup>13</sup> So Gk.

<sup>a</sup> 48<sup>20</sup> Heb., Go forth from Babylon, flee from the Chaldeans; but as Professor Torrey has shown, the words, Babylon and Chaldeans are without reasonable doubt insertions of a later scribe who had especially the Babylonian exiles in mind. When they are removed the regular metre and logical parallelism of the vs. are revealed.

Carry it forth to the ends of the earth,
 Proclaim: Jehovah redeemeth his servant Jacob!
<sup>21</sup>They thirsted not in the deserts through which he led them.
 Water he made to flow from the rock for them,
 He cleft the rock so that the water gushed out.<sup>b</sup>

§ 176. Establishment of Jehovah's Kingdom and Restoration of His People, Is. 49<sup>1</sup>–50<sup>3</sup>

Is. 49 <sup>1</sup>Hearken to me, ye coastlands,
 And listen, ye distant peoples:
 Jehovah hath called me from the womb,
 From my mother's lap made mention of my name.<sup>c</sup>
<sup>2</sup>He hath made my mouth like a sharp sword,
 In the shadow of his hand he hid me,
 He made me a polished arrow,
 In his quiver he concealed me,
<sup>3</sup>And he said to me, Thou art my servant,
 Israel, in whom I will glorify myself.

Call
and preparation
of Jehovah's
true
servant

<sup>4</sup>But I said, I have labored in vain,
 I spent my strength for nothing and vanity,
 Nevertheless my right is with Jehovah,
 And my recompense with my God

His
confidence in Je-
hovah

<sup>5</sup>And now, thus saith Jehovah,<sup>d</sup>
 (He who formed from birth to be his servant,
 To bring Jacob back to him,
 And that Israel might be gathered<sup>e</sup> to him;<sup>f</sup>

His
worldwide mission

<sup>b</sup> 48<sup>21</sup>. The vs., There is no peace, saith Jehovah, for the godless, is a later editorial epilogue in the spirit of the wisdom school. Cf. Hos. 14<sup>8</sup>. It is entirely disconnected with the context.

§ 176 Chap. 49 introduces the second general division of II Is. Many of the same themes are developed as in the first part. The promises of a general restoration of Jehovah's people are presented with still greater fervor and splendor of thought and diction; but side by side with these assurances of what Jehovah intends to do for his people the prophet defines still further the responsibilities of the servant nation. This he accomplishes by means of the dramatic portraits of the character of the ideal servant, who is required to perform Jehovah's saving work for his race and humanity. In this section the servant himself speaks, telling of his training and of the world-wide task which Jehovah had intrusted<sup>g</sup> to him. Again the prophet brings this portrait of the ideal servant into close connection with the statements concerning the personal responsibility of his countrymen. The great question is thus again brought to the front: Jehovah is ready to do his part in fullest measure; will the survivors of the chosen race do theirs?

This section contains many decisive indications that it was written after the close of the Babylonian exile. Jerusalem is already reoccupied, but its population is small and it is the prey of its hostile rulers, 49<sup>14-19</sup>. Zech.'s promises, § 157, that its population should be too great for its present bounds is reiterated, 49<sup>19, 20</sup>.

In his picture of the servant of Jehovah, 49<sup>2</sup>, and in his declaration, 49<sup>25, 26</sup>, that Israel's oppressors should be destroyed, the prophet develops the more martial aspect of that coming deliverance which he had already suggested in § 168.

<sup>c</sup> 49<sup>1</sup>. I. e., in giving me the title, servant of Jehovah, he has indicated my true character and mission.

<sup>d</sup> 49<sup>5</sup> Lit., he said, i. e., to himself.

<sup>e</sup> 49<sup>5</sup> Or, reversing the text, I will gather.

<sup>f</sup> 49<sup>5</sup> Following the Targ. and several early versions and MSS. Heb., not.

For I was honored<sup>g</sup> in the sight of Jehovah,
 And my God became my strength);
<sup>6</sup>It<sup>h</sup> is too little a thing to be my servant,
 To raise up the tribes of Jacob,
 And to restore the survivors<sup>i</sup> of Israel;
 Therefore I will make thee the light of the nations,
 That thy salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.<sup>j</sup>

Future
recognition
of his
work

<sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah,
 The Redeemer of Israel, his Holy One,
 To him who is heartily despised,<sup>j</sup>
 To the one abhorred of the people, a servant of rulers:
 Kings shall see and arise,
 Princes and they shall do homage,
 Because of Jehovah who is faithful,
 The Holy One of Israel who hath chosen thee.

His work of restoration

<sup>8</sup>Thus saith Jehovah,
 In a time of favor I answer thee,
 And in a day of deliverance I help thee,
 And I make thee<sup>k</sup> a pledge to the people,<sup>l</sup>
 To raise up the [ruined]<sup>m</sup> land,
 To reapportion the desolate heritages,
<sup>n</sup>Saying to those who are bound, ‘Go forth,’
 To those in darkness, ‘Show yourselves!’

Return cf
the
exiles

They shall pasture along<sup>n</sup> all ways,
 Even on all the bare hills shall they graze.
<sup>10</sup>They shall not be hungry nor thirsty,
 Neither shall the glowing heat nor the sun smite them,
 For he who hath pity on them shall lead them,
 And to gushing fountains will he guide them.
<sup>11</sup>And I will make all<sup>o</sup> mountains a road,
 And highways shall be built up.

Joy
over
the restora-
tion

<sup>12</sup>Behold, these come from afar,
 And these from the north<sup>p</sup> and west,

<sup>g</sup> 49<sup>5</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>h</sup> 49<sup>6</sup> The words, and he saith, have apparently been added as supplemental gloss.

<sup>i</sup> 49<sup>7</sup> Following the marginal reading of the Heb.

<sup>j</sup> 49<sup>7</sup> Correcting the Heb., which has apparently been changed with deliberate purpose by a later scribe to whom the designation of the servant was distasteful.

<sup>k</sup> 49<sup>8</sup> The Heb. text adds from 42<sup>8</sup>, I keep thee, but this awkward addition is not found in many early versions.

<sup>l</sup> 49<sup>8</sup> The reference is to the coming deliverance. Cf. 42<sup>8</sup>. <sup>7</sup>

<sup>m</sup> 49<sup>9</sup> The parallelism and metre call for some such word as ruined. Cf. 1<sup>9</sup>, which has probably fallen out of the text.

<sup>n</sup> 49<sup>9</sup> I. e., wherever they go. The Gk. only has preserved the all.

<sup>o</sup> 49<sup>10</sup> So Gk., Syr., and Targ. Heb., my mountains . . . and my highways.

<sup>p</sup> 49<sup>12</sup> Many scholars would substitute, these from the end of the earth, on the basis of 43<sup>8</sup>, and regard, from the north, as a scribal insertion from Ps. 107<sup>3</sup>.

And these from the land of the Syenites!<sup>19</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Shout with joy, O heavens, and exalt, O earth!

Let the mountains break forth into shouts of joy!

For Jehovah hath had pity on his people,

And will show mercy to his afflicted ones.

<sup>14</sup>But Zion said, Jehovah hath forsaken me,<sup>r</sup> and my Lord hath forgotten me!

<sup>15</sup>Can a woman forget her babe, so as not to have compassion on her own offspring?

Yea, these indeed may forget, but I will not forget thee.

<sup>16</sup>Behold on my<sup>s</sup> hands have I graven thee; thy walls are continually before me.

<sup>17</sup>Thy builders<sup>t</sup> outstrip those who tear thee down; those who lay thee waste shall go forth from thee.

<sup>18</sup>Lift up thine eyes round about, and see, they are all gathered together, They come to thee, as I live, is Jehovah's oracle.

Thou shalt deck thyself with them all as with an ornament, and thou shalt fasten them on thee as does a bride.

<sup>19</sup>Verily, I did lay thee waste and made thee desolate and razed thee to the ground;<sup>u</sup>

But now thou shalt be too small for thine inhabitants and those who would swallow thee up shall be afar off.

<sup>20</sup>The children of which thou hast been bereft will yet be saying in thine ears: 'The place is too small for me, make me room to dwell in.'

<sup>21</sup>And thou wilt say to thyself, 'Who hath borne me these?

I was bereaved and barren;<sup>v</sup> but these, Who hath reared them?'

Behold I was left alone; these, whence do they come?

<sup>22</sup>Thus saith the Lord, Jehovah:

Behold, I will lift up my hand to the nations

And to the peoples I will raise my signal

And they shall bring thy sons in the bosom,

And thy daughters shall be carried on the shoulders,

<sup>23</sup>Kings shall be thy foster-fathers,

And queens thy nursing mothers.

With faces to the ground they shall do thee homage,

<sup>q</sup> 49<sup>12</sup> Restoring the Heb. text by analogy with Ezek. 29<sup>10</sup>, 30<sup>6</sup>. Syene, identified with the modern Assuan, represents the southernmost point known to the Israelites in this age. Lat., south. Recent discoveries have shown the importance of this centre of a large Jewish colony with a temple and developed service.

<sup>r</sup> 49<sup>13</sup> The metre of several of the lines that follow is irregular, merging into the emotional five-beat measure.

<sup>s</sup> 49<sup>16</sup> So Gk. Heb. omits, my.

<sup>t</sup> 49<sup>17</sup> So Gk., Lat., and Targ. Heb., thy sons.

<sup>u</sup> 49<sup>19</sup> Following Torrey in changing the pointing of the Heb., which reads, thy waste and desolate places and thy land of ruins.

<sup>v</sup> 49<sup>21</sup> The Heb. adds, exiled and bound; but these words are not found in the Gk. and destroy the regular metre of the vs. They are probably but a mistaken repetition of the preceding Heb. word.

Jeho-
vah's passionate love for his people

Exiles returning to Jerusalem

Glories
of the restored
city

All
na-tions
to unite in restoring the
exiles

And lick the dust of thy feet.
 Then thou wilt know that I am Jehovah,
 And that they who trust in me shall never be put to shame.

No
human power can thwart
Jeho-
vah's gracious
purpose

<sup>24</sup>Can prey be taken from a mighty warrior,
 Or the captives of a tyrant<sup>w</sup> be delivered?
<sup>25</sup>Verily, thus saith Jehovah,
 Even the captives of the mighty warrior might be taken from him,
 And the prey of the tyrant might be delivered;
 But thy cause<sup>x</sup> will I plead,
 Thy children will I myself deliver,
<sup>26</sup>And I will make thine oppressors eat their own flesh,
 And they will be drunken with their own blood as with new wine.
 And all flesh will know,
 That I, Jehovah, am thy Saviour,
 And thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

He has never wholly rejected His
people

50 <sup>1</sup> Thus saith Jehovah,
 Where is the bill of divorce?
 With which I put away your mother?
 Or to which one of my creditors is it
 To whom I have sold you?
 Behold, for your sins were ye sold,
 For your crimes was your mother put away!

Let
none doubt his power
to deliver

<sup>2</sup>Why when I came was there no one,
 When I called there was none to answer?
 Is my hand too short to deliver,
 Or have I no power to rescue?
 Behold, by my rebuke, I dry up the sea,
 I make rivers a desert,
 Their fish dry up<sup>y</sup> for lack of water,
 And perish from thirst.
<sup>3</sup>I clothe the heavens in mourning
 And I make sackcloth their covering.

<sup>w</sup> 49<sup>24</sup> Following the Syr. and Lat. and the close parallelism in <sup>25</sup> in correcting the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 49<sup>25</sup> So Gk.

<sup>y</sup> 50<sup>2</sup> So Gk

§ 177. The Confidence of Jehovah's True Servant, Is. 50<sup>4-11</sup>

Is. 50 <sup>a</sup>The Lord Jehovah hath given me the tongue of a trained disciple? <sup>b</sup>To give<sup>a</sup> to the fainting a word of help, he waketh me early,<sup>b</sup>
Early he waketh me, that I may listen as a disciple.

<sup>c</sup>The Lord Jehovah hath opened mine ear,<sup>c</sup>
And I have not been wilful nor turned back rebelliously.

<sup>d</sup>My back I gave to smiters and my cheek to those who plucked the beard,<sup>d</sup>
My face I hid not from insult and spitting,

<sup>e</sup>For my Lord Jehovah is my helper; so that I am not confounded.

Therefore I have set my face like flint, and I know that I shall not be put to shame.

<sup>f</sup>He is near who justifieth me, who will contend with me? let us stand up together!

Who is the adversary to oppose<sup>e</sup> my cause? let him draw near to me!

<sup>g</sup>Behold the Lord Jehovah is my helper; who is he that can harm me?

Lo, they shall all fall to pieces like a garment, the moth shall consume them.

<sup>h</sup>Who among you feareth Jehovah, let him hearken to the voice of his servant?<sup>f</sup>

Who walked in darkness, having no light,

Let him trust in the name of Jehovah and rely on his God?

<sup>i</sup>Behold, all ye who kindle a fire, who light fire-brands.<sup>g</sup>

Go on in the light of your fire, and of the brands which ye have lighted!

From my hand this is appointed for you: ye shall lie down in a place of torment!<sup>h</sup>

§ 177 Here the prophet continues the description of Jehovah's ideal servant by making the servant himself again speak, describing his training and his attitude toward Jehovah. Vs. <sup>10</sup> is illuminating, for here the prophet calls upon those who fear Jehovah to listen to the voice of his servant. He thus brings the ideal clearly before those whom he hoped might realize it. The passage is also profoundly significant because it first introduces the martyr element into the work of the servant. The experiences of life and especially that of the faithful Jews during this trying period demonstrate the great truth which the prophet here, and especially in § 180, brings clearly to the front; he who would save and uplift his needy fellow-men can do so only through suffering and sacrifice nobly and voluntarily borne. The memoirs of Nehemiah, the references in the book of Malachi and in the Psalms of this period reveal the presence in the Judean community of a small party of faithful followers of Jehovah, poor in wealth and influence, the prey of their corrupt, impious leaders. Their fidelity to the ideals of their race and to the dictates of their conscience, and their very piety, made them the objects of the attack and derision of the strong and powerful of the community. It was their fidelity and patient suffering, however, which kept alive the faith of their race. In the school of patient suffering and affliction they learned those great spiritual truths which constituted Israel's saving message to the world. The servant here voices in part their experiences and hopes.

<sup>a</sup> 50<sup>4</sup> So 8<sup>16</sup>. The word designates one taught at the feet of a teacher. The servant is first a disciple that he may in time become himself a teacher. Cf. 42<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 50<sup>4</sup> Following the suggestion of Torrey in recognizing the first word as a mistaken repetition of the second and the main verb as an Aram. root.

<sup>c</sup> 50<sup>5</sup> Lit., in the morning.

<sup>d</sup> 50<sup>6</sup> I. e., given me a revelation, insight into truth. Cf. I Sam. 9<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 50<sup>7</sup> Cf. Ps. 129<sup>3</sup>, Neh. 13<sup>25</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 50<sup>8</sup> I. e., leads the attack against me.

<sup>g</sup> 50<sup>9</sup> Here the prophet applies the ideal of the servant to his contemporaries. The Gk. and Syr., in preserving the imperative (supported by <sup>10c</sup>), bring out the full force of the prophet's teaching.

<sup>h</sup> 50<sup>11</sup> The reference is to the party of the proud and godless in the Judean community who were opposed to the afflicted and righteous.

<sup>i</sup> 50<sup>12</sup> I. e., Gehenna, as in 43<sup>14</sup>, 66<sup>24</sup>.

Training and attitude of the servant

Faith and determination amidst persecution

Assurance of ultimate vindication

Lesson of encouragement and warning thus taught

§ 178. Encouragement for the Faithful in Israel, Is. 5<sup>1-16</sup>

The past
an earnest
of the future

Is. 51 <sup>1</sup>Hearken to me ye who pursue righteousness,<sup>i</sup> who seek Jehovah! Consider the rock whence ye were hewn,<sup>j</sup> and the pit<sup>k</sup> whence ye were quarried.

<sup>2</sup>Consider Abraham, your father and Sarah who bore you!

For he was only one when I called him and blessed<sup>l</sup> him, and increased him.

<sup>3</sup>So Jehovah hath comforted Zion, comforted all her ruins,

And he will make her wilderness like Eden and her desert like the garden of Jehovah.

Joy and gladness shall be found in her, thanksgiving and <sup>m</sup>e voice of songs.

Jeho-
vah's
new revelation to all
nations

<sup>4</sup>Hearken to me, O my people, Yea, give ear to me, O my nation,<sup>m</sup>
For from me teaching shall go forth,
And my law suddenly<sup>n</sup> as a light to the peoples, <sup>5</sup>My triumph<sup>o</sup> is near, my salvation will go forth,
Mine arms shall rule the peoples,
For me the coastlands wait.<sup>p</sup>

His
salvation
alone
assured

<sup>6</sup>Lift up your eyes to the heavens.
And look at the earth beneath;
For the heavens shall vanish like smoke,
And the earth wear out like a garment,
And its inhabitants will die like gnats.<sup>q</sup>
But my deliverance will be for ever,
And my triumph will not fail.<sup>r</sup>

Let the faithful wait
and trust

<sup>7</sup>Hearken to me ye who know what is right,
Ye people in whose heart is my teaching.
Fear not the insults of mere men,

§ 178 Again this section presents clear evidence, e. g., in <sup>3</sup>, that Jerusalem was already repopulated, but the general return of the exiles was still in the future. The points of contact with Zech., both in thought and diction, are many. The prophet here voices more clearly than before the belief which he shares in common with the post-exilic writers, that Jehovah would suddenly rise and inaugurate a new epoch in the history of the world. The language of <sup>4-8</sup> is akin to that of the later apocalypses. The prophet's aim is to encourage and to assuage the fears of the people in whose heart is Jehovah's instruction. Unhesitatingly the poet-prophet refers to the ancient Heb. tradition of Jehovah's contest with Rahab, the great dragon, the personified Chaos, the Tiamat of Babylonian mythology, and of the victory which resulted in the creation of the world. Even so again Jehovah will rise to overthrow the forces of evil and introduce regime of peace and justice. Here, as elsewhere, the prophet reveals his familiarity with the early Judean group of traditions rather than with the late priestly.

<sup>1</sup> 51<sup>1</sup> I. e., vindication or redress. In this vs. and in 56<sup>8</sup> it clearly has the meaning of triumph.

<sup>i</sup> 51<sup>1</sup> I. e., consider the humble and small beginnings of this great nation.

<sup>j</sup> 51<sup>2</sup> A scribe has added the explanatory gloss, cistern.

<sup>k</sup> 51<sup>2</sup> Following the Gk., Lat., and Targ., and the parallelisms of the vs.

<sup>l</sup> 51<sup>4</sup> Cf. 42<sup>1</sup>, where the servant is Jehovah's agent to teach his law to the nations.

<sup>m</sup> 51<sup>4</sup> Gk. connects this word with the next vs.

<sup>n</sup> 51<sup>5</sup> Lit., righteousness, i. e., redress, triumph.

<sup>o</sup> 51<sup>5</sup> The Heb. adds, and for my arms they wait. This is evidently a confused scribal repetition of the line before the last. In the Gk. this scribal addition is identical with <sup>5c</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 51<sup>6</sup> Restoring two letters omitted by the mistake of a scribe because they were similar to the initial letters of the next word. This last line may be secondary.

<sup>r</sup> 51<sup>6</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Lat.

Nor be frightened by their revilings!
<sup>s</sup>For the moth shall consume them as a garment,
 And the worm will devour them as wool,
 But my triumph will last forever,
 And my deliverance will be through all the ages.

<sup>9</sup>Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of Jehovah!
 Awake as in the days of old, the times long past!
 Was it not thou who didst cut Rahab<sup>s</sup> in pieces, didst pierce<sup>t</sup> through the dragon?

Appeal to Jehovah again to deliver as at the creation

<sup>10</sup>Was it not thou who didst dry up the sea, the waters of the great deep?<sup>u</sup>
 Who didst make the depths of the sea a way for the redeemed to pass over?
<sup>11</sup>And Jehovah's redeemed one will return to Jehovah, and will come to Zion with exultation, <sup>11</sup>And with everlasting joy upon their heads, and labor and sighing shall flee away.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>12</sup>I, I am he who comforteth thee.<sup>w</sup> Of whom art thou afraid?

Assurance that he will surely deliver

Of frail mortal man or of a son of the earth-born who is destroyed as grass?
<sup>13</sup>And didst thou forget Jehovah thy Maker, who stretched out the heaven and founded the earth?

Assurance that he will surely deliver

And dost thou tremble continually all the day for the fury of the oppressor?
 When he maketh ready to destroy, where is the fury of the oppressor?<sup>x</sup>

<sup>14</sup>In delivering thee [Jehovah] will not stand still nor tarry.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>15</sup>I, Jehovah am thy God;
 He who stirs up the sea that its billows roar,
 Jehovah of hosts is his name.

Israel's protector is God Almighty

<sup>16</sup>I have put my words in thy mouth,
 In the shadow of my hand have I hid thee,
 Stretching out the heavens, founding the earth,
 And saying to Zion, Thou art my people!<sup>z</sup>

<sup>s</sup> 51<sup>9</sup> A reference to the conflict between the creating God and the monster representing chaos in the old Semitic tradition of the creation. Cf. Vol. I, 368.

<sup>t</sup> 51<sup>9</sup> Or, revising the Heb., dishonor.

<sup>u</sup> 51<sup>10</sup> Probably a reference to the deliverance at the exodus from Egypt (cf following lines), although the prophet may still have had in mind the work of creation.

<sup>v</sup> 51<sup>11</sup> Possibly the original position of this vs. was in 35<sup>10</sup> and not in the present context.

<sup>w</sup> 51<sup>12</sup> So Gk. and Sym. The Heb. has, you as the result of a wrong division of the letters.

<sup>x</sup> 51<sup>13</sup> The text and interpretation are very doubtful. Possibly this line is a gloss. The oppressor is probably the proud persecutors of the righteous. Cf. 7.

<sup>y</sup> 51<sup>14</sup> Again the text is evidently corrupt. The Gk., which possibly gives the original reading, has been followed. Heb., lit., soon shall the crouching one be freed, he shall not die to the pit, nor shall his bread fail.

<sup>z</sup> 51<sup>15</sup> So Syr. Heb., to plant.

§ 179. Message of Encouragement to Zion the Holy City, Is. 51<sup>17</sup>–52<sup>12</sup>

Jerusalem's cup of woe

Is. 51 <sup>17</sup>Rouse thee! Rouse thee! stand up, O Jerusalem, Who hast drunk at Jehovah's hand the cup<sup>a</sup> of his wrath!

The bowl of reeling thou hast drunken, hast drained!

<sup>18</sup>There is none to guide thee<sup>b</sup> of all the sons whom thou hast borne,
And none to take thee by the hand of all the sons whom thou hast reared.

<sup>19</sup>These two things have befallen thee—who can condole with thee?

Desolation and destruction, famine and the sword—who can comfort thee?

<sup>20</sup>Thy sons lay fainting,<sup>c</sup> like an antelope in a net,
They were filled with the wrath of Jehovah, of the rebuke of thy God.

Assurance
of relief
from present
woes

<sup>21</sup>Therefore hear this, thou afflicted one and drunken, but not with wine,

<sup>22</sup>Thus saith Jehovah thy God<sup>d</sup> who pleadeth the cause of his people,
Behold, from thy hand I have taken the cup of reeling;

Thou shalt not drink it again—the bowl<sup>e</sup> of my wrath,

<sup>23</sup>And I put it in the hand of those who oppressed thee and of those who afflicted thee,<sup>f</sup>

Who have said to thee, ‘Bow down that we may pass over!

Yea, thou madest thy back as the ground,<sup>g</sup> even a street for those who pass by!

Summons
to arise in new strength
and prosperity

52 <sup>1</sup>Awake, awake! put on thy strength, O Zion!
Put on thy splendid garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city!
For never again shall enter thee the uncircumcised and unclean.

<sup>2</sup>Shake off the dust, stand up, O captive Jerusalem, Loose the bands from thy neck, O captive<sup>h</sup> daughter of Zion.

<sup>3</sup>For thus saith Jehovah, Ye were sold for nought,

§ 179 The thought of this section is closely parallel to that of § 166. The poet here employs Jer.'s figure of the cup of divine wrath instead of that of forced military service, as in § 166. The period of shame and ignominy for Jehovah's people is nearly over and the day of vindication is near at hand. The presence of this thought perhaps explains why this section has been introduced between §§ 178 and 180, which describes the shame and suffering of the faithful servant of Jehovah. In 52<sup>6</sup> the prophet for the first time pauses to denounce at length the boastful rulers of the Judean community who prey upon rather than protect the people and revile rather than revere Jehovah. They stand in striking contrast to the faithful few whose experiences and character probably suggested in part to the prophet his marvellous picture of the suffering servant of Jehovah. These scornful, corrupt rulers are among the many who fail to appreciate and who despise the patient yet fruitful services of the faithful few. For further description of these rulers, cf. §§ 186, 188.

<sup>a</sup> 51<sup>17</sup> A scribe has added after goblet the more familiar Heb. word, cup. It is not found in the Gk. and some Lat. text.

<sup>b</sup> 51<sup>18</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has, her, and the third person throughout the vs., in striking variation from the preceding and following vss., which have the second person. Otherwise the vs. is secondary.

<sup>c</sup> 51<sup>20</sup> A scribe familiar with Lam. 2<sup>19</sup>, 4<sup>1</sup> has added the clause, at all the corners of the streets; but this destroys the metre of the vs.

<sup>d</sup> 51<sup>22</sup> Following the Gk. and the demands of the context.

<sup>e</sup> 51<sup>22</sup> Again a scribe has added, cup. The clauses in this line are transposed for metrical reasons.

<sup>f</sup> 51<sup>23</sup> Completing the line with the aid of the superior Gk. text.

<sup>g</sup> 51<sup>23</sup> Cf. Josh. 10<sup>23</sup>, Judg. 8<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 52<sup>2</sup> Slightly revising the Heb.

And without money shall ye be redeemed.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>5</sup>But now what do I here, is the oracle of Jehovah,

For my people is taken for nought? Those who rule over them are boastful.<sup>j</sup>

And continually all the day long my name is reviled.

<sup>6</sup>Therefore my people shall know my name, in that day,

That it is I who have promised, behold it is I,

<sup>7</sup>How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of him who brings good news,<sup>k</sup> Of him who announces peace, brings good news, announces deliverance; Who says to Zion, Thy God is king!<sup>l</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Hark!<sup>m</sup> thy watchmen! They cry aloud; together they shout in exultation,

For they see eye to eye<sup>n</sup> Jehovah restoring<sup>o</sup> Zion.

<sup>9</sup>Break forth together into exultation, ye ruins of Jerusalem,

For Jehovah hath comforted his people, hath redeemed Jerusalem!

<sup>10</sup>Jehovah hath bared his holy arm in the sight of all the nations,

And all the ends of the earth shall see the deliverance of our God.

<sup>11</sup>Away, away! Go out thence! Touch nothing unclean!

Go out from the midst of her; purify yourselves, ye who bear the vessels of Jehovah.

<sup>12</sup>But ye shall not go out hurriedly, nor shall ye depart in flight;<sup>p</sup>

For Jehovah goeth before you, and your rearguard is the God of Israel.

<sup>i</sup> 52<sup>3</sup> At this point a scribal note has been introduced. It is prose and has its own peculiar vocabulary and style. Its teaching that the Assyr. conquests and the Baby. exile were without cause is contrary to the teaching of the earlier prophets and the author of Is. 40-66. Cf. 43<sup>22-28</sup>. The passage may be rendered, For thus saith the Lord Jehovah, To Egypt my people went down at the first to sojourn there, and Assyria oppressed them without cause. Possibly <sup>3, 5, 6</sup> are also secondary, for their metre is irregular and their logical connection with the context is very loose. Vs. <sup>7</sup> is the natural sequel of <sup>3</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 52<sup>6</sup> Omitting the phrase, said Jehovah, which evidently had no place in the original.

<sup>k</sup> 52<sup>7</sup> Certain scholars would reverse the text to read, Behold hastening over the mountains are the feet, etc.

<sup>l</sup> 52<sup>7</sup> Possibly a word or two like, Thy Redeemer is come, has fallen out of the line.

<sup>m</sup> 52<sup>8</sup> Or, All thy watchmen.

<sup>n</sup> 52<sup>9</sup> I. e., near at hand, visible to the human eye.

<sup>o</sup> 52<sup>9</sup> Or, returning to Zion; but the context supports the translation given above.

<sup>p</sup> 52<sup>11</sup> The new exodus shall be in contrast to the former one from Egypt. Cf. Ex. 12<sup>11</sup>, Dt. 16<sup>3</sup>.

Deliv-
erance
at hand

Let all
the exiles
return

§ 180. The Significance of the Suffering of Jehovah's Servant, Is. 52<sup>13</sup>-53<sup>12</sup>

Testimony
of Jehovah
to the work of his servant

Of his
con-
temporaries: he seemed un-promising

Is. 52 <sup>13</sup>Behold, my servant shall prosper,<sup>q</sup>
He shall be raised<sup>r</sup> up and highly exalted.
<sup>14a</sup>Even as many were appalled at him,<sup>s</sup>
<sup>15</sup>So shall many nations tremble,<sup>t</sup>
Kings will close their mouths<sup>u</sup> before him,
When what has not been told them they see,
And what they have not heard they perceive.

53 <sup>1</sup>Who believed what has been reported to us,
And to whom was Jehovah's might<sup>v</sup> revealed?
<sup>2</sup>For he grew up before us<sup>w</sup> as a young shoot,
And as a root out of dry ground.

§ 180 In this, in many ways, most memorable passage of the O.T. the prophet analyzes with marvellous skill and depth of insight the meaning and value of suffering voluntarily borne. The suffering servant here pictured has been variously identified. Sellin, a recent German writer (in Serubbabel), has identified him with Zerubbabel, whom he assumed was actually crowned king, as implied in Zech. 6, and later put to death as a rebel by the Persians. In his later works Sellin identifies the suffering servant with Jehoiachin. Bertholdt finds in 52<sup>1-11</sup> a portrait of the martyr Eleazar mentioned in II Mac. 6<sup>18-31</sup>. These individual interpretations, however, ignore the collective usage of the term, servant of Jehovah, which prevails elsewhere in the prophecy. The theory also involves the tearing out of the "servant" passages from the present context, where they evidently belong, and the attributing them to another author. The resurrection of the servant, as described in 53<sup>10</sup>, is conceivable at this stage in the development of Israel's faith, if it refers to a party or nation, but not if to an individual. At least all the indications point to the conclusion that the only doctrine of the resurrection prevalent at this period in Jewish thought was national. Cf. Ezek. 37, § 146. Furthermore the earliest and only biblical interpreter of this passage, the author of Dan. 12<sup>3</sup>, unquestionably believed that the reference was not to an individual but to a class in the community, when he declared that they who turn to righteousness (cf. Is. 53<sup>11</sup>, My righteous servant shall make many righteous shall shine as the stars forever and ever). The seemingly individual portrait of the servant is paralleled by the descriptions of Jehovah's servant Israel, which recur throughout the prophecy. The tendency to describe and address classes within the nation collectively and as an individual is characteristic of the writers of the period, as is illustrated in many of the Pss. of the Psalter. Cf. Vol. V, in loco. It is probable that the prophet left the exact content of the term servant of Jehovah, as he used it in this context, purposely indefinite. He was picturing the type of servant which the Jehovah required at this crisis in human history. He doubtless hoped that the majority of the nation had reached this ideal. In his inner consciousness he must have known that the numbers would be few who would respond to this call for supreme self-sacrifice, and that they would be enlisted from the ranks of the poor and the pious in the Judean community. Cf. § 178. To them, therefore, his message was primarily directed, and his ultimate aim was to make clear the divine significance of their pain and disgrace and suffering, if voluntarily borne for others.

He pictures the suffering servant in strongest colors. Like the hero of the book of Job, the servant is represented as being stripped of health, or possessions, and of reputation. He is the victim of the most loathsome diseases, of men's injustice, and of the derision of his contemporaries. Misunderstanding and jeers and ignominy follow him even to the grave. In this respect the servant's experiences are a composite of those of the pious in the post-exilic Judean com-

<sup>q</sup> 52<sup>13</sup> The Heb. word means to deal wisely and then to prosper, i. e., to attain prosperity through wise action. The parallelism demands the secondary meaning. A slight change in the Heb. gives the reading Israel, so that the opening line, as in 49<sup>8</sup>, would begin, Behold, Israel my servant will be exalted.

<sup>r</sup> 52<sup>13</sup> Following the Gk. versions, which are supported by the demands of the metre. The Heb. has an additional verb, be lifted up, which is apparently but an expansion of, be exalted.

<sup>s</sup> 52<sup>14</sup> Following the Gk. and the demands of the context. A scribe, misled by the fact that the introductory word was the same, has by mistake inserted here two lines which clearly originally followed 53<sup>2</sup>. Restoring them to their natural context,<sup>15</sup> the sequel of 14<sup>a</sup> is brought into its true relation. In the transfer, however, the line parallel to 14<sup>a</sup> and completing the first stanza has apparently been lost.

<sup>t</sup> 52<sup>15</sup> Following the Gk. and the implications of the Heb., which has, however, a singular rather than a plural verb. Another possible reading is, do homage; but the context demands a stronger verb.

<sup>u</sup> 52<sup>15</sup> I. e., be silent in deference to him.

<sup>v</sup> 53<sup>1</sup> Lit., arm, the symbol of power exerted.

<sup>w</sup> 53<sup>2</sup> Slightly revising the Heb., which reads, him.

He had no form<sup>x</sup> that we should regard him,
Nor appearance that we should delight in him.

Unattractive

<sup>52</sup> <sup>14b</sup>, <sup>c</sup>His appearance was more disfigured than any man's,
And his form than any human being's.

<sup>53</sup> <sup>3</sup>He was despised and forsaken of men,
A man of suffering and acquainted with sickness;
Like one for whom men hide their face,
He was despised so that we esteemed him not.<sup>y</sup>

Afflicted with diseases

<sup>4</sup>Surely our sickness he himself bore,
And our sufferings—he carried them,
Yet we ourselves esteemed him stricken,
Smitten of God and afflicted.

Stricken with a divine judgment

<sup>5</sup>But he was wounded for our transgressions,<sup>z</sup>
Crushed because of our iniquities;
The chastisement for our wellbeing was upon him,
And through his stripes healing came to us.

But it was all for our well-being

<sup>6</sup>All of us like sheep, had gone astray,
We had turned each to his own way;
While Jehovah made to light upon him
The guilt of us all.

Upon him rested our guilt

<sup>7</sup>Yet<sup>a</sup> when afflicted he opened not his mouth;
Like a lamb led to the slaughter,
And like a sheep dumb before her shearers,
So he opened not his mouth.

Prophet's testimony: He was submissive munity. And yet, as the prophet points out, Jehovah's servant is the one supreme hero and conqueror. Despised by his own contemporaries, both Jew and Gentile, he should ultimately be the object of their gratitude and homage, for at last they shall see that his patient suffering was in their behalf and that by his suffering he has indeed become the saviour of men.

---

The problem with which the prophet was dealing was superlatively insistent in his day and among the scattered members of his race. The long-established interpretation of suffering and calamity was that it betokened guilt on the part of the sufferers and was the result of divine judgment. This universally accepted dogma but increased the woes of the pious and the revilements of their impious foes. With divinely inspired insight the great prophet of the restoration not only denied the universal application of this dogma but also declared the inestimable value of voluntary suffering in the spiritual economy of the universe. While sin and its consequences are present in the world, the innocent suffer for the errors and crimes of the ignorant and the wicked; but their suffering, if voluntarily borne, is an invincible power in dispelling ignorance and in turning the sinner from an attitude of defiance to one of penitence. Human life abounds in illustrations of the great principle that is here for the first time clearly enunciated. Judah's history during this period proved the truth of the prophet's words. The persecuted, despised, faithful few in the Judean community preserved and transmitted to succeeding generations Israel's priceless religious heritage. Nehemiah, inspired by the same idea of service, with superb self-sacrifice, in the face of bitter opposition from the leaders of his nation, prepared the way for that larger restoration which the author of these pages proclaims will surely come. For the broad messianic significance of this passage, cf. Introd., Chap. V., pp. 46, 47.

* 53<sup>2</sup> The metre and parallelism indicate that, and majesty is a later expansion of the text. It is accordingly omitted.

<sup>x</sup> 53<sup>3</sup> Cf. Job 17<sup>6</sup>, 19<sup>9</sup>, 30<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 53<sup>5</sup> Or, pointing the Heb. differently, dishonored.

<sup>z</sup> 53<sup>7</sup> Following the united testimony of the Gk. texts. The Heb. adds at the beginning of the vs., He was treated harshly; but this is not supported by the metre or parallelism.

Unap-
preciatedVictim of injusticeYet realizing Je-
hovah's
purposeJeho-
vah's
concluding testimonyThe coming period
of honor
and expansion

<sup>8</sup>By an oppressive judgment was he taken away,
Yet who of his generation considered
That he had been cut off from the land of the living;
For our<sup>b</sup> transgressions had been stricken to death<sup>c</sup>

<sup>9</sup>And his grave was made<sup>d</sup> with the wicked,
And among evil-doers<sup>e</sup> his burial mound,<sup>f</sup>
Although he had done no violence,
Neither was deceit in his mouth.

<sup>10</sup>Yet Jehovah was pleased to crush him;<sup>g</sup>
Through giving himself<sup>h</sup> as an offering for guilt,
He shall see posterity and length of days,<sup>i</sup>
And the pleasure of Jehovah will be realized in his hands;<sup>j</sup>
<sup>11</sup>Out of his own suffering he shall see light,<sup>k</sup>
He shall be satisfied with his knowledge.

My righteous servant shall make many righteous,
And himself will bear the burden of their iniquities.

<sup>12</sup>Therefore I will give him a portion<sup>l</sup> among the great,
And with the strong shall he divide spoil,
Because he poured out his life-blood,
And was numbered with transgressors,<sup>m</sup>
And himself bore the sins of many,
And interposed for transgressors.

§ 181. Jerusalem's Coming Joy and Glory, Is. 54

Is. 54 <sup>1</sup>Cry out for joy, O thou barren, who has not borne, saith Jehovah,<sup>n</sup> Break into cries of joy, cry aloud, thou who hast not travailed!
For the children of the desolate are more than the children of the married.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 53<sup>8</sup> Heb., of my people. But a slight correction in the Heb. gives the above reading, which is parallel to the thought of the preceding vss.

<sup>c</sup> 53<sup>9</sup> So Gk., and a revised Heb. text, supported by the parallelism, as for example in <sup>5</sup>, He was wounded for our transgressions.

<sup>d</sup> 53<sup>9</sup> Pointing the Heb.

<sup>e</sup> 53<sup>9</sup> Adding a lost letter and dividing the Heb. letters differently. This reading is supported by the parallelism. Heb., rich.

<sup>f</sup> 53<sup>9</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>g</sup> 53<sup>10</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. and Lat. The last word in the line may be translated, with pain. It is, however, in all probability a later addition.

<sup>h</sup> 53<sup>10</sup> Following the Lat. Heb., thou.

<sup>i</sup> 53<sup>10</sup> So Gk. Heb., and he would prolong his days; i. e., enjoy long life.

<sup>j</sup> 53<sup>10</sup> The meaning of this vs. is not clear and many emendations have been suggested. It seems to refer to the necessity of the servant's suffering and the reward if it were complete and voluntary. These ideas have already been expressed elsewhere.

<sup>k</sup> 53<sup>11</sup> Following the Gk. in restoring this word which has been lost from the Heb.

<sup>l</sup> 53<sup>12</sup> Gk., he shall receive a portion.

<sup>m</sup> 53<sup>12</sup> The words, and was numbered with transgressors, lacks the regular metrical form and is possibly but an echo of <sup>9</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 181 This section continues the thought of §§ 177, 179. It is a declaration to Zion that the hour of vindication and restoration is near at hand. It is assured because Jehovah has promised it. In the glorious restoration the woes of the present shall be completely forgotten.

<sup>o</sup> 54<sup>1</sup> Transforming the clause, said Jehovah, as the metrical structure of the vs. requires.

<sup>o</sup> 54<sup>1</sup> I. e., the population of restored Jerusalem shall exceed those of the ancient city.

<sup>2</sup>Enlarge the place of thy tent, and stretch out<sup>p</sup> thy curtains,<sup>a</sup>
Spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes;
<sup>3</sup>For on the right and on the left thou wilt spread forth<sup>r</sup> thy offspring,
It will possess nations and people desolate cities.

<sup>4</sup>Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed, thou shalt not be confounded;<sup>s</sup>
Thou wilt not blush, for thou wilt forget the shame of thy youth,
And the reproach of thy widowhood thou wilt no more remember.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>6</sup>For as a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit Jehovah calleth thee,
And a wife of one's youth—can she be rejected? saith thy God.

<sup>7</sup>For a little moment I forsook thee, but in great<sup>u</sup> compassion will I gather thee.

<sup>8</sup>In a burst<sup>v</sup> of wrath I hid my face for an instant from thee,
But with everlasting kindness I have compassion on thee, saith thy Redeemer.

<sup>9</sup>For<sup>w</sup> as I swore that the waters of Noah should no more pass over the earth,<sup>x</sup>
So I swear that I will not be wroth with thee nor rebuke thee.

<sup>10</sup>Though mountains should depart and hills should be shaken, Yet from thee my kindness shall not depart nor will my covenant of peace be shaken,

Saith Jehovah, who hath compassion on thee,<sup>11</sup>O thou afflicted one, tempest-tossed and unconsoled!"

Behold, I am about to lay thy bases in emeralds,<sup>y</sup>
And I will lay thy foundations<sup>z</sup> in sapphires and <sup>12</sup>make thy pinnacles rubies,<sup>a</sup>
And thy gates shall be carbuncles and all thy battlements jewels.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>13</sup>And all thy builders<sup>c</sup> shall be men taught of Jehovah, and great will be thy children's prosperity.

<sup>14</sup>In righteousness thou wilt be established, far from oppression, for thou wilt have nought to fear,

And far from destruction for it shall not come nigh thee.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Behold I am he who created the workman who blows on the fire of coals,
And produces a weapon for his work,<sup>e</sup> a destroyer to destroy.

The period of punishment is over

The glorious period of reconstruction and peace

<sup>p</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> So Gk., Lat., and Syr.

<sup>q</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, of thy habitation.

<sup>r</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the parallelism demands.

<sup>s</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> Superfluous, for, has been inserted in the Heb.

<sup>t</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> A scribe has added here, For thy husband is thy maker, Jehovah of hosts is his name, thy Redeemer is Israel's Holy One, God of the whole earth is he called. Vs. <sup>6</sup> is the immediate sequel of 4.

<sup>u</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> Possibly, great, is secondary.

<sup>v</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> Correcting a slight error in the Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> Removing a repetitious gloss that has crept into the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 54<sup>2</sup> A reference to the promise in Gen. 8<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 54<sup>11</sup> Correcting the Heb. as the parallelism demands.

<sup>z</sup> 54<sup>11</sup> So Targ. and a slightly corrected Heb. text.

<sup>a</sup> 54<sup>12</sup> Or, jasper.

<sup>b</sup> 54<sup>12</sup> Lit., pleasant stones.

<sup>c</sup> 54<sup>13</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>d</sup> 54<sup>14</sup> Vs. <sup>15</sup> reads, Behold he who stirs up strife but not from me, Who stirs up strife against these shall fall. It is generally recognized as secondary.

<sup>e</sup> 54<sup>16</sup> Omitting the words, it is I who create, repeated from the preceding line.

<sup>17</sup>No weapon formed against thee shall prosper, Every tongue that contends with thee thou shalt prove to be wrong.<sup>f</sup>

§ 182. General Invitation to Share in Jehovah's Coming Blessings, Is. 55

Call to share in Jeho-
vah's feast of spiritual
blesssings

Other
nations
to be attracted to Israel's
God

Jeho-
vah's gracious
purpose

Is. 55 <sup>1</sup>Ho, every one who thirsteth come ye to the waters,<sup>g</sup>
And he who hath no money, come!
Buy and eat,<sup>h</sup> without money,
Wine and milk without price.
<sup>2</sup>Why spend money for what is not bread,<sup>i</sup>
And your earnings for that which satisfieth not?
Hearken to me that ye may eat what is good,
And delight yourselves in fatness.

<sup>3</sup>Incline your ear and come to me, Hear that your soul may live,<sup>j</sup>
I will make with you an everlasting covenant,<sup>k</sup>
The sure promises of kindness toward David.
<sup>4</sup>Just as I made him as a witness to the peoples,<sup>l</sup>
A prince and a commander to the nations,
<sup>5</sup>So thou wilt call a nation which thou knowest not,<sup>m</sup>
And they who know thee not shall run to thee,<sup>n</sup>
Because of Jehovah thy God,
And Israel's Holy One, for he hath honored thee.

<sup>6</sup>Seek ye Jehovah while he may be found Call upon him while he is near;<sup>o</sup>
<sup>7</sup>And he will have compassion, will abundantly pardon,

<sup>f</sup> 54<sup>17</sup> A scribe has added the postscript: This is the inheritance of the servants of Jehovah, and their righteousness (or portion) from me, is Jehovah's oracle.

<sup>g</sup> 182 From Zion the prophet here turns to address the widely scattered exiles, and to urge them to return to participate in the prosperity and spiritual blessings which Jehovah was about to confer upon Jerusalem. Vss. 3-5 are especially significant, for they indicate that, in the prophet's mind, the experiences of the preceding half-century, which culminated in the overthrow of Zerubbabel, about 518 B.C., had demonstrated the invalidity of the material hopes which for centuries had gathered about the Davidic royal house. These hopes and promises he now deliberately transfers to the restored nation. Instead of the ancient hopes of conquest with the sword, he proclaims the quiet conquest of the truth, so that not under compulsion, but of their own free choice, nations should come and acknowledge the rule of Israel's divine King.

<sup>h</sup> 55<sup>1</sup> Possibly, to the waters, is secondary, for in <sup>1d</sup>, wine and milk, constitute the drink provided.

<sup>i</sup> 55<sup>1</sup> Following Origen's Hexapla in omitting, come and buy, which are probably simply due to a scribal repetition of the preceding words.

<sup>j</sup> 55<sup>2</sup> Gk. omits, for what is not bread.
<sup>k</sup> 55<sup>3</sup> The first two lines may be simply a gloss based on <sup>2e</sup>; at the same time they make an impressive introduction to what follows.

<sup>l</sup> 55<sup>3</sup> The prophet evidently has in mind the promises to the house of David, found in II Sam. 7<sup>1ff</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 55<sup>4</sup> Restoring the Heb. by the aid of the different VSS.

<sup>n</sup> 55<sup>5</sup> A scribe has added the repetitious interpretative gloss, a nation.

<sup>o</sup> 55<sup>6</sup> Cf. Is. 2<sup>2-5</sup> for the same thought. In the future the heathen shall pay homage to Jerusalem and Israel's God, not compelled by the sword, as in the days of David, but attracted by Jehovah's character.

<sup>o</sup> 55<sup>6</sup> The unconditioned promise to the nation is restricted by a clause in <sup>7a</sup> which introduces a note foreign to the context, Let the ungodly forsake his way and the wicked man his thoughts and let him turn to Jehovah and to our God. The prophet always addresses himself to the nation but not to the individual as in this scribal addition.

<sup>8</sup>For my thoughts are not your thoughts,
And your ways are not my ways, is Jehovah's oracle,
<sup>9</sup>For as the heavens are higher than the earth,<sup>p</sup>
So are my ways higher than your ways,
And my thoughts than your thoughts.

<sup>10</sup>For as the rain cometh down<sup>q</sup> from heaven,
And returneth not thither,
Except it hath watered the earth,
And made it bring forth and sprout,
And given seed to the sower and bread to the eater,
<sup>11</sup>So will be my word that goeth forth from my mouth,
It will not return to me void,
Except it hath accomplished what I please,
And it hath prospered in the thing for which I sent it.

It is sure of accomplish-
ment

<sup>12</sup>For with joy shall ye go out,
And in peace shall ye be led forth;
The mountains shall break forth before you into jubilation,
And all the trees of the field will clap their hands.
<sup>13</sup>Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree,<sup>r</sup>
Instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree;
And it shall be a memorial<sup>s</sup> to Jehovah,
An everlasting sign which shall not be cut off.

All the
universe to rejoice
over the res-tor-
ation

§ 183. The Glories of Restored Jerusalem, Is. 60

Is. 60 <sup>1</sup>Arise, shine for thy light is come!
And the glory of Jehovah hath risen upon thee.
<sup>2</sup>For behold the darkness covereth the earth,
And deep darkness the peoples.
But upon thee Jehovah shineth,

Jeho-
vah's glory dawning on Jerusa-
lem

<sup>p</sup> 55<sup>9</sup> Correcting the Heb. by the aid of the VSS.

<sup>q</sup> 55<sup>10</sup> A scribe has added, snow; but this destroys the metre, and is clearly secondary. The following verb also indicates that originally there was but one subject.

<sup>r</sup> 55<sup>13</sup> Or, nettle. The word occurs nowhere else.

<sup>s</sup> 55<sup>13</sup> Lit., name.

§ 183 This chapter has the same exuberant literary style, the same general theme, and the same ideas that characterize Is. 40–55. Cf. e. g., 49<sup>14–21</sup>, 52<sup>1</sup>, 54<sup>1–17</sup>. There is every reason for regarding them as the work of the same great prophet-poet, and it must be confessed that the reasons that have led many modern scholars to attribute them to different authors are subjective rather than real. They are based on what has been shown to be the false assumption that 40–55 were written during the Baby. exile rather than in Palestine during the days following the rebuilding of the temple. Even on the basis of this assumption not a few scholars have been impelled by the facts to attribute 60–62 to the same author as 40–55, but in doing so they have made the mistake of dating them all during the Baby. period. As a matter of fact this chapter, as the preceding, assumes that Jerusalem is already repopulated, and that its temple service has already been instituted. Cf. 7. From 10, however, it is clear that Nehemiah had not yet returned to rebuild the walls, but that this is felt to be one of the crying needs of the Judean community. The community to which the prophet spoke had the sense of being forsaken, of being hated, and of being the prey of its neighbors. Back of the glorious picture one can readily discern the sordidness of the life, the poverty, the discouragements of the Jews of Palestine to whom the prophet primarily spoke. The wide contrast between the reality and the predicted glory again recalls the prophecies of Hag. and Zech. It is probable that this chapter was written somewhat later than 54, 55, with which it is most closely connected in theme and thought.

And to thee his glory appeareth.
<sup>3</sup>And nations shall walk in thy light,
 And kings in the brightness of thy rising.

Return
of the
exiles

<sup>4</sup>Lift up thine eyes round about and see,
 They all gather together and come to thee.<sup>t</sup>
 Thy sons come from afar,
 And thy daughters are carried at the side.<sup>u</sup>
<sup>5</sup>Then shalt thou see and be radiant,<sup>v</sup>
 And thy heart will tremble and throb;
 For the abundance of the sea will be turned to thee,
 The wealth of the nations shall come to thee.

Tribute
of the no-mafic
nations

<sup>6</sup>A multitude of camels shall cover thee,
 The young camels of Midian and Ephah,
 All those of Sheba shall come,
 Gold and incense shall they bear,
 And Jehovah's praises shall they proclaim.
<sup>7</sup>All Kedar's flocks will gather to thee,
 Nebaioth's rams will seek thee;
 With acceptance<sup>w</sup> will they mount mine altar,
 And mine house of prayer shall be made beauteous,<sup>x</sup>

Of the sea-coast
peoples

<sup>8</sup>Who are these that fly like a cloud,
 And like doves to the windows of their cotes?
<sup>9</sup>Verily for me the ships gather,<sup>y</sup>
 With the vessels of Tarshish in the van,
 To bring thy sons from afar,<sup>z</sup>
 Their silver and their gold with them,
 To the name of Jehovah thy God,
 To Israel's Holy One, for he hath beautified thee.

Homage of the rich
nations

<sup>10</sup>And strangers shall build thy walls,
 And to thee their kings shall minister,
 For I smote thee in my wrath,
 But in my favor I have had compassion on thee.
<sup>11</sup>Thy gates shall stand open<sup>a</sup> continually,
 They shall not be closed day or night,

<sup>t</sup> 60<sup>1</sup> These two lines are identical with 49<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 60<sup>4</sup> I. e., carried tenderly and safely as a nurse or oriental mother carries a child. Cf. also 49<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 60<sup>5</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 60<sup>7</sup> Following the VSS. and certain of the Heb. MSS. in transposing two Heb. words as the context requires.

<sup>x</sup> 60<sup>7</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., and the house of my beauty will I beautify.

<sup>y</sup> 60<sup>9</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., as the context demands. Heb., for me the coastlands wait, but this thought has no connection with that which immediately precedes and follows.

<sup>a</sup> 60<sup>9</sup> I. e., present as gifts to Jehovah.

<sup>b</sup> 60<sup>11</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg. Heb., they shall open.

That the riches of the nations may come in to thee,
With their kings leading<sup>b</sup> the way.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>13</sup>The glory of Lebanon shall come to thee,
Pine, plane tree, and cypress together,
To make glorious the place of my sanctuary,
That I may make honorable my footstool.

There shall come to thee bowing low—

<sup>14</sup>The sons of those who afflicted and despised thee,<sup>d</sup>
And they shall call thee, City of Jehovah, Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

Of Israel's former
conquerors

<sup>15</sup>Instead of thy being forsaken,
And hated with none passing through thee,
I will make thee an object of pride forever,
A joy for all generations.

Honor
and vindi-
cation

<sup>16</sup>Thou shalt suck the milk of nations,
Yea, royal breasts<sup>e</sup> shalt thou suck;
Thus shalt thou know that I am Jehovah thy Deliverer,
And that thy Redeemer is the mighty one of Jacob.

<sup>17</sup>Instead of brass I will bring in gold,
Instead of iron I will bring in silver,
And instead of timbers, brass,
And instead of stones, iron.<sup>f</sup>
And I will make thy government, peace,
And thy magistrates, righteousness.

Wealth
and
peace

<sup>18</sup>No more shall violence be heard in thy land,
Nor desolation or destruction within thy borders;
But thou shalt call thy walls, Deliverance,
And thy gates, Renown.

<sup>19</sup>No more shall the sun be thy light,<sup>g</sup>
Nor the moon shed its bright beams upon thee;
But Jehovah shall be thy everlasting light,

Continual
prosperity
and the sense
of Jehovah's
presence

<sup>b</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>c</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> The Heb. adds the following vs., which is in prose, and interrupts the close connection in thought between <sup>ii</sup> and <sup>13</sup>, for the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish, and the nation shall be utterly laid waste. It is without reasonable doubt a gloss based on Zech. 14<sup>16-19</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> The Gk. of Origen omits the latter part of this vs. The clause found in the Heb., to the soles of the feet shall they bow down, is probably a scribal paraphrase of the thought of the preceding verb. It also destroys the metrical structure of the stanza. The above reconstruction appears to represent the original.

<sup>e</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> Slightly changing the vowel-pointing of the Heb., which in the original text reads, riches.

<sup>f</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> By many these last two lines are regarded as secondary, because they are slightly inconsistent with <sup>13</sup>, and destroy the strophic structure of the vs. The evidence, however, is not conclusive.

<sup>g</sup> 60<sup>ii</sup> Gk. and O. Lat. add, by day and by night. Heb., by day. These phrases are without much doubt due to the tendency of the later scribes to expand the text. The metre and thought are complete without them.

And thy God shall be thine adornment.
<sup>20</sup>Thy sun shall never more set,
 And thy moon shall not wane;
 But Jehovah shall be thine everlasting light,
 And thy days of mourning shall be ended.

<sup>21</sup>Thy people shall all be righteous,
 Forever shall they possess the land,
 The scion of Jehovah's planting,<sup>h</sup>
 The work of his hands for his adornment.
<sup>22</sup>The smallest shall become a clan,
 And the least a powerful nation,
 I, Jehovah, [have spoken].<sup>i</sup>
 In its due season I will bring it quickly to pass.<sup>j</sup>

§ 184. Jehovah's Promise of Salvation to Zion, Is. 61, 62

Is. 61 <sup>1</sup>The spirit of the Lord Jehovah is upon me, Because Jehovah hath anointed me,<sup>k</sup>
 He hath sent me to bring good tidings to the afflicted,
 To bind up the broken-hearted,
 To proclaim liberty to the captives,
 And release<sup>l</sup> to those bound,
<sup>2</sup>To proclaim the year of Jehovah's favor,<sup>m</sup>
 And the day of vengeance of our God,
<sup>3</sup>To<sup>n</sup> comfort all who mourn,
 To give them a head-dress instead of ashes,<sup>o</sup>
 Oil of joy instead of a garment of mourning,<sup>p</sup>
 A song of praise instead of a crushed<sup>q</sup> spirit.

<sup>b</sup> 60<sup>21</sup> Heb., his planting. Targ., Syr., and Lat., my planting. The metre and sense indicate that the original read as above. Cf also 61<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 60<sup>22</sup> Supplying the verb, have spoken. Evidently a word has fallen out of the text. If not a verb, it was probably a title of Jehovah, as, e. g., Israel's Holy One.

<sup>d</sup> 60<sup>22</sup> Lit., I will hasten it, e. g., the realization of the promises already given.

<sup>e</sup> 184 In his characteristic glowing, energetic style the prophet here pictures the glories awaiting Zion. In 61<sup>1-4</sup> and 62<sup>6, 7</sup> it would seem that the prophet himself speaks. The spirit is that of the preceding servant passages, and this has led Cheyne and other recent writers to attribute them to the servant of Jehovah; but it is, on the whole, more simple and natural to regard them as the prophet's own words. 61<sup>1-4</sup> describe with marvellous accuracy the aims which the great poet-prophet of the restoration set before himself. They might well stand as a preface to his entire prophecy. To bring the message of comfort to the scattered and broken-hearted exiles of his race, to announce to them that the hour of Jehovah's deliverance was at hand, to turn their mourning into rejoicing, and to inspire them to come back and rebuild the desolate ruins were precisely the ends which he was striving to attain by each of his prophecies. As has already been noted, §§ 178, 180, Introd., from his own experiences and those of his fellow-exiles, he rose to an appreciation of the character of the type of servant who was demanded to perform Jehovah's work for humanity. In the light of this fact, the similarity between this and the servant passages is fully explained.

<sup>f</sup> 61<sup>1</sup> I. e., appointed me to a special task.

<sup>g</sup> 61<sup>1</sup> Following superior reading of certain Heb. MSS.

<sup>h</sup> 61<sup>2</sup> Cf. Jer. 34<sup>a</sup>, Ezek. 46<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 61<sup>3</sup> A scribe has added at the beginning of the vs. the awkward explanatory clause, to provide for the mourners of Zion.

<sup>j</sup> 61<sup>3</sup> The Heb. here contains an intentional play on the words, pe'er and 'efər. Marti reproduces it aptly by the words, Putz statt Schmutz. The meaning is that instead of ashes, the sign of mourning, they shall again assume the garb of ordinary life.

<sup>k</sup> 61<sup>3</sup> Transposing the two Heb. words as the context demands.

<sup>l</sup> 61<sup>3</sup> Lit., dimmed, as in 42<sup>3</sup>.

And they shall be called terebinths<sup>r</sup> of righteousness,
Jehovah's planting with which he glorifies himself.

<sup>4</sup>They shall build up the ancient ruins,
They shall rear again the desolations of former generations.
And they shall renew the wasted cities,
The desolations of past ages.<sup>s</sup>
<sup>5</sup>And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks,<sup>t</sup> Aliens shall be your ploughmen and vineyard keepers.

The re-building
of the ancient ruins

<sup>6</sup>But as for you—ye shall be called Jehovah's priests,<sup>u</sup>
Ministers of our God shall ye be named;

The riches of the nations shall ye eat,
And with their glory shall ye adorn yourselves.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Because their shame was in double measure,
And insult and ridicule<sup>w</sup> was their lot,
Therefore in their land they shall possess double,
Everlasting joy shall be theirs.

<sup>8</sup>For I, Jehovah, love justice,
I hate unjust<sup>x</sup> robbery,
With fidelity will I give them their recompense,
And will make with them an everlasting covenant.

Glory
of Je-ho-vah's priest-nation

<sup>9</sup>Their descendants shall be known among the nations,
And their offspring in the midst of the peoples;
All who see them will recognize them
As a race whom Jehovah hath blessed.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For as the earth puts forth its sprouts,
And as a garden grows what is sown therein,
So the Lord Jehovah shall cause victory<sup>z</sup> to spring up,
And renown before all nations.

Their
honor among
the
nations

<sup>10</sup>I will rejoice heartily in Jehovah,
My soul shall exult in my God.
For he hath clothed me in the garments of salvation,
In the mantle of righteousness hath he arrayed me;
I am like a bridegroom who prepares<sup>a</sup> his head-dress,
Like a bride who adorns herself with her jewels.

Their
song of ex-ulta-tion

<sup>r</sup> 61<sup>3</sup> Like the sturdy green oaks of Palestine. Cf. Jer. 17<sup>8</sup> for the same figure.

<sup>s</sup> 61<sup>4</sup> Lit., generation and generation.

<sup>t</sup> 61<sup>5</sup> Cf. for the same idea, 49<sup>22</sup><sup>23</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 61<sup>6</sup> I. e., Israel shall become a priestly nation.

<sup>v</sup> 61<sup>7</sup> Revising the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>w</sup> 61<sup>7</sup> Following Klostermann in reconstructing the Heb. by the analogy of 50<sup>6</sup>. Others would reconstruct so as to read, they shall possess insult as their lot.

<sup>x</sup> 61<sup>8</sup> Following the Gk., Targ., Syr., and certain of the Heb. MSS.

<sup>y</sup> 61<sup>9</sup> Vs. 10 interprets the close connection between <sup>9</sup> and <sup>11</sup> and is evidently an utterance in the mouth of the people. Its logical position is after <sup>11</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 61<sup>11</sup> Lit., righteousness, but it is the righteousness vindicated by victory and is practically equivalent to the English word, victory.

<sup>a</sup> 61<sup>10</sup> Correcting the corrupt Heb., and transferring this vs. to its logical position after <sup>11</sup>.

The prophet's joy over Jerusalem's vindication

62 <sup>1</sup>For Zion's sake I will not keep silent, For Jerusalem's sake I will not be still,
Till her vindication<sup>b</sup> go forth like a bright beam,
And her deliverance like a burning torch.

<sup>2</sup>Nations shall see thy vindication,<sup>c</sup>
And all kings thy glory;
And thou shalt be called by a new name,
Which Jehovah's mouth shall determine;
<sup>3</sup>And thou shalt be a beautiful crown in Jehovah's hand,
Even a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.

Restoration

<sup>4</sup>No longer shalt thou be called, Forsaken, and thy land, Desolate,
But thou wilt be called, My Delight, and thy land,<sup>d</sup> Married.
For Jehovah<sup>e</sup> delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married;
<sup>5</sup>For as a youth marries a virgin, so thy Builder shall marry thee.
And with the joy of a bridegroom over a bride thy God will rejoice over thee.

Divine protection

<sup>6</sup>Over thy walls, O Jerusalem, I have set watchmen,
Through all the day and night they are never silent.
Ye who are Jehovah's remembrancers take no rest, <sup>7</sup>Neither give him rest until he establish,
And until he make Jerusalem an object of renown in the earth.

Security

<sup>8</sup>By his right hand Jehovah hath sworn, and by his strong arm, Verily I will no more give thy corn as food to thy foes,
Nor shall strangers drink thy new wine, for which thou hast toiled;
<sup>9</sup>But they who have gathered the grain shall eat it, and praise Jehovah,
And they who have gathered in new wine shall drink it within my holy courts.

A universal proclamation

<sup>10</sup>Pass through, pass through the gates! prepare a way for the people!
Cast up, cast up the highway! Free it from stones!
Lift on high a banner over the peoples!

<sup>11</sup>Behold Jehovah hath proclaimed to the ends of the earth.

Message to Zion

Say to the daughters of Zion: Behold thy deliverance cometh!
Behold his reward is with him, and his recompense before him.
<sup>12</sup>And men shall call them, The Holy People, The Redeemed of Jehovah;
And thou shalt be called, Sought Out, The City Unforsaken.

<sup>b</sup> 62<sup>1</sup> I. e., her righteousness shall be brilliantly and clearly revealed.

<sup>c</sup> 62<sup>2</sup> By many commentators these two lines are regarded as secondary since they anticipate the thought of <sup>4</sup>. The evidence, however, is not conclusive.

<sup>d</sup> 62<sup>4</sup> Through a scribal error, thou shalt no longer be called, has here been repeated from the preceding line.

<sup>e</sup> 62<sup>4</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context and the analogy of 54<sup>1</sup> demand.

<sup>f</sup> 62<sup>6</sup> Probably the protecting angels who were believed to watch over each nation. Cf. Dan. 10<sup>13</sup>.

IV

MESSAGES OF DENUNCIATION, EXHORTATION, AND PROMISE TO THE JUDEAN COMMUNITY (Is. 56–59, 63–66).

§ 185. Rights of Proselytes and Eunuchs in Jehovah's Temple, Is. 56<sup>1-8</sup>

Is. 56 <sup>1</sup>Thus saith Jehovah, Guard justice and practice righteousness; For my deliverance is near at hand, and my righteousness is soon to be revealed.

<sup>2</sup>Happy the man who practices, the mortal who holds fast to it, Keeping the sabbath so as not to profane it, and keeping his hand from evil.

<sup>3</sup>Let not the foreigner who hath joined himself<sup>a</sup> to Jehovah say,
'Jehovah will surely separate<sup>b</sup> me from his people.'

Exhortation to persevere in right doing

And let not the eunuch say, 'Behold I am a dry tree.'

<sup>4</sup>For thus saith Jehovah to the eunuchs, 'Those who keep my sabbaths.

Full rights in Jehovah's temple to eunuch

Messages of Denunciation, Exhortation, and Promise.—The theory that chaps. 56–66 of Is. were written by a III Is. rather than by the II Is. has been widely accepted by recent interpreters of the book of Is. Professor Cheyne and others go further and find here the contributions of many different writers. All are agreed that they come from about the middle of the Persian period, when the temple and its service had been re-established. The conditions which they reflect are very similar to those presented in the book of Mal. and correspond, for the most part, to what Nehemiah found when he arrived in Palestine. The rulers and even the high-priestly family had married with the princes and princesses of the surrounding nations. The temple service was by them largely neglected or even despised. Through exactions and unjust decisions they had acquired possession of the property and in many cases the person of the common people. Cf. Neh. 5. The walls of Jerusalem had not yet been rebuilt (cf., e. g., 58<sup>12</sup>); and, as in Mal. 3, the hope is strong that Jehovah will come as a righteous judge to put down the wicked and vindicate the faithful few who were loyal to him in the face of poverty and persecution. The situation, therefore, was very similar to that reflected in Is. 40–55. The only difference is that the darker aspects are more fully presented. This fact, as well as the relative position, suggests that chaps. 56–66 were written somewhat later than the preceding and that they reflect the darkest hour just before Neh. came to institute a new regime in the Judean community and to prepare the way for the more general restoration which followed.

Again the same brilliant literary style, the same undaunted faith, and the same superlative optimism that characterized chaps. 40–55 reappear. The differences are simply the differences in theme, as the prophet turns from the contemplation of Israel's past and the portrayal of its glorious future to the consideration of the grim facts in the Judean community. They are facts, however, which he had already alluded to in his preceding sermons. At certain points one may detect notes of discouragement which are in contrast to the notes of enthusiasm of the early utterances. It is possible that, as a result of the long years of waiting, the prophet had lost something of his earlier literary vigor and skill, but the theory that these chapters are the work of a later imitator or imitators disregards some of the most fundamental principles of literary criticism, and is the fruit of the false assumption that Is. 40–55 comes from the Babylonian period.

The literary unity of these chapters is not close. They apparently are a series of tracts sent out from time to time, and represent a considerable period of the prophet's activity. As has already been noted, §§ 183–184, chaps. 60–62 belong with the earlier group of prophecies which dealt broadly with the destinies of the chosen people. Furthermore, chap. 63 is the logical sequel of chap. 59, so that with this transposition the unity of the II Is. is more complete. Any further rearrangement, however, is precarious. Although there are sudden transitions, the existing order of chapters is, on the whole, the most satisfactory.

§ 185 In this section there appears for the first time a trace of the great controversy which raged in the post-exilic Judean community as to whether foreigners should be admitted to the privileges of the temple service. Neh. and Ezra answered the question emphatically in the negative; but, as might be expected, the prophet, who interprets Israel's destiny as world-

<sup>a</sup> 56<sup>3</sup> Possibly the words, who hath joined himself to Jehovah, are secondary, for they are not consistent with the regular metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>b</sup> 56<sup>3</sup> I. e., keep apart, not sharing the religious institutions of the Jewish community.

And choose that in which I delight, and hold fast to my covenant, <sup>5</sup>I will give them in my house and walls a monument,<sup>e</sup>
 And a name better than sons and daughters,
 An everlasting name will I give them which cannot be cut off.

To all foreigners who keep Jeho-
vah's
commands

<sup>6</sup>And the foreigners who join themselves to Jehovah to minister to him,<sup>d</sup>
 And to love the name of Jehovah, to be his servants, Every one who keeps the sabbath so as not to pollute it and faithfully abides by my covenant, <sup>7</sup>Them will I bring to my holy mountain and make joyful in my house of
     prayer;
 Their burnt-offerings and sacrifices will be accepted upon my altar;
 For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples, <sup>8</sup>It is the oracle of Jehovah, who gathereth the outcasts of Israel,
     'I will gather still others to him in addition to those already gathered.'

§ 186. Condemnation of the Greedy, Selfish Rulers and the Heathen Practices of the Jewish Community, Is. 56<sup>9</sup>-57<sup>13</sup>

The
neglect
and greed of the rulers

Is. 56 <sup>9</sup>O all ye wild beasts of the field come to devour,<sup>e</sup> all ye wild beasts of the forest!
<sup>10</sup>My<sup>f</sup> watchmen are all blind, they know not how to give heed,<sup>g</sup>
     They are all dumb dogs which cannot bark,
     Dreaming, lying down, loving to slumber.
<sup>11</sup>And the dogs are greedy, they know not how to be satisfied,<sup>h</sup>
     They<sup>i</sup> all turn to their own way, each for his own profit<sup>j</sup> [saying], <sup>12</sup>Come, I will get wine, and we will drink our fill of strong drink,
     And to-morrow shall be as to-day, an exceedingly great day!

wide, arrayed himself with those who threw open wide the door, not only to the Jews of the dispersion, who, like Neh., had been made eunuchs in connection with their public service, but to all foreigners who wished to join Jehovah's people. The section is but a detailed expansion of the thought already expressed in 44<sup>5</sup> and elsewhere in the preceding chapters. It was natural that the broad conception of Israel's mission and that of the temple should find an echo in the heart of the great prophet of Nazareth. Cf. Matt. 21<sup>13</sup>, Luke 19<sup>16</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 56<sup>5</sup> I. e., a memorial tablet, commemorating their deeds.

<sup>d</sup> 56<sup>6</sup> The foreigners who, as proselytes, lived in accordance with the command of the Jewish law.

§ 186 This section introduces us to the darker background of the prophet's preaching. Recognizing that the selfish, greedy rulers of the people, who made close alliances with their heathen neighbors and shared with them their heathen practices, were the greatest obstacle in the way of the realization of the divine promises of restoration, the prophet here turns upon them with strong invective. Already in 52<sup>5</sup> § 179, he had referred to these same rulers and their baneful influence upon the community. They are the same type of men against whom the author of the prophecy of Mal. utters his denunciations. The religious practices which he condemned are evidently the survivals of the ancient Canaanite cults which Jer. and Ezek. had denounced and which still survived among the people of the land long after the Babylonian exile. Cf. § 192.

<sup>f</sup> 56<sup>9</sup> An echo of Jer. 12<sup>9b</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 56<sup>9</sup> Correcting as the context suggests. Heb. his.

<sup>g</sup> 56<sup>9</sup> So many Gk. texts. The Heb. is incomplete.

<sup>h</sup> 56<sup>11</sup> Cf. for similar pictures, Mal. 1<sup>12</sup>, Neh. 5<sup>7-12</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 56<sup>11</sup> In the Heb. the missing clause, they know not how to give heed, has here been introduced. A scribe has also added, these are the shepherds; but it is out of harmony with the figure used in the preceding lines.

<sup>j</sup> 56<sup>11</sup> So Gk. Through a scribal error another word has been added in the Heb.

<sup>57</sup> <sup>1</sup>The righteous perishes and no man lays it to heart,
And men of piety are taken away, but none perceives
That because of the prevailing wickedness the righteous is taken, <sup>2</sup>entering into peace.<sup>k</sup>
They rest on their beds [coffins], who walked uprightly.

The up-right
their victims

<sup>3</sup>But ye,—draw near, ye sons of a sorceress,<sup>l</sup>
Offspring of an adulteress and of a harlot! <sup>4</sup>of whom do ye make sport?
At whom do ye make faces<sup>m</sup> and put out a long tongue?<sup>n</sup>
Are ye not apostate children, offspring of falsehood?

The ma-lignant foes of
the right-eous

<sup>5</sup>Ye who inflame yourselves among the oaks, under every green tree,
Who slay the children in the valleys, and at<sup>o</sup> the clefts of the rocks, <sup>6</sup>The smooth stones of the valley,<sup>p</sup> they—they are thy portion.
To them also thou hast poured out libations, thou hast offered an oblation;<sup>q</sup> <sup>7</sup>In a high and lofty mountain<sup>r</sup> didst thou set thy bed, Thither also thou wentest up to offer sacrifices.

Their horrible heathen
rites

<sup>8</sup>Behind the door and post didst thou set thy symbol,<sup>s</sup>
For because of it<sup>t</sup> thou hast uncovered and gone up, and enlarged thy bed,
Thou didst buy for thyself<sup>u</sup> such as thou lovedst for intercourse,
And thou didst practice much harlotry with them,<sup>v</sup> thou didst gaze upon the phallus.<sup>w</sup>

Licen-tious
prac-tices
in
the homes

<sup>9</sup>Thou didst anoint thyself with oil for Melek,<sup>x</sup> and didst use many perfumes,
And thou didst send thy messengers afar, even deep down to Sheol, <sup>10</sup>Though thou didst weary thyself with thy many journeys, thou didst not say,
It is vain;
Quickening of thy strength<sup>y</sup> thou didst gain, therefore thou didst not desist.<sup>z</sup>

Wor-ship
of the god
of the lower
world

<sup>11</sup>Of whom wast thou so afraid and in terror that thou wast false,
And didst not remember me nor lay it to heart?
Was I not silent and did I not overlook<sup>a</sup> and yet thou didst not fear me?

Their
un-repent-ant
atti-tude

<sup>k</sup> 57<sup>1</sup> I. e., enters the grave.

<sup>l</sup> 57<sup>3</sup> Cf. the law of Ex. 22<sup>18</sup>, which commands that a sorceress be put to death. No charge was more insulting than to question the fidelity of a man's mother. Cf. I Sam. 20<sup>30</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 57<sup>4</sup> Cf. Neh. 4<sup>1-3</sup>, Ps. 35<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 57<sup>4</sup> Lit., make broad the mouth and make long the tongue.

<sup>o</sup> 57<sup>5</sup> So Gk., Heb., under. This vs. may be secondary.

<sup>p</sup> 57<sup>6</sup> I. e., the old, unhewn altars, cf. Ex. 20<sup>25</sup>, instead of Jehovah and his temple. The Heb. word may also be translated, deceivers, referring to certain heathen gods.

<sup>q</sup> 57<sup>6</sup> The Heb. adds, can I be offended by such as those? But this is but a scribal error, repeating the preceding clause.

<sup>r</sup> 57<sup>7</sup> I. e., thy sanctuary.

<sup>s</sup> 57<sup>8</sup> Probably some phallic symbol or household god.

<sup>t</sup> 57<sup>8</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., which reads, me.

<sup>u</sup> 57<sup>8</sup> Correcting the obviously corrupt Heb.

<sup>v</sup> 57<sup>8</sup> Restoring the part of the line which has been preserved in the Gk.

<sup>w</sup> 57<sup>8</sup> The worship of the human organs of generation was one of the characteristic elements.

<sup>x</sup> 57<sup>9</sup> So Syr. and Lat. Melek was probably the God of the lower world, worshipped in the lower Kidron valley south of Jerusalem. Cf. the following line. Later scribes gave to the word the consonants of the Heb. word, shame, so that it is usually transcribed, Molech or Moloch.

<sup>y</sup> 57<sup>10</sup> Lit., life of thy hand.

<sup>z</sup> 57<sup>10</sup> Revising the uncertain Heb., which reads, thou wast not sick.

<sup>a</sup> 57<sup>11</sup> Following the Gk., Lat., Aquila, and Symmachus. The Heb. is corrupt.

Jeho-
vah's coming
judgment

<sup>12</sup>I will expose thy righteousness and thy deeds!<sup>b</sup>

<sup>13</sup>And when thou criest, thy abominations<sup>c</sup> will not avail nor deliver thee,

Yea, a wind will lift them all up, a breath will carry them off,

But he who trusts in me shall inherit the land and possess my holy mountain.

Jehovah the champion of the humble

Merciful toward
his children

Ready to give
peace

18 His ways have I seen and I will heal him, and will give him rest;<sup>k</sup>

I will requite him with comfort, and <sup>19</sup>I will make the lips of those who mourn for him blossom with speech.<sup>l</sup>

Peace, peace to those who are far off and those who are near,<sup>m</sup> saith Jehovah.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>20</sup>But the wicked are like the upturned<sup>o</sup> sea, which cannot rest,<sup>p</sup>

<sup>21</sup>There is no peace, saith my God,<sup>q</sup> for the wicked!

<sup>b</sup> 57<sup>12</sup> Ironical.

<sup>c</sup> 57<sup>13</sup> Correcting the Heb. The reference is to the heathen gods.

<sup>d</sup> 57<sup>14</sup> This section is the counterpart of the preceding. From the denunciation of the greedy apostates who ruled the Judean community, the prophet turns with a message of comfort to those who are humble and contrite in spirit. In the light of the conditions in Palestine, the prophet's work necessarily had this twofold aspect, although, as he plainly declares, not only in 61<sup>1-3</sup> but throughout all of his writings, his primary aim was to comfort and arouse his people as a whole to unselfish action.

<sup>e</sup> 57<sup>15</sup> The Heb. has at the beginning of the vs., And he said; Lat., And I will say. It appears to be a scribal addition.

<sup>f</sup> 57<sup>16</sup> The clause, whose name is holy, appears to be a later addition. It is not in harmony with the metre or context.

<sup>g</sup> 57<sup>17</sup> The Heb. repeats the verb.

<sup>h</sup> 57<sup>18</sup> I. e., the spirit of man.

<sup>i</sup> 57<sup>19</sup> Following the Gk.

<sup>j</sup> 57<sup>17</sup> So Gk. and a better division of the Heb. words.

<sup>k</sup> 57<sup>17</sup> Lit., in the way of his heart.

<sup>l</sup> 57<sup>18</sup> Or, I will lead him.

<sup>m</sup> 57<sup>18</sup> I. e., those who are dumb with sorrow shall break forth in joyful thanksgiving.

<sup>n</sup> 57<sup>19</sup> I. e., the Jews of Pal. and of the dispersion.

<sup>o</sup> 57<sup>20</sup> The Heb. adds from <sup>18</sup>, I will heal him.

<sup>p</sup> 57<sup>20</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>q</sup> 57<sup>20</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds the gloss, And whose waters toss up mire and dirt. It introduces a different figure.

<sup>r</sup> 57<sup>21</sup> Or with many MSS., Jehovah.

§ 188. False and True Worship, Is. 58

58 <sup>1</sup>Cry with full throat, be not silent!
Like a trumpet lift up thy voice,
Make known to my people their transgression,
And to the house of Jacob their sin.

Exor-
dium

<sup>2</sup>Me indeed they consult<sup>r</sup> daily,
And to know my ways is their delight.
As a nation that hath done righteousness,
And hath not forsaken the law of its God!
They ask me regarding righteous judgments,
To draw near to God is their delight.
<sup>3</sup>Why have we fasted and thou seest not,
Mortified ourselves and thou dost not notice?<sup>s</sup>
Behold, on your fast day ye follow your own pleasure,<sup>t</sup>
And ye exact all money lent on pledge.
<sup>4</sup>Behold ye fast for strife and contention,
And to smite the poor<sup>t</sup> with the fist.
Your fasting to-day is not such<sup>u</sup>
As to make your voice heard on high.

Israel's
worship
mere forms, not life and service

<sup>5</sup>Can such be the fast which I choose,
A day when a man mortifies himself?
To droop one's head like a bulrush,
And to lie down in sack-cloth and ashes?
Wilt thou call this a fast,
And a day acceptable to Jehovah?
<sup>6</sup>Is not this the fast that I choose:
To loose the fetters of injustice,
To untie the bands of violence,<sup>v</sup>
To set free those who are crushed,
To tear apart every yoke.

Jehovah desires mercy,
not sacrifice

§ 188. From 58<sup>12</sup> it is evident that this section was written before the rebuilding of the walls by Nehemiah. It clearly represents, however, a later stage in the prophet's ministry. Disappointment and a more definite acquaintance with the Judean community has led him to modify the earlier unconditioned promises of salvation and restoration, and to express the conditions—of course, from the first implied—upon which these promises were based. While the crimes which he found rampant in the Judean community continued to be committed by its leaders, it was futile to expect that Jehovah, by a miracle, would deliver his people. It is this ethical element that rounds out and completes the message of this great prophet of the restoration.

<sup>r</sup> 58<sup>2</sup> Possibly these verbs should be read in the past instead of the present tense, expressing what was true in Israel's past history.

<sup>s</sup> 58<sup>3</sup> Lit., ye find delight. Possibly the meaning is, ye find time for your own pleasure.

<sup>t</sup> 58<sup>4</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and the demands of the context. A scribe has added by mistake in the Heb., a letter which gives the inconsistent meaning, the transgressor.

<sup>u</sup> 58<sup>5</sup> The Gk. makes these two lines read as a question, why do ye fast for me, as to-day? It is possible that the Gk. here represents the original, for the Heb. is unusual and the parallelism imperfect.

<sup>v</sup> 58<sup>6</sup> Following a suggestion of Cheyne and reading, violence, instead of the word, yoke, which is found in the Heb., probably as the result of the error of a scribe who introduced it from the following couplet.

<sup>7</sup>Is it not to share thy bread<sup>w</sup> with the hungry,
And to bring the wanderers<sup>x</sup> to thy home?<sup>y</sup>
When thou seest the naked, to cover him,
And not hide thyself from thine own flesh?<sup>z</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Then shall thy light break forth as the dawn,
Thy restoration quickly spring forth,
And thy righteousness shall go before thee,
The glory of Jehovah shall be thy reward.<sup>a</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Then when thou callest Jehovah will answer,
When thou criest out he will say, Here am I.

If from thy midst thou remove the yoke,
The finger of scorn,<sup>b</sup> and mischievous speech
<sup>10</sup>And bestow thy bread<sup>c</sup> upon the hungry,
And satisfy the soul that is afflicted;
Then shall thy light shine forth in darkness,
And thy gloom shall be as noonday,
<sup>11</sup>Jehovah will lead thee continually,
And will satisfy thy soul in parched lands,
And thy strength will he renew,<sup>d</sup>
Thou shalt be like a watered garden,
As a fountain<sup>e</sup> whose waters fail not.<sup>f</sup> <sup>12</sup>Thy sons<sup>g</sup> shall rebuild the ancient ruins, Thou shalt rear again the foundations<sup>h</sup> of oiden days;
And men shall call thee, Repairer of Ruins, Restorer of Ruined Places for Inhabitating.

<sup>13</sup>If thou turnest back thy foot from the sabbath,<sup>i</sup>
From<sup>j</sup> doing thy pleasure on my holy day,
And callest the sabbath a delight,
The holy day<sup>k</sup> of Jehovah honorable,

The fruits of mercy

Rewards
offaith-ful service

Of
faithfully observing the sabbath

<sup>w</sup> 58<sup>7</sup> Lit., to divide thy bread for the hungry. Cf. Neh. 5<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 58<sup>7</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. and omitting from the Heb., the poor, which destroys the metre and was probably simply a scribal equivalent for the more unusual word which follows.

<sup>y</sup> 58<sup>7</sup> Heb., house.

<sup>z</sup> 58<sup>7</sup> I. e., members of the Jewish race.

<sup>a</sup> 58<sup>8</sup> Cf. the parallel expression in 52<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 58<sup>9</sup> Lit., sending out a finger.

<sup>c</sup> 58<sup>10</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., Syr., and eleven of the Heb. MSS. Heb., thy soul.

<sup>d</sup> 58<sup>11</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. to conform to the demands of the context and according to the parallelism of 40<sup>31</sup>. The word in the traditional Heb. text is not found elsewhere in the O.T., and was probably simply due to a scribal corruption.

<sup>e</sup> 58<sup>11</sup> Deleting two unnecessary words which have crept into the text and destroy the metre.

<sup>f</sup> 58<sup>11</sup> Lit., deceive not.

<sup>g</sup> 58<sup>12</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb., which has the unusual phrase, those of thee.

<sup>h</sup> 58<sup>12</sup> Again slightly correcting the Heb., which reads, paths, but this has no meaning in the present context.

<sup>i</sup> 58<sup>13</sup>, <sup>14</sup> These two vss. are so loosely connected with the preceding that the reader is at once led to the conclusion that they represent a later appendix. They also voice in strongest terms the late Jewish conception of the sabbath. Cf. Neh. 9<sup>14</sup>, 13<sup>15-18</sup>, Ex. 16<sup>23</sup>. Possibly the passage is from the II Is., and may be an expansion of the thought implied in 56<sup>1</sup>; but the evidence on the whole favors the conclusion that this appendix was added by a later hand and that the original ended with 12.

<sup>j</sup> 58<sup>13</sup> So Gk. The Heb. is slightly defective.

<sup>k</sup> 58<sup>13</sup> The phrase ordinarily means, to the holy one of Jehovah.

And dost honor it by not doing thine own way,<sup>1</sup>
 By not following thy pleasure, nor speaking idly,<sup>m</sup> <sup>14</sup>Then shalt thou take thy delight in Jehovah,
 I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth,
 I will let thee enjoy the inheritance of Jacob thy father,
 For the mouth of Jehovah hath declared it.

§ 189. Crimes of the Judean Community, Is. 59

Is. 59 <sup>1</sup>Behold Jehovah's hand is not too short to deliver,
 Nor his ear too dull to hear;
<sup>2</sup>But your iniquities have become a barrier Between you and your God,<sup>n</sup>
 And your sins have hidden his face from you.<sup>o</sup>
<sup>3</sup>For your hands are defiled with blood,
 And your fingers with iniquity,
 Your lips speak lies,
 Your tongue utters perverseness.

Crimes
preclude forgiveness

<sup>4</sup>None sues in righteousness,<sup>p</sup>
 And none pleads a case in honesty.
 They trust in pretence and speak falsehood;
 Conceive trouble and bring forth mischief.
<sup>5</sup>They hatch viper's eggs,
 And weave spiders' webs.
 He who eats their eggs shall die,
 And if one is crushed it breaks out into an adder.
<sup>6</sup>Their webs serve not for clothing,
 Nor can one cover himself with what they make.
 Their works are works of mischief,
 And deeds of violence are in their hand.
 Their feet run to evil,
 And they make haste to shed innocent blood.

Horrible
nature
and consequences
of these
crimes<sup>1</sup> 58<sup>13</sup> Lit., thy ways.<sup>m</sup> 58<sup>13</sup> Cf., for the same expression, Hos. 10<sup>4</sup>, Is. 36<sup>5</sup>.

§ 189 One finds here a cycle of thought which seems to have characterized the latter part of the work of II Is. He begins with a powerful and detailed denunciation of the crimes of the leaders of the nation, and then, in behalf of the people, voices the prayer of confession and contrition, which was necessary before they could receive the promised salvation. In conclusion the prophet introduces a characteristic reference to Jehovah's advent in order to deliver and restore his people. Because of the crimes of the community Jehovah is here portrayed in a more judicial aspect, compensating according to their deserts his adversaries both within and without Judah. The thought of the chapter is a perfect unit and in harmony with the prophet's message, as a whole, as it was interpreted in the light of the conditions in Palestine not long before the advent of Neh. Its points of contact with the prophecy of Mal. are many and close. Cf. §§ 195, 197. By several modern interpreters, <sup>5-8</sup> are regarded as later insertions because they do not apply to the community as a whole. The same, however, is true of the opening vss. Vss. <sup>5-8</sup> are the natural continuation of <sup>4</sup>, which introduced the more impersonal third person rather than the second. These vss. have all of the literary characteristics of the II Is. and the reasons for regarding them as secondary are far from convincing. The section, as a whole, reveals the bitter disappointment of the prophet because none, or but few, were found in the Judean community to respond to the call of noble, unselfish service. His hope of an ultimate restoration, however, is undimmed.

<sup>n</sup> 59<sup>2</sup> Possibly this line is secondary.<sup>o</sup> 59<sup>2</sup> Heb. adds, to deliver, but this destroys the metre of the vs. and is probably an explanatory gloss or else a mistaken repetition of the last word in <sup>1</sup>.<sup>p</sup> 59<sup>4</sup> The reference is to the cases which were brought before the public tribunal.

Their thoughts are thoughts of mischief,
Desolation and ruin are in their ways.<sup>q</sup>
<sup>8</sup>They know not the way of peace,
And there is no justice in their tracks.
They have made their paths crooked for themselves,
Whoever treads thereon knows no peace.

Effect
upon
the
community

<sup>9</sup>Therefore right is far from us,
And redress has not overtaken us.
We wait for the light—but behold, darkness;
For bright beams—but we walk in gloom,
<sup>10</sup>Like blind men we grope along the wall,
Yea, like men without sight we grope along.
We stumble at noonday as in twilight;
Among those who are strong<sup>r</sup> we are like the dead.
<sup>11</sup>We all groan like bears,
And mourn sadly like doves;
We look for justice but there is none,
For deliverance, but it is far from us.

An appropriate confession
on the lips of the
people

<sup>12</sup>For our transgressions are many before thee,
And our sins testify against us.
For our transgressions are ever with us,
And our iniquities—we know them.
<sup>13</sup>Transgression and unfaithfulness to Jehovah,
And drawing back from following our God,
Speaking perverseness<sup>s</sup> and rebellion,<sup>t</sup>
Uttering from the heart words of falsehood.
<sup>14</sup>Justice has been driven back,
And righteousness stands afar off,
<sup>15</sup>Truth stumbles in the public place,
And uprightness cannot enter;
So that truth is lacking,
And insight has departed from the rulers.<sup>u</sup>

Jehovah
himself to arise as a champion and redeem his people

Jehovah hath seen it and is displeased,<sup>v</sup>
And he is angry because there is no justice, <sup>16</sup>He saw that there was no man,
And was astonished that there was none to interpose;

<sup>q</sup> 59<sup>7</sup> Lit., in their highways.

<sup>r</sup> 59<sup>10</sup> This reading is only conjectural as the Heb. is evidently corrupt. It is based, however, on a slight reconstruction of the text and is supported by the parallelism.

<sup>s</sup> 59<sup>12</sup> Following the Targ. in transposing two letters.

<sup>t</sup> 59<sup>13</sup> Probably as a result of ditography, the Heb. word meaning, they conceive, has been added to the Heb. It destroys the metre of the vs. and has no analogy with the context.

<sup>u</sup> 59<sup>15</sup> Following the Gk. in reconstructing the corrupt Heb. text. The Heb. word translated, rulers, means, literally, shepherds. Another reconstruction gives the reading, from the city, or, from the market-place.

<sup>v</sup> 59<sup>15</sup> Following Marti in restoring what was probably the original verb. Traditional Heb., in his eyes.

So his own arm delivered him.
 And his righteousness upheld him.
<sup>17</sup> He put on righteousness as armor,
 And on his head the helmet of deliverance.
 He put on the garments of vengeance,<sup>w</sup>
 And clad himself with jealousy as with a mantle.
<sup>18</sup> According to deserts will he recompense<sup>x</sup>
 Wrath to his adversaries, disgrace<sup>y</sup> to his foes.<sup>z</sup> <sup>19</sup> They shall see the name of Jehovah from the west,
 And his glory from the rising sun—
 For the adversary<sup>a</sup> comes as a river,<sup>b</sup>
 Whom the breath of Jehovah puts to flight—<sup>20</sup> And so as a Redeemer he shall shortly come to Zion,
 To turn away rebellion from Jacob.<sup>c</sup>

§ 190. The Day of Jehovah's Vengeance, Is. 63<sup>1-6</sup>

Is. 63 <sup>1</sup>Who is this who is coming from Edom,
 In blood-stained garments from Bozrah?<sup>d</sup>
 So glorious in his apparel,
 Marching<sup>e</sup> in the fulness of his strength.

It is I, who am glorious<sup>f</sup> in redressing wrong,
 And mighty to deliver.

<sup>w</sup> 59<sup>17</sup> Through a scribal repetition the word, clothing, is found in the Heb., but not in the Gk. and Lat.

<sup>x</sup> 59<sup>18</sup> Slightly correcting the ungrammatical Heb. text.

<sup>y</sup> 59<sup>18</sup> Following the Gk. in reconstructing the Heb., which here repeats the word, recompense.

<sup>z</sup> 59<sup>19</sup> Heb. adds, to the coast-lands he will repay recompense. The phrase, however, is not found in the Gk. and is clearly a scribal gloss.

<sup>a</sup> 59<sup>19</sup> Following the superior reading of the Heb. MSS. rather than the traditional Heb.

<sup>b</sup> 59<sup>19</sup> The figure of speech here employed is evidently drawn from the ancient Heb. tradition of Jehovah's conflict with the great dragon, which represented Chaos.

<sup>c</sup> 59<sup>20</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, is the oracle of Jehovah. A scribe has also added, at the end of this section, the prose note, <sup>2d</sup> and as for me, this is my covenant with them, saith Jehovah. My spirit which is upon thee and my words which I have put into thy mouth shall not depart from thy mouth, nor from the mouth of thy descendants, nor from the mouth of their descendants, saith the Lord Jehovah, from now and forever. Its thought, as well as its literary form, reveal its secondary character.

§ 190 This section is closely connected in thought with the preceding, especially with 59<sup>16-20</sup>. The foe here, however, is outside, not inside Judah. The Edomites, who were at this time the most merciless and insistent foes of the Judean community, represent here, as in much of the literature of the period, the hostile, heathen world which stood in the way of the restoration of Jehovah's people and the realization of their hopes. This powerful picture of Jehovah as a warrior trampling down his impious foes is by no means alien to the thought of II Is. It is but the expansion of the figure already presented in 42<sup>13</sup>,

*Jehovah goeth forth as a hero,
 As a warrior he stirreth up his rage,
 He shouteth and uttereth the battle-cry
 Against his foes he sheweth himself a hero.*

<sup>d</sup> 63<sup>1</sup> An emendation of the text gives the reading in the first line instead of, from Edom, all red and in the second line, redder in garments than a vintager. This would relieve the passage of its local application and make it simply a picture of Jehovah as a conquering warrior. The textual changes required are radical, however, and the concrete references add rather than detract from the vigor of the poem.

<sup>e</sup> 63<sup>1</sup> Following the superior reading of Sym. and Lat.

<sup>f</sup> 63<sup>1</sup> Revising the Heb. text with the aid of the preceding context. Heb., I am the one who speaks.

Prophet: Who is the divine warrior

Jehovah: I who redress wrongs

Prophet: Why art thou blood-stained

Jehovah: I have been executing vengeance upon the peoples

Jehovah's acts of deliverance in the past

<sup>2</sup>Why is there red on thine apparel,<sup>g</sup>
And thy garments like him who treads in the wine-press?

<sup>3</sup>A wine-trough have I trodden alone,<sup>h</sup>
And of the peoples no man was with me,
So I trod them in my wrath,
I trampled them down in my fury,
Their life-blood besprinkled my garments,
And all my apparel I defiled,

<sup>4</sup>For a day of vengeance was in my heart,
And the year of my redemption<sup>i</sup> had come.

<sup>5</sup>I looked but there was no helper,
I was astonished, but there was no upholder;
Therefore mine arm helped me,
And my fury upheld me,

<sup>6</sup>I trod down the peoples in mine anger,
And crushed<sup>j</sup> them in my fury,
And spilt their life-blood on the ground.

§ 191. Prayer to Jehovah to Deliver His People as of Old, Is. 63<sup>7</sup>-64<sup>11</sup>

Is. 63 <sup>7</sup>Jehovah's loving acts will I recount, Jehovah's acts of renown, According to all which he hath wrought for us, Jehovah who is great<sup>k</sup> in goodness.

Hath wrought for us,<sup>l</sup> according to his compassion, and his great loving-kindness.

<sup>8</sup>For he said, Surely they are all my people, sons who will not prove false;
So he became their deliverer <sup>m</sup>from all their distress.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>g</sup> 63<sup>2</sup> Correcting the Heb. which is corrupted through the mistaken repetition of a letter.
<sup>h</sup> 63<sup>3</sup> The verbs of this vs. in the Heb. are incorrectly pointed so as to read in the future rather than in the past tense.

<sup>i</sup> 63<sup>4</sup> I. e., the great day of deliverance like the great year of jubilee. Cf. Lev. 25<sup>28-34</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 63<sup>5</sup> Following the superior reading of certain Heb. MSS.

<sup>§ 191</sup> The unity of this section is obvious. It consists of a review of Jehovah's past deliverances of his people and a prayer that he will again forgive and save them. The background is a period of deepest gloom. The exuberant hopes which usually characterize the writings of II Is. are lacking. The passage is closely parallel in thought and language to many of the Pss. which come from the first part of the Persian period. It is possible that one of them has here found a place in the book of Is. This conclusion, however, is not a necessity if it be admitted that such a highly emotional prophet as the II Is. had, like Jer., his moments of discouragement. Certainly in the life of the Judean community of this period, there was abundant occasion for a prayer such as is found in this section. The preceding prophecies which deal with the sins of the community show that the prophet was not blind to actual conditions. The prose structure, the different spirit, and the historical background reflected indicate that 64<sup>10-12</sup> are a later addition from the hand of some scribe who lived either during the latter part of the Persian period or during the Maccabean struggle. Overlooking 63<sup>18</sup>, he recognized the general adaptability of the prayer contained in this section to his own age, and made the adaptation complete by adding a brief appendix. Although the text of this passage has suffered more in transmission than almost any other passage in the O.T., the forceful, original style of the great poet-prophet may still be recognized.

<sup>k</sup> 63<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. The Heb. introduces an awkward conjunction. The words, to the house of Israel, found at the end of the line, appear to be also an explanatory addition, for they are out of harmony with the metre and thought of the passage.

<sup>l</sup> 63<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. lacks, for us.

<sup>m</sup> 63<sup>9</sup> Joining this clause with the last part of the preceding vs. with which it belongs.

It was not a messenger<sup>n</sup> nor an angel but his own presence that delivered them;

In his love and mercy he himself redeemed them;

He also took them up, and carried them all the days of old.

Rebellions
of
the people.

<sup>10</sup>But they, they rebelled and pained his holy spirit;

So he changed himself into their enemy, he fought himself against them.

<sup>11</sup>Then [Israel] recalled the days of old, [the years of past ages]:<sup>o</sup>

Where is he who brought<sup>p</sup> us up from the sea, the Shepherd of his flock?

Where is he who did put within it<sup>q</sup> his holy spirit,

<sup>12</sup>He who caused to go up at Moses' right hand his glorious arm, who cleft the sea before them?<sup>r</sup>

Who cleft the waters before him, to make for himself an everlasting<sup>s</sup> name?

<sup>13a</sup>Who was it that made them go through the deeps, as a horse in the wilderness,<sup>t</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Like the cattle that go down into the valley <sup>13b</sup>without stumbling?

Memories
of
the days of Moses

May thy spirit, O Jehovah, lead us,<sup>u</sup>
As thou didst lead thy people,

To make for thyself a glorious name.

<sup>15</sup>Look down from heaven and behold,
From thy holy and beauteous abode;
Where are thy jealousy and might,<sup>v</sup>

The stirring of thy pity and compassion?

Let them not be restrained toward us, <sup>16</sup>for thou art our Father,<sup>w</sup>

For Abraham knoweth us not,<sup>x</sup>

And Israel doth not recognize us;

Thou, O Jehovah, art our Father,

Our Redeemer from of old is thy name.

Prayer
for Je-
hovah's continued leadership

<sup>n</sup> 63<sup>9</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. and O. Lat. The Heb. is hopelessly corrupt. The idea is that not by the mediation of angelic messengers, but in person, Jehovah delivered his people in the crises of their early history.

<sup>o</sup> 63<sup>11</sup> The words, Moses and his people, have here crept in as an explanatory gloss upon the words, shepherd and his flock, in the following line. Following a suggestion of Cheyne, based on Dt. 32<sup>7</sup>, it has been conjecturally restored as above.

<sup>p</sup> 63<sup>11</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Syr.

<sup>q</sup> 63<sup>11</sup> I. e., of the flock, the people of Israel.

<sup>r</sup> 63<sup>12</sup> The reference is, of course, to the deliverance from the Red Sea.

<sup>s</sup> 63<sup>12</sup> Possibly the word, everlasting, is secondary, since it is not required by the metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>t</sup> 63<sup>13</sup>, <sup>14</sup> The text of these VSS. is exceedingly corrupt. The above translation follows the traditional text, with the exception of transposing, for metrical reasons, the last clause of <sup>13</sup> to the end of the first line of <sup>14</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 63<sup>14</sup> The reconstruction of this line was based on suggestions found in the VSS. Heb., the spirit of Jehovah giveth them rest. It is not clear, however, whether the transition from the retrospect to the prayer comes here or at the beginning of <sup>15</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 63<sup>15</sup> Following the superior reading of the VSS.

<sup>w</sup> 63<sup>15</sup>, <sup>16</sup> Possibly this line is secondary, for it anticipates the thought of <sup>16d</sup> and may have been inserted by a scribe who had in mind 64<sup>11</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 63<sup>16</sup> It would seem from this allusion that a type of ancestor-worship had sprung up in Palestine, and that here the prophet, in the name of the community, refuses to put trust in this heathen cult, and turns to Jehovah who, in the past or present, has proved himself able to deliver his people.

To reassert his rule

<sup>17</sup>Why, O Jehovah, dost thou make us wander from our ways
Dost harden our hearts so that we do not fear thee?

Turn, for the sake of thy servants,
For the sake<sup>y</sup> of the tribes of thine inheritance!

<sup>18</sup>Why do the ungodly despise thy sanctuary,<sup>z</sup>
Our adversaries despise thy holy abode?

<sup>19</sup>We are like those over whom for a long time thou hast not ruled,
Over whom thy name has not been called.

By a signal deliverance to impress all peoples

64 <sup>1</sup>O, that thou wouldst cleave the heavens, wouldst come down,
That the mountains might quake before thee,

<sup>2</sup>As fire kindles the brushwood,
As water which the fire makes boil,
To make known thy name to thine adversaries,
So that nations may tremble before thee!

<sup>3</sup>While thou doest terrible things for which we hoped not,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup>And of which men from of old have not heard!

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard<sup>b</sup>
The deeds and heroic acts <sup>c</sup>which thou wilt do

For those that wait for thee<sup>d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>O, that thou wouldst meet those who act righteously,<sup>e</sup>
Who remember thy ways!<sup>f</sup>

Confes-
sion of
guilt

But behold, thou art wroth, for we have sinned;
At our breach of faith, for we are guilty.

<sup>6</sup>We have all become as one defiled,
All our righteous deeds like a polluted garment,
We are all withered like leaves,
And our iniquities carry us away like the wind.
<sup>7</sup>There is none that calls upon thy name,
Who bestirs himself to lay hold on thee;
For thou hast hidden thy face from us,
And hast delivered<sup>g</sup> us into the power of our guilt.

Prayer
for forgive-
ness

<sup>8</sup>And now, O Jehovah, Thou art our Father,
We are the clay and thou the potter,

<sup>y</sup> 63<sup>17</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and the demands of the metre. Heb. omits, for the sake of.

<sup>z</sup> 63<sup>18</sup> Fundamentally reconstructing the corrupt Heb. text, which reads, for a little while they possessed thy holy people. The reconstruction is that of Buhl and consists of the regrouping of the Heb. letters so as to conform to the demands of the parallelism. The foes referred to in this vs. appear to be the impious leaders of the community and those with whom they had made alliance in Samaria and among the neighboring heathen nations.

<sup>a</sup> 64<sup>3</sup> In the Heb. a scribe has repeated from <sup>1</sup>, thou wouldest come down, before thee the mountains might quake.

<sup>b</sup> 64<sup>4</sup> Cf. the quotation in I Cor. 2<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 64<sup>4</sup> Fundamentally reconstructing the corrupt Heb. with aid of the Gk.

<sup>d</sup> 64<sup>4</sup> Reconstructing with the aid of the VSS. Heb., for him who waiteth for him.

<sup>e</sup> 64<sup>5</sup> Following a reconstruction of the corrupt Heb. suggested by Wellhausen and Cheyne and supported by the parallelism.

<sup>f</sup> 64<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. which makes no sense.

<sup>g</sup> 64<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk., O. Lat., and Targ.

And all of us are the work of thy hands.
<sup>9</sup>Be not exceedingly wroth, O Jehovah,
 And do not remember iniquity forever;
 Ah, but do look hither,<sup>h</sup> we are all thy people.

<sup>10</sup>Thy holy cities have become a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation, <sup>11</sup>Our holy and beautiful house where our fathers did praise thee has been burned with fire, and all in which we delighted has become a ruin. <sup>12</sup>Wilt thou in the presence of these things restrain thyself, O Jehovah? Wilt thou be silent and afflict us exceedingly?

For deliver-
ance
and res-tor-
tion

§ 192. Contrasted Fate of the Wicked and Faithful in the Community, Is. 65, 66

Is. 65 <sup>1</sup>I was to be inquired of by those who asked me not,<sup>i</sup>
 To be found of those who sought me not;
 I said, Here am I, Here am I,
 To a people who did not call upon<sup>j</sup> my name, <sup>2</sup>I have spread out my hands all the day long,
 To a stubborn and rebellious<sup>k</sup> people,
 Who follow a way that is not good,
 After their own thoughts.

Rejec-
tion of Jeho-
vah's gracious offers

<sup>3</sup>It is a people who vex me to my face, Continually<sup>l</sup> sacrificing in the gardens,
 And burning sacrifices<sup>m</sup> on the bricks;<sup>n</sup>
<sup>4</sup>Who sit in the graves,<sup>o</sup>
 And spend the night in secret places,
 Who eat the flesh of swine,<sup>p</sup>

Persistent
idolatry
of the
people

<sup>h</sup> 64<sup>9</sup> Gk. and O. Lat. add, for.

§ 192 In this long closing section the prophet turns, with alternating warning and promise, to the two classes in the Judean community to which his preceding messages had been directed. The one class are the half-heathen party which keep up the pretence of worshipping Jehovah but at the same time, in secret, commit dastardly crimes and participate in the heathen rites: the worship in groves and in gardens, and who sacrifice forbidden animals. The other class are Jehovah's faithful servants, who have been loyal to him. They are the true Israel, about whom the promises in this section centre. For the one class Jehovah's advent will mean judgment, for the other class restoration and vindication. As his theme changes the prophet uses in turn his customary three and five-beat measures. In conclusion the prophet reiterates his familiar promise that there will be a general restoration and that Jerusalem will be raised to a position of commanding importance, and that the heathen nations will join in bringing back Jehovah's people. The eschatological motifs which were developed in the first part of the II Is., and especially in chaps. 54, 55, reappear. Unfortunately the Heb. text is exceedingly corrupt, but it has not concealed the virile literary style the powerful invective, and the superlative hopefulness which characterizes the II Is. The closing vss., 66<sup>23, 24</sup>, are clearly a later prosaic addition to the prophecy from some scribe who wrote and thought in the spirit of later Judaism.

<sup>i</sup> 65<sup>1</sup> So Gk., O. Lat. and Syr. and certain Heb. MSS. The idea is that Jehovah stood ready to respond, but none sought him, for they turned instead to the heathen gods mentioned later in the chapter.

<sup>j</sup> 65<sup>1</sup> So the VSS.

<sup>k</sup> 65<sup>2</sup> So the Gk. and O. Lat. Heb. omits, and rebellious.

<sup>l</sup> 65<sup>3</sup> Reading the Heb. word, continually, with the second line of the vs. This gives a vs. logically as well as metrically balanced.

<sup>m</sup> 65<sup>3</sup> Or, burn incense. The reference is evidently to the ancient Semitic cults which were practiced in the sacred groves. The exact nature of these rites is unknown.

<sup>n</sup> 65<sup>3</sup> Or, with Marti, reconstructing the Heb. so that this line reads, who burn sacrifices under white poplars. It is not clear from the Heb. word whether the offerings consisted of animals or incense.

<sup>o</sup> 65<sup>4</sup> Probably in the tombs of their ancestors, that they might receive revelations from them.

<sup>p</sup> 65<sup>4</sup> In the light of recent discoveries it is clear that the flesh of swine was forbidden the Hebrews because these animals were once worshipped as sacred by the primitive people of Palestine. The reference here is probably to a survival of the ancient cult.

And in whose vessels is the broth<sup>q</sup> of unclean meats, <sup>5</sup>Who say, Keep by thyself,
 Come not near me, else I will sanctify thee!<sup>r</sup>

Jeho-
vah forced to punish

These are a smoke in my nostrils,
 A fire that burns continually.
<sup>6</sup>Behold, it is recorded before me:
 I will not be still until I have requited<sup>s</sup>
<sup>7</sup>Their<sup>t</sup> sins and the sins of their fathers,
 All together, saith Jehovah,
 Of them who have burnt sacrifices upon the mountains,
 And upon the hills have dishonored me.
 I will first measure out their recompense,
 And then requite it into their bosom.

Preservation
of his faithful servants

<sup>8</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
 As when the new wine is found in the cluster,
 And they say, 'Destroy it not,
 For there is a blessing in it,
 So will I do for the sake of my servants,
 In order not to destroy the whole.
<sup>9</sup>And I will bring forth from Jacob a posterity,
 And from Judah inheritors of my mountains;
 And my chosen ones shall possess the land,
 And my servants shall dwell there.
<sup>10</sup>Sharon shall become a pasture for flocks,
 And the Valley of Achor a resting place for herds,
 For my people who have sought me.<sup>u</sup>

Fate of
the apost-
ates

<sup>11</sup>But as for you who forsake Jehovah,
 Who forget my holy mountain,
 Who prepare a table for Fortune,<sup>v</sup>
 And who pour out mixed wine for Destiny;
<sup>12</sup>I destine you for the sword,
 And all of you shall bow down to the slaughter,
 Because when I called you did not answer,
 When I spoke you did not heed;
 But ye did that which was evil in my sight,
 And choose that in which I had no pleasure.

<sup>q</sup> 65<sup>4</sup> Following a marginal reading of the Heb.

<sup>r</sup> 65<sup>5</sup> Slightly revising the punctuation of the Heb. word. The meaning is, lest thou be rendered taboo by participating in the ancient rites. Cf. Smith, Rel. of Semites, 357-68.

<sup>s</sup> 65<sup>6</sup> Heb. adds, I will requite into their bosom, but this has evidently been transferred from the end of <sup>7</sup>, where it is required to complete the parallelism and where only the words, into their bosom, have been preserved in the Heb. text.

<sup>t</sup> 65<sup>7</sup> So the almost unanimous testimony of the VSS. Heb., your sins.

<sup>u</sup> 65<sup>10</sup> Possibly this line is secondary.

<sup>v</sup> 65<sup>11</sup> The preparing of a sacrificial table, set with food, was a characteristic Semitic rite. The name Gad, the God of Fortune, appears in many Semitic proper names, while at Gaza there was a temple to the God of Fortune.

<sup>13</sup>Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah:

Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry;
 Behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty;
 Behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be put to shame;
<sup>14</sup>Behold, my servants shall loudly exult, from gladness of heart,
 But ye shall cry out for anguish of heart and breaking of spirit,<sup>w</sup>
<sup>15</sup>And ye shall leave your name for a curse to my chosen ones,<sup>x</sup>
 But, behold, my servants shall be called by another name.<sup>y</sup>

Contrast
between the fate
of the faithful
and apostates

<sup>16</sup>He who asks a blessing for himself in the land shall bless himself by the God of truth,

And he who swears in the land shall swear by the God of truth,
 Because the former troubles are forgotten, and hidden from mine eyes.

<sup>17</sup>For, behold, I am about to create a new heaven and a new earth,
 And the former things shall not be remembered nor come to mind, <sup>18</sup>But they shall rejoice<sup>z</sup> and exult eternally in what I am about to create;
 For behold, I am about to create Jerusalem as an exultation, and her people a joy.

The great transformation

<sup>19</sup>And I will exult in Jerusalem, and rejoice in my people;
 No more shall there be heard in her the voice of weeping nor the sound of crying.

<sup>20</sup>No more shall there be from thence an infant of but a few days,<sup>a</sup>
 Nor an old man who does not live out his days;
 But the youngest shall die a hundred years old.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>21</sup>They shall build houses and dwell in them,
 They shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them;

<sup>22</sup>They shall not build and another inhabit,
 They shall not plant and another eat;

For as the days of a tree shall be the days of my people,
 And the work of their hands shall my chosen ones enjoy to the end.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>23</sup>They shall not labor in vain nor bear children that they may perish,
 For a race blessed by Jehovah are they, and their offspring with them.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>24</sup>And before they call, I, indeed, will answer;
 While they are yet speaking I will hear.

Perennial
peace
and prosperity

<sup>w</sup> 65<sup>14</sup> Heb. adds, ye shall lament, but the metre and the sense of the context strongly suggest that this was a scribal gloss.

<sup>x</sup> 65<sup>15</sup> The absence of the formula of cursing has apparently led a later scribe to add a marginal note, and let the Lord Jehovah stay thee, which has crept into the text. The scribe failed, however, to grasp the exact meaning of the context. For the usual formula of swearing, cf. Jer. 29<sup>22</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 65<sup>15</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., to his servants he will call.

<sup>z</sup> 65<sup>18</sup> Reading the verbs as futures, as suggested by the VSS. and the demands of the context.

<sup>a</sup> 65<sup>20</sup> Lit., infant of days. I. e., a child which dies in its infancy.

<sup>b</sup> 65<sup>20</sup> A later scribe, desiring to modify this statement, has added, but he who sins, being a hundred years old, shall be accursed.

<sup>c</sup> 65<sup>22</sup> Lit., wear out.

<sup>d</sup> 65<sup>24</sup> The meaning is that either their descendants shall share the blessing with them or that their descendants of the second or third generation shall remain with them.

<sup>25</sup>The wolf and the lamb shall feed together in harmony,<sup>e</sup>
And the lion shall eat straw like the ox;<sup>f</sup>
And they shall not harm nor destroy
In all my holy mountain, saith Jehovah.

A submissive spirit
alone essential to true
worship

66 <sup>1</sup>Thus saith Jehovah: Heaven is my throne,<sup>g</sup>
And the earth is my footstool;
What manner of house is it that ye would build for me?
At what manner of place is my habitation?
<sup>2</sup>All these my hand hath made,
And all these are mine,<sup>h</sup> is Jehovah's oracle.
But for these do I have regard, for the afflicted,
And him who is broken in spirit, and who trembles at my word.

Half-heathen rites incur Jehovah's
judgment

<sup>3</sup>He who slaughters an ox is also a man-slayer,
He who sacrifices a sheep also strangles a dog;
He who brings up an offering also sheds swine's blood
He who offers incense as a memorial also blesses an idol.
As these have chosen their ways,
And take pleasure in their abominations;
<sup>4</sup>So will I choose wanton outrages for them,
And will bring on them what they dread;
Because when I called none answered.
When I spake they did not heed;
But they did what was evil in my sight,
And chose that in which I had no delight.

Comfort for
the
faithful

<sup>5</sup>Hear ye the word of Jehovah, ye who tremble at his word;
Your brethren who hate you have said:—
They who loathed you for my name's sake—<sup>6</sup> Let Jehovah show forth his glory
That we too may look on your joy!<sup>7</sup> But they shall be filled with shame.
<sup>6</sup>Hark, an uproar from the city! hark, from the temple!
Hark, it is Jehovah giving full recompence to his foes!

Sudden rebirth
of the
nation

<sup>7</sup>She also<sup>i</sup> before she had travailed brought forth [a son];
Before her pangs came upon her she was delivered of a male child.
<sup>8</sup>Who has ever heard of such a thing? Who has ever seen the like?
Can the people<sup>j</sup> of a land be brought forth in one day?

<sup>e</sup> 65<sup>25</sup> Lit., as one.

<sup>f</sup> 65<sup>25</sup> The Heb. adds what is probably a gloss added by a scribe who had in mind Gen. 3<sup>14</sup>, but the serpent, dust shall be its food. It is closely akin to the gloss in <sup>20</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 66<sup>1</sup> The metre of this and the following lines is irregular, varying from three to five-beat.

<sup>h</sup> 66<sup>2</sup> The Gk. and Syr., which have been followed, have clearly preserved the original reading.

<sup>i</sup> 66<sup>7</sup> Part of this line has evidently been lost. The antecedent is, Zion, or, the nation. The parallelism also indicates that, son, must be supplied as the object of the verb at the end of the line.

<sup>j</sup> 66<sup>8</sup> The metre and context imply that, people, has fallen out of the Heb.

Can a nation be born all at once?

For no sooner was Zion in travail than she brought forth her sons.

<sup>9</sup>Should I bring to birth and not bring forth, saith Jehovah?

Or should I, who bring forth, hold it back? saith<sup>k</sup> Jehovah.

<sup>10</sup>Rejoice over Jerusalem and exult over her, all ye who love her,
Be supremely joyful with her all ye that have mourned over her;

<sup>11</sup>That ye may suck and be satisfied from the breast of her consolations,
That ye may drink deeply and take delight from her rich bosom.<sup>l</sup>

Rejoicing over restored Jerusalem

<sup>12</sup>For thus saith Jehovah,
Behold I am about to direct toward her
Peace like an overflowing<sup>m</sup> stream,
And like a torrent the wealth of the nations,
And your children<sup>n</sup> shall be carried on the side,
And on the knees shall they be fondled.

<sup>13</sup>As one whom his mother doth comfort,
So I indeed will comfort you.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>14</sup>When you see it your heart shall be joyful,
And your bones shall flourish like grass;
Jehovah's kindness<sup>p</sup> to his servants shall be made known,
And his indignation<sup>q</sup> toward his foes.

Jehovah's promise to restore and vindicate his true servants

<sup>15</sup>For behold, Jehovah will come like a fire,
And his chariots shall be like a whirlwind;
To pay back his wrath in hot indignation;
And his rebuke in flames of fire;

To punish the guilty

<sup>16</sup>For by fire Jehovah will execute judgment,<sup>r</sup>
And by his sword, upon all flesh,
And those slain by Jehovah shall be many.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>17a-d</sup>They who consecrate and purify themselves for the gardens<sup>t</sup>
Following the example of one in their midst,<sup>u</sup>
Who eat swine's flesh,
And the swarming creatures,<sup>v</sup> and mice.

<sup>k</sup> 66<sup>9</sup> Following the superior reading of certain of the Heb. MSS. The thought is that what Jehovah has begun he surely will carry to completion.

<sup>l</sup> 66<sup>11</sup> Lit., breast, or, udder, following the Arab. derivation. The common rendering, abundance, probably represents a secondary meaning.

<sup>m</sup> 66<sup>12</sup> With Duhm, transferring this adjective to restore the metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>n</sup> 66<sup>12</sup> Following the Gk. Heb. text is corrupt.

<sup>o</sup> 66<sup>13</sup> The Heb. adds, and shall ye be comforted in Jerusalem, but this is probably secondary. In the light of the subsequent context it would appear that Jehovah was the active agent in restoring his people and that the preceding clause represents the original.

<sup>p</sup> 66<sup>14</sup> Following recent commentators in reading, kindness, instead of, hand, which furnishes the natural contrast suggested by the second member of the couplet.

<sup>q</sup> 66<sup>14</sup> Heb., and he shall be indignant.

<sup>r</sup> 66<sup>16</sup> Gk. adds, all the earth.

<sup>s</sup> 66<sup>16</sup> Possibly this line is secondary.

<sup>t</sup> 66<sup>17</sup> I. e., to the gardens where the heathen cults were practiced.

<sup>u</sup> 66<sup>17</sup> Apparently in imitation of the example of some one already initiated into the mysteries of the cult.

<sup>v</sup> 66<sup>17</sup> Correcting one Heb. letter so as to give a harmonious reading.

<sup>18a</sup>Their works and their thoughts<sup>w</sup>

<sup>17e</sup>Shall together come to an end, is Jehovah's oracle.

<sup>18b</sup>For behold,<sup>x</sup> the time has come

For gathering all nations and tongues,
And they shall come and see my glory.

<sup>19</sup>And I will perform a sign among them,

And I will send forth from them those who have escaped,
To<sup>y</sup> the most distant coastlands,

Which have not heard my name nor seen my glory;

And they shall make known my glory among the nations.

<sup>20</sup>And they shall bring all your brethren from all the nations<sup>z</sup>

As an offering to Jehovah,<sup>a</sup> to my holy mountain,
To Jerusalem, saith Jehovah,

Even as the Israelites bring the offering

In a clean vessel to Jehovah's house.

<sup>21</sup>And also some of them will I take

For Levitical priests, saith Jehovah.

<sup>22</sup>For even as the new heavens

And the new earth which I am about to make,

Shall continue before me, is Jehovah's oracle,

So shall your posterity and name continue.

To make known
his glory among all nations

To gather and re-establish
his people at Jerusalem

To show
the folly of rebellion

<sup>23</sup>And it shall come to pass from new moon to new moon and from sabbath to sabbath, all flesh shall come to worship before me, saith Jehovah? <sup>24</sup>And they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men who have rebelled against me; for their worm shall not die nor can their fire be quenched;<sup>b</sup> and they shall be an abhorrence to all flesh.

<sup>w</sup> 66<sup>18a</sup> With Duhm and other recent commentators, transferring this line to its logical position.

<sup>x</sup> 66<sup>18</sup> With Cheyne amending and dividing the Heb. letters differently so as to restore the obviously corrupt Heb.

<sup>y</sup> 66<sup>19</sup> Some scribe has added in this connection a list of the distant nations. Revising, with the aid of the Gk., the list reads, the nations, Tarshish, Put, Lud, Meshech, Rosh, Tubal, and Javan. Cf. Ezek. 38, 39<sup>1</sup>. The last name is the Heb. designation for the Greeks.

<sup>z</sup> 66<sup>20</sup> The thought is that the foreign nations will bring the scattered exiles as an offering to Jehovah, and from these Jehovah will take certain ones, presumably of the exiled priestly families, to minister before him at his sanctuary.

<sup>a</sup> 66<sup>20</sup> Possibly the same scribe who added the detailed supplemental gloss in <sup>19</sup> has here added a list of the animals upon which the exiles shall be brought back. It reads, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules, and upon dromedaries.

<sup>b</sup> 66<sup>24</sup> The reference is evidently to the place at the south of Jerusalem in the Valley of Benhinnom, the Gehenna of the Gk., where the refuse of the city was thrown out to be consumed by worms or slowly burning fire. Cf. Enoch 27<sup>2, 3</sup>.

V

THE PROPHECY OF OBADIAH

§ 193. Obadiah's Vision concerning Edom, Obadiah

Ob. 1 <sup>1</sup>A report have we heard from Jehovah,
A messenger has been sent among the nations;
Up, and let us rise against her in battle!<sup>a</sup>

Uprising of Edom's
foes

<sup>2</sup>Behold, I have made thee small among the nations, Thou art despised among men!<sup>b</sup>
<sup>3</sup>Thy proud heart<sup>c</sup> hath misled thee,
Thou who dwellest in the clefts of the rock,
Thou who buildest<sup>d</sup> on high thy dwelling, who saith to thyself,
Who shall bring me down to earth?
<sup>4</sup>Though thou buildest high as the eagle,
Though between the stars thou set<sup>e</sup> thy nest
From there will I bring thee down, is Jehovah's oracle.

Humbling
the proud
nation

§ 193 The prophecy of Obadiah is introduced by the composite superscription: THE VISION OF OBADIAH. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah concerning Edom. This superscription furnishes no information regarding the prophet or his date. In answering these questions we are entirely dependent upon internal evidence. Repeated references to the hostility and inhumanity of the Edomites in connection with the final destruction of Jerusalem indicate that it must be dated later than 586 b.c., but from<sup>7</sup> it is evident that a great calamity has overtaken Edom itself. The Edomites have already been betrayed by their own allies and expelled from their territory. The situation is the same as that described in the beginning of the book of Malachi, § 194. There is little doubt that the allusion is to the expulsion of the Edomites from their territory by the Nabateans, which took place sometime between 600 and 400 b.c. By the close of the Persian period, if not much earlier, they had settled in Southern Judah. The prominence of the Edomites in the writings of the II Is., the exultation over their overthrow recorded in Mal. 1, and the absence of any reference to the Jewish towns in Southern Judah in Nehemiah's memoirs, indicate beyond reasonable doubt that by the first half of the fifth century b.c. the catastrophe here referred to had already overtaken the Edomites and that they had been driven northward into Judah by kindred Arab tribes. The date of this prophecy, therefore, is to be found sometime between 500 and 450 b.c.

The unity of the book has been seriously questioned. Vss. 1-7c, 10, 14, 15 constitute a closely knit unit and deal simply with Edom. These vss. are undoubtedly from Obadiah, who was clearly one of the minor prophets of the period, in close sympathy with the feelings of the Judean community. The remainder of the prophecy in its original form presents the other side of the picture of Edom's overthrow and voices the hopes which, in less concrete form, were repeatedly expressed by the II Is. The references to the house of Joseph and to the Northern Israelites reveal nothing of the bitter feud which sprang up between Samaritan and Jew in the period inaugurated by Nehemiah. The second half of the prophecy, therefore, must be dated before 445 b.c., and hence comes from the same period. Esau also figures in these closing vss. as in the opening. Cf. 18, 19, 21. Hence, although the logical connection is not very close, all the indications point to the conclusion that the latter part as well as the first part of the prophecy is from Obadiah.

The prophecy lacks the broad outlook of the II Is. It voices the nationalistic hopes which filled the minds of the Judean community during the days preceding the advent of Nehemiah. The Edomites represented the hostile heathen foes whose overthrow seemed absolutely necessary, not only for the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom, but also for the vindication of his justice.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> Jer. 49<sup>14-16</sup> is but a variant of Ob. 14. The indications are that the author of the late prophecy in Jer. 49 quoted from Ob.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> Following the superior reading of the parallel passage in Jer. 49<sup>15</sup>. Heb., thou exceedingly.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Lit., pride of thy heart.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk., Syr., and Lat.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> Slightly correcting the defective Heb.

Betrayed
and expelled allies

The reason
why

Cruel
treach-ery at the time of Jerusa-
lem's
over-
throw

<sup>5</sup>If thieves had come to thee by night
Would they not have stolen only as much as they needed?<sup>f</sup>
If grape-gatherers had come to thee
Would they not have left some gleanings?<sup>g</sup> <sup>7</sup>But to the very border they have driven thee,
All thy allies have betrayed thee,
Thy avowed friends<sup>h</sup> have overpowered thee,
They have set a trap for thee.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Because of the outraging of thy brother Jacob Shame doth cover thee and thou art cut off forever.

<sup>11</sup>In the day when thou didst stand aloof,
In the day when strangers carried away his wealth,
And aliens entered into his gates,
And over Jerusalem they cast lots,
Thou also wert as one of them.

<sup>12</sup>Thou shouldst not have gloated in the day of thy brother, in the day of his misfortune.

Thou shouldst not have exulted over the land of Judah in the day of his<sup>k</sup> destruction

Thou shouldst not have laughed loudly<sup>l</sup> in his distress.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Thou shouldst not have entered in at the gate of my people in the day of his<sup>n</sup> disaster,

Thou shouldst not have gloated, yea, thou, upon his calamity, in the day of his disaster,

Nor stretched out thine hand<sup>o</sup> after his wealth in the day of his disaster,<sup>p</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Nor stood at the parting of the ways to cut off his fugitives, Nor shouldst thou have intercepted his escaped ones in the day of distress.

<sup>f</sup> 15 Restoring with the aid of the parallel in Jer. 49<sup>o</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 15 What appears to be a marginal gloss has been included at this point in the text. It reads, How searched out is Esau, how rifled his treasures. The line is in the five-beat measure and interrupts the close sequence of thought between <sup>5</sup> and <sup>7</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 17 Lit., men of thy peace. Through a mistaken repetition a scribe has added in the Heb., of thy bread, but this is lacking in the Gk.

<sup>i</sup> 17 The meaning of this Heb. word is uncertain. Changing one letter, Marti reads, they have taken up their abode in thy stead, which would be a reference to the occupation of Southern Judah by the Edomites.

<sup>j</sup> 17 The direct address to Edom which is continued in <sup>10</sup> is interrupted by a long scribal note which assumes, contrary to the context, that Edom's judgment lies in the future rather than in the present and past. The text is confused and lacks the clear poetic structure which characterizes the original prophecy. It reads, there is no understanding in him. Shall it not be, in that day, is Jehovah's oracle, that I will destroy the wise men from Edom, and understanding from Mount Esau? And thy mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, so that every man shall be cut off from out Esau, by slaughter.

*The secondary character of this passage is evident.

<sup>k</sup> 12 Heb., their destruction.

<sup>l</sup> 12 Lit., make broad thy mouth. The verbs in this vs., and in <sup>13</sup>, <sup>14</sup>, are in the imperative, but from <sup>15</sup> it would seem clear that, as in <sup>11</sup>, the reference is to Edom's action in the past, and especially at the time of Jerusalem's fall in 586 B.C., and that therefore the verbs should be translated as above.

<sup>m</sup> 12 This vs. is so closely parallel to <sup>13</sup> that it is regarded by many as simply a variant. Repetition, however, in almost the same terms, is so characteristic of this prophet that it is precarious to argue from this basis that a passage is secondary.

<sup>n</sup> 13 Heb., their disaster.

<sup>o</sup> 13 Correcting the corrupt Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>p</sup> 13 The Gk. suggests that possibly the original read, his destruction.

<sup>15</sup>Verily near is Jehovah's day upon all the nations;
As thou hast done so shall it be done to thee;<sup>q</sup>
Thy deed shall come back upon thine own head.

Jeho-vah's
judgment at hand

<sup>16</sup>Verily as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain,
So all the nations shall drink continually;<sup>r</sup>
They shall drink and reel<sup>s</sup> and be as though they had not been.

<sup>17</sup>But on Mount Zion there shall be a refuge,<sup>t</sup>
And those of the house of Jacob shall again enter into their possessions;

Israel to destroy Edom

<sup>18</sup>For the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame,
But the house of Esau shall become stubble,
They shall kindle and devour them;
And there shall not one escape of the house of Esau,
For Jehovah hath spoken.

<sup>19</sup>They shall possess the South Country<sup>u</sup> and the western lowland,
And they shall possess the territory of Ephraim and Gilead.

Again
to possess the land of their fathers

<sup>20</sup>The remnant of Israel<sup>v</sup> shall possess<sup>w</sup> the land of the Canaanites even to Zarephath,<sup>x</sup>

And the captives of Jerusalem<sup>y</sup> shall possess the cities of the south.

<sup>21</sup>Saviours<sup>z</sup> shall come up on Mount Zion to judge Mount Esau,
And the dominion shall belong to Jehovah.

<sup>q</sup> 1<sup>15</sup> By many scholars this line is transposed to the end of this vs. and joined to 1<sup>16ff</sup>.

<sup>r</sup> 1<sup>16</sup> Many Heb. MSS. read, around about.

<sup>s</sup> 1<sup>16</sup> Changing one letter in the Heb. so as to give the above harmonious reading.

<sup>t</sup> 1<sup>17</sup> The first line of this vs. is taken from Joel 2<sup>32</sup>. To this, in the Heb., has been added the clause, and it shall be holy. The latter clause is probably from a scribe who had in mind Joel 3<sup>17</sup>, for it destroys the metre and poetic parallelism of the vs.

<sup>u</sup> 1<sup>19</sup> The text of this and the two following vss. has been greatly expanded by explanatory glosses. Following, South Country, is the phrase, Mount Esau, and following, Shephelah, the western lowland, which lay between the western headlands of Judah and the territory of Philistia, is the word, Philistines. Following, Ephraim, is the descriptive clause, the territory of Samaria, and Benjamin.

<sup>v</sup> 1<sup>20</sup> Distinction is apparently made here between the exiles who came back and settled the territory of Northern Israel and those who came back to Jerusalem and Judah. The Heb. adds, that host.

<sup>w</sup> 1<sup>20</sup> Correcting the obviously corrupt Heb., which simply has, which, but the radicals of this Heb. word are the same as those of the verb suggested by the parallelism.

<sup>x</sup> 1<sup>20</sup> Zarephath, is probably the, Zareptah, of Luke 4<sup>26</sup>, a Phoenician city between Tyre and Sidon.

<sup>y</sup> 1<sup>20</sup> The Heb. adds, which are in Sepharad. Later Jews identified this with Hispania, the Roman designation of Spain, whence Sephardim, the name commonly given to the Spanish Jews. This identification, however, is improbable. Sepharad is probably either to be identified with the Persian province in Asia Minor, mentioned repeatedly by Darius in his inscriptions, or with a country of somewhat similar name in southwestern Media, mentioned in the inscriptions of Sargon. In any case the metrical and grammatical structure of the vs. suggests that this is another of the many supplemental glosses.

<sup>z</sup> 1<sup>21</sup> Evidently there are no longer kings in Judah, but its leaders correspond to the deliverers or judges of the earlier period.

VI

THE BOOK OF MALACHI

§ 194. Jehovah's Love for Jacob, Mal. 1<sup>2-5</sup>

Mal. 1 <sup>2</sup>I have loved you, saith Jehovah.

Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us?

Was not Esau Jacob's brother?

It is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts; <sup>a</sup>

Yet I loved Jacob; <sup>b</sup>but Esau I hated,

And I made his mountains a desolation,

And transformed<sup>b</sup> his heritage into a wilderness.

<sup>c</sup>Whereas Edom saith, We are cast down,

But we will return and build the waste places;

Thus saith Jehovah of hosts,

They shall build, but I will throw down;

Men shall call them, The border land of wickedness,

The people against whom Jehovah hath indignation.<sup>c</sup>

---

The Book of Malachi.—As has already been noted, Introd., pp. 29, 30, the book of Mal., like most of the post-exilic writings, is anonymous. When it was written the restored temple had long been standing and the moral tone of the Judean community was exceedingly low. The priests had lost that zeal for the temple service which characterized the temple builders to whom Hag. and Zech. spoke. It was a period of discouragement when scepticism and despair were beginning to find open expression. The priests and ruling classes were selfish and regardless of their responsibilities. The author of the book of Mal. felt strongly the need for a strenuous reformer who would arouse the moral and spiritual sense of the community. The conditions thus reflected are very similar to those which Nehemiah found when he visited Jerusalem about 445 B.C. In many ways Nehemiah's reform work, especially in eliminating the social evils and in improving the temple worship, was the fulfilment of the prophet's hope that Jehovah would speedily send his messenger to prepare the way for a better and nobler era. The presence of the evils which Nehemiah endeavored to correct and the absence of any references to that great restorer of Judaism favor the conclusion that the book of Mal. was written not long before 445 B.C.

The book of Mal. deals directly and practically with the problems of the Judean community. Its style is a blending of prose and poetry. It suggests the discussions of the later rabbis. The questions and objections of the prophet's readers are first formulated and then answered by arguments, exhortations, and promises. With the exception of the closing verses, the prophecy is a closely knit literary unit. The brief introductory section aims to inspire confidence and gratitude for Jehovah's special care over his people. The second and main section of the book consists of denunciations of existing evils and the concluding section describes the divine judgment which Jehovah will visit upon the guilty and the ultimate glorious vindication of the faithful. The book is of great value for comparative study, for it presents in definite form many of the insistent problems which called forth not a few of the psalms found in the opening sections of the Psalter. It also formulates in words which might almost have been taken from the mouth of Job the problems which are treated in the great wisdom book which bears his name.

§ 194 From the beginning of the Baby. exile until the descendants of the ancient Edomites were conquered by the Jews in the Maccabean period these hereditary foes were the thorn in the flesh of the Judean community. Driven from their homes by the Nabatheans, they had seized southern Judah. Cf. § 193, Introd. From this vantage-ground they almost constantly harried the unprotected Jewish peasants and colonists who lived amidst the ruins of Jerusalem and in the neighboring villages. Through all this period they stood, as in the present passage, as a type of godless, merciless heathendom, the foe of Jehovah as well as of his chosen people. Their overthrow was therefore regarded by the prophet and his contemporaries as the most striking possible evidence of Jehovah's justice as well as of his considerate love toward the Jewish race.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> Adding, of hosts, as the metre and the usage of prophecy, as in <sup>2</sup> for ex., suggest.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> The Heb. is clearly corrupt. The Gk. has a different reading. The error was apparently originally due to the transposition of certain letters. Restoring them, the above reading, which is in complete harmony with the parallel line, is secured.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> The Heb. adds, forever; but this is not in harmony with the context or the metre of the vs. and is probably from a later hand.

<sup>5</sup>And your eyes shall see,
And ye shall say, Jehovah is magnified
Beyond the border of Israel.

§ 195. Infidelity and Ingratitude of the Priests, Mal. 1<sup>6</sup>–2<sup>9</sup>

Mal. 1 <sup>6</sup>A son honoreth his father,<sup>d</sup> and a servant feareth his master;
If then I am a father, where is mine honor?
And if I am a master, where is the one who fears me?<sup>e</sup>
Saith Jehovah to you, O ye priests, who despise my name.
But ye say, ‘Wherein have we despised thy name?’
<sup>7</sup>Ye offer upon mine altar bread that is polluted
And ye say, ‘Wherein have we polluted it?<sup>f</sup>
In that ye say, ‘The table of Jehovah is contemptible.’
<sup>8</sup>And that when ye offer the blind for sacrifice, ‘It is no harm!’
And that when ye offer the lame and the sick ‘It is no harm!’
Present it now to thy governor; will he be pleased with it?<sup>g</sup>
Or will he receive thee favorably? saith Jehovah of hosts.
<sup>9</sup>And now entreat the favor of God with such an offering, that he may be gracious to us,<sup>h</sup>
Would I receive any of you favorably? saith Jehovah of hosts.

Their presentation of unworthy offerings

<sup>10</sup>O that there were those among you who would shut the doors,<sup>i</sup>
That ye might not kindle fire on mine altar in vain!
I have no pleasure in you, saith Jehovah of hosts,
Neither will I accept an offering at your hand.
<sup>11</sup>For from the rising of the sun even to its setting my name is sacred among the
nations;
And in every place they offer to my name a pure offering;<sup>j</sup>
For my name is great among the nations, saith Jehovah of hosts.

Offerings of the heathen more acceptable to God

<sup>12</sup>But ye profane it, in that ye say,
‘The table of Jehovah is polluted, and its food<sup>k</sup> is contemptible.’
<sup>13</sup>Ye say also, ‘Behold what a weariness is it!’ and ye have scorned<sup>l</sup> me;<sup>m</sup>

His own people despise his service

§ 195 The thought that Jehovah is worshipped, even though blindly, by the heathen as well as the Jews, is rare even in the teachings of the prophets. It recognizes the fact that the attitude and spirit, not the creed, determine the quality of worship. The neglect of the priests was supremely reprehensible because of the spirit which it revealed. The ideal of the priesthood held up in 2<sup>6</sup>–7 is without parallel in the O.T. It shows how broad and spiritual was the influence of the faithful priests, and it explains why from their ranks there frequently arose prophets like Ezek. and Zech.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> Cf. the sixth command, Ex. 20<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> Gk. text and the following parallel support the above reading.

<sup>f</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> So Gk., Heb., thee.

<sup>g</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> So Gk., Heb., thee.

<sup>h</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> This vs. has evidently been expanded and in its present Heb. form makes little sense. A text based on the close parallelism in § has been followed here.

<sup>i</sup> 1<sup>0</sup> These words are ironical.

<sup>j</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> Or, A fine offering is offered. A scribe has added a variant text to make clear the meaning of the Heb.

<sup>k</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> Through a scribal error the clause, its fruit, has been added in the Heb.

<sup>l</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> So the marginal reading of the Heb. Lit., snuffed at me.

<sup>m</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> The clause, said Jehovah of hosts, has again been added

And ye have brought the blind,<sup>n</sup> the lame and the sick.<sup>o</sup>
 Should I accept this at your hand? saith Jehovah of hosts.<sup>p</sup> <sup>14</sup>But cursed be the deceiver, who has in his flock a male,
 And vows, and sacrifices to the Lord a blemished thing;
 For I am a great King, and my name is feared among the nations,

Penalty
if the priests
neglect
their task

<sup>2</sup> <sup>1</sup>And now, O ye priests, this command is for you.
<sup>2</sup>If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart,
 To give glory to my name, saith Jehovah of hosts,
 Then I will send the curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings;<sup>q</sup> <sup>3</sup>Behold, I will cut off<sup>r</sup> your arm,
 And will spread offal upon your faces, even the offals<sup>s</sup> of your feasts,<sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>And ye shall know that I have sent this command to you,
 That my covenant with Levi may be preserved, saith Jehovah of hosts.<sup>u</sup>

The
ideal
and fidelity
of the earlier
priests

<sup>5</sup>My covenant with him was to give<sup>v</sup> life and peace;
 And I gave them to him that he might revere me;<sup>w</sup>
 And he revered me, and stood in awe of my name.
<sup>6</sup>The true instruction<sup>x</sup> was in his mouth,
 And unrighteousness was not found in his lips;
 He walked with me in peace and uprightness,
 And turned many away from iniquity.
<sup>7</sup>For the priest's lips should keep knowledge,
 And men should seek the law at his mouth;
 For he is the messenger of Jehovah of hosts.

Degen-
eracy
and shame
of the later
priests

<sup>8</sup>But ye are turned aside out of the way;
 Ye have caused many to stumble in the law;
 Ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi,
 Saith Jehovah of hosts.
<sup>9</sup>Therefore have I also made you contemptible,
 And base before all the people,
 According as ye have not kept my ways,
 And have had no respect for me<sup>y</sup> in imparting the law.

<sup>n</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> Following a corrected text.

<sup>o</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> The clause in the Heb., and ye have brought the offering, is probably but a scribal addition.

<sup>p</sup> 1<sup>13</sup> Following the Gk. in adding, hosts.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>2</sup> A scribe in the Heb. has added, Yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart. The Gk. has further expanded the gloss.

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> Following a suggestion of the Gk. and the parallelism in I Sam. 2<sup>31</sup>. The arm represents the strength of the priestly class.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> This last clause may be an explanatory gloss.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>3</sup> The Heb. adds, and ye shall be taken away with it, but this is probably a gloss from Am. 4<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Interpreting as the context suggests.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>6</sup> Lit., the torah or teaching of righteousness.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Making a slight correction in the Heb.

CONDEMNATION OF DIVORCE

[MAL. 2<sup>10</sup>§ 196. Condemnation of Divorce, Mal. 2<sup>10-16</sup>Mal. 2 <sup>10</sup>Have we not all one father?

Hath not one God created us?

Why do we deal faithlessly with one another,

Profaning the covenant of our fathers?<sup>2<sub>a</sub></sup><sup>13</sup>And this ye do also:<sup>a</sup>Ye cover the altar of Jehovah with tears,<sup>b</sup>

So that he regardeth not the offering any more,

Neither receiveth it acceptably from your hand.

<sup>14</sup>Yet ye say, Why?

Because Jehovah hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth,

Against whom thou hast dealt faithlessly,<sup>c</sup>

Though she is thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

Divorce contrary to the spirit of Israel's religion

<sup>15</sup>Therefore give heed to your spirit,

And let none deal faithlessly with the wife of his youth,

<sup>16</sup>For I hate<sup>d</sup> putting away,Saith Jehovah, the God of Israel.<sup>e</sup>And him who covers his garment with violence,<sup>f</sup>

Saith Jehovah of hosts:

Therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not faithlessly.

Hateful to Jehovah

§ 197. Jehovah's Coming Judgment, Mal. 2<sup>17-3<sup>6</sup></sup>Mal. 2 <sup>17</sup>Ye have wearied Jehovah with your words.

Yet ye say, How have we wearied him?

In that ye say, Everyone that doeth evil

Is good in the sight of Jehovah,

Doubt of Jehovah's justice

§ 196 Semitic custom, and even the Heb. laws, made divorce comparatively easy. Cf. Vol. IV, § 11. In the corrupt Jewish community this evil had evidently become a glaring one. These words of the prophet contain no reference to the later policy of Nehemiah and Ezra, which demanded that foreign wives should be put away.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>10</sup> The immediate sequel of <sup>10</sup> is <sup>13</sup>. A later scribe who sympathized with Nehemiah and Ezra in the rigorous measures to correct the evil of intermarriage with foreigners has added the gloss: Judah hath dealt faithlessly, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of Jehovah which he loveth, and hath married the daughter of a foreign god. Jehovah will cut off the man who doeth this, root and branch, out of the tents of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering to Jehovah of hosts. The impossible reading of the Heb. in <sup>12</sup> is probably a corruption of the phrase, root and branch, of <sup>4<sub>a</sub></sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Possibly this word was added after <sup>11, 12</sup> were interpolated.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> An explanatory gloss, with weeping and sighing, has been added in the Heb.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> The meaning of this passage is very doubtful. The above follows a plausible reconstruction of Wellhausen. Cf. Gen. 6<sup>1</sup>. This idiom is explained by <sup>10a</sup> and Gen. 2<sup>24</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> Following a corrected text.

<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> Possibly the clause is a later addition.

<sup>f</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> Evidently violence to the marriage relation is in the mind of the prophet.

§ 197 From the apathetic and forgetful priests the prophet now turns to the scornful, sceptical class in the community which has already been fully described by the II Is. Cf. §§ 186, 189, 192. It is the class which, in the Psalms of the period, stands opposed to the pious. It included the rulers who lost no opportunity to oppress their dependents and whose base acts called forth the righteous indignation of Nehemiah. Cf. Neh. 5. In this section, as in the II Is., § 189, the prophet predicts that Jehovah himself will come in judgment to punish his unworthy servants, and to purify the Judean community that it may be worthy of the promises proclaimed by the prophets of the period.

And he delighteth in them;
Or where is the God of justice?

The advent of Jehovah to purify his people

3 <sup>1</sup>Behold, I am about to send my messenger,
And he shall prepare the way before me:<sup>g</sup>
And the Lord, whom ye seek,
Will suddenly come to his temple:<sup>h</sup>
<sup>2</sup>But who can endure the day of his coming?
And who shall stand when he appeareth?
For he is like a refiner's fire,
And like fullers' lyes;
<sup>3</sup>And he will sit as a refiner and purifier,<sup>i</sup>
And he will purify the sons of Levi,
And refine them as gold and silver;
And they shall offer<sup>j</sup> offerings in righteousness.
<sup>4</sup>Then shall the offerings of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant to Jehovah,
As in the days of old, and as in former years.

Those whom Jeho-
vah will condemn

<sup>5</sup>And I will come near to you to judgment;
And I will be a swift witness
Against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers,
And against thee who sware to that which is false,
And against those who oppress the hireling,<sup>k</sup> the widow, and the fatherless,
Who turn aside the resident alien from his right,<sup>l</sup> and fear not me,
Saith Jehovah of hosts.
<sup>6</sup>For I, Jehovah, change not;
But ye have not ceased to be sons of Jacob.<sup>m</sup>

§ 198. Penalty for Withholding the Tithe, Mal. 3<sup>7-12</sup>

Robbing Jeho-
vah

Mal. 3 <sup>7</sup>From the days of thy fathers ye have turned aside from my statutes, and ye have not kept them.
Turn to me and I will turn to you, saith Jehovah.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> Cf. Is. 40<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds, and the messenger of the covenant whom ye desire, behold he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts; but this appears to be a later prose note intended to adjust the prediction in the first part of the vs. to the later Jewish belief that Jehovah revealed himself in the life of his people only through his messengers. In 5, 6 it is Jehovah, not his messenger, who does the work of reformation.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> Of silver, has been added, anticipating the next lines.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> The Heb. adds, to Jehovah, but this was probably taken from 4 and added to make the meaning perfectly clear. It is not supported by the metre.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>5</sup> A scribe has added, in his wages.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> So Gk. and Dt. 24<sup>17</sup>, Ex. 22<sup>20</sup>, Am. 5<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>6</sup> I. e., from your sins, as exemplified by the deceitful acts of Jacob. The text is probably corrupt.

<sup>n</sup> 198 The law of Dt. 14<sup>22-29</sup> required that the tithes be brought to the temple and there be presented to Jehovah, and shared with the needy in the community. Cf. IV, § 190. Also that the tithes of the third year be set aside for the Levites and the poor. Nehemiah found it necessary to institute definite regulations to insure a fixed income from this source for the Levites. The prophet here returns to the theme which he had already developed in § 195. He is empha-

But ye say, Wherein shall we turn?

<sup>8</sup>Will a man rob<sup>n</sup> God? Yet ye robbed me.

But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and gifts.

<sup>9</sup>Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye rob me.

<sup>10</sup>Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house,
That there may be provision in mine house; and test me thereby,<sup>o</sup>
If I will not open to you the windows of heaven,
And pour you out a blessing, until there is more than enough.
<sup>11</sup>I will rebuke for your sakes the devourer<sup>p</sup> and he shall not destroy<sup>q</sup> the fruit of the ground,
Neither shall the vine fail to ripen its fruit in the field,<sup>r</sup>
<sup>12</sup>And all nations shall call you happy,<sup>s</sup>
For ye shall be a delightsome land, saith Jehovah of hosts.

Rewards
that will come from faithful service

§ 199. Future Reward of the Godless and Faithful, Mal. 3<sup>13-4<sup>t</sup></sup>

Mal. 3 <sup>13</sup>Your words are hard upon me, saith Jehovah.

Ye say, What have we said against thee?

The cry
of scepticism

<sup>14</sup>Ye have said, It is useless to serve God,
And what gain is it to us to have kept his charge,
And that we have walked in funeral garb before him?<sup>t</sup> <sup>15</sup>Even now we call the proud happy, Yea, those who work iniquity thrive,<sup>u</sup>
Yea, they tempt God and escape.

sizing, however, not the responsibility of the priests, but of the common people. Like Ezek. and Zech., he was deeply interested in the ceremonial side of religion. In this respect he was a forerunner of the later Jewish teachers who taught that, if Jehovah could be rightly worshipped for one day, the messianic era would dawn.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Gk., circumvent. The fact that this Heb. text comes from the same root as Jacob in <sup>e</sup> favors this reading.

<sup>o</sup> 3<sup>10</sup> Heb. adds, saih Jehovah of hosts, but this clause interrupts the logical and metrical unity of the vs.

<sup>p</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> I. e., the locust.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Heb. repeats, for your sakes.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Again the Heb. adds, destroying the metrical structure and parallelism of the vs., saih Jehovah of hosts.

<sup>s</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Possibly the two concluding words of this line have been lost.

§ 199 The prophet here again addresses the same class as in § 197. They are the pious, some of whom are evidently beginning to be discouraged because they see no relief from their misfortunes. Their words in the beginning of the section present the great problem which is developed in detail in the book of Job. It always has been and is to-day the supreme problem of life, but perhaps never in the history of Israel was it more insistent than during the Persian period, when the proud, arrogant, prosperous class stood in sharp contrast to the poor, afflicted, pious citizens in the Judean community. The doctrine of individual immortality, with its possibilities for righting the wrongs of this life, had evidently not yet dawned upon the prophet and his generation. Retribution must come in this life. Hence, in common with the prophets of his age, the author of this prophecy proclaimed that Jehovah would keep a careful record of the deeds of the faithful, and that he would quickly come to punish the wicked and vindicate his faithful servants.

It is possible that the closing vss. represent a later postscript from the hand of the same prophet, but the indications, on the whole, point to the conclusion that they were added by another prophet. The Gk. order, which has been followed above, differs from the Heb. Vs. 4<sup>t</sup> is a postscript not only to the book of Mal. but to the prophetic books as a whole. It is written from the point of view of later Jewish legalism. Thus the closing words of O.T. prophecy are an exhortation, in the language of Dt., to keep the law of Moses. Vss. 5, 6 have no close points of contact with the preceding, and contain several significant variations, in style and thought,

<sup>t</sup> 3<sup>14</sup> Reading according to the demands of the metre. Heb., before Jehovah of hosts.

<sup>u</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Lit., were built up.

Vindi-
cation
of the
faithful

<sup>16</sup>Such<sup>v</sup> things those who feared Jehovah spoke to one another,
And Jehovah gave heed, and heard,
And a book of remembrance<sup>w</sup> was written before him,
Regarding those who feared Jehovah,
And those who keep in mind his name;

<sup>17</sup>And they shall be mine, saith Jehovah of hosts,
In the day that I make up mine especial treasure:<sup>x</sup>
And I will spare them,
As a man spares his son who serves him.

<sup>18</sup>Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, Between him who serves God and him who serves him not.

4 <sup>1</sup>For behold the day is coming that shall burn like a furnace,
And all the proud and those who work iniquity shall be stubble,
And the day that is coming shall burn them up, saith Jehovah of hosts,
So that there shall be left them<sup>y</sup> neither root nor branch.
<sup>2</sup>But to you who fear my name there shall arise
The sun of righteousness with healing in his wings,
And ye shall go forth and leap like calves out of the stall.<sup>z</sup> <sup>3</sup>And ye shall tread down the wicked,
For they shall be as ashes under the soles<sup>a</sup> of your feet,
In the day in which I begin to execute, saith Jehovah of hosts.

The
coming day of
judgment
and vindi-
cation

<sup>b</sup>Behold I am about to send to you Elijah the prophet,
Before the coming of the day of Jehovah, the great and terrible, <sup>c</sup>And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the sons and the heart of the sons to the fathers.<sup>b</sup>
Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse, <sup>d</sup>Remember the law of Moses my servant which I commanded him
In Horeb for all Israel, statutes and judgments.

---

from the rest of the book of Mal. As in 4<sup>1</sup> and elsewhere the author of Mal. speaks simply of, the day, but the term used in 5<sup>b</sup> is, the day of Jehovah. Vss. 5, 6 seem to be a late comment upon 3<sup>1</sup>. In 3<sup>1</sup>, however, there was no suggestion that the messenger was to be a prophet.

Later Judaism interpreted this memorable passage literally and looked for an actual return of Elijah. The thought of the original writer appears to have been rather that Jehovah will again send a prophet with the high sense of justice, with the consuming zeal, and with the courage and boldness which characterized the great Elijah. He was to stand up in the presence of corrupt rulers to declare to the nation Jehovah's demands and to lead the people back to the older ideals, and thus to deliver them from the overwhelming judgment which they justly deserved. In his boldness in condemning the sins of high and low, in his zeal for righteousness, John the Baptist realized in fullest measure the spirit of this ancient prophecy, and by Jesus and the Christian world was recognized as the forerunner of a new era. Matt. 11<sup>4</sup>, 17<sup>10, 11</sup>, John 1<sup>21, 25</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> So Gk. Heb., then.

<sup>w</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> For parallel usage, cf. Esth. 6<sup>1</sup>, Ezek. 13<sup>9</sup>, Is. 4<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 3<sup>17</sup> Cf. Ex. 19<sup>6</sup>. The word means, a peculiar possession, something highly prized by the possessor. A slight change in the Heb. gives the still more harmonious reading, a people which I will make an treasured possession.

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> Following the Gk. Heb., it shall leave them.

<sup>z</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> As calves gambol when liberated from the stall.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>3</sup> Gk. omits, soles of.

<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> I. e., bring into harmony.

<sup>c</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> Lit., smite the land with a ban.

THE JERUSALEM OF NEHEMIAH.

Modern Jerusalem.

SCALE OF FEET.
0 600 1000

VII

JOEL'S PROPHECY CONCERNING THE COMING DAY OF JEHOVAH

§ 200. The Locust Plague and the Coming Day of Jehovah, Joel 1<sup>2</sup>-2<sup>17</sup>

Joel 1 <sup>2</sup>Hear<sup>a</sup> this, ye old men,<sup>b</sup>
 And give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land,
 Hath this been in your days,
 Or in the days of your fathers?
<sup>3</sup>Recount it to their children,
 Let your children tell it to their children,
 And their children to the generation that follows.

<sup>4</sup>That which the shearer<sup>c</sup> hath left, the swarmer hath eaten,
 That which the swarmer hath left, the devourer hath eaten,
 And that which the devourer hath left, the destroyer hath eaten.

Appalling nature of the calamity

Its extent

Joel's Prophecy Concerning the Coming Day of Jehovah.—The unity of the book of Joel has recently been questioned, but on insufficient grounds. It deals with but one theme: the coming day of Jehovah. The immediate occasion was one of the dread locust plagues which occasionally bring destruction and famine to the land of Palestine. Recent writers have vividly described the appalling nature of this calamity. In great swarms which obscure the sky these ravenous insects sweep over large areas, destroying all vegetation, and leaving the land as barren as a desert. To the mind of Joel, however, this threatened calamity, like drought and famine and other natural disasters, suggested the approach of Jehovah's great judgment day, which, in the popular belief of his race, was to be characterized by great catastrophes and the overthrow of the iniquitous world-powers which seemed to stand as a denial of the universality and justice of Jehovah's rule.

The popular belief is one which may be traced back to the days of Amos, and even earlier (cf. Introd., p. 43), but it did not assume a central place in the minds of the prophets until the exile—at least the characteristic form of the belief that is found in the book of Joel. As has already been shown (cf. Introd., p. 31), the only altogether satisfactory background for the book is the first half of the fourth century B.C., after the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem and the reforms instituted by Nehemiah and Ezra, and before 346, when the Judean community suffered a series of overwhelming calamities inflicted by the cruel Ochus. Cf. Introd., p. 31. It was a period when comparative peace prevailed in Palestine, although the memories of past invasions and wrongs are still fresh in the mind of the prophet. Cf., e.g., 3<sup>17</sup>. There is no allusion to a king, but instead the priests and the elders are the chief officials in the state. The experiences of the Babylonian exile are painful memories of the past, 3<sup>2</sup>. The Greeks appear simply as slave-traders, 3<sup>6</sup>. Most significant of all is the prominence which the prophet gives to the temple and its service. He says nothing about the social and political problems of the community, but his chief concern is that the regular sacrifices be maintained without interruption. The influence of the great priestly reformation, which took place about 400 B.C., is clearly apparent. Equally significant is the dependence of the prophet upon earlier books. There are fully twenty quotations, either of vss. or phrases from the O.T. writings. These include at least twelve books. Cf., e.g., 3<sup>16</sup> and Am. 1<sup>2</sup>; 3<sup>18</sup> and Am. 9<sup>13</sup>; 3<sup>19</sup> and Ob. 1<sup>9</sup>. In 2<sup>9</sup> Jer.'s and Ezek.'s characteristic phrase, the foe from the north, is used and in 3<sup>18</sup> one recognizes traces of Ezek.'s picture of the fertilizing stream issuing from the temple. Cf. Ezek. 47. Joel's teaching regarding the day of Jehovah also represents a further development of Ezek.'s apocalyptic and eschatological ideas.

The aim of the prophet was to keep alive the faith of the people, to inspire them to meet loyally the demands of the law, and to vindicate Jehovah's justice. The prophecy shows the

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> The prophecy is introduced by the superscription, The Word of Jehovah, which came to Joel, the son of Pethuel.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> It is interesting to note that the prophet addresses the elders as the heads of the community.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>4</sup> The prophet here uses four different synonyms to describe the locusts. These four designations, apparently, do not represent locusts in different stages of development for the same swarm would never return upon its course, but different swarms of locusts, the idea being that the land would be completely devastated. The exact meaning of the different terms is not clear. The word translated, swarmer, is the ordinary word for locust and comes from the Heb. word meaning, many. The devourer, may have been the technical designation of the locust in its wingless, larva stage.

The
complete
devastation

<sup>5</sup> Awake, ye drunkards, and weep,
And wail, all ye drinkers of wine;
The new wine is cut off from your mouth.
<sup>6</sup> For a nation has come up on my land,
Powerful, and numberless;
His teeth are the teeth of a lion,<sup>d</sup>
And his jaw-teeth are like those of a lioness.
<sup>7</sup> He hath laid my vine waste,
And barked my fig-tree;
He hath peeled and cast it away,<sup>e</sup>
Bleached are its branches.

Songs of lam-
enta-
tion
ve
the bar-ren fields
and neglected ritual

<sup>8</sup> Wail<sup>f</sup> as a bride, clad in sack-cloth, for the husband of her youth.
<sup>9</sup> Cut off are the cereal—and drink-offerings from the house of Jehovah;
In mourning are the priests, who minister at Jehovah's altar.<sup>g</sup> <sup>10</sup> The fields are blasted, the land is in mourning,
For blasted is the corn, the new wine fails<sup>h</sup> and the oil is dried up.
<sup>11</sup> Be abashed, O ye husbandmen; wail, O vine-dressers,
For the wheat and the barley; for the harvest is lost from the fields.
<sup>12</sup> The vine fails to bear fruit, and the fig-tree is drooping;
The pomegranate, the palm also, and the apple; all the trees of the field are dried up.
Yea, joy fails from the sons of men.
<sup>13</sup> Gird yourselves, and beat the breasts, O priests; wail, ye ministers of the altar;
Come, lie all night in sack-cloth, ye ministers of God;<sup>i</sup>
For cereal-offering and drink-offering are cut off from the house of your
God.
<sup>14</sup> Sanctify a fast, summon an assembly, Gather<sup>j</sup> all the inhabitants of the land into the house of Jehovah your
God,
Cry to Jehovah, <sup>15</sup> Alas for the day!
Near at hand is the day of Jehovah,
And as destruction from the Almighty Destroyer it comes.<sup>k</sup>

Call to a public fast

---

effect of conscious elaboration from beginning to end and the literary figures are varied and developed in great detail, although one recognizes throughout the echo of earlier prophecies, § 200. In this section the prophet impressively rallies the evidence of the approach of Jehovah's day of judgment, and summons the people to fasting and solemn assembly that they may influence Jehovah speedily to deliver them from the calamities which threaten.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>16</sup> Following the superior reading suggested by the Gk. and Sym. Heb., the jaw-teeth of a lioness are his. This and the following VSS. vividly describe the effects of the inroads of the locusts upon the vegetation.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>17</sup> I. e., stripped it and left only the parts that could not be eaten.

<sup>f</sup> <sup>18</sup> An Aramaic word is here used. The one addressed is the community. The lamentation is over the cessation of the temple ritual, owing to the lack of proper objects for sacrifice.

<sup>g</sup> <sup>19</sup> Following the superior reading of many of the Gk. MSS. Heb. omits, altar. Cf. also <sup>13</sup>

<sup>h</sup> <sup>10</sup> Lit., is ashamed . . . languisheth.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>13</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., my God.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>14</sup> A scribe, who had in mind <sup>2</sup>, has added the Heb., elders, but fails to supply the conjunction, and. It was the inhabitants of the land, however, and not the elders who were gathered.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>15</sup> Quoted verbatim from Is. 13<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>16</sup>Is not food cut off from before us,
Gladness and joy from the house of our God?

Famine
im-
pends

<sup>17</sup>The grains<sup>1</sup> shrivel under their hoes,<sup>m</sup>
The store-houses are desolate, the barns broken down,
For the corn is withered—what shall we put in them?

<sup>18</sup>How the herds of cattle are filled with perplexity,<sup>n</sup> for they have no pasture!
Yea, the flocks of sheep are forlorn.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>19</sup>To thee, Jehovah, do I cry,
For fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness,
And flame hath scorched all the trees of the field.

Also
consuming
drought

<sup>20</sup>The wild beasts also look up to thee longingly,
For the water-courses are dried up,
And fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness.

2 <sup>1</sup>Blow a horn in Zion,
Sound an alarm in my holy mountain,
Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble,
For the day of Jehovah comes,
<sup>2</sup>For near is the day of darkness and gloom,
The day of cloud and thick darkness!

Jeho-
vah's
judgment at hand

Like the light of dawn scattered over the mountains,
A people great and powerful;
Its like has not been from of old,
Neither shall be any more after it,
Even to the years of coming ages.

Advance
of his dread
agents

<sup>3</sup>Before them the fire devours,
And behind them a flame burns;
Like the garden of Eden is the land before them,
And after them it is a desolate desert,
Yea, nothing escapes them.

<sup>4</sup>Their appearance is as the appearance of horses,
And like horsemen they run.

<sup>5</sup>Like the sound of chariots on the tops of the mountains they leap,
Like the crackle of flames devouring stubble,
Like a mighty people preparing for battle.

<sup>6</sup>Peoples are in anguish before them,
All faces glow with excitement.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>1</sup> <sup>17</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>17</sup> Or, clouds.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>18</sup> So Gk. supported by the context. Heb., how do the beasts groan.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>18</sup> Following a superior reading of the Gk. Cf. Hos. 14<sup>1</sup>. Heb., are made desolate.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>26</sup> The meaning of the Heb. idiom is not entirely clear. It means, gather redness, or, beauty, and appears to be a reference to the glow of excitement kindled by the approach of the devastating host.

Their
attack

<sup>7</sup>Like mighty men they run,
 Like warriors they mount up a wall,
 They march each by himself,<sup>q</sup>
 They break not their ranks,<sup>r</sup> <sup>8</sup>None jostles the other,
 They march each in his path,
 They fall upon the weapons without breaking.
<sup>9</sup>They scour the city, they run on the wall,
 They climb up into the houses,
 Like a thief they enter the windows.

Effect
upon nature
and mankind

<sup>10</sup>Earth trembles before them,
 Heaven quakes,
 The sun and moon become dark,
 And the stars withdraw their shining;
<sup>11</sup>And Jehovah uttereth his voice before his army,
 For his host is exceedingly great,
 Yea, mighty is he who performs his word,
 For great is the day of Jehovah,
 It is very terrible, who can abide it?

True repent-
ance
the one
hope

<sup>12</sup>But now this is the oracle of Jehovah:
 Turn ye to me with all your heart,
 And with fasting and weeping and mourning.
<sup>13</sup>Rend your hearts and not your garments,
 And turn to Jehovah your God;
 For he indeed is gracious and merciful,
 Slow to anger and plenteous in love,
 And relenteth of the evil.
<sup>14</sup>Who knows but he will turn and relent,
 And leave a blessing behind him,
 A cereal and drink-offering for Jehovah your God?<sup>s</sup>

Call to a general assembly
and united suppli-
cation

<sup>15</sup>Blow a horn in Zion,
 Sanctify a fast, summon an assembly,
<sup>16</sup>Gather the people, make holy the congregation, Assemble the old men,
 Gather the children, and the infants at the breast,
 Let the bridegroom come forth from his chamber,
 And the bride from her bridal tent.<sup>t</sup>
<sup>17</sup>Between the porch and the altar,

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Lit., in his way.<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>7</sup> Lit., entangle their highways. The meaning is that each moves straight ahead without crossing the track of the one next to him.<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>14</sup> This line is loosely connected with its context. It is probably in apposition to the word, blessing, and means that Jehovah will deliver his people from the great pest, so that the fields will again bear fruit and each man can bring an offering to Jehovah's temple.<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>16</sup> Lit., her pavilion.

Let the priests, the ministers of Jehovah weep aloud,
 Let them say, Spare, O Jehovah, thy people,
 And make not thine heritage an object of reproach,
 For the heathen to mock them.<sup>u</sup>
 Why should it be said among the nations, Where is their God?

§ 201. The Prosperity, Spiritual Blessings, and Vindication Awaiting Jehovah's People, Joel 2<sup>18</sup>-3<sup>21</sup>

Joel. 2 <sup>16</sup>Then Jehovah became jealous for his land, and took pity upon his people, <sup>19</sup>And Jehovah answered and said to his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, And ye shall be satisfied therewith; I will not make you again an object of reproach among the nations, <sup>20</sup>I will remove far from you the northern foe,<sup>v</sup> And I will drive him into a land barren and desolate, His van to the eastern sea, And his rear to the western sea, And a stench<sup>w</sup> from him shall arise.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Fear not, O land, exult, And rejoice for Jehovah hath done great things.

<sup>22</sup>Fear not, O beasts of the field, For the pastures of the wilderness are putting forth new grass, For the trees bear their fruit, Fig-tree and vine yield their strength.

<sup>23</sup>Be glad, then, ye sons of Zion, And rejoice in Jehovah your God, For he hath given you the early rain<sup>y</sup> in just measure,

Jehovah's response to the petitions of his people

His promises that the fields shall again be fruitful

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>17</sup> Lit., make proverbs out of them. The Heb. may also be rendered, that the heathen shall rule over them, but the rendering that is given above is strongly supported by the context.

§ 201 This section contains Jehovah's answer to the united petitions of his people. It presents the completest picture found in the O.T. of the current conception of the day of Jehovah. For the heathen foes who oppressed the Jews it means the hour of judgment and annihilation, but for the people of Judah and Jerusalem it means deliverance and prosperity, and a restoration of all the scattered exiles. Above all it represents the inauguration of a new era in human history, when not a favored few, but all members of a community, young and old, freedmen and slave, shall enjoy the prophetic gift and individually feel the influence of Jehovah's presence and his divine spirit speaking through their individual consciousness. The latter teaching was Joel's great contribution to the faith of his race. The actual course of the world's history unfolded very differently from what he had anticipated, but surely though slowly mankind has entered into the spiritual heritage which he proclaimed should be the possession of whoever should call upon the name of Jehovah. In tracing the unfolding of Israel's belief regarding the future, this prophecy of Joel is of the greatest value, for it undoubtedly faithfully represents the hopes of the Jews during the Persian period.

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>20</sup> From the context it would seem clear that the northern foe was the invading army of locusts. Possibly they are so designated under the influence of Jer. 1<sup>4</sup>, Ezek. 38<sup>6</sup>, 15, 39<sup>2</sup>. Possibly it was because the locusts, as usual in Palestine, came from the northern Lebanon.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>20</sup> A scribe has here inserted, from Is. 34<sup>3</sup> or Am. 4<sup>10</sup>, the synonymous phrase, His stench shall rise.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>20</sup> By mistake, a scribe has also introduced at the end of this vs. three words from the end of 2<sup>1</sup>. The defective metrical structure of the vs. suggests that they take the place of one or two words, which have been lost as a result of a scribal error.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>23</sup> The Syr., O. Lat., and Arab. texts support the Gk. in reading, food, but the parallelism of the context, on the whole, supports the Heb., which has been followed above.

And poured down upon you the winter rain,
And sent the latter rain as before.<sup>z</sup>
<sup>24</sup>The threshing floors shall be full of grain,
And the vats shall overflow with new wine and oil.

Re-newed
prosperity
and the sense of Jeho-
vah's
presence <sup>25</sup>I will make restoration to you for the years which the swarmer hath eaten,

The devourer, the destroyer, and the shearer,
My great army which I sent among you,

<sup>26</sup>And ye shall eat your food and be satisfied,
And praise the name of Jehovah your God,
Who hath dealt so wonderfully by you,

<sup>27</sup>And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel,
That I am Jehovah your God and none else,
And my people shall never more be abashed.<sup>a</sup>

Uni-versal spir-itual
blessings <sup>28</sup>And it shall come to pass afterwards,
That I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh,
And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,
Your old men shall dream dreams,
Your young men shall see visions,
<sup>29</sup>And even upon thy male and female slaves,
In those days, I will pour out my spirit.

Evi-dences
of Jeho-
vah's coming
judgment <sup>30</sup>And I will show signs in heaven and earth:
Blood and fire and pillars of smoke.

<sup>31</sup>The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood
Before the coming of the great and terrible day of Jehovah.

Deliv-
erance
for his
faithful
ones <sup>32</sup>But whoever shall call upon the name of Jehovah shall be saved,
For in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be those who escape,
Even as Jehovah hath said,
And among the fugitives those whom Jehovah calleth.

Assembly of all nations
for
judgment 3 <sup>1</sup>For behold, in those days and in that time,
When I bring back again the captivity of Judah<sup>b</sup> and Jerusalem, <sup>2</sup>I will also gather all the nations and bring them down into the Valley of Jehoshaphat,<sup>c</sup>

<sup>w 223</sup> Following a large number of Heb. MSS. which have preserved the original verb. The Heb. is clearly corrupt.

<sup>x 227</sup> Through a mistake of dittoigraphy, the last line of <sup>27</sup> has been introduced at the end of <sup>26</sup>. This breaks the logical unity of the context.

<sup>y 31</sup> Or, restore the prosperity of Judah.

<sup>z 32</sup> The Valley of Jehoshaphat, or, the Valley of Judgment, as the Heb. word may be translated, must have been near Jerusalem. By modern Jewish and Moslem tradition it is identified with the Kidron Valley immediately north of Jerusalem. The presence of thousands of graves along the sides of this valley to-day testify to literalistic interpretation of this prophecy, and to the zeal of the faithful Jew and Moslem to be among the first at the final day of judgment.

PROSPERITY AWAITING JEHOVAH'S PEOPLE [JOEL 3<sup>2</sup>]

And there I will enter into judgment with them for my people and my heritage Israel,

Whom they have scattered among the nations, and divided my land.

<sup>3</sup> And they have cast lots for my people,

They have given a boy for the pay of a harlot,

And a girl have they sold for wine, and drunk it.

<sup>4</sup> Moreover, what are ye to me, Tyre and Sidon and all the districts<sup>d</sup> of Philistia?

Were ye repaying any deed of mine, or were ye doing aught to me?

Quickly will I return your deed upon your heads,

Ye who have taken my silver and my gold,

And ye have brought my goodly jewels<sup>e</sup> into your palaces.

<sup>6</sup> Ye have sold the sons of Judah and of Jerusalem to the sons of the Greeks,
That ye might remove them far from their own borders.

<sup>7</sup> Behold, I am about to stir them up from the place to which ye have sold them,

And I will recompense your deed upon your own head.

<sup>8</sup> I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hands of the men of Judah,
And they shall sell them to the Sabeans,<sup>f</sup> to a nation far off, for Jehovah hath spoken.

<sup>9</sup> Proclaim this among the nations, sanctify war,

Arouse the warriors, let all the fighting men muster and go up.

<sup>10</sup> Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into lances,<sup>g</sup>
Let the weak say, I, indeed, am strong.

<sup>11</sup> Bestir yourselves<sup>h</sup> and come, all ye nations round about,
Thither gather yourselves together, let the weak become the warrior,<sup>i</sup>

Special punishment of Phoenicia and Philistia

<sup>12</sup> Let the nations be aroused and come up to the Valley of Jehoshaphat,
For there will I sit to judge all the surrounding nations.

<sup>13</sup> Put in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe;

Come, get you down, for the press is full,

The vats overflow, for great is their wickedness.

<sup>14</sup> Noisy multitudes, noisy multitudes in the valley of decision!<sup>j</sup>
For near is Jehovah's day in the valley of decision!

Rally of hostile heathendom

Jehovah's harvest

<sup>15</sup> Sun and moon have turned dark,

And the stars withdrawn their shining.

Two-fold aspects of Jehovah's day

<sup>d</sup> 3<sup>4</sup> Lit., the circuits. The plural feminine of the Heb. word, Galilee.

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>4</sup> Lit., my desirable things.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> The Sabeans were an important commercial people living in Arabia Felix. They are often mentioned in the O.T. Cf. Jer. 6<sup>20</sup>, Ezek. 27<sup>22, 23</sup>, Ps. 72<sup>10</sup>. The Gk. has the variant reading, into captivity. It is clearly due, however, to a mistaken reading of the original Heb.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>10</sup> This is a familiar figure used to describe universal peace. Cf. Is. 2<sup>4</sup>, Mi. 4<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the parallel in 1<sup>2</sup>. Possibly the original read, hasten.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> Following what appears to be the superior reading of the Gk. The Heb., thither cause thy warriors to come down, is abrupt and contrary to the diction of the prophet.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>14</sup> The Heb. may also be rendered, a sharp threshing instrument, but the current translation better suits the context.

JOEL 3<sup>16</sup>] PROSPERITY AWAITING JEHOVAH'S PEOPLE

<sup>16</sup> Whenever Jehovah roars from Zion
And utters his voice from Jerusalem,
Heaven and earth quake;
But Jehovah is a refuge to his people,
And a fortress to the people of Israel.

<sup>17</sup> And ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God,
I who dwelleth in Zion,
And Jerusalem shall be holy,
And strangers shall not pass through her any more.

<sup>18</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day,
That the mountains shall drop sweet wine,
The hills shall flow with milk,
All the channels of Judah shall flow with water,
A fountain shall spring from the house of Judah,
And shall water the Valley of Shittim.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>19</sup> Egypt shall become a desolation,
Because of the violence done to the men of Judah,
Because they shed innocent blood in their land.

<sup>20</sup> Judah shall remain inhabited forever,
And Jerusalem from generation to generation.

<sup>21</sup> I will avenge their blood which I have not avenged,<sup>l</sup>
As surely as Jehovah dwelleth in Zion.<sup>m</sup>

Future
prosperity
and vindication
of his people

---

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> The Valley of Shittim, or, Wady of the Acacias, here mentioned, has not yet been identified. It was evidently near Jerusalem and may have been a designation of the lower Kidron valley. The figure is parallel to that of Ezek. 47<sup>1-12</sup>, and he evidently had in mind the same deep watercourse which runs from Jerusalem to the Jordan valley, a little north of the Dead Sea.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>21</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. Heb., I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>21</sup> Lit., and Jehovah dwelling in Zion, but the form of the sentence indicates that the present rendering represents the prophet's meaning.

PROPHETS OF THE GREEK AND MACCABEAN
PERIOD
(ALL ANONYMOUS)

PROPHETS OF THE GREEK AND MACCABEAN PERIOD

I

THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK OF JONAH

§ 202. The Story of Jonah

Jonah 1 <sup>1</sup>Now this word of Jehovah came to Jonah the son of Amitai:

<sup>2</sup>Arise, go to that great city, Nineveh, and preach against it; for their wickedness has come up before me. <sup>3</sup>But Jonah rose up to flee to Tarshish<sup>a</sup> from the presence of Jehovah. And he went down to Joppa and found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid the fare and embarked to go with them to Tarshish from the presence of Jehovah.

<sup>4</sup>But Jehovah sent<sup>b</sup> a furious wind upon the sea, and there was a mighty tempest,<sup>c</sup> so that the ship threatened<sup>d</sup> to break in pieces. <sup>5</sup>Then the sailors

Jonah's divine commission and his refusal to act

Discovery of his guilt

The Message of the Book of Jonah.—The book of Jonah stands almost unique among the later prophetic books. The only close analogy is the first half of the book of Dan. It is clearly a product of the workshop of Israel's later teachers who, like the earlier, used story and parable to teach ethical and spiritual truths. The presence of Aramaic words and expressions point to a comparatively late date. The literary kinship of the book is with Chronicles and Esther and other writings which come from the Gk. period. Furthermore, in 3<sup>9</sup>, the author apparently quotes from Joel 2<sup>13</sup> and, in 4<sup>2</sup>, from Joel 2<sup>13</sup>. The universalism of the book is also a protest against the Jewish particularism which characterized Judaism in the late post-exilic period. Its astonishing breadth of outlook also suggests that broadening of vision which came to certain of the Jews as a result of the conquest of Alexander and contact with Gk. culture. Possibly its author was a Jew of the dispersion. His use of the Egyptian name of the gourd, which for a time shaded Jonah's head, would suggest that his home was Egypt and possibly Alexandria. There, perhaps, through personal observation and experience he had learned to appreciate the virtues and needs of the heathen, and had also become familiar with the mythic elements which he has woven into the story. In any case he is the forerunner of the later Jewish missionary movement which centred in Alexandria, and which, in the centuries immediately before and following the beginning of the Christian era, led many Gentiles to accept the teachings of Moses and the prophets. The book may be dated with considerable assurance, in the light of this varied evidence, somewhere about 300 B.C. Although the book was largely overlooked and forgotten by contemporaries, it was, in many ways, the most significant product of later prophecy.

The psalm, also, is generally recognized as a later addition. It is written from the point of view of the Jewish community rather than from that of an individual. It commemorates, like many of the psalms of the Psalter, the deliverance of Israel from a great crisis. It contrasts the loyalty of the faithful with the infidelity of certain apostate Jews who had been attracted by the worship of certain heathen gods. The poetic figures which describe the great crisis are drawn from the experiences of sailors on the sea. It was doubtless on the basis of this slight point of contact that the psalm was introduced in its present place in the book of Jonah. The inconsistency of the prophet's uttering a prayer of thanksgiving before he was delivered from the body of the great fish has long been recognized. Without this psalm the prose narrative is complete and its unity has never been successfully questioned.

Unfortunately the incident of Jonah's being swallowed by the great fish has largely obscured the real meaning and message of the book. Many have been found, on the one hand, <sup>a</sup> <sup>13</sup> The old Phoenician colony in southern Spain. It represented the most distant point in the then known world.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>14</sup> Lit., hurled a great wind.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>14</sup> Heb. repeats, on the sea.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>14</sup> Lit., thought to.

JONAH 1<sup>5</sup>] MESSAGE OF THE BOOK OF JONAH

were afraid and cried, each to his own god; and they cast into the sea the wares that were in the ship, in order to lighten it. But Jonah had gone down into the bottom of the ship; and he lay fast asleep. <sup>6</sup>And the captain of the ship<sup>e</sup> came and said to him: What are you doing asleep? Call on your God, perhaps that God will think on us that we perish not. <sup>7</sup>And they said to one another, Come, let us cast lots, that we may know for whose sake this evil has come upon us. So they cast lots and the lot fell upon Jonah.

<sup>8</sup>Then they said to him, Tell us,<sup>f</sup> what is your occupation, and whence do you come? what is your country and of what people are you? <sup>9</sup>And he said to them, I am a Hebrew, and a worshipper<sup>g</sup> of Jehovah, the God of heaven, who hath made the sea and the dry land. <sup>10</sup>Then the men were exceedingly to defend the historicity of the story as a whole, while others, because of the grotesque character of the miracle, have rejected it as unworthy of credence or careful consideration. The question is primarily one of literary classification. It is practically impossible, in the face of the surprisingly large and grotesque miraculous elements, to maintain that it is exact history. In real life storms do not arise simply to punish the disobedient prophet, the lot does not always determine the guilty offender, gourds do not spring up in a day, nor do great sea-monsters appear at the opportune moment to rescue a man from drowning. These are rather the characteristic elements of oriental story and may be traced in the familiar Gk. story of Hercules rescuing Hesione, the daughter of the Trojan king, from sea-monster, which had held her in his stomach three days. An old Egyptian tale, coming from about 2500 b.c., tells of an Egyptian who was shipwrecked and, after floating three days, was swallowed by a great serpent and thus carried to the land. An Indian tradition tells of a certain Mitta-Vindaka, the son of a merchant of Benares, who had gone to sea contrary to the commands of his mother. While on the sea the ship was seized by an unknown power and was not allowed to proceed until the offender, Mitta-Vindaka, was three times selected by lot and then cast overboard.

The lack of detail in the biblical story also reveals its true character. The name of the Assyrian king is not given and the story stops when its moral has been pointed. Nineveh is also conceived of as a vast city whose proportions have evidently grown in popular tradition. The story is either a midrash, that is, a story intended to convey some religious or moral teaching, or else it is an allegory or parable. The two types of literature, however, are not entirely antithetic. The primary aim of the story is clearly to teach that the heathen are not beyond the pale of Jehovah's love and care, but rather that his love knows no bounds of place or race. As has already been shown (cf. Introd., pp. 32, 33), it also rebukes the narrow individualism of the Jews, which led them to hope simply for the destruction of the heathen rather than to put forth untiring efforts to lead them to do and to know the will of Jehovah. The details of the story also are equally suggestive. Not only do the heathen sailors, with their high sense of justice and piety, and the Assyrians, who quickly respond with deepest repentance to the warnings of the prophet, represent the better side of the Gentile world; but Jonah himself is an unmistakable type of Israel. Certain modern scholars, like Professor Cheyne, would go farther and trace a close analogy at every step. In the divine command to preach to the Ninevites they find a reflection of Jehovah's commission to his prophet-nation to represent him before all peoples. In the strange fate which overtook the prophet they find reflected the experiences of the Baby-exile. The author of Jer. 51 34, 44, 45 has certainly suggested the figure which reappears in developed form in the present story. In speaking in the name of Israel he declares: Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, hath devoured and crushed me . . . he hath swallowed me up, like a dragon filling his belly from my delights, he hath cast me out. To this Jehovah replies: I will punish Baal in Babylon and I will bring out of his mouth that which he has followed . . . my people go ye out of the midst of her.

The analogy with the present story, however, is not absolutely complete, for the great monster is Jehovah's agent of deliverance rather than of punishment. The subsequent portrait of Jonah obeying the divine command under compulsion, yet longing for the destruction of the heathen and daring to upbraid Jehovah because that destruction was delayed, and complaining because of his own misfortunes, is remarkably true to the prevailing Jewish type of the Gk. period. It would seem clear, therefore, that the prophet's aim was to hold up before his contemporaries the nature of their own narrowness and meanness, and in so doing he has introduced many allegorical elements into his story. Incidentally he has also illustrated the great truth that all prophecy is conditional, for there is no more absolute prophecy in all the O.T. than that uttered by Jonah. The main aim, however, of the unknown prophet-author was positive rather than negative. In his wonderful picture of God's love for all mankind, and of the divine readiness to pardon and to save even the ignorant heathen, if they but repent according to their light, he has anticipated the teaching of the parable of the prodigal son, and laid the foundation for some of the broadest faith and the noblest missionary activity of the present generation.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>6</sup> Lit., master of the ropes.

<sup>f</sup> 1<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and many Heb. MSS. The traditional Heb. text adds the explanatory gloss from 7, for whose sake this evil has come upon us.

<sup>g</sup> 1<sup>9</sup> Lit., I fear.

afraid, and said to him, What is this you have done? For they knew that he was fleeing from the presence of Jehovah, for he had told them.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Then they said to him, What shall we do to thee, that the sea may be calm for us? for the sea grew more and more stormy. <sup>12</sup>And he said to them, Take me up and throw me into the sea; so shall the sea be calm for you, for I know that for my sake this great storm has overtaken you. <sup>13</sup>But the men rowed hard<sup>i</sup> to get back to the land; but they could not, for the sea grew more and more stormy against them.

<sup>14</sup>Therefore they cried to Jehovah, and said, We beseech thee, O Jehovah, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, neither bring innocent blood upon us, for thou art Jehovah; thou hast done as it pleaseth thee. <sup>15</sup>So they took up Jonah and threw him into the sea; and the sea ceased from its raging. <sup>16</sup>Then the men feared Jehovah exceedingly, and they offered a sacrifice to Jehovah, and made vows.

<sup>17</sup>Then Jehovah prepared a great fish to swallow Jonah and Jonah was in the belly of this fish three days and three nights.

2 <sup>1</sup>Then Jonah prayed to Jehovah his God, out of the belly of the fish, and said:

<sup>2</sup>I cried out of my distress, to Jehovah and he answered me;
Out of the midst<sup>j</sup> of Sheol I cried aloud, and thou hearest my voice.
<sup>3</sup>For thou hadst cast me<sup>k</sup> into the heart of the seas, and the great flood rolled about me;
All thy breakers and thy waves passed over me.
<sup>4</sup>Then I said, I am driven out from before thine eyes;
How<sup>l</sup> shall I ever again look towards thy holy temple?
<sup>5</sup>The waters surrounded me, even to the quenching of my life,<sup>m</sup> the great deep engulfed me,
The sea weeds were wrapped about my head.
<sup>6</sup>I went down to the roots<sup>n</sup> of the mountains;
The earth with its bars was behind me forever;
Yet thou hast brought up my life from destruction, O Jehovah my God.
<sup>7</sup>When my soul fainted within me, I remembered Jehovah;
And my prayer came in to thee, into thy holy temple.
<sup>8</sup>They who regard vain gods<sup>o</sup> forsake their own mercy, <sup>9</sup>But I will sacrifice to thee with loud thanksgiving.<sup>p</sup>
I will pay that which I have vowed. Salvation is Jehovah's.

<sup>10</sup>And Jehovah spoke to the fish, and it threw up Jonah upon the dry land.

3 <sup>1</sup>And the word of Jehovah came to Jonah the second time, saying,
<sup>2</sup>Arise, go to that great city, Nineveh, and preach to it what I shall tell thee.
<sup>3</sup>So Jonah rose and went to Nineveh, as Jehovah said. Now Nineveh was a great city before God,<sup>r</sup> of three days' journey.<sup>s</sup> <sup>4</sup>And Jonah began by going through the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Forty<sup>t</sup> days more and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

<sup>h</sup> <sup>110</sup> The clause, for he had told them, may be secondary for it is not in harmony with the preceding.

<sup>i</sup> <sup>113</sup> Lit., dug.

<sup>j</sup> <sup>22</sup> Lit., belly.

<sup>k</sup> <sup>23</sup> Heb. adds., into the depth; but this is probably a variant of, in the heart of the seas.

<sup>l</sup> <sup>24</sup> So Theod. Heb., yet.

<sup>m</sup> <sup>25</sup> Lit., until soul, or, life. The idea seems to be until the last vital spark was almost extinguished.

<sup>n</sup> <sup>26</sup> With Marti fundamentally reconstructing the apparently corrupt Heb., on the basis of the analogy in Ezek. 26<sup>20</sup>, I descend into the underworld, to the people of old.

<sup>o</sup> <sup>27</sup> Lit., lying vanities, a common synonym in the O.T. for heathen gods.

<sup>p</sup> <sup>28</sup> I. e., Jehovah the source of their true blessings.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>29</sup> Lit., with the sound of thanksgiving.

<sup>r</sup> <sup>33</sup> Even according to the divine standard.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>33</sup> I. e., in diameter, requiring three days for one to pass through it. Cf. the next line.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>34</sup> Gk., three days, but this is probably an error due to the occurrence of three in <sup>3</sup>.

Courage of Jonah and the sailors

Conversion of the heathen sailors

Jonah's deliverance

His prayer
of thank-giving

His deliver-
ance

His message to
the Ninevites

JONAH 2<sup>5</sup>] MESSAGE OF THE BOOK OF JONAH

Their
repentance

<sup>5</sup>And the people of Nineveh believed God; and they proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them to the least of them. <sup>6</sup>And when word came to the king of Nineveh, he rose from his throne, and took off his robe, and dressed in sackcloth, and sat in the dust. <sup>7</sup>And he made proclamation and published in Nineveh: By the decree of the king and his nobles:<sup>u</sup> Man, beast, herd, and flock shall not taste anything; let them neither eat nor drink water; <sup>8</sup>But let them clothe themselves with sackcloth, both man and beast,<sup>v</sup> and let them cry mightily to God, and turn each from his evil way, and from the act of violence which they have in hand. <sup>9</sup>Who knows but that God may relent, and turn from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

<sup>10</sup>And God saw their works, how they turned from their evil way; and God relented of the evil which he said he would do to them, and did it not.

Their
pardon

Jonah's anger because of God's mercy
to the
heathen

<sup>4</sup> <sup>1</sup>But it displeased Jonah greatly, and he was angry. <sup>2</sup>And he prayed to Jehovah, and said, Ah now, Jehovah, was not this what I said when I was yet in mine own country? Therefore I hastened to flee<sup>w</sup> to Tarshish; for I knew that thou art a God, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in love, and relenting of evil. <sup>3</sup>Therefore, O Jehovah, take now, I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live.<sup>x</sup> <sup>4</sup>And Jehovah said, Doest thou well to be angry?<sup>y</sup> <sup>5</sup>Then Jonah<sup>z</sup> went out of the city, and sat down before the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it,<sup>a</sup> until he might see what would become of the city.

His selfishness
and in-tolerance
contrasted
with God's infinite
love

<sup>6</sup>And Jehovah God prepared a gourd,<sup>b</sup> and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shade over his head.<sup>c</sup> So Jonah was rejoiced exceedingly over the gourd. <sup>7</sup>But as the dawn appeared the next day God prepared a worm and it injured the gourd, so that it withered. <sup>8</sup>And when the sun arose, God prepared a sultry east wind. And the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, so that he was faint, and begged for himself that he might die saying, It is better for me to die than to live. <sup>9</sup>And God said to Jonah, Is it well for thee to be angry about the gourd? And he said, It is well for me to be angry, even to death! <sup>10</sup>And Jehovah said, Thou carest for a gourd, for which thou hast not troubled thyself, nor hast thou brought it up; a thing that came in a night<sup>d</sup> and has perished in a night; <sup>11</sup>Shall I, indeed, not care for the great city, Nineveh, in which there are one hundred and twenty thousand human beings who know not their right hand from their left; besides much cattle?

<sup>u</sup> 37 This is the formal introduction to the royal decree.

<sup>v</sup> 38 Possibly this clause is secondary.

<sup>w</sup> 42 Lit., I was beforehand in fleeing.

<sup>x</sup> 43 Cf. the similar words of Elijah, I Kgs. 19.

<sup>y</sup> 44 Gk., Art thou very angry? Possibly this is the correct rendering of the Heb. The striking contrast between Jehovah's character, as truly portrayed in Jonah's own words,<sup>2</sup> and the prophet's spirit is a part of the gentle irony of the story.

<sup>z</sup> 45 Certain recent interpreters of this book would transpose this vs. to a position immediately after 3<sup>1</sup>, urging that its contents precede, in point of time, the events recorded in 3<sup>5</sup>-4<sup>4</sup>. Absolute logical unity, however, is not to be expected in an oriental story and the description of the gourd in 4<sup>6</sup> requires<sup>s</sup> as its background.

<sup>a</sup> 45 Heb. adds, in its shade, but this is not well supported by the Gek. and is probably taken from the next vs.

<sup>b</sup> 46 The Heb. word is taken from the Egyptian. The plant was the Ricinus or Palma Christi, which has large leaves and grows to a great size.

<sup>c</sup> 46 Heb. adds the explanatory gloss, to deliver him from his evil.

<sup>d</sup> 410 Lit., son of a night.

II

THE POPULAR STORIES ABOUT DANIEL AND HIS FELLOW-EXILES

§ 203. Rewards of Loyalty to the Ceremonial Law, Dan. 1

Dan. 1<sup>1</sup> In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar<sup>a</sup> king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and besieged it. <sup>2</sup> And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God; and he carried them into the land of Shinar;<sup>b</sup> and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god.

The first captivity

<sup>3</sup> And the king commanded Ashpenaz, the chief<sup>c</sup> of his eunuchs to bring in certain of the Israelites and also some of the descendants of the royal line, and of the nobles, <sup>d</sup>youths in whom there was no blemish, but who were of attractive appearance, learned in all wisdom, intelligent, understanding knowledge, and possessing the ability to serve in the king's palace, and that he should teach them the literature and language of the Chaldeans. <sup>5</sup> And the king appointed for them a daily portion of the king's dainties,<sup>d</sup> and of the wine which he drank, and that they should be educated three years, and at the end of that time they should serve the king. <sup>6</sup> Now among these there were of the children of Judah: Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. <sup>7</sup> And the chief<sup>e</sup> of the eunuchs gave names to them. To Daniel he gave the name,

Education of certain Jewish
cap-
tives

The Popular Stories about Daniel and His Fellow-Exiles.—The reasons for regarding these chapters as distinct from 7–12, and for dating them between the years 245 and 225 have already been presented in the Introd., pp. 33–5. The literary character and aims of this story are closely related to the Joseph narratives in Gen. and especially to the later Jewish writings, such as Esth., Tobit, and Judith. It is also probable that the nucleus of these stories was handed down from still earlier traditions. In this connection the references to Dan. in Ezek. 14<sup>14, 20</sup>, 28<sup>3</sup> are exceedingly significant and suggestive. In these passages, which come from the days immediately preceding the fall of Jerusalem—therefore at the very beginning of the period which is assigned to Dan. in the book which bears his name—he is alluded to as a character already known to Ezek.'s readers because of his reputation for great piety. He is also associated with Job and Noah, whom tradition assigned to the primitive age preceding the birth of the Heb. nation. Dan's reputation for superlative piety in both these groups of tradition strongly suggests that there is a connection between the two. His reputation was apparently such that it appealed to the popular mind and lent itself readily to the purposes of the religious story-teller and teacher. The names of Dan's other friends are all found in the writings of the Chronicler, which comes from the Gk. period, Ezra 8<sup>2</sup>, Neh. 8<sup>1</sup>, 10<sup>2, 23</sup>.

§ 203 The question of adherence to the rigorous demands of the ceremonial law, and especially of those sections which related to food, was ever an insistent one among the Jews, both of Palestine and of the dispersion. Already party was coming to the front in Judaism which advocated the repudiation of the stricter demands of the law and the adoption of Gk. costumes, customs, and methods of living. The allurements of the fascinating and, in many ways, corrupt civilization which Alexander brought to the oriental world were felt strongly by the young. To them this story brought its clear teaching. Its brilliant setting also tended to counteract the effect of the dazzling splendor of the Gk. culture and of the voluptuous, alluring court life at Damascus and Antioch.

<sup>a</sup> 1<sup>1</sup> The late Jewish spelling of the name of the great Babylonian king. The form, Nebuchadrezzar, usually employed in Jer. and Ezek. is the more correct.

<sup>b</sup> 1<sup>2</sup> Shinar was the ancient Heb. designation of the land of Babylon. Cf. Gen. 10<sup>10, 11<sup>2</sup></sup>, and was probably purposely employed in this story because of its archaic flavor. Heb. adds the phrase, house of his god, but, in light of the subsequent context, this is clearly secondary.

<sup>c</sup> 1<sup>3</sup> A Persian word meaning lit., the first.

<sup>d</sup> 1<sup>5</sup> Another Persian word meaning, lit., portion, or, rations. In Syr. the corresponding word means, dainties. The latter expresses the meaning of the context.

<sup>e</sup> 1<sup>7</sup> Here and in the subsequent VSS. The Aram. equivalent of the Heb. word, used in <sup>3</sup>, is employed. He is evidently the same official as in <sup>3</sup>.

Belteshazzar, and to Hananiah, Shadrach, and to Mishael, Meshach, and to Azariah, Abednego.<sup>f</sup>

Daniel's request

<sup>g</sup>But Daniel felt under obligation<sup>g</sup> not to defile himself with the king's dainties, nor with the wine which he drank; therefore he made a request of the chief of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. <sup>h</sup>And God made Daniel an object of kindness and compassion in the sight of the chief of the eunuchs.

Result of the test

<sup>i</sup>And the chief of the eunuchs said to Daniel, I fear lest<sup>h</sup> my lord the king, who has appointed your food and your drink, should see your faces worse looking than the youths who are of your own age, and lest ye make my head a forfeit<sup>i</sup> to the king. <sup>ii</sup>Then Daniel said to the overseer<sup>j</sup> whom the chief of the eunuchs had appointed over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: <sup>ii</sup>Test now your servants ten days; and let them give us vegetables<sup>k</sup> to eat and water to drink. <sup>iii</sup>Then let our appearance be compared by you with the appearance of the youths who eat of the king's dainties; and as thou seest, deal with thy servants. <sup>iv</sup>So he hearkened to them in this matter, and tested them ten days. <sup>v</sup>And at the end of ten days their appearance was better, and they were fatter in flesh than all the youths who ate of the king's dainties. <sup>vi</sup>So the overseer took away their dainties, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them vegetables.

Superior wisdom and knowledge of Daniel and his friends

<sup>7</sup>Now as for these four youths, God gave them knowledge and learning in all literature, and wisdom; and Daniel understood all visions and dreams. <sup>8</sup>And at the end of the days which the king had fixed for bringing them in, the chief of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.<sup>1</sup> <sup>9</sup>And the king spoke with them; and among them all none was found like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; therefore they served before the king. <sup>10</sup>And in every matter of wisdom and understanding, concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters that were in all his realm. <sup>11</sup>And Daniel continued even to the first year of King Cyrus.

<sup>f</sup> 17 Possibly the original read, Abednebo, which would mean, servant of the god Nebo.

<sup>g</sup> 18 Lit., laid it to heart. The idiom occurs in Is. 57<sup>1</sup>, <sup>ii</sup> and apparently means that he felt it to be a matter of conscientious scruples.

<sup>h</sup> 19 An Aramaic construction transcribed with the corresponding Heb. words.

<sup>i</sup> 20 The word is not found in early Heb. It means, to render guilty. The idiom might be translated, bring guilt upon my head.

<sup>j</sup> 21 Or, steward. The exact meaning of the word is not known. The context implies that the original read simply, to the chief of the eunuchs who had been appointed over Daniel, etc.

<sup>k</sup> 22 Vegetable food in general with which there would be no danger of ceremonial defilement.

<sup>l</sup> 23 I. e., to attend the king.

§ 204. Daniel's Interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's Dream, Dan. 2

Dan. 2 <sup>1</sup>And in the second<sup>m</sup> year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed a dream; and his spirit was troubled and his sleep went from him. <sup>2</sup>Then the king gave command to call the magicians and the enchanters and the sorcerers and the Chaldeans, to tell the king his dreams. So they came in and stood before the king. <sup>3</sup>And the king said to them, I have dreamed a dream and my spirit is troubled to know the dream. <sup>4</sup>Then the Chaldeans spoke to the king in Aramaic.<sup>n</sup> O king live forever, tell your servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation. <sup>5</sup>The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The word from me is sure: if you do not make known to me the dream and its interpretation, ye shall be cut limb from limb and your houses shall be made a dunghill. <sup>6</sup>But if you show the dream and its interpretation, you shall receive of me gifts and rewards and great honors; therefore show me the dream and its interpretation. <sup>7</sup>They answered the second time and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation. <sup>8</sup>The king answered and said, I know of a surety that you would gain time,<sup>o</sup> for you see that the word from me is sure, namely, that if you do not make known the dream to me, one fate is for you—and you planned to speak lying and corrupt words before me, till the time be changed<sup>p</sup>—therefore tell me the dream and I shall know that you can show me its interpretation. <sup>10</sup>The Chaldeans answered before the king and said, There is no man on the earth who can show the king's matter, inasmuch as no king, however great and powerful he was, has asked such a thing of any magician, or enchanter, or Chaldean. <sup>11</sup>What the king asks is too difficult,<sup>q</sup> and there is no other who

Nebuchadnezzar's dream and his demand

§ 204 As has already been noted in the Introd., p. 33, the book of Dan. reflects the late popular traditional conception of the course of earlier history. In these traditions Babylon was overthrown, not by Cyrus the Persian, but by Darius the Median, and an independent Median kingdom was supposed to have intervened between the Baby. and Persian. This belief is reflected in the present section. In the image which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his dream, the head of fine gold, of course, represents the Baby. power, the breast and arms of silver the Median kingdom, the body and thighs of brass the Persian rule, which extended over the then known world. The fourth, represented by the legs of iron, was Alexander's kingdom, which broke in pieces all the preceding kingdoms, while the feet and toes, part of clay and part of iron, represented the Ptolemaic and Seleucidene kingdoms, which arose after the dissolution of Alexander's empire. The one, Egypt, is represented by iron, because in the days when the writer lived, Ptolemy Euergetes had succeeded in founding an empire, which resembled, only in a lesser degree, the empire of Alexander. Syria, on the other hand, is represented by miry clay because, at that time, under the rule of the weak successors of Antiochus II, it was threatened with immediate dissolution.

It is important to note that the author believed that in the days of Ptolemy Euergetes and his Syrian rival, Jehovah's everlasting kingdom was to be set up, and like Alexander's lightning-like conquests, it would break in pieces and destroy all these other kingdoms.

The story, as a whole, was calculated, not only to keep alive the hope of the Jews that Jehovah's rule would soon be visibly established on earth, but it also illustrated the superiority of Jewish wisdom, which came through divine revelation, to all which the heathen world could bring forth. It also inspired the belief that the God, who could reveal, could also realize.

Professor Torrey's explanation of the Aram. section in the heart of the book (chaps. 2-7) is, on the whole, the most satisfactory of the many thus far suggested. It is that the original author of 7-12 deliberately translated I from Aram. into Heb. and then employed Aram. in 7, in order, by this bond, to bind more closely together the different parts of the book. This theory, in the case of I at least, is strongly confirmed by the unparalleled number of peculiar Aram. idioms which have been retained, even in the Heb.

<sup>m</sup> 2<sup>1</sup> In 1<sup>5</sup>, 5, 18 it is implied that Dan. had already lived several years under the rule of Neb.

Possibly the original read, twelfth.

<sup>n</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> From this point on through 7 the language used is Aramaic.

<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>8</sup> Lit., buying time.

<sup>p</sup> 2<sup>9</sup> Following the division of the vs. suggested by Torrey.

<sup>q</sup> 2<sup>11</sup> Lit., rare.

can show it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.
<sup>12</sup>For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and gave command to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

Daniel's request

<sup>13</sup>So the decree went forth, and the wise men were to be slain; and Daniel and his companions were sought, that they might be slain. <sup>14</sup>Then Daniel returned answer with counsel and prudence to Arioch the captain of the king's guard, who had gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon; <sup>15</sup>he answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so harsh on the part of the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel. <sup>16</sup>And Daniel went in and asked the king that he would grant him time, and the interpretation would be shown to the king.

Revelation of the dream to him

<sup>17</sup>Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions, <sup>18</sup>in order that they might ask mercy from the God of heaven on account of this secret,<sup>r</sup> that Daniel and his companions might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon. <sup>19</sup>Then was the secret revealed to Daniel in a vision of the night; and Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

His prayer of thanksgiving

<sup>20</sup>Daniel spoke and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for wisdom and might are his. <sup>21</sup>And he it is who changeth the times and the seasons; he removeth kings and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom to the wise, and knowledge to them who have understanding. <sup>22</sup>He revealeth the deep and secret things; he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him. <sup>23</sup>I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of wisdom and might, who hast now made known to me what we desired of thee, for thou hast made known to us the king's matter.

Daniel and the king

<sup>24</sup>Therefore Daniel went<sup>s</sup> in to Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon, and spoke thus to him: Destroy not the wise men of Babylon. Bring me in before the king, and I will show to the king the interpretation. <sup>25</sup>Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said to him: I have found a man of the children of the captivity of Judah, who will make known to the king the interpretation. <sup>26</sup>The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Are you able to make known to me the dream which I have seen and its interpretation? <sup>27</sup>Daniel answered before the king and said: The secret which the king has demanded can neither wise men, enchanters, magicians, or astrologers show to the king; <sup>28</sup>but there is a God in heaven who revealeth secrets, and he hath made known to King Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed are these:<sup>t</sup> <sup>29</sup>As for thee,<sup>u</sup> O king, upon thy bed thy thoughts arose as to what should come to pass hereafter, and he that revealeth secrets hath made known to thee what shall come to pass. <sup>30</sup>But as for me, this secret was not revealed to me by virtue of any wisdom that I have more than any living being, but to the end that the inter-

<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>18</sup> Or, mystery. I. e., the nature of the king's dream.

<sup>s</sup> 2<sup>24</sup> As a result of a scribal error, the Aram. has two verbs expressing the idea of went. One is lacking in the Gk. and the other in Theod., and the original clearly had but one.

<sup>t</sup> 2<sup>25</sup> Cf. Gen. 41<sup>25</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 2<sup>29</sup> Possibly the, as for thee, is secondary, but cf. the corresponding phrase in <sup>30</sup>.

pretation may be made known to the king, and that you may understand the thoughts of your heart.

<sup>31</sup>You, O king, had a vision, and behold, an image—that image was very great,<sup>v</sup> and its brightness was pre-eminent—standing before you; and its appearance was terrible. <sup>32</sup>This was the image: its head was of fine gold, its breast and its arms of silver, its body and its thighs of brass,<sup>w</sup> its legs of iron, its feet part of iron and part of clay. <sup>33</sup>Thou didst look until a stone was cut out, but not by hands, which smote the image on its feet of iron and clay, and broke them in pieces. <sup>35</sup>Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken in pieces all together,<sup>w</sup> and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, and the wind carried them away so that no trace of them was found; and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.

<sup>36</sup>This is the dream and we will tell its interpretation before the king:

<sup>37</sup>O king, you are king of kings, to whom God hath given the kingdom, the power, the might, and the glory; <sup>38</sup>and in all the habitable world he hath given into your hand the sons of men,<sup>x</sup> the beasts of the field and the birds of the heavens, and hath made you to rule over them all; you are the head of gold. <sup>39</sup>And after you shall arise another kingdom inferior to you; and another third kingdom of brass, which shall rule over the whole earth. <sup>40</sup>And a fourth shall be as strong as iron,<sup>y</sup> since iron breaks in pieces and shatters all things; and like iron which crushes, so shall it break in pieces and crush all things. <sup>41</sup>And whereas you saw the feet and toes, part of potter's clay and part of iron, it shall be a divided kingdom, but there shall be in it some of the strength of the iron, inasmuch as you saw the iron mixed with miry<sup>z</sup> clay. <sup>42</sup>And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken. <sup>43</sup>And whereas you saw the iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves by marriage alliances;<sup>a</sup> but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron does not mingle with clay. <sup>44</sup>And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and destroy all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever, <sup>45</sup>inasmuch as you saw that a stone was cut out of the mountain but not with hands, and that it broke in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold. The great God hath made known to the king what shall be hereafter, and the dream is certain, and its interpretation sure.

<sup>46</sup>Then King Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face and worshipped Daniel, and gave command that they should offer an oblation and sweet odors to him.

<sup>47</sup>The king answered Daniel and said, Of a truth your God is the God of gods,

Re-counting the king's dream

Its interpre-
tation

<sup>v</sup> 2<sup>31</sup> Deleting a word which has crept in because of a scribal error. Cf. Torrey, in Trans. of Conn. Acad. of Arts and Sciences, XV.

<sup>w</sup> 2<sup>35</sup> Cf., for the corresponding Heb. idiom, Is. 65<sup>25</sup>. The shock represents the complete overthrow of the heathen powers.

<sup>x</sup> 2<sup>38</sup> Following the superior rendering suggested by Torrey. The current rendering, wheresoever the children of men dwell, fails to reproduce the thought of the author.

<sup>y</sup> 2<sup>40</sup> I. e., an iron implement.

<sup>z</sup> 2<sup>41</sup> I. e., clay that crumbles readily.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>43</sup> Lit., by the seed of men. As already noted, it is a reference to marriages between the Ptolemies and Seleucids and more specifically to the marriage of Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus, to Antiochus II Theos in 248 B.C.

Daniel's
reward

and the Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, seeing you have been able to reveal this great secret.<sup>48</sup> Then the king made Daniel great, and gave him many gifts, and made him rule over the whole province of Babylon, and become perfect over all the wise men of Babylon.<sup>49</sup> And at Daniel's request the king appointed Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego over the administration of the province of Babylon; but Daniel was in the king's court.<sup>b</sup>

§ 205. Deliverance of Daniel's Faithful Friends, Dan. 3

Nebu-chad-nezzar's image and command

Dan. 3 <sup>1</sup>Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, the height of which was sixty cubits, and its breadth six cubits; he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.<sup>2</sup> Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counsellors, the treasurers, the judges,<sup>c</sup> the sheriffs,<sup>d</sup> and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image, which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.<sup>3</sup> Then the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counsellors, the treasurers, the judges, the sheriffs and all the rulers of the provinces were gathered together to the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up;<sup>e</sup> and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.<sup>4</sup> Then the herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O peoples, nations, and languages:<sup>f</sup> As soon as ye hear the sound of the horn, flute, lute, harp,<sup>f</sup> psaltery, bag-pipe,<sup>g</sup> and all kinds of music, ye shall fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar has set up;<sup>6</sup> And whoever does not fall down and worship shall at once be cast into the midst of a burning, fiery furnace.<sup>7</sup> Therefore at the same time, when all the people heard the sound of the horn, flute, lute, harp, psaltery, and all kinds of music, all the peoples, the nations, and the languages fell down, and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.<sup>8</sup>

Action
of Daniel's friends

Therefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and accused<sup>h</sup> the Jews.<sup>9</sup> They spoke<sup>i</sup> and said to Nebuchadnezzar the king, O king, live forever!<sup>10</sup> O king, you have made a decree, that every man who shall hear the sound of the horn, flute, lute, and bag-pipe, and all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the golden image;<sup>11</sup> And whoever does not fall down and

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>49</sup> Lit., gate of the king. Cf. The Sublime Porte, the official designation of the ruler of Turkey.

§ 205 This story had its message for the Jews living in the midst of the heathen world, but especially for those who were inclined to give up the religion of their fathers for the allurements of heathenism. It taught that death was preferable to apostasy, and that Jehovah was able and would deliver all who were loyal to him. It has been suggested that the idea of punishment by burning came to the author from Jer. 29<sup>22</sup>, which states that the king of Babylon burnt in the fire a certain false prophet among the Jewish exiles by the name of Ahab. Dan. does not figure in the story, probably because of the high favor which he enjoyed with the king. The teaching is all the stronger because the heroes are not prophets but ordinary laymen.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> Possibly this word is simply a scribal variation of the following, which it resembles. Cf. 2<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 3<sup>2</sup> The meaning of this word is uncertain.

<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>3</sup> Possibly the phrase, that Nebuchadnezzar had set up, which is found in 2, and (Aram text) the latter part of 3 is here due to a scribal error.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>5</sup> A triangular musical instrument. Its exact form is not known.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>5</sup> Many of these instruments are of Gk. origin and bear Gk. names.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Lit., ate their pieces.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>9</sup> Lit., answered, but no question has been asked. The Aram. usage here is similar to the Heb. The verb is equivalent to our colloquial, speak up and said.

worship, shall be cast into the midst of a burning, fiery furnace. <sup>12</sup>There are certain Jews whom thou hast appointed over the administration of the province of Babylon—Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego—these men, O king, have not regarded you; they serve not your gods nor worship the golden image which you have set up.

<sup>13</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar in rage and fury gave command to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. Then they brought these men before the king. <sup>14</sup>Nebuchadnezzar spoke and said to them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, that you do not serve my god, nor worship the golden image which I have set up? <sup>15</sup>Now if you are ready at the same time that you hear the sound of the horn, flute, lute, harp, psaltery, and bag-pipe, and all kinds of music, to fall down and worship the image which I have made, well; but if you do not worship, you shall at once be cast into the midst of a burning, fiery furnace; and where is there a god that shall deliver you out of my hands? <sup>16</sup>And Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered and said to Nebuchadnezzar, O king,<sup>j</sup> we have no need to answer thee in this matter. <sup>17</sup>If it be so,<sup>k</sup> our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning, fiery furnace; and he will deliver us out of your hand, O king. <sup>18</sup>But if not, be it known to you, O king, that we will not serve your gods, nor worship the golden image which you have set up.

<sup>19</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar was full of fury, and the appearance of his countenance was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego; he spoke and gave command to heat the furnace seven times hotter than it was wont to be heated. <sup>20</sup>And he commanded certain strong men who were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, in order to cast them into the burning, fiery furnace. <sup>21</sup>Then these men were bound in their mantles,<sup>l</sup> and their hats,<sup>m</sup> and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning, fiery furnace. <sup>22</sup>Therefore, because the king's command was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of fire slew those men who took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. <sup>23</sup>And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning, fiery furnace.

<sup>24</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste; he spoke and said to his counsellors, Did we not cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered, and said to the king, True, O king. <sup>25</sup>He answered and said, Lo, I see four men unbound walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the appearance of the fourth is like to a son of the gods.<sup>n</sup> <sup>26</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the door of the burning, fiery furnace; he spoke and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, servants of the Most High God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came forth out of the midst of the fire. <sup>27</sup>And the

Their refusal to worship the image

Thrown into the fiery furnace

Their deliverance from the power of the flames

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>16</sup> Transposing two words, king, and, Nebuchadnezzar, according to the analogy of <sup>9</sup> and the current usage.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>17</sup> I. e., if the king puts them into the fiery furnace.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>21</sup> From <sup>27</sup>, as well as from its usage in later Heb., it is clear that these were the outer garments, or mantles.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>21</sup> The meaning of this word is not certain.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>25</sup> The usual biblical designation of a heavenly messenger. Cf. Gen. 6<sup>4</sup>, Job 1<sup>6</sup>. Cf. 28.

satraps, the prefects, the governors, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, over whose bodies fire had no power, and the hair of whose head was not singed, and whose mantles were not changed, and on whom the smell of fire had not come.

<sup>28</sup>Nebuchadnezzar spoke and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who hath sent his angel and delivered his servants who trusted in him, and have altered the king's word, and have yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god except their own God.

<sup>29</sup>Therefore I make a decree, that every people, nation and language, which speak anything<sup>o</sup> against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego shall be cut in pieces, and their house shall be made a dunghill, because there is no other god who is able to deliver as this one. <sup>30</sup>Then the king promoted<sup>p</sup> Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the province of Babylon.

The king's proclamation regarding the God of
Israel

§ 206. Nebuchadnezzar's Edict concerning His Remarkable Experience, Dan. 4

Nebu-
chad-nezzar's praise of Israel's
God

Failure
of the wise men to interpret the king's dream

Dan. 4 <sup>1</sup>Nebuchadnezzar the king to all peoples, nations, and languages that dwell in all the earth: May your peace be great. <sup>2</sup>It hath seemed good to me to show the signs and wonders that the Most High God hath wrought toward me. <sup>3</sup>How great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.

<sup>4</sup>I, Nebuchadnezzar, was at rest in my house, and prosperous in my palace.<sup>q</sup> <sup>5</sup>I saw a dream that made me afraid; and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me. Therefore I made a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known to me the interpretation of the dream. <sup>7</sup>Then the magicians, the enchanters, the Chal-

<sup>o</sup> 32 Following the superior marginal reading of the Aram.

<sup>p</sup> 30 Lit., made prosper.

§ 206 The divergencies between the portrait of Nebuchadnezzar in this story and the actual king of history had long been recognized. Instead of being tyrannical and godless, he was an exceedingly pious and conscientious king. There is no evidence in the contemporary records that the strange seven-year-long tragedy recorded in the story came to him, and the silence is almost incredible, if there were an underlying historical basis for the story. Like the other stories in the book of Dan., it is apparently not strict history, but teaching in narrative form. In a fragment from the historian Abydenus, preserved by Eusebius, there are certain distant points of contact with the present tradition. The passage reads, "Megasthenes relates that Nebuchadrezzar became mightier than Herakles and made war upon Libya and Iberia; having conquered those countries he transported some of their inhabitants to the eastern shore of the Sea. Afterward, as the Chaldean story goes, when he had ascended the roof of his palace, he was inspired by some god or other and cried aloud, 'O men of Babylon, I announce to you the future calamity, which neither Bel my ancestor, nor our queen Belitis can persuade the Fates to avert. There shall come a Persian, a mule, who shall have your own gods as his allies, and he shall make you slaves. Moreover he who shall help to bring this about shall be the son of a Median woman, the boast of the Assyrians. Would that, before his countrymen perish, some whirlpool or flood might seize him and destroy him utterly! or else would that he might betake himself to some other place, and might be driven through the desert, where is no city nor track of men, where wild beasts seek their food, and birds fly hither, and thither, would that among rocks and mountain clefts he might wander alone! And as for me, may I, before he imagines this, meet with some happier end!' When he had thus prophesied, he suddenly vanished." It must be admitted that the points of contact between this tradition and the present story of Dan. are not many. It is chiefly significant as showing the type of traditions that were current at this period and the material which was accessible to the author of the Dan. stories. The author himself was probably conscious that the story was not exact history. This fact, however, was comparatively unimportant to him, for his object was not historical, but didactic. And in the opening vss., <sup>2</sup>, <sup>3</sup>, he plainly declares his purpose.

<sup>q</sup> 44 Gk. and Theod., on my throne.

deacons, and the astrologers came in, and I told the dream before them; but they did not make known to me its interpretation.

<sup>8</sup>But at last there came before me Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar,<sup>r</sup> according to the name of my God, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and I told the dream before him: <sup>9</sup>O Belteshazzar, chief of the magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in you, and no secret troubles you, tell me<sup>s</sup> the secret visions of my dream that I have seen, and its interpretation. <sup>10</sup>Thus were the visions of my head upon my bed: I saw, and behold, a tree in the midst of the earth, and its height was great. <sup>11</sup>The tree grew and was strong, and its height reached to heaven, and it could be seen<sup>u</sup> to the end of the earth. <sup>12</sup>Its leaves were fair, and its fruit much, and in it was food for all; the beasts of the field found shadow under it, and the birds of the heavens dwelt in its branches, and all flesh was fed from it. <sup>13</sup>I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and behold, a watcher,<sup>v</sup> even a holy one, came down from heaven. <sup>14</sup>He cried aloud, and said, 'Hew down the tree, and cut off its branches, shake off its leaves, and scatter its fruit; let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from its branches. <sup>15</sup>But leave the stump of its roots<sup>w</sup> in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass;<sup>x</sup> he shall be fed<sup>y</sup> with the grass of the field, and wet with the dew of heaven, and his portion shall be with the beasts. <sup>16</sup>His heart shall be changed so that it shall not be that of a man, and a beast's heart shall be given to him, and seven times shall pass over him. <sup>17</sup>The sentence<sup>z</sup> is by the decree of the watchers, and the affair by the word of the holy ones, that the living may know that the Most High ruleth over the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the humblest of men.' <sup>18</sup>This dream I, King Nebuchadnezzar, have seen; and you, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation, inasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known to me the interpretation; but you are able, for the spirit of the holy gods is in you.

<sup>19</sup>Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was dumfounded for a moment, and his thoughts troubled him. The king answered and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream or the interpretation trouble you. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to those who hate you, and its interpretation to your adversaries! <sup>20</sup>The tree which you saw, which grew and was strong, whose height reached to heaven, and the sight of it to all the earth,

Details
of the king's dream

<sup>r</sup> 4<sup>8</sup> The name really means in the Bab., protect his life, but the Aram. narrator thought that the first part of the word contained the name of the Bab. god, Bel.

<sup>s</sup> 4<sup>9</sup> Following Theod. in inserting the verb that has dropped out of the Aram.

<sup>t</sup> 4<sup>10</sup> The description of the great tree is cast in semi-poetic form.

<sup>u</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> Lit., the sight of it. I. e., it could be seen from all parts of the earth, so great were its dimensions.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>12</sup> This is the first definite appearance in Heb. literature of the angelic watchers who figure in the book of Enoch and later writings.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>13</sup> The tree is not to be completely destroyed.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>14</sup> The band of iron and brass probably represents the necessity under which Neb., whom the tree symbolized, was to submit to the divine sentence. Possibly the verb, bound, has also been lost from the text.

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>15</sup> Supplying the verb required by the context and the parallels in 25, 32. Through another scribal error, with the grass of the earth, has been repeated at the end of the vs. It is lacking in the parallel in 25. In this vs. the author passes suddenly from the figure to its symbolic application.

<sup>z</sup> 4<sup>17</sup> Lit., word or thing.

Daniel's
inter-preta-
tion of
it

<sup>21</sup>whose leaves were fair, and whose fruit much, and in which was food for all; under which the birds of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the birds of the heavens had their habitations, <sup>22</sup>is you, O king—you who are great and strong; and your greatness has grown, and reaches to heaven, and your dominion to the end of the earth. <sup>23</sup>And whereas the king saw a watcher, even a holy one, coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew down the tree and destroy it.<sup>a</sup> <sup>24</sup>This is the interpretation, O king, and it is the decree of the Most High, which has come upon my lord the king: <sup>25</sup>You shall be driven from men, and your dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and you shall be made to eat grass as oxen, and shall be wet with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over you: until you know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomever he will. <sup>26</sup>And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the roots of the tree, your kingdom shall be secure to you as soon as you recognize that the heavens<sup>b</sup> do rule. <sup>27</sup>Therefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable to you, and break off your sins by righteous works, and your iniquities by showing mercy to the poor; if perhaps there may be a continuation of your prosperity.

<sup>28</sup>All this came upon the King Nebuchadnezzar: <sup>29</sup>At the end of twelve months he was walking in the royal palace of Babylon. <sup>30</sup>The king spoke and said, Is not this great Babylon which I have built for a residence, by the might of my power and for the glory of my majesty? <sup>31</sup>While the word was in the king's mouth, a voice came down from heaven: O King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken: 'The kingdom hath passed away from thee, <sup>32</sup>and thou shalt be driven from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; thou shalt be made to eat grass as oxen; and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou knowest that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whom he will.' <sup>33</sup>The same hour the word was fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and ate grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, until his hair had grown like eagles' feathers and his nails like birds' claws.

<sup>34</sup>And at the end of the days I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up my eyes to heaven, and my reason returned to me, and I blessed the Most High, and praised and honored him who liveth forever; for his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom from generation to generation; <sup>35</sup>and all the inhabitants of the earth are considered as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say to him, What doest thou? <sup>36</sup>At that same time my reason returned to me, and for the sake of my royal honor, my majesty and my kingly appearance<sup>c</sup> were restored to me. Then my counsellors and my nobles sought eagerly for me; and I was established in my kingdom, and still greater power was added to me. <sup>37</sup>Now I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise and extol and honor the King of heaven, for all his works are truth, and his ways justice; and those who walk in pride he is able to abase.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>23</sup> The remainder of this vs. is lacking in the Gk. and is clearly the work of a later scribe, since it anticipated the interpretation which follows in <sup>25</sup>. It was simply copied from <sup>15, 16</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 4<sup>26</sup> This is the first case of the use of heavens as a synonym for God. It is very common in this sense in the Mishna and the N.T.

<sup>c</sup> 4<sup>36</sup> Lit., excellent greatness.

§ 207. Belshazzar's Punishment, Dan. 5

Dan. 5 <sup>1</sup>Belshazzar the king made a great feast for a thousand of his nobles and drank wine before the thousand. <sup>2</sup>Belshazzar, while he tasted the wine, gave command to bring the gold and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple, which was in Jerusalem, that the king and his nobles, his wives and his concubines, might drink from them. <sup>3</sup>Then they brought the golden vessels which were taken from the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king and his nobles, his wives and his concubines, drank from them. <sup>4</sup>They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

<sup>5</sup>In the same hour the fingers of a man's hand came forth, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster<sup>l</sup> of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the palm of the hand that wrote.

Writing
on the wall

<sup>6</sup>Then the king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, and the joints of his loins were loosed and his knees smote against each other. <sup>7</sup>The king cried aloud to bring in the enchanters, the Chaldeans, and the astrologers. The king spoke and said to the wise men of Babylon: Whoever shall read this writing and show me its interpretation shall be clothed in purple and have a chain of gold about his neck, and shall be the third<sup>e</sup> ruler in the kingdom. <sup>8</sup>Then all the king's wise men came in, but they could not read the writing nor make known to the king the interpretation. <sup>9</sup>Then King Belshazzar was greatly troubled, and his countenance was changed, and his nobles were thrown into confusion.

Failure
of the wise men of Babyl
on to interpret

<sup>10</sup>Now the queen, because of the words of the king and his nobles, came into the banquet house, and the queen spoke and said, O king, live forever; let not your thoughts trouble you, nor let your countenance be changed. <sup>11</sup>There is a man in your kingdom in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and in the days of your father, light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, were found in him; and King Nebuchadnezzar your father made him the chief of the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and astrologers; <sup>12</sup>for an excellent spirit and knowledge and understanding, the interpreting of dreams and explaining of riddles and the solving of difficult

Queen's
testi mony to Dan iel's wis dom

§ 207 The present story is closely related to the preceding. Its object is to illustrate Jehovah's judgment on the proud and wicked heathen. Again the story differs widely from the testimony of contemporary records. Belshazzar, which is probably the traditional Aram. rendering of the Baby. name, Belsharuzur, was not the son of Nebuchadnezzar, but of the usurper, Nabonidus, the fourth and last Baby. ruler after Nebuchadnezzar. The contemporary evidence indicates clearly that, instead of being a rich and powerful king like Nebuchadnezzar, he never actually ascended the throne of Babylon. He is mentioned frequently in the inscriptions which come from the first twelve years of Nabonidus's reign. Inasmuch as his father was inefficient and more interested in archaeology than state-craft, it is probable that to Belsharuzur fell large responsibilities, so that he figured in popular tradition as actually the last king of Babylon. The contemporary inscriptions of Cyrus state that Babylon was delivered up by its inhabitants to the Persian army under Gubaru. The popular tradition, however, that the city was taken by Cyrus during the night, while the inhabitants were all feasting, is found in Herodotus (I, 191) and Xenophon (Cyrop. VII, 5<sup>3-51</sup>). Herodotus (I, 188) also shared the belief that Nabonidus was the son of Nebuchadnezzar.

The Belshazzar of the story is not, as has often been asserted, a type of Antiochus Epiphanes, for the heathen king pays high homage to Dan. and his crimes are not those of tyranny and persecution, but simply that of using in his feast the vessels from Jehovah's temple. The story is rather an illustration of Jehovah's superiority and power over all heathen kings.

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Lit., chalk.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> The exact meaning of this phrase is not clear. The ordinary interpretation is: third in authority, possibly after the king and the queen-mother. It may mean, every third day, or, year, but this is doubtful.

King's
promises to Daniel

ties<sup>f</sup> were found in this same Daniel, whose name the king<sup>g</sup> changed to Belteshazzar. Now let Daniel be called, and he will show the interpretation.

<sup>13</sup>Then Daniel was brought in before the king. The king spoke and said to Daniel, Are you that Daniel, of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my father brought from Judah? <sup>14</sup>I have heard concerning you, that the spirit of the gods is in you, and that insight and understanding and extraordinary wisdom are found in you. <sup>15</sup>And now the wise men, the enchanters, have been brought in before me, that they should read to me this writing and make known to me its interpretation; but they are unable to show the interpretation of the thing. <sup>16</sup>But I have heard concerning you, that you can give interpretations and solve difficulties; now if you can read the writing, and make known to me its interpretation, you shall be clothed with purple and have a chain of gold about your neck, and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.

Daniel's
denunciation of Belshazzar's pride and impiety

<sup>17</sup>Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Keep your gifts, and give your rewards to another; nevertheless I will read the writing to the king and make known to him the interpretation. <sup>18</sup>O, thou king, the Most High God gave Nebuchadnezzar your father the kingdom and might and glory and majesty. <sup>19</sup>And because of the might that he gave him, all the peoples, nations, and languages trembled and feared before him. Whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he raised up, and whom he would he put down. <sup>20</sup>But when his heart became lifted up and his spirit became arrogant, he was deposed from his kingly throne and his glory was taken from him,<sup>21</sup>and he was driven from the sons of men, and his heart was made like that of the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses; he was fed with grass like oven, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; until he knew that the Most High God ruleth over the kingdom of men, and that he setteth up over it whomsoever he will. <sup>22</sup>But you, his son, O Belshazzar, have not humbled your heart, though you knew all this,<sup>23</sup>but have exalted yourself against the Lord of heaven; and the vessels of his house have been brought before you, and you, and your nobles, your wives and your concubines have drunk wine from them; and you have praised the gods of silver, of gold, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know; and you have not glorified the God in whose hand is your breath, and to whom belongeth all your ways.

Then the palm of the hand was sent forth before him, and this writing was inscribed. <sup>25</sup>And this was the writing that was inscribed:

MENE<sup>h</sup>, TEKEL, PERES<sup>i</sup>

Inter-
pre-
tion of
the writing

<sup>26</sup>This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE: God hath numbered your kingdom, and brought it to an end. <sup>27</sup>TEKEL: you are weighed in the

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>12</sup> Lit., knots. Some would interpret the word as, spells, but this is not supported by the context.

<sup>g</sup> 5<sup>12</sup> So Theod. A scribe, in the Aram., has repeated the words, the king your father.

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>25</sup> So Theod. The united testimony of the Gk. and Lat. and of the subsequent context leaves no doubt that the repetition of the first word in the writing on the wall is not original, but simply due to a later scribe.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>25</sup> The reliable testimony of Theod. and the Lat., as well as <sup>28</sup>, indicate that the third word in the original text was not UPHARSIN but PERES. As Torrey has also shown (Trans. of balances, and found wanting. <sup>28</sup>PERES: your kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Then Belshazzar gave command, and they clothed Daniel with purple and put a chain of gold about his neck and made proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

<sup>30</sup>In that night Belshazzar the Chaldean king was slain. <sup>31</sup>And Darius the Mede received the kingdom, being about sixty-two years old.

Daniel's reward

Overthrow of Belshazzar

§ 208. Daniel's Deliverance from the Lion's Den, Dan.6

Dan. 6 <sup>1</sup>It pleased Cyrus to set over the kingdom a hundred<sup>k</sup> and twenty satraps, who should be throughout the whole kingdom; <sup>2</sup>and over them three chief officials,<sup>l</sup> of whom Daniel was one, that these satraps might give official reports to them, and that the king should suffer no loss.<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>And this Daniel was distinguished above the chief officials and the satraps, because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

Daniel's high honors under Cyrus

<sup>4</sup>Then the chief officials and the satraps sought to find occasion against Daniel on the side of his administration; but they could find no occasion or fault, inasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him. <sup>5</sup>Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him in connection with the law of his God. <sup>6</sup>Then these chief officials and satraps came tumultuously<sup>n</sup> to the king, and said to him, King Darius, live forever. <sup>7</sup>All the chief officials of the kingdom the counsellors and the satraps, the judges and the governors have consulted together to have the king<sup>o</sup> establish a statute, and to make a strong interdict, that whoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of you, O king, shall be cast into a den of lions. <sup>8</sup>Now, O king, establish the interdict and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law

Plots of his foes to overthrow him

Conn. Acad. of Arts and Sciences, XV), this reading is confirmed by the summary appended to the old Gk. text, and more significant still by Josephus, who usually reproduces the traditional Aram. reading. In the light of all this varied and cumulative evidence there can be no doubt that the inscription originally read as above. Professor Torrey has also proved that the current translations are untenable. Furthermore it is evident that they were not intended to be clearly intelligible, for if so, learned men present would have at once given the interpretation, and there would have been no need for Daniel's services. The three words are from three common Aram. roots meaning to number, to weigh, and, to divide, and the words themselves are all formed in the same way by adding the vowels used in forming the most common Aram. nouns from the verb stems. Thus the words, while not in use in the current language, were in their root meaning suggestive, and at the same time presented obscurities that only a Daniel could interpret, as he does in the following vss.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>28</sup> The root not only meant, divide, but its sound also suggested the word Persia.

§ 208 This story closely resembles those in chaps. 1 and 3, and emphasizes the importance of strict obedience to the ceremonial law and Jehovah's protection of those who trust him. The same teaching is found in Ps. 91<sup>10-13</sup>. The possibility of misapplying the teaching here presented is well illustrated in Matt. 4<sup>5-7</sup>. The lesson of courageous loyalty to the faith of their ancestors was one, however, which was much needed by the Jews of this period, and, in the form in which it is presented, has taken a powerful hold upon the Christian as well as the Jewish world.

<sup>k</sup> 6<sup>1</sup> Possibly the 100 is a later addition, since there were but twenty satrapies in the Persian empire under Darius Hystaspes, the real organizer of the empire. Cf., however, the 127 satrapies mentioned in Esth. 1<sup>1</sup>. So also the Gk. and Syr. give the number in 6<sup>1</sup> as 127. Possibly this is original although Theod. and the Lat. follow the Aram.

<sup>l</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> The word is apparently of Persian origin, and means, head, chief.

<sup>m</sup> 6<sup>2</sup> Lit., no injury.

<sup>n</sup> 6<sup>6</sup> Lit., make a tumult, i. e., came tumultuously, either because of their zeal to force the king's hand.

<sup>o</sup> 6<sup>7</sup> Current versions simply, to establish a royal statute, but only the king could assume this authority.

of the Medes and Persians, which is unalterable. <sup>9</sup>Therefore King Darius signed the writing and the interdict.<sup>p</sup>

His dis-regard of the royal interdict

<sup>10</sup>And when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; (now his windows were open in his chamber toward Jerusalem) and he knelt upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, for he had formerly been wont to do so. <sup>11</sup>Then these men assembled together and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God. <sup>12</sup>Then they came near and spoke before the king about the royal interdict: Have you not signed an interdict, that every man who shall make petition to any man or god within thirty days, save to you, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which is unalterable. <sup>13</sup>Then they answered and said before the king, That Daniel, who is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regards you not, O king, nor the interdict that you have signed, but prays three times a day.

The king's vain efforts to resue him

<sup>14</sup>The king, when he heard these words, was greatly displeased, and set his heart on delivering Daniel, and he labored until the going down of the sun to rescue him. <sup>15</sup>Then these men came tumultuously<sup>q</sup> to the king, and said to the king, Know, O king, that it is a law of the Medes and Persians, that no interdict nor statute which the king establishes may be changed.

Daniel cast into the den of lions

<sup>16</sup>Then the king gave command, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spoke and said to Daniel, Your God, whom you serve continually, will deliver you. <sup>17</sup>And a stone was brought and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet and with the signet of his nobles, that nothing might be changed concerning Daniel.<sup>r</sup> <sup>18</sup>Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting; neither did he have concubines<sup>s</sup> brought before him, and his sleep fled from him.

His de-liv-er-ance

<sup>19</sup>Then the king rose at dawn, as soon as it was light, and went in haste to the den of lions. <sup>20</sup>And when he came near to the den to Daniel, he cried with an agonized voice; the king spoke and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is your God, whom you serve continually, able to deliver you from the lions? <sup>21</sup>Then Daniel said to the king, O king live forever. <sup>22</sup>My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, and they have not hurt me, since before him innocency was found in me; and also before you, O king, have I done no harm. <sup>23</sup>Then was the king exceedingly glad, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no injury was found upon him, because he had trusted in his God.

Fate of his foes

<sup>24</sup>And the king commanded, and they brought those men who had accused Daniel; and they were cast into the den of lions, together with their children, and their wives, and the lions had the mastery of them, and broke all their bones in pieces before they reached the bottom of the den.

<sup>p</sup> 6<sup>9</sup> Cf. Esth. 11<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 6<sup>15</sup> Theod. omits the words, came tumultuously and. This doubtless represents a very old and possibly an original reading.

<sup>r</sup> 6<sup>17</sup> I. e., that no one might prevent the carrying out of the decree by rescuing Daniel.

<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>18</sup> The meaning of this word is not known. The above is based on the analogy of the Arab. The rabbis translated it, musical instruments; Theod., food.

<sup>25</sup>Then King Darius wrote to all the peoples, nations, and languages that dwell in all the earth: May your peace be great! <sup>26</sup>I make a decree that in all the dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, and remaineth steadfast forever, and his kingdom is one that shall not be destroyed; and his dominion shall be without end; <sup>27</sup>he delivereth and rescueth, and he performeth signs and wonders in heaven and earth; it is he who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.

<sup>28</sup>So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

Darius's recognition of Daniel's
God

Daniel's
prosperity

III

VISIONS OF THE OVERTHROW OF ANTIOCHUS AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

§ 209. The Four Heathen Kingdoms and the Kingdom of God, Dan. 7

Dan. 7 <sup>1</sup>In the first<sup>a</sup> year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed. Then he wrote down the dream:<sup>b</sup> <sup>2</sup>I<sup>c</sup> saw in my vision by night, and behold, the four winds of heaven broke

Daniel's vision of the four beasts

Visions of the Overthrow of Antiochus and the Establishment of the Kingdom of God. —With chap. 7 begins the distinctively apocalyptic part of the book of Daniel. The aim of these closing chapters is, however, similar to those in the first part of the book. It is to keep alive the faith and hopes of the Jews and to inspire them to be faithful to their law and to their God, but the method, by which this aim is attained is fundamentally different. Visions regarding the future take the place of stories based on past history and tradition. As has already been shown (Introd., p. 35), the connection between the two parts of the book is exceedingly close, for the author of the second half made the stories in the first half the background and point of departure for his visions. The visions, however, trace the history beyond the days of Ptolemy Euergetes. Each culminates in a detailed description of the reign and persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes and a prediction of the reign of the saints of the Most High that is to immediately follow the overthrow of Antiochus.

It is possible, in the light of comparative literature, to trace many of the elements contained in these visions. The old Semitic tradition of a struggle with a dragon of the watery chaos is reflected at several points and determines the language and imagery of such passages as, e. g., 7<sup>2-7</sup>. In the description of the divine throne and judgment seat, e. g., 7<sup>9-13</sup>, one recognizes the influence of such passages as I Kgs. 22, Is. 6, and Ezek. 1. The details of the visions, of course, are determined by the event of the history, which they thinly veil, and by the current hopes, which burned strongly in the hearts of the patriotic Jews of the period.

According to 7, the vision which follows was written down by Daniel himself and the same is implied in the other visions of the book. Their contents were to be sealed to await fulfilment long after the death of the prophets. The visions represent, not the way in which the prophet received his revelations, but the method whereby he endeavored to make them clear and impressive to the minds of his readers. Like the parable and dialogue, the vision was the characteristic product of the literary workshop of the later prophets. Its use and effectiveness depended in part upon the peculiar conditions and problems of the age. The II Isaiah's declaration that Jehovah alone of all the gods announced events before they took place was here developed in detailed and concrete form. Also in language that powerfully appealed to his contemporaries, but unintelligible to his heathen masters, the prophet communicated his message to those for whom it was intended. Cf., for permanent value of these predictions, Introd., pp. 58, 59. The immediate effect of this book on the life and faith of Judaism appears to have been profound. In keeping alive the hopes of the scattered and persecuted victims of Antiochus's zeal to hellenize all his subjects and by inspiring them to die for the law, it gave Judaism its priceless rôle of martyrs and that unquenchable loyalty to religion which has made the race immortal and its teaching the most significant factor in the early history of religion.

§ 209 In general outlines this vision is closely parallel to Nebuchadnezzar's dream in 2. It differs, however, in containing detailed references to the persecutions of Antiochus and to the glories of the coming messianic kingdom. All else in the chapter is but introductory to the

<sup>a</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> Theod., third.

<sup>b</sup> 7<sup>1</sup> Theod. What appears to be a marginal note, the beginning of words, has crept into the Aram. text. A verb, he told, was then added to make the phrase intelligible.

<sup>c</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> So Gk., Theod., and Lat. Aram. adds, Daniel spoke and said.

forth upon the great sea.<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>And four great beasts came up from the sea, each different from the other. <sup>4</sup>The first was like a lion and had eagle's wings.<sup>e</sup> I looked until its wings were stripped off, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made to stand upon two feet as a man; and a man's heart was given to it.<sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>And behold, a second beast,<sup>g</sup> like a bear;<sup>h</sup> and it was raised up on one side,<sup>i</sup> and three ribs were in its mouth, between its teeth;<sup>j</sup> and they said thus to it: Arise, devour much flesh. <sup>6</sup>After this I beheld, and lo, another like a leopard,<sup>k</sup> which had upon its sides four wings of a bird: and the beast had also four heads, and dominion was given to it. <sup>7</sup>After this I saw in the night-visions, and behold, a fourth beast, terrible and fearful, and exceedingly strong: and it had great iron teeth:<sup>l</sup> it devoured and broke in pieces and stamped the rest with its feet; and it differed from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.<sup>m</sup> <sup>8</sup>I gave attention to the horns, and behold another little description of Antiochus. The four great kingdoms which precede the advent of the little horn of <sup>n</sup>are clearly the Chaldean, the Median, the Persian, and the Greek empires as in 2. From the fact that the lives of the beasts who represent these kingdoms were prolonged for a fixed time and season <sup>(o)</sup>, it would seem clear that in the prophet's mind these beasts were representative angels or, more properly speaking, because of their malign character, demons. In this respect they clearly correspond to Michael, the angelic prince, which, in the thought of the prophet and later Judaism, stood as the guardian of Israel, and who fights against, e.g., the angels who represent the kingdoms of Persia and Greece. Cf. 10<sup>13</sup>, 14, 20. From these references one may draw the inference that it was Michael who fought against and slew, according to <sup>11</sup>, the beast which represented Antiochus Epiphanes.

---

An appreciation of these peculiar characteristics in the prophet's thought and teaching are necessary to the understanding of <sup>13</sup>, the most significant and difficult passage in the book. It immediately follows the description of the slaying of the great dragon, which represented Antiochus, and the dethronement and banishment, for a time, of the angels, or demons, which represented the four preceding world powers. Then in his vision the prophet saw, coming on the clouds of heaven into the presence of the divine Ruler of the universe, one like a son of man. To him was given the dominion and glory and sovereignty which in the parallel passages, 18, 22, 27, was given to the saints of the Most High. In the light of this context it would seem clear that the one who thus comes, not from the sea, as did the angels or demons which represented the heathen world powers, but from the heavens, was, in the thought of the prophet, Michael, the champion and representative of the people of Israel. Cf., for a detailed presentation of this interpretation, Schmidt, Jour. of Bib. Lit., 1900, I, 21-8, and Grill, Untersuchungen über die Entstehung des vierten Evangeliums, 1900, I, 50-7. Furthermore, in the corresponding apocryphal writings of Rev. 12<sup>7-9</sup>, Michael is the one who overcomes the great dragon which, in the thought of the author of that book, was identified with Rome. In a still more significant passage, because the analogy is closer, Rev. 14<sup>14</sup>, the writer saw a white cloud, and on the cloud one sitting like to a son of man, having on his head a golden crown and in his hand a sharp sickle. From the context in which this passage stands, it is clear that the one here described as like to a son of man was an angel. The expression, like to a son of man, also clearly implies that the prophet was describing, not a human, but an angelic being, for if he were a man the comparison would have no meaning. Hence the use of the term, son of man, as a messianic title, as in the Similitudes of Enoch, chaps. 37-70, and II Esd., 13<sup>2</sup>, was not justified, if it represented an interpretation of the present passage in Daniel. In fact, the term, son of man, in many of the Aram. dialects of the period, is simply a poetic equivalent of the term, man. Ezekiel, who employs it frequently, does it simply to emphasize his humanity in contrast to the angelic beings who appeared to him in his visions. Its use as a messianic title by later Jewish writers does not appear to have been universal. The author of Daniel also uses the phrase, like a man, frequently, but always in describing angels. Cf. 8<sup>15</sup>, 9<sup>21</sup>, 10<sup>16</sup>, 18.

In light of the parallels in 7<sup>18</sup>, 22, 27, it is clear that the promise found in 13, 14 is that the universal rule of Jehovah's faithful people will speedily be established. In this broad sense, therefore, it is distinctly messianic.

<sup>d</sup> 7<sup>2</sup> The great sea represents the habitable world. Cf. 17.

<sup>e</sup> 7<sup>4</sup> The lion with the eagle's wings represents the Baby empire.

<sup>f</sup> 7<sup>4</sup> I. e., of superior intelligence, probably because of the reputation Nebuchadnezzar enjoyed in late Jewish tradition.

<sup>g</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> Gk. omits. Possibly this is secondary. Cf. 6, 7.

<sup>h</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> The Median empire.

<sup>i</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> Certain Aram. MSS. read, it raised one side. The meaning, in any case, is obscure. Possibly it is simply a realistic description of a bear's awkward posture, or possibly it symbolizes the partial nature of the Median kingdom.

<sup>j</sup> 7<sup>5</sup> Probably symbolizing its ravenous nature. Cf. Is. 13<sup>17</sup>, Jer. 51<sup>11, 23</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 7<sup>6</sup> The Persian empire with its four great kings known to later Jewish tradition.

<sup>l</sup> 7<sup>7</sup> The Graeco-Macedonian world power.

<sup>m</sup> 7<sup>7</sup> These represent ten kings.

HEATHEN KINGDOM AND KINGDOM OF GOD [DAN. 7]

horn came up amongst them,<sup>b</sup> before which three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots: and behold, in this horn were eyes, like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things.<sup>c</sup>

I waited until thrones were set up, and an aged one<sup>d</sup> took his seat: his clothing was white as snow, and his hair like spotless wool, his throne was fiery flames, its wheels burning fire.<sup>e</sup><sup>f</sup> A fiery stream issued and came forth<sup>g</sup> before him: thousands of thousands ministered to him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set<sup>h</sup> and the books were opened.

<sup>i</sup> I looked at that time because of the sound of the great words which the horn spoke—I looked even until the beast was slain, and its body destroyed, and given to be fuel for the fire.<sup>j</sup> <sup>k</sup> Also the rule of the rest of the beasts was taken away: but their lives were prolonged for a fixed time and season.

<sup>l</sup> I saw in the night-visions, and behold, there came with the clouds of heaven one like to a son of man,<sup>m</sup> and he came even to the Aged One, and was brought near before him.<sup>n</sup> <sup>o</sup> And there was given him dominion and glory, and sovereignty, that all the peoples, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his sovereignty one which shall not be destroyed.

<sup>p</sup> As for me, Daniel, my spirit was grieved by reason of this, and the visions of my head troubled me. <sup>q</sup> I came near to one of those who stood by, and asked him the truth concerning all this. So he told me and made me know the interpretation of the things. <sup>r</sup> These four great beasts are four kings who shall arise out of the earth. <sup>s</sup> But the saints of the Most High shall receive the sovereignty, and possess the sovereignty for ever, even for ever and ever.

<sup>t</sup> Then I desired to know the truth concerning the fourth beast, which was different from all of them, exceeding terrible, whose teeth were of iron, and its nails of brass: which devoured, broke in pieces, and stamped the rest with its feet: <sup>u</sup> and concerning the ten horns that were on its head, and the other horn which came up, and before which three horns fell<sup>v</sup>—it that had eyes, and a mouth that spoke great things, and it appeared to be greater than the rest.<sup>w</sup> <sup>x</sup> I looked, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, <sup>y</sup> until the Aged One came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the fixed time came that the saints possessed the sovereignty.

<sup>z</sup> Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be different from all the kingdoms: and shall devour the whole

The celestial court

Overthrow of the beasts

Establishment of an eternal world-wide dominion

Interpretation of the vision

Question regarding the fourth beast and the conquering horn

Alexander's empire and the rule of Antiochus Epiphanes

<sup>a</sup> 7<sup>b</sup> The detailed description is of Antiochus Epiphanes, who at first possessed but little power and seized the throne by treachery. Cf. v. 11<sup>c</sup>. The horns in Semitic symbolism represent strength. The three horns torn up by the roots were probably the three kings, Seleucus IV, Heliocorus, and Demetrius I.

<sup>c</sup> 7<sup>d</sup> I. e., the reference is to the blasphemous words of Antiochus. Cf. 11<sup>e</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 7<sup>f</sup> Lit., one ancient of days. Cf. Gen. 24<sup>g</sup>. The reference is to Jehovah, who rules for all time.

<sup>g</sup> 7<sup>h</sup> Cf. Ezek. 1.

<sup>i</sup> 7<sup>j</sup> Theod. omits, came forth.

<sup>k</sup> 7<sup>l</sup> I. e., the divine court convened.

<sup>m</sup> 7<sup>n</sup> Aram., to the burning of fire.

<sup>o</sup> 7<sup>p</sup> Or simply, man.

<sup>q</sup> 7<sup>r</sup> For the interpretation of this vs., cf. introd. to the section. Following the superior interpretation suggested by Torrey.

<sup>s</sup> 7<sup>t</sup> Correcting what is clearly a scribal error. The VSS. also omit the and of the Aram.

<sup>u</sup> 7<sup>v</sup> Lit., the appearance was greater than the rest.

earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. <sup>24</sup>And as for the ten horns, out of this kingdom shall ten kings arise; and another shall arise after them; and he shall be different from the former, and he shall put down three kings. <sup>25</sup>And he shall speak words against the Most High, and shall continually harass<sup>y</sup> the saints of the Most High; and he shall think to change the fixed times and the law; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and half a time.<sup>z</sup> <sup>26</sup>But the judgment shall be set, and they shall take away his kingdom, to consume and to destroy finally.<sup>a</sup> <sup>27</sup>And the sovereignty, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall surely be given to the people of the saints of the Most High; his sovereignty is an everlasting sovereignty, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. <sup>28</sup>Here is the end of the matter. As for me, Daniel, my thoughts troubled me much, and my brightness of countenance was changed in me, but I kept the matter in my heart.

§ 210. The Victories of Alexander and the Wicked Rule of Antiochus, Dan. 8

The symbol
of the Medo-Persian empire

Of Alexander's conquests

Dan. 8 <sup>1</sup>In the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision came to me, Daniel, after that which appeared to me previously. <sup>2</sup>And I saw in a vision—and when I saw, I was in the Shushan, the royal palace,<sup>b</sup> which is in the province of Elam—and I saw in a vision,<sup>c</sup> and I was by the River Ulai.<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then I lifted up mine eyes and saw, and behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns,<sup>e</sup> and the two horns were high, but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. <sup>4</sup>I saw the ram pushing westward and northward and southward, and no beasts could stand before him, and none could deliver out of his hand, but he did as he pleased and magnified himself.

<sup>5</sup>And as I was observing, behold, a he-goat came from the west over the face of the whole earth, without touching the ground;<sup>f</sup> and the goat had a conspicuous horn between his eyes. <sup>6</sup>And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I saw standing before the river, and ran upon him in the fury of his power. <sup>7</sup>And I saw him come close to the ram, and he was angered against him, and smote the ram, and broke his two horns; and the ram had no strength to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground and trampled upon him, and none could deliver the ram out of his hand. <sup>8</sup>And the he-goat mag-

<sup>y</sup> 7<sup>25</sup> Lit., wear out, or, afflict.

<sup>z</sup> 7<sup>25</sup> The reference, of course, is to the earlier stages of Antiochus's persecutions and his seeming success in suppressing the temple worship and the carrying out of the Jewish laws. Cf. 1 Mac. 1<sup>41</sup>, 4<sup>2</sup>. A time is probably to be reckoned as a year, so that the period indicated is three years and a half, approximately the period of active persecution preceding the Maccabean uprising.

<sup>a</sup> 7<sup>26</sup> I. e., forever.

§ 210 This section is closely parallel to the preceding and presents many difficulties to the translator but few to the interpreter. The little horn of 9<sup>14</sup> is, as in 7<sup>26</sup>, Antiochus Epiphanes. The description of this tyrant and his persecutions of the Jews is here given in greater detail. This is supplemented by the interpretation which follows. The interpretation of the detailed historical references will be found in connection with the notes on each vs.

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>2</sup> Lit., castle, or, citadel. Cf. Esth. 3<sup>15</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>2</sup> Theod. omits this second, and I saw in a vision.

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>2</sup> The Eulaeus, on which, according to Pliny and Arrius, Susa was situated.

<sup>e</sup> 8<sup>3</sup> The ram evidently symbolizes both the Median and Persian empires which were closely connected. The higher horn, which came up last, apparently represented Persia.

<sup>f</sup> 8<sup>3</sup> Suggesting the rapidity of Alexander's conquests.

nified himself exceedingly; and when he had become strong, the great horn was broken. And in its place there came up four other<sup>g</sup> horns toward the four winds of heaven.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup> And out of one of them came another<sup>i</sup> little horn, which grew exceedingly great, toward the south, and toward the east,<sup>j</sup> and toward the glorious land.<sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup> And it grew great, even to the host of heaven; and some of the host, and of the stars it cast down to the ground and trampled upon them.<sup>l</sup> <sup>11</sup> Yea, it magnified itself even to the prince of the host,<sup>m</sup> and took away from him the daily sacrifice,<sup>n</sup> and cast down<sup>o</sup> the place of his sanctuary,<sup>p</sup> and it set up the sacrilegious thing<sup>q</sup> over the daily sacrifice, and cast down truth to the ground, and did it and prospered.

<sup>13</sup> Then I heard a holy one speaking; and another holy one said to the one who spoke, For how long shall the vision be that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away<sup>r</sup> and the appalling sacrifice<sup>s</sup> set up and the sanctuary and the host trampled under foot?<sup>t</sup> <sup>14</sup> And he said to him,<sup>u</sup> For two thousand and three hundred evenings and mornings.<sup>v</sup> Then shall the sanctuary be justified.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>15</sup> And it came to pass when I, Daniel, had seen the vision, that I sought to understand it; and behold, there stood before me one who had the appearance of a man.<sup>x</sup> <sup>16</sup> And I heard a human voice between the banks of<sup>y</sup> the Ulai, which called and said, Gabriel,<sup>z</sup> cause this man to understand the vision. <sup>17</sup> So he came near where I stood; and when he came I was affrighted and fell upon my face, but he said to me, Understand, O son of man,<sup>a</sup> for the vision

Of Antiochus
and his
cruel persecutions

Duration
of his temple des-ecra-
tion

Inter-
preta-
tion
of the vision

<sup>g</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb., conspicuous.

<sup>h</sup> 8<sup>8</sup> The reference is to the division of Alexander's empire after the battle of Ipsus in 301 B.C. The four horns represented Cassander, Lysimachus, Seleucus, and Ptolemy.

<sup>i</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> Correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> The south refers to Egypt, the east to Persia. Cf. I Mac. 1<sup>16-19</sup>, 3<sup>31</sup>, 37, 6<sup>1-4</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> I. e., Judah and the temple. Cf. also 11<sup>16</sup>, 41, 45, Ezek. 20<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>10</sup> The reference is to the persecution of the Jews by Antiochus.

<sup>m</sup> 8<sup>11</sup> I. e., claimed that he was equal to Jehovah himself. Cf. 25, prince of heaven.

<sup>n</sup> 8<sup>11</sup> Heb. marginal reading, by it the daily sacrifice (lit., the continual) was taken away, i. e., the daily temple service in behalf of the nation.

<sup>o</sup> 8<sup>11</sup> Slightly changing the vowel pointing to conform to the context. Heb., was cast down.

<sup>p</sup> 8<sup>12</sup> So Theod. and Gk. Heb. has, through a scribal error, the unintelligible words, and a host, probably repeated from <sup>11</sup>. The text of the rest of the vs. is corrupt, but it is clear that the little horn is the subject throughout. Two or three corrections of the Heb. give the above rendering, which is supported by <sup>13</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 8<sup>12</sup> Or, transgression, or, iniquity. It is the equivalent of, the appalling desolation. Cf. 9<sup>27</sup>, 11<sup>31</sup>, and 12<sup>11</sup>. In the light of I Mac. 1<sup>54</sup> (where the latter term is used) it was the heathen altar and service, including the offering of swine, which was set up by Antiochus on the site of the altar of burnt-offering in the temple where the daily sacrifice had been presented to Jehovah.

<sup>r</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> Following the suggestion of the Gk. in reconstructing the corrupt Heb.

<sup>s</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> Or, iniquity of desolation, clearly a reference to the altar and heathen service of Antiochus. Cf. preceding note and I Mac. 14<sup>7</sup>, 51, 54, 59.

<sup>t</sup> 8<sup>13</sup> This must refer to the heavenly host, as in <sup>10</sup>. Hence the phrase means, everything holy and divine.

<sup>u</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> So Gk., Theod., and Syr. Heb., to me.

<sup>v</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> I. e., 1,150 days. According to 7<sup>25</sup>, 12<sup>7</sup>, the persecution was to last three and a half years. As a matter of fact, it lasted, according to I Mac., somewhere between 1,100 and 1,190 days, according to the calendar then in use, so that the above datum is probably historical.

<sup>w</sup> 8<sup>14</sup> By the restoration of the service.

<sup>x</sup> 8<sup>15</sup> The Heb. word, geber, is unusual in this connection and is evidently intended to point to, Gabriel (man of God), in the next vs.

<sup>y</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> Supplying the implied, the banks of.

<sup>z</sup> 8<sup>16</sup> Gabriel is frequently mentioned in extra-canonical Jewish lit. Cf. Enoch 9<sup>1</sup>, 20<sup>7</sup>, 40<sup>3-7, 9</sup>, 54<sup>6</sup>, 71<sup>8</sup>, 9,13. Cf. also Lk. 11<sup>9, 26</sup>. He again appears in 9<sup>21</sup> to explain Jeremiah's prophecy of the seventy years. According to Enoch 40 he stood at the head of the heavenly powers. In Daniel, for the first time in O.T. writings, the names of angels are given.

<sup>a</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> Ezekiel's characteristic phrase.

belongeth to the time of the end.<sup>b</sup> <sup>18</sup>Now as he was speaking with me, I fell into a deep sleep with my face toward the ground; but he touched me, and set me upright in my place. <sup>19</sup>And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the time of wrath,<sup>c</sup> for it belongeth to the appointed time of the end. <sup>20</sup>The ram which thou sawest, with the two horns, represents the kings of Media and Persia. <sup>21</sup>And the he-goat<sup>d</sup> is the king of Greece, and the great horn between his eyes is the first king. <sup>22</sup>And as for that which was broken so that four stood up in its place, four kingdoms shall arise<sup>e</sup> out of his nation, but not with his power. <sup>23</sup>And in the later days of their rule, when the transgressors<sup>f</sup> have come to the full, a king defiant<sup>g</sup> and skilled in dissimulation shall stand up. <sup>24</sup>And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power;<sup>h</sup> and he shall utter<sup>i</sup> monstrous things, and shall achieve, and shall destroy the mighty ones.<sup>j</sup> <sup>25</sup>And his cleverness shall be directed against the saints; he shall succeed through deceit, and devise great things,<sup>k</sup> and he shall destroy many unawares;<sup>l</sup> he shall also stand up against the prince of princes; but he shall be destroyed, but not by the hand of man.<sup>m</sup> <sup>26</sup>And the vision of the evenings and mornings<sup>n</sup> which has been told is true; but hide the vision for it belongeth to many days to come. <sup>27</sup>And I, Daniel, fainted, and was sick certain days; then I rose up and did the king's business and I wondered at the vision, but none understood it.

§ 211. Meaning of Jeremiah's Seventy Years, Dan. 9

Jere-miah's
predic-tion

Dan. 9 <sup>1</sup>In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus,<sup>o</sup> of the Median race, who was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans,<sup>p</sup> in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, perceived by the books the number of years concerning

<sup>b</sup> 8<sup>17</sup> The final great crisis of the world's history, which the author expected would come soon after the cessation of the persecution of Antiochus. The term was probably taken from Am. 8<sup>2</sup> or Ezek. 7<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 8<sup>19</sup> I. e., the closing days of heathen rule.

<sup>d</sup> 8<sup>21</sup> A scribe has added in the Heb. the Aram. synonym of he-goat.

<sup>e</sup> 8<sup>22</sup> So Gk. and Theod. The reference is to Alexander's empire, and the four nations included Macedonia and Greece, under Alexander; Thrace and Bithynia, under Lysimachus; Syria, Babylonia, and the East, under Seleucus; and Egypt, under Ptolemy.

<sup>f</sup> 8<sup>23</sup> Gk., Theod., and Syr., sins. The difference is simply one of vowel punctuation, but the Heb. is probably the original, and the reference is to the apostate Jews as well as the heathen persecutors.

<sup>g</sup> 8<sup>23</sup> Lit., hard of face.

<sup>h</sup> 8<sup>24</sup> But not by his own power, may well be a later scribal addition, for it is not found in Theod. and the sense is complete without it.

<sup>i</sup> 8<sup>24</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. with the aid of the parallel in 11<sup>26</sup>. Traditional text, destroy wonderfully.

<sup>j</sup> 8<sup>24</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. and giving the last words of this vs. to 25.

<sup>k</sup> 8<sup>25</sup> Heb. idiom, cause craft to prosper in his land, and he shall do great things in his mind.

<sup>l</sup> 8<sup>25</sup> When they suspect nothing.

<sup>m</sup> 8<sup>25</sup> Lit., without hand.

<sup>n</sup> 8<sup>26</sup> I. e., concerning the daily sacrifice.

§ 211. The question of how long the persecutions of Antiochus would continue was a burning one in the days in which the second half of the book of Daniel was written. The prevailing conception of Jehovah's rulership of the world encouraged the devout in Israel to believe that somewhere or in some way God would answer the question. The author of this chapter evidently thought that he had found the answer to the question. In Jeremiah's prediction (Jer. 25<sup>9</sup>, 11, 12, 29<sup>10</sup>) the desolation of Jerusalem was to last but seventy years. The author of Dan. 9 recognized, in common with all later Jewish writers except the author of the opening chapters of Ezra, that the exile and desolation of the holy city had not yet ceased. Hence he was driven to the conclusion that the seventy must have represented, not simple years, but weeks of years, that is, 490 years. This period he divided into three parts. The first period of seven weeks of years, which the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah the prophet,<sup>p</sup> that they should be completed while Jerusalem stood in ruins<sup>q</sup>—even seventy years.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> I. e., Xerxes. Cf. Ezra 4<sup>7</sup>. In reality Darius was the father, not the son, of Xerxes.

<sup>3</sup>And I turned<sup>r</sup> my face to the Lord God, to apply myself to prayer<sup>s</sup> and supplication, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. <sup>4</sup>And I prayed to Jehovah my God, and made confession, and said,<sup>t</sup> Oh, Lord, the great and the terrible God, who keepeth the covenant and sheweth mercy to those who serve him and keep his commands,<sup>u</sup> we have sinned and have dealt perversely, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even turning aside from thy precepts and from thy ordinances; <sup>6</sup>neither have we listened to thy servants the prophets, who spoke in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land. <sup>7</sup>O Lord, righteousness belongeth to thee, but to us confusion of face, as at this day, to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to all Israel who are near, and those who are afar off, in the lands whither thou hast driven them, because of their crimes which they have committed against thee. <sup>8</sup>O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings,<sup>v</sup> to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. <sup>9</sup>To the Lord our God belong compassion and forgiveness,<sup>w</sup> for we have rebelled against him,<sup>x</sup> neither have we obeyed the voice of Jehovah our God, to walk in his teachings which he set before us by his servants the prophets. <sup>11</sup>Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law and have turned so as not to obey thy voice. Therefore the curse hath been poured out upon us, and the oath which is written in the law of Moses<sup>y</sup> the servant of God; for we have sinned against him. <sup>12</sup>And he hath confirmed his words, which he spoke against us and against our rulers<sup>y</sup> who ruled us, by bringing upon us a great misfortune; for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done to Jerusalem. <sup>13</sup>As it is written in the law of Moses,<sup>z</sup> all this evil has come upon us; yet we have not entreated the favor or 49 years, represented the days of the Babylonian exile, from the fall of Jerusalem in 586 to the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus in 538 B.C. The second period, 62 weeks of years, that is, 434 years, evidently extended from the conquest of Babylon to the murder of the high priest Onias III in 171 B.C. The actual number of years was 366 or 367, but the variation was, in all probability, due to the author's ignorance regarding the chronology of the period. It is significant that the historian Demetrius, who lived about 200 B.C., in estimating the period from the fall of Samaria to his own day, makes practically the same error, indicating that the author of Daniel probably here followed the chronology current in his day. The last period of one week, that is, seven years, was divided about equally in two parts by the desecration of the temple and the beginning of Antiochus's active persecution, which fell in 168 B.C. His conclusion, therefore, is that a time and times and half a time, that is, three and one-half years, still remain before the overthrow of the heathen powers and the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom. As a matter of fact, the first book of Mac. states that the period between the beginning of the active persecution in 168 and the rededication of the temple in 165 was exactly three years and ten days. About a half year later came the news of the death of Antiochus. To the faithful readers of the book of Daniel this must have seemed a marvellous confirmation of the truth of the prophet's teaching, even though the death of Antiochus failed to inaugurate the temporal rule of the saints of the Most High, as the prophet had ardently hoped and plainly taught.

Daniel's confession of sin in behalf of his nation

<sup>p</sup> <sup>9<sup>1</sup></sup> Cf. Jer. 25<sup>12</sup>, 29<sup>10</sup>, Lev. 26<sup>18</sup>, 21, 24, 28.

<sup>q</sup> <sup>9<sup>2</sup></sup> The Heb. is exceedingly awkward, but the idiom may be translated as above.

<sup>r</sup> <sup>9<sup>3</sup></sup> Lit., set.

<sup>s</sup> <sup>9<sup>3</sup></sup> Lit., seek prayer.

<sup>t</sup> <sup>9<sup>4</sup></sup> For close parallels, cf. Jer. 32<sup>16-25</sup>, I Kgs. 8, Neh. 1, 9, and Bar. 1<sup>15</sup>-3<sup>18</sup>. By some the entire prayer,<sup>1-20</sup> is regarded as a later addition, since<sup>21</sup> it is a natural sequence of<sup>3</sup> and<sup>4-20</sup> has little connection with<sup>1-3</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> <sup>9<sup>4</sup></sup> Based on Dt. 7<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> <sup>9<sup>5</sup></sup> Kings, as in<sup>6</sup>, applies to the past, not to the present.

<sup>w</sup> <sup>9<sup>5</sup></sup> Heb., compassing forgiveness, i.e., acts of compassion and forgiveness.

<sup>x</sup> <sup>9<sup>11</sup></sup> Cf. Lev. 26<sup>18</sup> <sup>11</sup>, Dt. 29<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> <sup>9<sup>12</sup></sup> Lit., judges.

<sup>z</sup> <sup>9<sup>13</sup></sup> Cf. Dt. 28<sup>15b</sup>, 31<sup>1</sup>.

of Jehovah our God, that we should turn from our iniquities, and discern thy faithfulness. <sup>14</sup>Therefore Jehovah hath watched over the evil and brought it upon us, for Jehovah our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth, and we have not obeyed his voice.

<sup>15</sup>And now, O Lord our God, who hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gained renown as at this day, we have sinned and we have done wickedly. <sup>16</sup>O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, let thine anger and thy wrath, I pray thee, be turned away from thy city, Jerusalem, thy holy mountain; because for our sins and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people have become an object of reproach to all who are round about us. <sup>17</sup>Now therefore, O our God, listen to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplications, and show favor to thy sanctuary, which is desolate, for the sake of thy servants, O Lord. <sup>18</sup>O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which bears thy name; for we do not present our supplications before thee because of our righteousness, but because of thy great compassion. <sup>19</sup>O Lord, hear! O Lord, forgive! O Lord, hearken and perform; defer not, for thine own sake, O my God, because thy city and thy people are called by thy name.

<sup>20</sup>And while I was speaking, and praying, and confessing, my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before Jehovah my God for the holy mountain of my God,<sup>a</sup> <sup>21</sup>yea, while I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel,<sup>b</sup> whom I had seen earlier in the vision, being made to fly swiftly,<sup>c</sup> approached me about the time of the evening offering. <sup>22</sup>And he came,<sup>d</sup> and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I have now come forth to give thee wisdom and insight. <sup>23</sup>At the beginning of thy supplications the command went forth, and I have come to tell thee;<sup>e</sup> for thou art greatly beloved;<sup>f</sup> therefore heed the word, and understand the vision.

<sup>24</sup>Seventy weeks<sup>g</sup> have been decreed upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to make an end<sup>h</sup> of the sacrilege;<sup>i</sup> and to complete<sup>j</sup> the sin, and to make atonement for<sup>k</sup> iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness;<sup>l</sup> and to seal up vision and prophecy,<sup>m</sup> and to anoint the most holy.<sup>n</sup> <sup>25</sup>Know therefore and discern, that from the going forth of the command to repeople<sup>o</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>20</sup> Theod. omits, of my God.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>21</sup> Cf. 8<sup>16</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>22</sup> The meaning of this Heb. phrase has been variously interpreted. The above is supported by Theod., Syr., and Lat. Meinhold would apply the phrase to Daniel and translate, when I was exhausted.

<sup>d</sup> 9<sup>22</sup> So Gk. and Syr., supported by context.

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>23</sup> Following the VSS. in adding, thee.

<sup>f</sup> 9<sup>23</sup> Lit., an object of affection.

<sup>g</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> I. e., weeks of years.

<sup>h</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> Following the superior reading of 40 Heb. MSS.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> I. e., the desecration of the temple by Antiochus. Cf. 8<sup>12</sup>, 13, 23. Possibly Israel's earlier crimes are also in the prophet's mind.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> So marginal reading of the Heb., supported by the Gk. and Theod. This clause is evidently parallel in thought to the preceding. The sin is not that of the people but the ceremonial pollution of the people and city.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> Or, cancel, pardon.

<sup>l</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> A period in which the pollution and desecration of the present will never be repeated. The word is apparently used here in its later ceremonial sense.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> Lit., prophecy. I. e., to confirm the words of prophecy by fulfilment.

<sup>n</sup> 9<sup>24</sup> The desecrated altar and temple. Cf. Ex. 29<sup>37</sup>, 30<sup>9b</sup>, 28.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>25</sup> The rebuilding under Nehemiah came before the repeopling of Jerusalem. Cf. Neh. 7<sup>4</sup>.

Petition for forgiveness and restoration

God's
response
to his prayer

Meaning of the seventy
years

rebuild Jerusalem to the anointed one,<sup>p</sup> the prince, shall be seven weeks; sixty-two weeks shall it be rebuilt, with broad places and streets.<sup>q</sup> And at the end<sup>r</sup> of times<sup>26</sup> (even after the sixty-two weeks)<sup>s</sup> an anointed one shall be cut off<sup>t</sup> without judicial trial;<sup>u</sup> and the city and the sanctuary shall be destroyed together, and his end shall come with a flood<sup>v</sup> and even to the end there shall be war, a sentence of desolations.<sup>w</sup><sup>27</sup> And the covenant shall be annulled for many<sup>x</sup> for one week; and in the midst of the week the sacrifice and the offering shall cease,<sup>y</sup> and in its place<sup>z</sup> shall be an appalling<sup>a</sup> abomination<sup>b</sup> and that until the ruin determined upon, is poured out upon the appalling thing.

§ 212. Meaning and Goal of Human History, Dan. 10–12

Dan. 10 <sup>1</sup>In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia, a thing was revealed to Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the word is true, and means great distress.<sup>c</sup> And he gave heed to the words, and understood the

The vision
of the angelic messenger

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>25</sup> In 26 this term clearly refers to the high priest. So also 11<sup>22</sup>. It is also so used in Lev. 4<sup>3</sup>, 5, 1<sup>1</sup>, 6<sup>15</sup>, while the word translated, prince, is in the Gk. period (cf. B. Sir. 45<sup>24</sup>), the regular designation of the high priest, who was the civil as well as the religious head of the Jewish community. The one referred to is therefore Joshua, who was high priest in 520–516 B.C., when the temple was rebuilt. From 586 B.C. to 516 B.C. was a period of seventy years but the prophet, following the tradition in Ezra, apparently thought that the city was repeopled at the beginning of the Persian period in 538 B.C., which would give approximately forty-nine years.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>25</sup> Following Syr., in reading, streets, lit., street, instead of the doubtful traditional rendering, moat.

<sup>r</sup> 9<sup>25</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr. Heb., in strait of times.

<sup>s</sup> 9<sup>26</sup> This clause may be simply an explanatory gloss.

<sup>t</sup> 9<sup>26</sup> The reference must be to the death of the high priest Onias III, who was murdered at the instigation of his rival, Menelaus, in 171 B.C. Cf. II Mac. 3<sup>1</sup>, 2, 4<sup>4</sup>, 35–37, 15<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> 9<sup>26</sup> So Theod. Lit., without having any judgment. The statement applies well to Onias III. The traditional Heb. makes no sense. Another reconstruction gives the equally harmonious rendering, without guilt.

<sup>v</sup> 9<sup>26</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. with the aid of the Gk., Theod., and Syr. Trad. Heb. may possibly be rendered, the people of the prince who shall come shall destroy the city and sanctuary; and its end shall be with a flood. The prince, in that case, would be Antiochus; but according to the superior reconstruction suggested by Bevan (Dan., 158–61) and adopted above, the prince, as in the preceding vss., would be a high priest, probably Jason, the brother of Onias III, who, according to II Mac. 57–10, perished miserably.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>26</sup> The text is very doubtful.

<sup>x</sup> 9<sup>27</sup> Probably a reference to the apostate Jews who joined with Antiochus in desecrating the temple and in persecuting their kinsmen.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>27</sup> Reconstructing as the context suggests. Heb., he shall cause to cease.

<sup>z</sup> 9<sup>27</sup> Gk. and Theod., on the sanctuary. Heb., on a wing, is clearly corrupt. The simple reconstruction followed above accords with the context.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>27</sup> Again slightly revising the Heb. The reference is clearly to the appalling sacrilege of 8<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>27</sup> Cf. 8<sup>12</sup>, 11<sup>31</sup>, 12<sup>11</sup>. The reference is, of course, to the altar of Antiochus and indirectly to the king himself, who instigated the persecution.

<sup>§ 212</sup> In this culminating section of the book of Daniel the same themes are treated as in the three preceding chapters, but the symbolism almost entirely disappears, and instead Daniel simply reports what he is told by the angel Gabriel. It purports to be a prediction of the course of history in the century following the period of the exile, during which Daniel was supposed to have lived. The errors regarding the history of the earlier period and the wonderfully exact description of events in the latter part of the period, which culminated in the days of Antiochus, leave no doubt that it is an interpretation written largely in the light of the events themselves and intended to furnish an impressive background for the actual predictions which begin with 11<sup>10</sup>. The wide divergence between these predictions and the course of history during the immediately following years makes it possible to date these chapters with great assurance in the year 168 B.C. It was the darkest hour before the dawn. Antiochus had all but succeeded in his purpose to put an end to the worship of Jehovah and to banish or destroy all who were loyal to their inherited laws and customs. Already Judas and his followers had raised the standard vision. <sup>2</sup>In those days I, Daniel, was mourning three whole weeks. <sup>3</sup>I ate no pleasant bread, neither did any flesh or wine enter my mouth, nor did I anoint myself at all, until three whole weeks were past. <sup>4</sup>And in the twenty-fourth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river,<sup>d</sup> <sup>5</sup>I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and there was a man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with pure gold of Ophir;<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>his body also was like the chrysolith,<sup>f</sup> and his face like lightning, and his eyes like flaming torches, and his arms and his feet like polished brass, and the sound of his words like the sound of a multitude.<sup>g</sup> <sup>7</sup>And I, Daniel, alone saw the vision; for the men who were with me did not see the vision, but a great trembling seized them, and they fled to hide themselves. <sup>8</sup>So I was left alone and saw this great vision, and no strength was left in me, for my fresh appearance was changed<sup>h</sup> to pallor.<sup>i</sup> <sup>9</sup>Yet when I heard the sound of his words, I fell into a deep sleep with my face<sup>j</sup> toward the ground.

* 10<sup>1</sup> Lit., military service, i.e., a long period of painful service. Cf. Is. 40<sup>2</sup> and Job 7<sup>1</sup>.

Effect
upon
Daniel

<sup>10</sup>And behold, a hand touched me, which set me trembling upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands. <sup>11</sup>And he said to me, O Daniel, thou man greatly beloved, give heed to the words that I speak to thee, and stand upright, for to thee have I now been sent. And when he had spoken this word to me, I stood trembling. <sup>12</sup>Then he said to me, Fear not Daniel, for from the first day that thou didst set thy heart to gain insight,<sup>k</sup> and to humble thyself before thy God, thy words were heard: and I have come because of thy words. <sup>13</sup>But of rebellion, but the movement had revealed nothing of its coming strength. Cf. 11<sup>34</sup>. Although the language is purposely obscure, the great majority of historic references can be identified. The original obscurity of the language and teaching evidently proved a great stumbling-block to later scribes and copyists, with the result that these chapters present more difficult textual problems than any others in the O.T.

---

The crimes and achievements of Antiochus are presented at length. In the mind of the author and his age he was the personification of all that was worst in heathenism. As in 7<sup>11</sup>, certain elements, drawn from the ancient myth of Jehovah's contest with the dragon, the spirit of chaos are added to this portrait. Possibly the fact that Antiochus claimed for himself divine honors influenced the prophet to picture him in truly demoniacal colors. In later Jewish writings many of the elements in this portrait are transferred to Satan, the head of the hierarchy of demons, which opposed the divine hierarchy, at the head of which, in Jewish thought, stood Jehovah, with Gabriel, Daniel's informant, as his viceroy.

By far the most significant teaching found in these chapters is that of individual immortality. Now, for the first time in the O.T., it finds clear and definite expression. Not all, but those who had proved faithful to their God and their law in the days of the great crisis, were to rise again from the dust to participate in the divine kingdom, which the prophet anticipated was to be speedily established, 12<sup>2</sup>. <sup>3</sup> It was but the beginning of that belief in individual immortality which became one of the fundamental doctrines of Phariseeism and Christianity. Judaism had been strangely slow in accepting this doctrine, which Egyptian and Persian and Greek prophets and philosophers had taught long before, but in the presence of devoted martyrs, who had voluntarily faced death through devotion to their religion, the Jewish teachers had been led to open their eyes to this greater truth. Hitherto the immortality of the family and tribe and nation had satisfied their sense of divine justice and their hopes for the future. The historical development of the Jewish belief in individual immortality is still enveloped in much obscurity. The germ, however, of that belief, which is found in the book of Daniel, developed rapidly, so that by the first century B.C. it was held not only by the Pharisees but by the great majority of the Jewish race.

<sup>d</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> A scribe has added, that is the Hiddekel (the Tigris). In Gen. 15<sup>18</sup> the great river is the Euphrates. The scribe who added the gloss appears to have thought that Babylon was on the Tigris.

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> So five Heb. MSS. Trad. Heb., Uphaz. This is otherwise unknown.

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>6</sup> Lit., Tarshish-stone, so called because found in Tarshish in Spain. According to Pliny it was transparent and with a splendor like that of gold.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>7</sup> Or, tumult, a loud, inarticulate sound.

<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>8</sup> I. e., the pallor of death. Heb., my beauty was turned in me to corruption. Cf. the parallel idiom, 7<sup>28</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>9</sup> In Heb. a scribe has added, probably from 16, the tautological phrase, and I retained no strength.

<sup>j</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> So Theod. Heb. adds, on my face.

<sup>k</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> I. e., regarding the destiny of his race.

the prince of the kingdom of Persia<sup>1</sup> withheld me twenty-one days; but lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me; and I left him there with the prince of the kings of Persia.<sup>m</sup><sup>n</sup> Now I have come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for the vision is yet for many days. <sup>o</sup> And when he had spoken to me according to these words, I turned my face toward the ground, and was dumb. <sup>p</sup> And then one in the likeness of the sons of men<sup>q</sup> touched my lips; then I opened my mouth, and spoke, and said to him who stood before me, O my Lord, because of the vision my pangs<sup>r</sup> have come upon me, and I retain no strength,<sup>s</sup> for how can this the servant of my Lord talk with this<sup>t</sup> my Lord? For as for me, henceforth<sup>u</sup> there remains no strength in me, nor is there breath left in me.

<sup>18</sup> Then another in appearance like a man touched me, and strengthened me. <sup>19</sup> And he said, O man greatly beloved, fear not; peace be to thee; be strong, yea, be bold.<sup>r</sup> And when he spoke to me I was strengthened, and said, Let my Lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me. <sup>20</sup> Then he said, Knowest thou why I have come to thee? and now I will return to fight with the prince of Persia, and when I go forth, then the prince of Greece shall come: <sup>21</sup> and none who helpeth me against these, except that Michael, your prince, 11 standeth as my helper and defence.

10 <sup>21a</sup> But now I will tell thee what is written in the book of truth:<sup>s</sup> 11 <sup>2</sup> Behold, three more kings shall stand up for Persia; and the fourth<sup>t</sup> shall be far richer than they all; and when he has grown strong through his riches, he shall stir up all against the realm of Greece. <sup>3</sup> Then a warrior king shall stand up, who shall rule with great dominion and do according to his will. <sup>4</sup> And when he has become strong,<sup>u</sup> his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided to the four winds of heaven, but it shall not belong to his posterity, nor shall it be as great as his dominion,<sup>v</sup> which he ruled, for his kingdom shall be overthrown and shall belong to others besides these.

<sup>5</sup> And the king of the south<sup>w</sup> shall be strong, but one of his princes<sup>x</sup> shall be stronger than he, and shall rule; his dominion shall be great. <sup>6</sup> And at the end

Message
of encourage-
ment

Overthrow of Persia by Alexander

Alliance between
the Ptolemies and Se-leucidae

<sup>1</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> The guardian angel of the Persian empire. Cf., for the same belief, Is. 24<sup>21</sup>, Ps. 82, B. Sir. 17<sup>17</sup>. Michael is the guardian angel of the Jews.

<sup>m</sup> 10<sup>13</sup> So Gk. and Theod. Heb., I remained there with the kings of Persia, but this, in the context, makes no sense.

<sup>n</sup> 10<sup>16</sup> Cf. the older parallel in Is. 6<sup>7</sup>. Theod. and Lat. read, son of man.

<sup>o</sup> 10<sup>16</sup> I. e., as of a woman in travail.

<sup>p</sup> 10<sup>17</sup> The, this, added with, servant, and with, Lord, probably was intended to emphasize the differences in station between the two. They are, however, omitted by Gk. and Theod.

<sup>q</sup> 10<sup>17</sup> Or following a suggestion of the Gk., because of terror. Syr. omits.

<sup>r</sup> 10<sup>19</sup> So Gk., Theod., and four Heb. MSS. Heb. simply repeats, be strong.

<sup>s</sup> 10<sup>18</sup>-11<sup>2</sup> The wide variations in the Gk. and Theod., as well as the lack of logical unity, show that the trad. Heb. text is corrupt. 10<sup>18a</sup> and 11<sup>1a</sup> are practically duplicates and 11<sup>2a</sup> is in the logical position. 10<sup>21b</sup> is the immediate sequel of <sup>20</sup>. The superscription in the Heb., 11<sup>1b</sup>, and as for me, in the first year of Darius the Mede, has all the characteristics of a scribal addition, for it interrupts Michael's words to Dan. The rest of the vs. has been reconstructed with the aid of the VSS.

<sup>t</sup> 11<sup>2</sup> The four kings which were probably in the mind of the author, Cyrus, Darius, Xerxes, and Artaxerxes, are mentioned in the O.T. The fourth, however, from the description, must be Xerxes, who in his mind was placed after Artaxerxes just as Cyrus was thought to have followed Darius.

<sup>u</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> So the parallel passage 8<sup>8</sup>. Heb., he shall stand up. The reference is to Alexander the Great.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> I. e., none of the kingdoms that resulted from the division of Alexander's empire were to be as large or powerful as this one.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Ptolemy Soter.

<sup>x</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Seleucus Nicator, who was once in the army of Ptolemy, and later became king of Syria and the East.

of some years they shall make an alliance with one another, and the daughter of the king of the south shall come to the king of the north to make an agreement,<sup>y</sup> but that support<sup>z</sup> shall not retain strength, neither shall his supports stand; but she shall be given up, and they who brought her, and he<sup>a</sup> who begat her, and he<sup>a</sup> who supported her.

<sup>b</sup>But in those times<sup>b</sup> a shoot out of her roots<sup>c</sup> shall arise in his<sup>d</sup> place, who shall come to the army, and shall enter into the fortress<sup>e</sup> of the king of the north, and shall act against them<sup>f</sup> and prevail,<sup>g</sup> and also shall carry away their gods, together with their molten images and their costly things of silver and gold, captive into Egypt; and he shall refrain<sup>h</sup> some years from the king of the north. <sup>i</sup>Then another<sup>i</sup> shall come into the realm of the king of the south, but he shall return to his own land.

<sup>j</sup>And his son<sup>j</sup> shall war, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces, and he shall come onward,<sup>k</sup> and overflow, and pass through, and shall return and war, even to his fortress.<sup>l</sup> <sup>m</sup>And the king of the south shall be enraged, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north, and that one shall raise a great multitude,<sup>n</sup> but the multitude shall be delivered into his<sup>m</sup> hands. <sup>o</sup>And the multitude shall be carried away, and his heart shall be exalted; and he shall cast down tens of thousands, but he shall not show himself strong.

<sup>p</sup>And the king of the north shall return, and shall raise a multitude greater than the former; and he shall come after a period of several years, with a great army and with much equipment.<sup>r</sup> <sup>s</sup>And in those times many shall stand up against the king of the south,<sup>t</sup> also the sons of the violent among thy people<sup>p</sup>

Invasion of Ptolemy Euergetes

His victory over Antiochus the Great at Raphia

Conquests and reign of Antiochus the Great

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>6</sup> The reference here is to the marriage of Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus to Antiochus Theos. The marriage was disastrous to all concerned. Antiochus was poisoned by his former wife after Berenice had been put away. She and her son and adherents were also murdered in 247 B.C. and Ptolemy II died about the same time. These events are all alluded to in 6.

<sup>z</sup> 11<sup>6</sup> Lit., the arm. This translation is supported by the parallel in II Chr. 13<sup>20</sup>. It means that neither the alliance, sealed by the marriage of Ptolemy's daughter, Berenice, nor his Syrian allies will prove effectual. Current translation, but she shall retain the strength of her arm.

<sup>a</sup> 11<sup>6</sup> Probably Berenice's father and husband.

<sup>b</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> With Theod., transferring the last clause of <sup>6</sup> to <sup>7</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Following the superior Gk. text.

<sup>d</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Ptolemy Euergetes III, a brother of Berenice, who avenged her death by invading Syria, conquering a large part of Syria, and by nearly driving Seleucus from his kingdom.

<sup>e</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Seleucia, the port of Antioch.

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Or, bring an army against them.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>8</sup> I. e., not attack.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>9</sup> Two years later Seleucus Callinicus invaded Ptolemy's territory but was signally defeated.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> So marginal reading of Heb. Heb., his sons; but one of the two was early murdered. Callinicus' son, Antiochus III (the Great), conquered Syria from Ptolemy Philopater, the son of Euergetes, as far as Gaza.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> Or, come against him, i. e., Ptolemy.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> The campaign was begun in 319 and the decisive battle at Raphia was not fought until 317 B.C. The reference is probably to Antiochus's entering either Gaza or Raphia.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> A general but accurate description of the battle of Raphia. Ptolemy and Antiochus both raised armies of about 70,000 men. Antiochus, however, was defeated with the loss of 15,000 of his troops. He was forced to retire to Antioch, leaving Ptolemy master of Palestine and Coele-Syria. Ptolemy did not follow up his victory, but concluded a weak treaty and returned to his dissolute life.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> I. e., Ptolemy's. The antecedents in <sup>11, 12</sup> are not entirely certain, but in the light of the facts Ptolemy must be the antecedent in <sup>12</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> In 205 B.C. Ptolemy Philopater died, leaving a child of four years to succeed him.

Antiochus joined with Philip, King of Macedon, in an attack upon Egypt.

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>14</sup> The reference is probably to insurrections within Egyptian territory.

<sup>p</sup> 11<sup>14</sup> Apparently a party of Jews who favored Antiochus, who are condemned, however, in the light of the later atrocities perpetrated by Syria.

shall lift themselves up to establish the vision, but they shall be overthrown.
<sup>15</sup>So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mound, and take a well-fortified city; and the forces of the south shall not stand,<sup>q</sup> nor his chosen men, and there shall be no strength to stand. <sup>16</sup>But he who shall come against him, shall do as he wills, and none shall withstand him; and he shall stand in the glorious land,<sup>r</sup> and in his hand shall be destruction.<sup>s</sup> <sup>17</sup>And he shall set his face to come with the strength of his whole kingdom, but he shall make an agreement with him; and he shall perform them;<sup>t</sup> and he shall give him the daughter of women, to ruin it;<sup>u</sup> but it shall not avail nor shall he attain it.
<sup>18</sup>After this he shall turn his face to the coast-lands, and he shall take many; but a consul<sup>v</sup> shall put an end to the insults offered by him; and shall repay his insults sevenfold. <sup>19</sup>Then he shall turn his face toward the fortresses of his own land; but he shall stumble and fall and shall no longer be found.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Then one shall stand up in his place who shall cause an exactor to pass through the glory of the kingdom;<sup>x</sup> but within a few days he shall be broken, but not in anger nor in battle.<sup>y</sup> <sup>21</sup>And in his place there shall stand up a contemptible person<sup>z</sup> upon whom they had not conferred the royal honor; but he shall come unexpectedly, and shall obtain the kingdom by intrigues. <sup>22</sup>And forces<sup>a</sup> shall be utterly<sup>b</sup> overwhelmed before him and shall be broken, and also a prince of the covenant.<sup>c</sup> <sup>23</sup>And after they make a league with him he shall act deceitfully;<sup>d</sup> for he shall rise and become strong, with a small nation. <sup>24</sup>He shall come unperceived, even into the fattest parts of a province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them<sup>e</sup> prey and spoil and riches, and he shall devise plans against the strongholds, even for a time. <sup>25</sup>And he shall arouse his might

Rise
and reign of Anti-ochus Epiphanes

<sup>q</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> Scopas was sent with an Egyptian army to recover Palestine. Antiochus, however, defeated him at Paneion, and the Egyptian general retreated with a large army to Sidon. There he was besieged and captured by Antiochus, who then completed the conquest of Palestine with the exception of Gaza.

<sup>r</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> I. e., Judah. Cf. 8<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> Or, with all of it in his hand, i. e., completing the conquest.

<sup>t</sup> 11<sup>17</sup> So Gk., Theod., Syr., Lat., and Arab. The reference is to Antiochus's plans to conquer all Egypt. This plan was altered, however, and a treaty was made in accord with which Cleopatra, the daughter of Antiochus, was betrothed and later, in 193, married to Ptolemy. The object of Antiochus was to gain the support and ultimately possession of Egypt without incurring the hostility of Rome.

<sup>u</sup> 11<sup>17</sup> I. e., Egypt. Cleopatra bore an excellent reputation and enjoyed a happy life in Egypt, so that the possible rendering, to ruin her, is precluded. The reference is probably to Antiochus's sinister aim in making the alliance.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>18</sup> Following Bevan in reconstructing the Heb., with the aid of a suggestion found in the Gk. Cf. Ps. 79<sup>12</sup>. The consul was Lucius Cornelius Scipio, who in 190 B.C., at the great battle of Magnesia, defeated Antiochus's army of 80,000 men and frustrated the realization of his ambitions in the north and west. Cf. Livy, XXVII, 39-45, 55. Antiochus was also obliged to pay 1,000 talents annually to Rome for nine years.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>19</sup> The collapse of Antiochus's empire was sudden and complete. The king himself was killed while attempting to rob the temple of Bel at Elymais.

<sup>x</sup> 11<sup>20</sup> I. e., Judah. The king is Seleucus Philopator (187-175) and the exactor is Heliodorus, who, according to II Mac. 3, made an unsuccessful attempt to rob the temple at Jerusalem.

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>20</sup> I. e., not by insurrection or by violence.

<sup>z</sup> 11<sup>21</sup> Seleucus was murdered by Heliodorus and his younger brother Antiochus, who assumed the name Epiphanes and improved the opportunity, with the aid of the king of Per-gamum, to secure the Syrian throne.

<sup>a</sup> 11<sup>22</sup> Lit., arms. Probably the failures of Heliodorus and other claimants to the throne.

<sup>b</sup> 11<sup>22</sup> Pointing the Heb. differently from the trad. text.

<sup>c</sup> 11<sup>22</sup> Probably the Jewish high priest Onias III, who was deposed by Antiochus in 175 B.C.

<sup>d</sup> 11<sup>23</sup> All who ally themselves with him shall be deceived.

<sup>e</sup> 11<sup>24</sup> I. e., his followers and the objects of his favor. The reference is to his well-known generosity and to his love of giving prodigal gifts. Cf. Polyb., XXVI, 10<sup>9, 10</sup>, Livy, XLI, 20.

and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south<sup>f</sup> shall make war with an exceedingly great army; but he shall not stand, for they shall devise plans against him. <sup>26</sup>And those who eat his dainties shall ruin him, and his army shall be swept away as a flood,<sup>g</sup> and many shall fall down slain. <sup>27</sup>And as for these kings, their hearts shall be bent on mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table,<sup>h</sup> but it shall not prosper, for yet the end shall be at the time appointed.

<sup>28</sup>Then shall he return to his land with great riches, and his heart shall be against the holy covenant; and he shall do his pleasure,<sup>i</sup> and return to his own land. <sup>29</sup>At the time appointed he shall return, and enter into the south; but it shall not be in the latter time as in the former; <sup>30</sup>for ships of Kittim<sup>j</sup> shall come against him; therefore he shall be cowed, and shall return, and vent his rage on the holy covenant, and shall do his pleasure. And he shall return and fix his attention on those who forsake the holy covenant.<sup>k</sup> <sup>31</sup>And forces sent by him shall prevail, and they shall profane the sanctuary, the fortress, and shall take away the daily offering<sup>l</sup> and set up the appalling abomination.<sup>m</sup> <sup>32</sup>And he shall pervert by specious promises, those who bring guilt upon the covenant;<sup>n</sup> but the people who know their God shall be valiant and do exploits.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>33</sup>And they who are wise among the people shall give understanding to many;<sup>p</sup> yet they shall fall by the sword and by flame, by captivity and by spoil many days. <sup>34</sup>Now when they are falling, they shall be helped with a little help;<sup>q</sup> but many shall join themselves to them with false protestations. <sup>35</sup>And some of those who are wise shall fall, in order to refine them and cleanse them and make them white,<sup>r</sup> until the time of the end, for it is yet for the time appointed.

<sup>36</sup>And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt and magnify himself above every god,<sup>s</sup> and shall speak marvellous things against the God of

His persecutions of the Jews

The resistance of the Jewish patriots

Insane pride and cruelty of Antiochus

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>25</sup> Ptolemy Philopator, who was betrayed through the treachery of his followers, at whose instigation he had made the attempt to reconquer Syria. Cf. Poly., XXVII, 12.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>26</sup> Especially at the disastrous battle of Pelusium.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>27</sup> The reference to the alliance made after the battle between Antiochus and Ptolemy Philometer nominally against the latter's younger brother.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>28</sup> The reference is to his entering and robbing the temple at Jerusalem. Cf. I Mac. 120-24, II Mac. 5<sup>11-21</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>29</sup> Kittim originally designated Cyprus, but in later Jewish writings it described the western sea-coast peoples. Cf. I Mac. 11, 8<sup>5</sup>. C. Popellius Lænas, representing Rome, 168 B.C., peremptorily ordered Antiochus to leave Egypt.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>30</sup> I. e., the Jewish apostates.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>31</sup> Under Apollonius. They came under the guise of peace, but when in possession of the city instituted a systematic and merciless persecution. Cf. I Mac. 1<sup>34</sup>, 36, 37, II Mac. 5<sup>21</sup>.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>31</sup> Or, of desolation. Noeldeke would revise so as to read, Baal of heaven, referring to the Olympian Zeus, to whom the altar was dedicated and of whom a statue was erected near by. Cf. I Mac. 1<sup>1</sup>, II Mac. 6<sup>2</sup>. But cf. Dan. 8<sup>13</sup>, 12<sup>11</sup>, and the note on the former passage.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>32</sup> Cf. I Mac. 2<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>32</sup> Those who choose persecution or martyrdom in preference to apostasy. Cf. I Mac. 1<sup>62</sup>, 6<sup>3</sup>, which describes those who were strong.

<sup>p</sup> 11<sup>33</sup> The stout-hearted patriots who counsel resistance. Not the teachers, as sometimes understood. The wise shall influence many to be true to their religion, even though they shall be the prey of bitter persecution.

<sup>q</sup> 11<sup>34</sup> The Maccabean leaders. Cf. I Mac. 2<sup>2-48</sup>, 3<sup>11</sup>, 12, 23-26. This movement did not seem significant to the author of Daniel because he expected the deliverance to come through immediate divine intervention.

<sup>r</sup> 11<sup>35</sup> The martyrdom of certain of the loyal champions of the law would chasten and purify the nation. Cf. Is. 53.

<sup>s</sup> 11<sup>36</sup> The well-known characteristics of the half-insane Antiochus Epiphanes are here developed at length. Among other things he claimed to be divine and demanded the worship of his subjects.

gods; and he shall prosper until [God's] wrath be exhausted; for that which is decreed shall be done.<sup>t</sup> Neither shall he regard the gods of his fathers; nor the desire of women,<sup>u</sup> nor regard any god, for he shall magnify himself above all.<sup>v</sup> But in his place shall he honor a god of fortresses; and a god<sup>w</sup> whom his fathers knew not shall he honor with gold and silver, with precious stones and costly things.<sup>x</sup> And he shall procure for the strong fortresses the people of a foreign god.<sup>y</sup> Whomsoever he regards with favor he shall raise to great honor, and he shall make them to rule over many, and he shall divide the land for a price.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>40</sup> And at the time of the end the king of the south shall contend with him;<sup>x</sup> and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and he shall overflow them and pass through.<sup>41</sup> He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many thousands shall fall; but these shall be delivered out of his hand: Edom, and Moab, and the remnant<sup>y</sup> of the Ammonites.<sup>42</sup> He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape.<sup>43</sup> And he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libyans and Ethiopians shall follow in his train.<sup>z</sup> <sup>44</sup> But rumors<sup>a</sup> out of the east and north shall trouble him; and he shall go forth with great fury to destroy and to utterly exterminate<sup>b</sup> many.<sup>45</sup> And he shall plant his palace between the Mediterranean<sup>c</sup> and the glorious holy mountain; so he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

12 <sup>1</sup> And at that time Michael shall stand up,<sup>d</sup> the great prince who stands for the children of my people; and there shall be a time of affliction such as there never was since there was a nation,<sup>e</sup> even to that time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one who shall be found written in the book.<sup>f</sup> <sup>2</sup> And many<sup>g</sup> of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.<sup>3</sup> And they who are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they

<sup>t</sup> 11<sup>37</sup> Probably the allusion is to the mourning for Adonis (Thammuz) in which the women took the chief part. Cf. Ezek. 8<sup>14</sup> and note.

<sup>u</sup> 11<sup>38</sup> Probably the Olympian Zeus, to whom Antiochus gave the central place in his pantheon, instead of the gods peculiar to Syria.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>39</sup> I. e., he shall place garrisons of foreigners in the fortresses of Judah. The translation is based on a slight emendation of the Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>39</sup> I. e., he shall confiscate land and sell to the highest bidder.

<sup>x</sup> 11<sup>40</sup> With this introduction begin the predictions regarding the future from the prophet's point of view. The descriptions at once become more general. They describe another victorious invasion of Egypt, by Antiochus's armies. These, the prophet predicts, will pass through Judah and again smite the Jews. Egypt and Ethiopia shall fall before him and he shall come back laden with wealth. The testimony of the early historians presents a very different course of events. Egypt continued under Rome's protection, and Antiochus, overwhelmed with debt, set out on a plundering expedition into the Far East, where he died in the Persian city of Tabre in 164 B.C. The prophet's picture of the future appears to have been suggested by Isaiah's description of Sennacherib's overthrow in Is. 10<sup>28-32</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>41</sup> So Syr. Heb., first, is probably due to a scribal error.

<sup>z</sup> 11<sup>43</sup> Lit., at his steps.

<sup>a</sup> 11<sup>44</sup> Possibly the rumors were to be the result of the uprising of the Jews, as Antiochus's overthrow was expected in Palestine, near Jerusalem, 45.

<sup>b</sup> 11<sup>44</sup> Lit., to place under the ban, or, devote to destruction.

<sup>c</sup> 11<sup>45</sup> Lit., seas.

<sup>d</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> There is a marked poetic parallelism and metre in the first part of the chapter, as in many parts of Daniel, but it is so irregular that it is best printed as prose.

<sup>e</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> Cf. Jer. 30<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> I. e., the book of life. Cf. 7<sup>10</sup>, Ps. 69<sup>28</sup>.

<sup>g</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> I. e., not all but many shall enjoy blessed individual immortality.

His
final end

Ultimate resurrection
of the loyal patriots

who turn many to righteousness<sup>h</sup> as the stars forever and ever. <sup>4</sup>But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, to the time of the end;<sup>i</sup> many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased.<sup>j</sup>

Dura-
tion
of the period
of persecution

<sup>5</sup>Then I, Daniel, looked, and behold, two others were standing, the one on the brink of the river on this side, and the other on the brink of the river on the other side. <sup>6</sup>And one said to the man clothed in linen, who was above the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these marvels? <sup>7</sup>And I heard the man clothed in linen, who was above the waters of the river, and he lifted up his right and his left hand<sup>k</sup> to heaven, and swore by him who liveth forever: It shall be for a time, times, and a half;<sup>l</sup> and when the power of the shatterer<sup>m</sup> of the holy people shall come to an end all these things shall be finished. <sup>8</sup>And I heard but I understood not. Then I said, O my lord, what shall be the end of these things? <sup>9</sup>And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are shut up and sealed until the time of the end. <sup>10</sup>Many shall cleanse themselves, and make themselves white, and be refined,<sup>n</sup> but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand, but they who are wise shall understand. <sup>11</sup>And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the appalling abomination set up shall be twelve hundred and ninety days.<sup>o</sup> <sup>12</sup>Blessed is he who waiteth and cometh to the thousand, three hundred and thirty-five days. <sup>13</sup>But go thou to the end, that thou mayest take thy rest and stand up to receive thy lot at the end of the days.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>3</sup> I. e., the patriotic counsellors and martyrs described in 11<sup>33</sup>, 35. The two classes are evidently identical.

<sup>i</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> The same command as in 8<sup>26</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> The meaning of this famous passage is not certain. The interpretation, diligently explore the book, is open to question, for the Heb. text nowhere else has this meaning. Possibly the second clause should be read, following a suggestion of the Gk., and calamities shall be increased; i. e., a period of disturbance and calamity shall ensue.

<sup>k</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> To make the oath impressive.

<sup>l</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> I. e., three and a half years, as in 7<sup>26</sup>. That period probably began with Apollonius's pollution of the temple and continued to the overthrow of Antiochus, or, if written later than 166, to the dedication of the temple in 165 B.C.

<sup>m</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> So Gk. The shatterer is, of course, Antiochus, as in parallel passages. Cf. 7<sup>25</sup>. The Heb. conveys the same idea, but the construction is unusual, when they have (or, he has) made an end of shattering.

<sup>n</sup> 12<sup>10</sup> I. e., by enduring suffering and persecution. Cf. 11<sup>35</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 12<sup>11</sup> Allowing for an intercalary month, the 1,290 days simply represent the three and one-half years of <sup>7</sup>. The extension of the time from 1,150 days in 8<sup>14</sup> to 1,290 perhaps indicates that the last vision was issued at a later period. Both are apparently based on the interpretation of Jeremiah's seventy years in 9. The 1,335 days has never been satisfactorily explained. If the close of the 1,290 days was intended to mark the death of Antiochus, it is possible that the writer anticipates that at least forty-five days more would pass before the full glories of the messianic era were to be realized. Vs. 13 is the most natural sequel of <sup>10</sup>, and it is perhaps the simplest explanation of the difficulties to regard <sup>11</sup>, <sup>12</sup> as successive glosses added by later scribes, who, in the light of the event, sought to complete the period between the desecration of the temple and its rededication. In this connection it is important to note that the testimony of I and II Mac. differ by a year.

<sup>p</sup> 12<sup>13</sup> The meaning of this vs. is not entirely clear. The end must be the final consummation predicted in this book. The promise is, apparently, that, although Daniel must die, he will, with the wise, rise to participate in the glories of the messianic kingdom.

IV

THE OVERTHROW OF THE HEATHEN AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF JEHOVAH'S KINGDOM

§ 213. The Conquest of Israel's Foes, Zech. 9

Zech. 9 <sup>a</sup>Jehovah<sup>a</sup> is in the land of Hadach,<sup>b</sup>
And Damascus is his resting-place,
For the cities of Aram<sup>c</sup> belong to Jehovah, <sup>2</sup>And also Hamath which borders on it,

The Overthrow of the Heathen and the Establishment of Jehovah's Kingdom.—The position of chaps. 9–14 as the appendix to the post-exilic book of Zechariah suggests that they come from a comparatively late date. Although the literary unity of these chapters has often been questioned, the evidence confirming that unity is exceedingly strong. From beginning to end they are characterized by the same literary style, the same belligerent attitude toward Israel's heathen foes, and the same hopes regarding the future of the race and of the world. Aside from the secondary superscription at the beginning of 12, there are no strong indications of the presence of different authors.

As has already been noted in the General Introd., pp. 36, 37, practically all the evidence points decisively to the Maccabean period as the date when these chapters were written. The foes, for example, in 10, are those of the Judean community in the days of Judas Maccabeus. The Greeks are no longer distant slave-traders, as in the book of Joel, but the chief foes which confront the chosen people. Assyria, as in other late O.T. writings, represents the Syrian kingdom, with its capital at Antioch. In this connection Herodotus's statement concerning Syria, This people whom the Greeks call Syrians, are called Assyrians by the barbarians (VII, 63), is significant. The usage probably rose because the original seat of the Syrian kingdom was in the Tigris-Euphrates valley, which had been the centre of the ancient Assyrian empire. Only later was the capital of the Syrian empire transferred to Antioch. The frequent antithesis in these chapters between Assyria and Egypt indicates that the author had in mind the rival kingdoms of the Ptolemies and the Seleucids. It is also significant that no Israelite kings are mentioned, but the native rulers whom the prophet denounces are clearly the high priests, whose names we know and whose traitorous apostasy precipitated the great crisis of 168–165 B.C. Cf. introductions to different sections. The eschatological hopes are also those of the book of Daniel, transformed through the experiences which came to the Jews as a result of the victories of Judas. Interpreted in the light of their setting, which is probably the year 160 or 159 B.C., these chapters become valuable historical documents, for they reveal the spirit which actuated the pious patriots, the men of action as well as faith, who supported the Maccabean leaders in their long, hard struggle for religious and political freedom. At the same time it must be admitted that in religious and ethical value they are among the least important of all the O.T. prophecies.

§ 213 By some modern scholars the first part of this chapter, 1–10, has been attributed<sup>d</sup> to the beginning of the Gk. period. It is difficult, however, to see how the comparatively peaceful conquest of Palestine by Alexander should have given rise to the hopes here expressed. As a matter of fact, the Jews do not have seemed to have been greatly affected by their change of masters in 332 B.C. Also the victories of Alexander gave no promise that an exactor should never again pass through their midst. It is significant that the Heb. word for exactor in <sup>e</sup> is the peculiar expression used in Dan. 10 to describe exactors and persecutors sent out by Antiochus Epiphanes. Certainly the king promised in <sup>f</sup> was not Alexander. On the other hand, nothing is said of his Davidic origin. Rather the portrait is suggested by the peasant leaders, like Judas

<sup>a</sup> Zech. 9<sup>1</sup> In the traditional Heb. text this new division of the book of Zechariah bears the superscription, the burden of the Lord Jehovah upon Hadach and the land of Damascus, but this leaves the remainder of the vs. without an antecedent. The personal pronoun, his, in the following phrase, his resting-place, suggests that in the original text Jehovah was the subject of the first sentence. The original superscription probably read simply, a burden, but a later scribe, not understanding it, added the word, of, thereby producing the resulting confusion. Eliminating this unnecessary word, the text reads as above.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> Hadach, the Hatarika of the Assyrian inscriptions, was the leading state in Northern Syria during the earlier part of the eighth century B.C., as is shown by the recently discovered Aramaic inscriptions, which come from one of its leading kings, Zakar by name. Its territory lay north of the Lebanon and was always closely associated with Hamath, which in ancient times had marked the northern bounds of David's kingdom.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>1</sup> Emending the Heb. text, which reads, to Jehovah is the eye of man, a reading which is entirely inconsistent with the context. The Heb. also adds, and all the tribes of Israel, but this is clearly a scribal gloss, for the fem. pronominal suffix in the first line of <sup>2</sup> indicates that its original antecedent was the name of some country, like Aram, in the neighborhood of Hamath.

Jehovah to enter into possession of the northern lands

Tyre and Sidon, for they are very wise.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>3</sup>And Tyre built for herself a fortress,

And heaped up silver as dust,

And gold like the dirt of the streets.

<sup>4</sup>Behold the Lord shall dispossess her,

And cast down her rampart into the sea,

And she shall be consumed in fire.

To
overthrow
the Philis-
tines

<sup>5</sup>Ashkelon shall see and hear,

And Gaza writhe in anguish,

Ekron, also for her hope shall be put to shame,

And the king shall perish from Gaza,

And Ashkelon shall remain uninhabited.

<sup>6</sup>A mixed race<sup>e</sup> shall dwell in Ashdod,

And I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.

<sup>7</sup>I will take their blood from their mouth.<sup>f</sup>

And their abominations from between their teeth;

They also shall be a remnant for our God,

And like a clang<sup>g</sup> in Judah,

And Ekron shall be as the Jebusites.

To guard
his people
from exact-
ors

<sup>8</sup>But I will encamp as a guard<sup>h</sup> about my house,

So that none shall pass through or return,

And no exactor shall pass through them again;

For now do I regard with mine eyes.

Their
kingly
deliverer to come
and set up in Palestine a worldwide kingdom

<sup>9</sup>Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion!

Shout aloud, O daughter of Jerusalem!

Behold thy king will come to thee;

and his brothers, who made small pretensions but achieved great results. The word translated, humble, is also the word constantly used in Psalms and contemporary literature to describe the party of the pious. The word also means, afflicted, for genuine piety, in these troublesome times, meant certain persecution and usually poverty. It is also to be noted that while this promised king is to bring ultimate peace to his people and to all mankind, that peace is to be won by the sword, and the description of his rule is modelled after that of David's empire. Cf., for further discussion, Introd., pp. 36, 37. The promises which are expressed in the remainder of this chapter are, from beginning to end, an echo of the martial spirit and the courageous exploits which characterized in a unique way the early days of the Maccabean struggle. Vss. 13-17 may be taken as a description of certain great battles of that age, when Judas, with a handful of followers, went out and defeated, in the strength of Jehovah, the large, trained armies of Antiochus. They introduce a new note in post-exile prophecy and reveal that blending of faith and courage and energy and action which made the untrained peasants of Judah an almost invincible fighting force. In the light of this setting the promises of the opening vss. must have seemed very near realization. In fact, the campaigns of Judas, especially into the lands lying along the Mediterranean, had already prepared the way for the hoped-for consummation.

While by most interpreters this chapter is divided into two or three distinct sections, interpreted in the light of this historic setting, its unity is clear.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>2</sup> So Gk. The Heb. has a sing. rather than a pl. verb.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> The reference is probably to the mixed race which was to take possession of the city after it fell a victim to Jehovah's just wrath. For the peculiar term, cf. Dt. 23<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> I.e., will cleanse them from the ceremonial defilement which came from eating unclean food or meat from which the blood had not been properly removed. Cf. I Sam. 14<sup>32, 33</sup>; Ezek. 33<sup>5</sup>. This cleansing was to be a preliminary to admitting them within the circle of Jehovah's people.

<sup>d</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context demands.

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>8</sup> Correcting an error of one letter, which has crept into the Heb. text.

Vindicated and victorious is he,
Humble,<sup>i</sup> and riding upon an ass.
Upon the foal of an ass.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup>He shall cut off<sup>k</sup> chariots from Ephraim,
And horses from Jerusalem;
The battle-bow shall also be cut off,
And he shall speak peace to the nations;
His rule shall be from sea to sea,<sup>l</sup>
From the river<sup>m</sup> to the ends of the earth.

<sup>11</sup>And thou,<sup>n</sup> too—because of thy blood covenant,
I have set free thy prisoners from the pit.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>12</sup>To thee, O Zion shall the prisoners of hope return;<sup>p</sup>
Also this day he declares,<sup>q</sup> Double will I restore to thee.

Exiles
to return in large numbers

<sup>13</sup>For I have bent Judah to me,
As a bow which I have filled with Ephraim;<sup>r</sup>
I will urge thy sons<sup>s</sup> against the sons of Greece,<sup>t</sup>
And I will make thee like the sword of a hero.

<sup>14</sup>Then<sup>u</sup> Jehovah shall be seen above them,
And his shaft shall go forth like lightning;
Jehovah shall blow a blast upon a trumpet,
And travel on the whirlwinds of the south.<sup>v</sup>

Jehovah to use his people
as instru-ments
for the
overthrow
of their
foes

<sup>15</sup>Jehovah of hosts shall defend them;
And they shall devour<sup>w</sup> and tread down the slingstones,
They shall drink their blood<sup>x</sup> like wine,
They shall be filled with it like the crevices<sup>y</sup> of an altar.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>9</sup> Or, pious. The distinctive designation of the faithful but sorely afflicted party, which resisted the demands of Antiochus, and finally in Judas found a leader who led them to victory.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>9</sup> Lit., she-ass.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> So Gk. and the parallel in the succeeding line. Heb., I will cut off.

<sup>l</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> I. e., from the Mediterranean to the Dead Sea.

<sup>m</sup> 9<sup>10</sup> Probably from the River of Egypt on the southwestern border of Palestine. Possibly it may be the Euphrates.

<sup>n</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> Zion is evidently here addressed and promised that her exiled sons shall be restored.

<sup>o</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> The Heb. adds, with no water in it.

<sup>p</sup> 9<sup>12</sup> Probably the original should read, to thee, O Zion, shall return, for the fem. pro-nominal suffix at the end of the word calls for some such antecedent. Heb., Return to the stronghold. The prisoners of hope are those who still entertain hopes of restoration.

<sup>q</sup> 9<sup>12</sup> The text here is extremely doubtful and the Gk. differs widely, but offers no valid solution of the difficulty. Possibly the entire line is simply a marginal gloss.

<sup>r</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> Ephraim would seem to be here a technical designation of the distant exiles who returned. The deliverance of Jehovah's persecuted people is to come, not through a miracle, but through their own warlike activity, acting as Jehovah's agents.

<sup>s</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> The text adds, O Zion. This was probably added by a scribe to make the meaning clear.

<sup>t</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., against thy sons, O Javan, but the metre of the vs. strongly supports the Gk. reading.

<sup>u</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> Heb. adds, Lord, but the order is awkward and this word destroys the metrical symmetry of the line.

<sup>v</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> The figure is taken from Is. 21.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> The Gk. suggests the variant reading, prevail, or, overcome them, and this reading may be original. The meaning of the rest of the line is obscure. Possibly the original read, the sons of Greece, instead of, slingstones, which would refer to the Syrian foes, as in <sup>13</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> Following the superior reading of certain Gk. MSS.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>15</sup> Lit., corners. I. e., the places where the blood of the sacrifices ran down. The Heb. adds, as a sacrificial bowl, but this is probably a scribal addition introduced as a synonym of the peculiar phrase which follows.

<sup>16</sup> And Jehovah their God<sup>z</sup> shall give them victory in that day.
 Like sheep he shall feed them<sup>a</sup> in his land.
<sup>17</sup> Yea, how good<sup>b</sup> and how beautiful shall it be!
 Corn shall make the young men flourish, and new wine the maidens!

§ 214. Victory and Restoration for Jehovah's Betrayed but Loyal People, Zech. 10

Zech. 10 <sup>1</sup>Ask from Jehovah rain,<sup>c</sup>
 From Jehovah who formeth the lightnings,
 And the winter rain he giveth to them,
 For every one herbage in the field.
<sup>2</sup>But the teraphim speak vanity,
 And the diviners<sup>d</sup> see lies,
 And idle dreams they relate,
 In vain they offer comfort;
 Therefore the people wander<sup>e</sup> like sheep,
 They suffer because there is no shepherd.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>3</sup>My wrath is hot against the shepherds,
 And upon the he-goats<sup>g</sup> will I bring punishment;
 For Jehovah will visit his flock,<sup>h</sup>
 And make them his splendid war-steeds.

<sup>4</sup>From him come the cornerstone and the stay,<sup>i</sup>
 From him the battle-bow,

Jehovah to rescue
his people
from their false leaders

He it is who strengthens ruler
and warrior

* 9<sup>16</sup> It is possible, on metrical grounds, that either, their God, or, in that day, is secondary.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>16</sup> The text of the rest of this vs. is evidently corrupt and is unintelligible. The words may be literally translated, like a flock of sheep his people, for stones of a diadem, shimmering over his land. A restored Heb. text has been used above.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>17</sup> Slightly revising the Heb. to conform to the demands of the context. Possibly the original of this line simply read, corn and new wine shall flourish.

§ 214 This chapter, like the preceding, is filled with the echoes of war and battles. In imagination the prophet sees the coming downfall of the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria. Like the Maccabean leaders themselves, he was inspired by the memory of Jehovah's great deliverances of his people in the past. Like Judas Maccabeus (cf. I Mac. 4<sup>5, 9</sup>), he refers to Jehovah delivering his people from Pharaoh at the crossing of the Red Sea, and declares that the same God is able again to interpose in behalf of those who trust him<sup>10</sup>. The victories already attained lead him to believe that the scattered exiles of the race will speedily be restored—a consummation for which Judas and his brothers earnestly hoped and worked, and which was realized in large measure in the east Jordan and Galilean conquests of Judas and the benign policy of Simon. Cf. I Mac. 14<sup>7</sup>. Again in<sup>11</sup> we have a portrait drawn from one of the great Maccabean victories. One of the chief aims of the chapter, however, is suggested in the opening vss. It was to make clear to the apostates, as well as to the faithful, the folly and uselessness of putting their trust in heathen institutions instead of in Jehovah, who rules alike over nature and the affairs of men. These opening vss., therefore, are not distinct, as usually interpreted, but closely connected in thought with those which follow. In the latter part of<sup>2</sup> and the first part of<sup>3</sup> the prophet introduces that note of denunciation of the shepherds of the people, their hereditary high-priestly rulers, which is developed at length in the next section.

<sup>c</sup> 10<sup>1</sup> The Heb. adds the prosaic gloss, at the time of the latter rain. It destroys the poetic structure of the vs. and is probably secondary.

<sup>d</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> For a contemporary reference to a survival of the ancient popular heathenism, cf. Mac. 12<sup>40-45</sup>. The aim of the passage is evidently to warn the common people against the seductions of these ancient heathen cults.

<sup>e</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> Or, Gk., flee about.

<sup>f</sup> 10<sup>2</sup> These last two lines are by many regarded as secondary. They may be intended, however, to express the idea that the shepherds, who rule over them, are worse than none at all.

<sup>g</sup> 10<sup>3</sup> I. e., the leaders of the nation. The same phrase is used in Is. 14<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>3</sup> Heb. adds, of Jehovah, and after, his flock, the explanatory gloss, house of Judah. Possibly the word, war, lit., in war, at the end of the line is also secondary.

<sup>i</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> Lit., peg, or, tent-pin, that upon which the stability of the text depended.

From him goeth forth every ruler.

<sup>5</sup>Together<sup>j</sup> they shall trample on warriors,<sup>k</sup>

As on the dirt of the streets in battle,

And fight, for Jehovah is with them,

So that the riders on horses shall be put to shame.

<sup>6</sup>I will make strong the house of Judah,

And I will bring deliverance to the house of Joseph,

Yea, I will bring them back, for I have compassion upon them,

And they shall be as if I had not driven them away;

For I am Jehovah their God and will answer them.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The Ephraimites shall be like warriors,

And their hearts shall rejoice as with wine,

Yea, they shall see their children and rejoice,

Their hearts shall exult in Jehovah.

He will restore
his scattered
people

<sup>8</sup>I will whistle<sup>m</sup> for them, and gather them,

And they shall be as many as they once were,

<sup>9</sup>And I will sow them among the peoples,

But in distant lands they shall remember me,

And they will bring up their children and come back.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>10</sup>I will bring them home from the land of Egypt,

And from Assyria will I gather them;

Into the land of Gilead and Lebanon<sup>o</sup> will I bring them,

Though these will not be found sufficient for them.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>11</sup>And when they pass through<sup>q</sup> the sea of distress,<sup>r</sup>

He will smite the sea of breakers,

And all the deeps of the Nile shall be dried up;

The pride of Assyria<sup>s</sup> also shall be brought low,

And the sceptre of Egypt turned aside.<sup>t</sup>

From distant lands will he gather
them

<sup>j</sup> 10<sup>4</sup> Joining the last word of this vs. to the beginning of the next.

<sup>k</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> Through a scribal error the initial letters of this word and the Heb. word translated, in the dirt, have been interchanged.

<sup>l</sup> 10<sup>6</sup> Vs. <sup>7</sup> is the logical sequel of <sup>6d</sup>, and this line may be the addition of a later editor.

<sup>m</sup> 10<sup>8</sup> I. e., clearly summon. The same phrase is used in Is. 5<sup>26</sup>, 7<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> 10<sup>9</sup> By some this line is regarded as secondary.

<sup>o</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> I. e., they shall be settled in the outlying districts of Palestine. Possibly Lebanon is secondary, since it is not supported by the metre. Gilead is part of the territory conquered by Judas Maccabeus.

<sup>p</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> Lit., there shall not be found for them.

<sup>q</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> Reading the verb as a pl. in accordance with the Gk. and the requirements of the context.

<sup>r</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> Many scholars reconstruct so as to read, through the sea of Egypt. In any case the figure is drawn from the tradition of the deliverance of the Hebrews at the Red Sea.

<sup>s</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> Assyria evidently here represents Syria, as frequently in the later O.T. writings.

<sup>t</sup> 10<sup>11</sup> The chapter concludes with a vs. the awkwardness of which reveals its secondary character, and I will strengthen them in Jehovah, and in his name shall they walk, is the oracle of Jehovah.

§ 215. Fate of Judah's Traitorous Rulers and the Ultimate Deliverance, Zech. 11, 13<sup>7-9</sup>

Doom
Song
over Israel's false
leaders

Zech. 11 <sup>1</sup>Open thy doors, O Lebanon,
That the fire may devour thy cedars.
<sup>2</sup>Wail, O pine-tree, for the cedar is fallen;<sup>u</sup>
Wail, O oaks of Bashan,
For the inaccessible<sup>v</sup> forest has fallen.
<sup>3</sup>Hark, the wailing of the shepherds!
For their glory is destroyed;
Hark, the roaring of young lions!
For blasted is the jungle of the Jordan.<sup>w</sup>

Jeho-
vah's symbolic
condemna-
tion
of the greedy
rulers

<sup>4</sup>Thus Jehovah said to me,<sup>x</sup> shepherd the flock of slaughter,<sup>y</sup> <sup>5</sup>whose possessors<sup>z</sup> slaughter them, and hold themselves not guilty! and they who sell

§ 215 It is evident that the shepherds referred to in the opening vss. of this section are the same hereditary high-priestly rulers denounced in <sup>2, 3</sup> of the preceding section. It is the term used in a similar connection, Jer. 23, and was probably suggested by the earlier prophecy. They are the young lions who prey upon the people. The section opens, therefore, appropriately with an ironical lamentation suggestive of their coming downfall. In the prose passage which follows, the prophet, by the use of peculiar symbolism, recalls the crimes of the apostate high priests and pronounces upon them the divine judgments which their crimes deserve. The method is, in many ways, akin to that used in Dan., and especially in 11. The flock of slaughter is clearly the Judean community, which was the victim of the greed and treachery of such high-priestly rulers as the Tobiadae. In view of their mercenary relations to the Syrian court, these high priests, who had purchased their office by money later extorted from the people, are ironically addressed as possessors of the flock and as sheep-merchants.

One month evidently stands for a short duration of time. The three shepherds set aside in one month are, without much doubt, Lysimachus, Jason, and Menelaus, who were each in turn deposed within a period of three or four years. Cf. II Mac. 4<sup>12</sup>, 5<sup>10</sup>, 13<sup>2-5</sup>. The high priest alluded to in <sup>12, 13</sup> was possibly Onias III, but more probably Onias IV, who finally in disgust left Judah and spent the remainder of his life in Egypt. The description in <sup>15-17</sup> might apply to Menelaus, but it fits the character of Alcimus much more perfectly. He it was who shamelessly preyed upon the people and persecuted the faithful Jews and proved himself simply a tool of the Syrian rulers. He incurred the especial hostility of the Jews by tearing down in the year 160 the wall in the inner court of the sanctuary, thereby throwing the court open to Gentiles as well as Jews. According to I Mac. 9<sup>55</sup>, the curse in <sup>17</sup> was realized, for it states that, just as they were beginning to pull down the wall of the inner court, Alcimus was stricken, and his works were hindered, and his mouth was stopped, and he was seized with a palsy, so that he could no more speak anything or give orders concerning his house.

It has long been recognized by interpreters of this book that the brief section, 13<sup>7-9</sup>, has no connection with its immediate context, but is closely connected in theme and style with 11. Apparently it continues the divine judgment upon the wicked high priest of 11<sup>15-17</sup>. He is to be punished because of his faithlessness as a shepherd and his flock is to be scattered. A faithful remnant, however, which survives, will ultimately be blessed by Jehovah's favor. By some this reference is associated with the death of Judas and the disastrous period which immediately followed. The peculiar Heb. idiom, however, interpreted, the man who stands near to me, lit., companion, or, associate, is used only in the O.T. of priests, e. g., Zech. 3<sup>8</sup>. The section, as a whole, is a protest against the crimes of the civil and religious leaders of the community, whose selfish disregard of their responsibility was one of the causes of the series of calamities which overtook the Judean community.

<sup>u</sup> 11<sup>2</sup> Through a scribal error there has been added in the Heb. from <sup>3b</sup>, because their glorious ones are despoiled.

<sup>v</sup> 11<sup>2</sup> Lit., fortified.

<sup>w</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> Lit., the pride of the Jordan. It was the dense tropical thicket which bordered the lower banks of the river, and in ancient times was undoubtedly the home of the lions. Today it remains practically uninhabited, except by wild animals. Cf. Jer. 12<sup>9</sup>, 49<sup>19</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> So a slightly reconstructed text supported by the parallels in <sup>13, 15</sup>. Heb., my God.

<sup>y</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> I. e., the nation. The figure is taken from Jer. 12<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>z</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> This passage explains the preceding term. The possessors were the tyrants, like Antiochus and their abettors, high priests like Jason and Menelaus, who shamelessly persecuted the helpless people. The prophet, with his keen irony, justly describes the greed of these false shepherds, who hesitated at no sacrifice. The vs. which follows interrupts the sequence of thought and is generally recognized as secondary. It reads, for I will not spare any longer the inhabitants of the land, is Jehovah's oracle, but lo, I am about to give mankind over, each into the hand of his shepherd, and into the hand of his king, and they shall destroy the land, and I will not deliver it from their hand.

them say, Blessed be Jehovah, for I am rich! and their shepherds have no compassion upon them. <sup>7</sup>So I shepherded the flock of slaughter for the sheep-merchants.<sup>a</sup> And I took to me two staves; one I called Grace, and the other I called Union.<sup>b</sup> So I shepherded the sheep. <sup>8</sup>And I set aside<sup>c</sup> three of the shepherds in one month; for I was indignant against them, and they also were displeased at me. <sup>9</sup>And I said, I will not shepherd you; what is dead, let it die; what is set aside, let it be set aside; and let those who are left devour one another's flesh. <sup>10</sup>And I took my staff, Grace, and broke it,<sup>d</sup> so as to break my covenant which I had made with all the peoples.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>In that day it was broken, and the sheep-merchants<sup>f</sup> who watched me knew that it was Jehovah's word. <sup>12</sup>And I said to them, If it is good in your sight, give me my wage; and if not, do not do so. So they weighed out my wage, thirty pieces of silver.<sup>g</sup> <sup>13</sup>And Jehovah said to me, Cast it into the treasury<sup>h</sup>—the precious wage that at which I was valued<sup>i</sup> by them! So I took the thirty pieces of silver and cast them into the house of Jehovah, into the treasury.

<sup>14</sup>Then I broke my second staff so as to dissolve the brotherhood between Judah and Jerusalem.<sup>j</sup> <sup>15</sup>And Jehovah said to me, Take again the implements of a worthless shepherd. <sup>16</sup>For behold, I am about to appoint a shepherd over the land; those who are thrust down he will not visit; those who are scattered<sup>k</sup> he will not seek out, the wounded he will not heal, the sick he will not make whole;<sup>l</sup> but the flesh of the fat he will devour and even their hoofs he will tear.

<sup>17</sup>Woe to my worthless shepherd, who deserts the flock!
The sword be upon his arm and his right eye;
May his arm completely wither,
And his right eye be blinded.<sup>m</sup>

13 <sup>7</sup>Awake, O sword against my shepherd,
And against the man who stands near to me;<sup>n</sup>

Their
contempt for Je-
hovah's
represen-tative

Appoint-
ment
of a still more insatiate ruler

The curse
upon
him

<sup>a</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Following the Gk. in reconstructing the corrupt Heb.

<sup>b</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Lit., bands. Grace evidently symbolized Jehovah's favor to his people, and Union the bond binding together to the different classes in the community. Grace and union were, therefore, the two essentials for the welfare of the community.

<sup>c</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> The fundamental meaning of the verb is, to hide, to conceal, to disown, and hence, in its present context, depose. As has already been noted in the introductory note, the reference is to the deposition of three different high-priestly rulers, whose infamous character has already been described in the preceding VSS.

<sup>d</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> The breaking of the staves symbolized the removal of Jehovah's favor and the destruction of the harmonious relations between classes, because of the guilt of the rulers.

<sup>e</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> Possibly the foreign nations are introduced because of the alliances made by the high priests Jason and Menelaus with the neighboring Idumeans, Ammonites, and Philistines. Cf. II Mac. 5<sup>1-11</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> Again correcting the corrupt Heb., as in 7, by the aid of the Gk.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>12</sup> The price of a slave. Cf. Ex. 21<sup>32</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> So Gk., Heb., potter. Cf. Matt. 27<sup>3-10</sup>, where the variant readings seem to have been known to the author of the Gospel.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> Or, thou art valued.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>14</sup> So certain Gk. MSS. and Lue. Heb., Israel. The Heb. reading is awkward and was probably introduced through the mistake of a scribe, who had in mind the phrase so common in the earlier writings.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. with the aid of the context and the analogy of Ezek. 34<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> Conjecturally restoring the context.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>17</sup> As has been noted above, this vs. probably contains a description of the fate of the wicked high priest Alcimus.

<sup>n</sup> 13<sup>7</sup> An editor has introduced the phrase, the oracle of Jehovah of hosts, at this point, to indicate that here a new section begins.

Testing
the people
in the furnace
of affliction

I will smite<sup>o</sup> the shepherd, that the sheep may be scattered,
And I will turn my hand against the little ones.
<sup>8</sup> And it shall come to pass in all the land, is Jehovah's oracle,
That two-thirds in it shall be cut off;<sup>p</sup>
But a third shall be left in it.
<sup>9</sup> And I will bring the third into the fire,
And melt it as one melts silver,
And test it as one tests gold.
Then he shall call upon my name,
And I myself will answer him;
And I shall say, He is my people,
And he shall say, Jehovah my God,<sup>q</sup>

§ 216. Jerusalem's Deliverance from Heathen Attack, Zech. 12<sup>1</sup>-13<sup>6</sup>

Jerusalem a cause of disaster to all its foes

Zech. 12 <sup>2</sup>Behold, <sup>r</sup> I am about to make Jerusalem
A bowl of reeling for all the surrounding peoples,
And there shall be a siege of Jerusalem.<sup>s</sup>
<sup>3</sup> And it shall come to pass in that day that I will make Jerusalem
A stone to be lifted up<sup>t</sup> by all the peoples—
All who lift it up shall surely wound themselves!
And all the nations of the earth shall be gathered together against it.

Strong in Jehovah's strength

<sup>4</sup>In that day, is Jehovah's oracle,<sup>u</sup> I will smite
Every horse with panic, and his rider with madness;

<sup>o</sup> 13<sup>7</sup> So certain Gk. MSS. and the parallel in Matt. 26<sup>11</sup>. The Heb. imperative, smile, is probably due to the attraction of the imperative in the first line.

<sup>p</sup> 13<sup>8</sup> This figure is drawn from Is. 6<sup>13</sup>, Ezek. 5<sup>13</sup>. The Heb. adds, and they shall perish, but it appears, for poetical reasons, that this is simply a scribal duplicate.

<sup>q</sup> 13<sup>9</sup> For the original, cf. Hos. 2<sup>23</sup>.

§ 216 This section has many peculiarities which can be explained only by the events of the Maccabean period. The distinction between Judah and Jerusalem is new in post-exilic literature. It is the chieftains of Judah, not of Jerusalem, who are represented as securing victory after victory, while the hereditary leaders of the state are inactive. This portrait fits exactly the period when Jerusalem was in the control of the Syrians, and Judas, the peasant leader, was winning the series of victories which brought, not only deliverance to Jerusalem, but also religious and, in the end, political freedom for his people. The only satisfactory explanation of the deep repentance and the bitter lamentation of the different classes in Jerusalem over the one whom they have pierced is that it was because of the murder of the high priest Onias III. Cf. Mac. 4<sup>24</sup>, 5<sup>5</sup>. The latter vs. voices the deep indignation and displeasure which not only the Jews but other nations felt because of this unjust murder. As has already been noted, it was regarded by the author of Dan. 9<sup>6</sup>, 11<sup>22</sup> as one of the most significant events of the age. The denunciation of the frenzied false prophets which still survive is also a characteristic of this later age, when the written law was beginning to take the place of the spoken word. It is also in keeping with the aim of the author in this section, which clearly is to close the breach between Judah and Jerusalem and to arouse popular devotion to Jehovah and the temple service.

<sup>r</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> This chapter begins with a new superscription, oracle of the word of Jehovah concerning Israel. To this a still later editor has added another longer superscription based on Amos 4<sup>13</sup>, 5<sup>8</sup>, 9, 9<sup>5</sup>, 6. It reads, Oracle of Jehovah who stretcheth forth the heavens and foundeth the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him.

<sup>s</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> This vs. is evidently corrupt and its reconstruction presents many difficulties. The above reading follows Gk. A. Heb. adds, and also upon Judah, but this is probably from the hand of a scribe who was familiar with the antithesis between Judah and Jerusalem which runs through the rest of the chapter.

<sup>t</sup> 12<sup>3</sup> I. e., a heavy stone, such as was used in the Gk. gymnasia. It was apparently a stone which was lifted up as a test of strength. The idea evidently is that Jerusalem shall prove so firmly established that all the nations who seek to capture her shall be severely strained in the attempt.

<sup>u</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> Possibly the phrase, is Jehovah's oracle, is secondary.

DELIVERANCE FROM HEATHEN ATTACK [ZECH. 12<sup>4</sup>]

But over the house of Judah I will open my eyes,<sup>v</sup>
 Though I smite every horse belonging to the peoples with blindness.
<sup>5</sup> And the chieftains<sup>w</sup> of Judah shall say in their heart,
 The strength of<sup>x</sup> the inhabitants is in the Jehovah of hosts their God.

<sup>6</sup> In that day I will make the chieftains of Judah
 Like a pan of fire in the woods, and like a torch among sheaves,
 So that thy people shall devour right and left all the surrounding peoples,<sup>y</sup>
 But Jerusalem shall abide on its own site.<sup>z</sup>
<sup>7</sup> And Jehovah will first give victory to the tents of Judah,<sup>a</sup>
 So that the glory of the house of David,<sup>b</sup> and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem be not exalted above Judah.

Glorious victories of Judah's chieftains

<sup>8</sup> In that day Jehovah shall protect the inhabitants<sup>c</sup> of Jerusalem,
 And he that is feeble among them shall in that day be like David,<sup>d</sup>
 And the house of David like God,<sup>e</sup> like the angel of Jehovah before them.
<sup>9</sup> And in that day I shall seek to destroy all the nations who have come up against Jerusalem.

Revival of the Jerusalemites

<sup>10</sup> And I will pour out upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem
 The spirit of petition<sup>f</sup> and supplication, and they will look upon him<sup>g</sup> whom they have pierced;
 And they will lament for him as one laments for an only son,
 They will bitterly grieve for him as one grieves for the first-born.
<sup>11</sup> In that day lamentation shall be as great in Jerusalem,
 As the lamentation for Hadadrimmon<sup>h</sup> in the Valley of Megiddo.

Universal lamentation over the murdered leader

<sup>v</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> I. e., Jehovah will watch over the house of Judah and give them victory as they go out to battle.

<sup>w</sup> 12<sup>5</sup> The text of this vs. is very doubtful. Possibly the word, translated, chieftain, with a different vowel punctuation, should be read, tribes. So also in <sup>6</sup>.

<sup>x</sup> 12<sup>6</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. text.

<sup>y</sup> 12<sup>6</sup> The most satisfactory explanation of this vs. is that it is a reference to the marvellous victories of Judas and his followers, who were enlisted for the most part from the country districts of Judah and who at last succeeded in recovering Jerusalem and in restoring its temple service.

<sup>z</sup> 12<sup>6</sup> A scribe has added, in the Heb., in Jerusalem. It is not found in many Gk. MSS.

<sup>a</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> By some scholars <sup>7, 8</sup> are regarded as secondary, for the third person is here introduced instead of the first, as in the preceding and following vss. Whether they are from the original author or from a later editor, they evidently refer to the victories which were won, not by the hereditary heads of the Judean community, but by the peasants who rallied about Judas and to the fact that these great victories were won while the city of Jerusalem was still in the hands of the Syrians.

<sup>b</sup> 12<sup>7</sup> This phrase, here, as in <sup>12</sup>, is evidently a conventional designation of the ruling class in the Judean community and does not necessarily mean Davidic descent. Cf. Ps. 122<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and the demands of the context.

<sup>d</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> I. e., in that day he who has fallen shall accomplish as great deeds as David, the warrior king.

<sup>e</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> I. e., the ruling class shall rise to its high responsibility and its record shall be very different from that found in the preceding section.

<sup>f</sup> 12<sup>10</sup> Lit., favor. I. e., a strong petition for divine favor.

<sup>g</sup> 12<sup>10</sup> Revising the corrupt Heb. in accordance with the reading of certain Gk. MSS. and the quotation in John 19<sup>37</sup>. As has been already noted in the introduction, the martyr, in the mind of the prophet, was probably the murdered high priest Onias III.

<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>11</sup> The allusion is clearly not to the lamentations over the death of Josiah, for these were held in Jerusalem, but to certain well-known religious rites celebrated at this time on the plain of Megiddo. Hadadrimmon contains the name of the Syrian god Rimmon, and its equivalent Hadad, which appears in the Assyrian inscriptions as Adad. Possibly the heathen rite was akin to the mourning for Thammuz mentioned by Ezek. 8<sup>4</sup> and again in Dan. 11<sup>37</sup>.

<sup>12</sup>And the land shall mourn, each family by itself:
 The family of the house of David by itself, and their wives by themselves,
 And the family of the house of Nathan<sup>i</sup> by itself, and their wives by themselves, <sup>13</sup>And the family of the house of Eli by itself, and their wives by themselves,
 The family of the Shimeites<sup>j</sup> by itself, and their wives by themselves, <sup>14</sup>And all the families who are left, each by itself, and their wives by themselves.

Moral cleansing for
the
nation

<sup>13</sup> <sup>1</sup>In that day a fountain<sup>k</sup> shall be opened for the house of David,
 And for the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness.
<sup>2</sup>And it shall be in that day, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts,
 I will cut off the names of the idols<sup>l</sup> from the land and they shall be remembered no more.
 Also the prophets and the unclean spirit<sup>m</sup> will I banish from the land.

Decline
and disappearance
of the prophet

<sup>3</sup>And it shall come to pass, if any man prophesy any more,
 His father and his mother who begat him, shall say to him,
 Thou shalt not live, for thou speakest falsehood in the name of Jehovah;
 And his father and his mother who begat him shall thrust him through when he is seized by the prophetic frenzy.
<sup>4</sup>And it shall be in that day that the prophets shall be ashamed, each of his vision,<sup>n</sup>
 And shall not wear the hairy mantle<sup>o</sup> in order to deceive;
<sup>5</sup>And he shall say, I am not a prophet,<sup>p</sup>
 A tiller of the ground am I, for the ground is my possession<sup>q</sup> from my youth.
<sup>6</sup>And they shall say to him, What are these scars<sup>r</sup> on thy hands?
 And he shall say, The scars which I received in the house of my lovers.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>i</sup> 12<sup>12</sup> The reference in this and the following vs. is to the different classes in the Judean community. Since Nathan, in II Sam. 5<sup>14</sup>, I Chr. 3<sup>5</sup>, 14<sup>4</sup>, is the name of the son of David, these possibly represented a second ruling class in Judah, but inferior to those designated by the title, house of David.

<sup>j</sup> 12<sup>13</sup> In Num. 3<sup>18</sup> Shimei is mentioned as one of the grandsons of Levi. It is probable, therefore, that this title designated an inferior class of temple servants.

<sup>k</sup> 13<sup>1</sup> This figure of a fountain, open for cleansing, is again introduced in 14<sup>8</sup>, and was probably drawn from Ezek. 47<sup>1-12</sup>.

<sup>l</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> The references in the books of I and II Mac. and Is. 27<sup>9</sup> and Ps. 16 indicate that idolatry continued to be an ever-present temptation to the Jews even to the close of O.T. history.

<sup>m</sup> 13<sup>2</sup> This statement in the mouth of a prophet is astonishing, but the context indicates that the author had in mind the degenerate types of prophesying under the influence of ecstasy and the mercenary ends which had been the bane of true prophecy throughout all its history. Nehemiah found this corrupt type in the Judean community at the beginning of the Persian period, Neh. 6<sup>7-14</sup>. From I Mac. 4<sup>46</sup>, 9<sup>27</sup> it appears that the belief was widely held that the day of prophecy was not past, but that no great prophets were then living who could speak with authority. It is probably because of this popular belief that the author of the visions in the latter part of the book of Daniel issued them in the name of the prophet famous in earlier history. It also suggests that the prophecies of II Zechariah, evidently published anonymously and perhaps by the author himself, were attached to the first Zechariah in order to secure for them popular acceptance.

<sup>n</sup> 13<sup>4</sup> A scribe has apparently added, from the end of the preceding vs., the clause, when he prophesies.

<sup>o</sup> 13<sup>4</sup> I. e., the characteristic garb of a prophet. Cf. I Kgs. 18<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>p</sup> 13<sup>5</sup> These are the words used by Amos in his reply to Amaziah, in Am. 7<sup>14</sup>.

<sup>q</sup> 13<sup>5</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>r</sup> 13<sup>6</sup> These were the peculiar marks which distinguished the members of the prophetic class. Cf. I Kgs. 18<sup>28, 29</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> 13<sup>6</sup> Cf. Hos. 2<sup>7</sup>.

§ 217. The Judgment upon the Heathen and the Exaltation of Jehovah, Zech. 14

Zech. 14 <sup>1</sup>Behold a day is coming for Jehovah, when thy spoil shall be divided in thy midst. <sup>2</sup>And all the nations shall gather<sup>t</sup> to Jerusalem, to fight against it, and the city shall be taken and the houses plundered and the women ravished; And half of the city shall go into captivity, and the rest of the people shall be cut off in the city. <sup>3</sup>Then Jehovah shall go forth and fight against these nations, as once he fought in the day of battle. <sup>4</sup>And on that day his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives, (which is opposite Jerusalem, on the east):<sup>u</sup> and the Mount of Olives shall be split into halves, from east to west, by an exceedingly great valley; and half of the mount shall slide northwards and half southwards. <sup>5</sup>And the valley of Hinnom<sup>v</sup> shall be closed to Azel,<sup>w</sup> and ye shall flee as ye fled from before the earthquake, in the days of Uzziah king of Judah;<sup>x</sup> but Jehovah thy<sup>y</sup> God will come, and all the holy ones with him.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>6</sup>And in that day, there shall be no heat<sup>a</sup> nor cold nor frost, <sup>7</sup>but it shall be constant day—it is known to Jehovah<sup>b</sup>—with neither day nor night; and also at evening time there shall be light. <sup>8</sup>And on that day living waters shall go forth from Jerusalem, half of them to the eastern sea<sup>c</sup> and half of them to the western sea;<sup>d</sup> in summer and winter shall it be. <sup>9</sup>And Jehovah shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall Jehovah be one, and his name one. <sup>10</sup>The land shall be changed to plain,<sup>e</sup> from Geba<sup>f</sup> to Rimmon, south of Jerusalem; and it shall be high and inhabited as it stands,<sup>g</sup> from the Benjamin Gate,<sup>h</sup>

Jehovah to requite
the capture and sack of Jerusalem

Jeho-
vah's reign of light
and perfect security

§ 217 There are certain traces of poetic parallelism in this closing section, but a large part of it is simply prose. To bring it within the bounds of a definite metrical scheme it is necessary to resort to unjustifiable violence in emending the text. It is much more satisfactory, as in the case of most of the O.T. apocalypses, to print it as simply prose. It is one of the most concrete of all the apocalypses, and surpasses Joel in its vivid and bloody picture of the fate of the heathen. It breathes the militant, blood-thirsty spirit of the Maccabean age and emphasizes the destructive more than the redemptive side of the coming rule of Jehovah. The emphasis upon ceremonialism and the necessity of absolute conformity to the details of the ritual as conditions of admission to the kingdom stamp it as one of the latest products of Jewish thought found in the O.T. It undoubtedly voices truly the hopes of the pious who rallied about the standard of Judas.

<sup>t</sup> 14<sup>2</sup> Heb., I will gather, but this is contrary to the parallels in <sup>1, 3</sup>, which do not make Jehovah the speaker. Either this vs. is secondary, as many scholars hold, or else this verb must be reconstructed so as to conform to the context. That this vs. is original is strongly confirmed by the phrase, against those nations, in <sup>3</sup>, which points back to <sup>2</sup>. Furthermore, the conception of the period of deepest gloom before the dawn is characteristic of the eschatological teachings of the period. Cf., e. g., Dan. 11.

<sup>u</sup> 14<sup>3</sup> This clause explaining the position of the Mount of Olives, which is here for the first time mentioned in the O.T., may be secondary.

<sup>v</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> The first part of this vs. is obviously corrupt. The above rendering is in accordance with the Gk., Syr., Targ., and certain Heb. MSS. Hinnom is a conjectural reading for the corrupt Heb.

<sup>w</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> Asel is mentioned only in Mi. 1<sup>11</sup> and its identification is unknown.

<sup>x</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> The entire sentence, ye shall flee . . . king of Judah, is regarded by many as secondary. It certainly does not stand in close connection with its context.

<sup>y</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> Heb., my God.

<sup>z</sup> 14<sup>5</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., with thee.

<sup>a</sup> 14<sup>6</sup> Reconstructing the corrupt Heb. on the basis of the Gk., Syr., and Sym. and the parallel in Is. 4<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> 14<sup>7</sup> This interjected clause may be secondary. The thought of the vs. is, that in the future time there shall be one unending day.

<sup>c</sup> 14<sup>8</sup> I. e., the Dead Sea.

<sup>d</sup> 14<sup>8</sup> I. e., the Mediterranean.

<sup>e</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> I. e., like the level lower Jordan valley.

<sup>f</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> On the northern borders of Judah. Cf. I Kgs. 15<sup>22</sup>. Rimmon was on the southern border (cf. Josh. 15<sup>32</sup>, 19<sup>7</sup>), probably near Beersheba.

<sup>g</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> Lit., in its place.

<sup>h</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> From Jer. 37<sup>13</sup> it would appear that the Benjamin Gate was on the north side of the city.

up to the place of the first gate, and from the Tower of Hananel,<sup>i</sup> to the Corner Gate,<sup>j</sup> and as far as the king's winepresses.<sup>k</sup> <sup>11</sup>And there shall be no more curse,<sup>k</sup> but Jerusalem shall abide in security.

<sup>12</sup>And this is the plague<sup>l</sup> with which Jehovah shall smite all the peoples, who array themselves against Jerusalem: he will make their flesh to waste away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall waste away in their sockets, and their tongues shall waste away in their mouth.<sup>m</sup> <sup>13</sup>Even so shall be the plague upon the horses, mules, camels, and asses, and upon all the beasts, which are in all those camps—just like this plague.

<sup>14</sup>And all that shall be left of all the nations which come up against Jerusalem shall come up from year to year to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles.<sup>n</sup> <sup>15</sup>And whoever of all the races of the earth, will not come up to Jerusalem, to worship the King, Jehovah of hosts, upon them there shall be no rain. <sup>16</sup>And if the race of Egypt does not go up nor enter in, upon them also shall come the plague, with which Jehovah shall smite the nations.<sup>o</sup> <sup>17</sup>This shall be the punishment for the sin of Egypt and the punishment for the sin of all nations, which do not come up to keep the feast of the tabernacles.

<sup>18</sup>On that day there shall be inscribed upon the bells<sup>p</sup> of the horses, HOLY TO JEHOVAH: and the pots in the house of Jehovah shall be as the sacrificial bowls before the altars; <sup>19</sup>yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holy to Jehovah of hosts, and all who sacrifice shall come and take of them and cook in them. And there shall be no more traffickers in the house of Jehovah of hosts in that day.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>i</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> From Neh. 3<sup>1</sup> it appears that the Tower of Hananel was near the Sheep Gate on the north of the temple, while the king's winepresses were probably to the south of the temple.

<sup>j</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> Restoring the corrupt Heb. by the aid of the parallel passage in Jer. 31<sup>38</sup>. The Corner Gate was on the northwestern side of the city.

<sup>k</sup> 14<sup>11</sup> Lit., ban, that is, devoted to destruction. A scribe has added at the beginning of the vs., either from the preceding or the latter part of the present vs., the words, and they shall dwell in it.

<sup>l</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> Or, stroke, with which Jehovah shall smite.

<sup>m</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> Vs. 15 is the closely connected sequel of 12. From some unknown source a later editor has inserted two vss., which have more in common with the preceding section than with the present. They give a very different picture regarding Jerusalem's future than the rest of the chapter. They read, and in that day there shall be a great confusion from Jehovah among them, and every man shall grasp the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall be lifted against the hand of his neighbor. Judah, also, shall fight against Jerusalem, and the wealth of all the nations round about shall be gathered together, gold, silver, and garments, in great abundance.

<sup>n</sup> 14<sup>16</sup> The feast of tabernacles or booths was, in many ways, the most important festival in later Jewish life. In II Mac. 1<sup>9</sup>, 10<sup>6</sup>, 7 the Palestinian Jews enjoined the Jews of Egypt to be faithful in attending this great feast. The fact that it is singled out, as in the present passage, is indicative of the high esteem in which it was regarded by the author and his generation.

<sup>o</sup> 14<sup>18</sup> Probably as a result of a scribal repetition from the next vs., the clause, who do not go up to keep the feast of tabernacles, is also found in the Heb. at the end of this vs.

<sup>p</sup> 14<sup>20</sup> Or, metallic disks, which jingled as the horses moved about.

<sup>q</sup> 14<sup>21</sup> The clause, in that day, is possibly secondary.

MESSIANIC AND ESCHATOLOGICAL PROPHECIES

(NEARLY ALL ANONYMOUS)

MESSIANIC AND ESCHATOLOGICAL PROPHECIES

I

THE DAVIDIC MESSIANIC KING AND KINGDOM

§ 218. The Promised Glories of David's Rule, Num. 24<sup>5-9, 17-19</sup>

Num. 24 <sup>5</sup>How beautiful are thy tents, O Jacob, Thy dwelling places, O Israel!
<sup>6</sup>Like valleys are they spread out,
Like gardens by the river-side,
Like lign-aloes which Jehovah hath planted,
Like cedars beside the waters.
<sup>7</sup>Water shall flow from his buckets,
His seed shall be in abundant waters,
His king shall be higher than Agag,
And his kingdom shall be exalted.

Israel's
prosperity
and
strength

<sup>8</sup>God who brought him forth out of Egypt,
Is for him like the strength of the wild-ox.

Invincible
might

The Davidic Messianic King and Kingdom.—The historic setting of these prophecies has already been considered in chap. VI of the general introduction. They represent Israel's patriotic hopes during the five centuries following the establishment of the united Heb. kingdom. They all centre about the Davidic reigning house, and reflect the profound impression which the signal achievements of David and his age made upon the minds of succeeding generations. With only two or three exceptions they are anonymous, and they represent the popular point of view. Most of these predictions were never fulfilled in the material sense in which they were doubtless understood by their original readers. The ever-present consciousness of a nobler destiny awaiting them is one of the most significant facts in the history of the Israelites. With the eye of faith, the Heb. prophets saw the distant fore-gleams of the rising sun. It is not strange that these earlier prophets interpreted that coming event in keeping with the prevailing hopes of their day. The important fact is that they were absolutely convinced that the future held for their race something far better than the past had ever brought forth. These prophecies are the concrete form in which they expressed their absolute convictions that their history was moving on toward a supremely noble consummation. In reality the ultimate event was far different than they anticipated. Disaster, humiliation, and suffering came to them instead of glory and world-wide rule, but to the faithful souls, who never lost confidence in Jehovah's purpose, even the shadow of the valley of death brought a greater blessing than the most patriotic prophet of the earlier day had ever pictured. Their joy was the joy of becoming loyal devoted subjects, not of a Davidic king, but of the Divine King. The spoils of the victory which they shared were not the loot of conquered cities, but the peace and joy and trust which are reflected in the Psalms of the Psalter. In the end they conquered their heathen foes, not with the sword under the guidance of another warrior like David, but with their exalted ideals of justice and of service and their divinely inspired conceptions of the Divine Father.

§ 218 For detailed notes, cf. Vol. I, § 98. These songs were probably sung in the court of David, to commemorate his victories and to describe the strength of the empire which he had founded. They are exceedingly significant because they, and the corresponding passages in Gen. 49, are the oldest records of Israel's early national hopes and aspirations.

He shall devour the nations, his adversaries,
 And shall break their bones in pieces,
 And shatter his oppressors;
<sup>9</sup>He crouches, he lies down like a lion,
 And like a lioness, who shall stir him up?
 Blessed is every one who blesses thee,
 And cursed is every one who curses thee.

Rise of a conquering
kingdom

<sup>17</sup>I see him, but not now;
 I behold him, but not near,
 A star comes forth out of Jacob,
 A sceptre arises out of Israel,
 And shatters the temples of Moab,
 And the skull of all the sons of Seth.
<sup>18</sup>And Edom shall become a possession,
 Seir, his enemies, shall also become a possession,
 While Israel doeth valiantly.
<sup>19</sup>Jacob shall subdue his enemies,
 And shall destroy the remnant from the city.

§ 219. Promises to the House of David, II Sam. 7<sup>10-16</sup>

Peace
and stability

II Sam. 7 <sup>10</sup>I will appoint a place for my people Israel,
 I will plant them, that they may dwell in their own place,
 And that they may be moved no more,
 And the wicked shall no more afflict them as formerly,
 From the day that I appointed judges over my people Israel.
 I will give thee rest from all thine enemies,
 And make thee great, and build thee a house.

Strong
and permanent rule under divine protection

<sup>12</sup>And when thy days are complete,
 And thou liest down with thy fathers,
 I will raise up thy descendants after thee,
 Who shall come forth from thy body;
 And I will establish their kingdom.
<sup>13</sup>He shall build a home for my name,
 And I will establish his royal throne forever.
<sup>14</sup>I will be to him a father,
 And he shall be to me a son,
 When he commits iniquity,
 I will correct him with the rod of men,
 And with the stripes of the sons of Adam.
<sup>15</sup>My kindness will I not withdraw from him,

§ 219 For detailed notes and setting, cf. Vol. II, § 29. This passage voices the popular hopes regarding the Judean royal house. Its language and that of its setting strongly suggests that it was not written until a short time before the exile; its hortatory note is that of the Deuteronomic school. Because of its setting and connection with David, the passage made a profound impression upon later psalm writers. Cf. especially Pss. 72, 89.

As I withdraw it from him who was before thee.

<sup>16</sup>Thy house and kingdom shall always stand firm before me;
Thy throne shall be established forever.

§ 220. The Faithful Shepherd, Ezek. 34<sup>11-16, 23-31</sup>

Ezek. 34 <sup>11</sup>Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I myself, will seek for my flock and search them out, <sup>12</sup>as a shepherd searches for his flock on the day when his sheep are scattered, so will I search for my flock, and deliver them from all the places whither they have been scattered in the day of cloud and darkness. <sup>13</sup>And I will take them from among the peoples, and will gather them from the land, and bring them into their own habitable land, and feed them on the mountains of Israel, in the valleys and in all the habitable parts of the land. <sup>14</sup>With good pasture will I feed them, and on the high mountains of Israel shall be their pasture; there they shall lie down in a good habitation, and feed on rich pasturage in the mountains of Israel. <sup>15</sup>I myself will be the shepherd of my flock, and I will lead them to pasture, is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah. <sup>16</sup>The lost I will seek, what is driven away I will bring back, the crippled I will bind up, the sick I will restore to strength, over the fat and over the strong I will watch, I will be a righteous shepherd to them.

<sup>23</sup>And I will set up over them one shepherd, and he shall feed them, namely, my servant David. And he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

<sup>24</sup>And I, Jehovah, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them. I, Jehovah, have spoken.

<sup>25</sup>And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will put away wild beasts from the land, so that they may dwell securely in the wilderness, and sleep in the forests. <sup>26</sup>And I will give them showers of rain in its season, and I will send the dashing rain in its time: rains of blessing shall they be. <sup>27</sup>And the trees of the field shall yield their fruit, and the earth shall give its increase, and they shall be secure in their habitable land, and know that I am Jehovah, when I break the frame of their yoke, and deliver them from the hands of those who have made them slaves. <sup>28</sup>They shall no longer be afraid of the nations, the beasts of the field shall not devour them, and they shall dwell securely with none to make them afraid. <sup>29</sup>And I shall provide for them a successful planting, so that they shall no longer be consumed by hunger in the land, and shall never again receive the reproach of the nations. <sup>30</sup>And they shall know that I, Jehovah, am their God, and that they, the house of Israel, are my people, is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah. <sup>31</sup>My flock are ye, the flock that I tend, and I am your God, is the oracle of the Lord Jehovah.

Jehovah to gather
and provide
for his scattered
people

To place
over them a Davidic
ruler

To give them
peace,
prosperity,
and plenty

§ 220 Cf., for notes, § 143.

§ 221. Union of Judah and Israel under a Davidic Ruler, Ezek. 37<sup>21-28</sup>

Restoration of all the exiles and union under one ruler

Ezek. 37 <sup>21</sup>Say to them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah, ‘Behold, I am about to take the Israelites from among the nations whither they are gone and gather them from all sides, and bring them into their own land.’ <sup>22</sup>And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and there shall be one king over them all; and they shall be no longer two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any longer; <sup>23</sup>nor shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them from all their apostasies wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them; so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.

A descendant of David to rule over them

<sup>24</sup>And my servant David shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd; and they shall also walk in my ordinances, and observe my statutes, and do them. <sup>25</sup>And they shall dwell in the land that I have given to my servant Jacob, wherein their fathers dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they and their sons, forever; and David my servant shall be their prince forever.

Re-stored temple evidence of Jehovah's presence

<sup>26</sup>Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; and it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will establish them, and multiply them, and set my sanctuary in the midst of them forevermore. <sup>27</sup>My dwelling place also shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. <sup>28</sup>And the nations shall know that I am Jehovah who sanctifieth Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them forevermore.’

§ 222. The Restoration of the Hebrew State, Jer. 30<sup>1-31</sup>

Israel's hour of gloom

Jer. 30 <sup>5b</sup>We have heard a cry of terror, fear without peace; <sup>6</sup>Ask now, and see whether a man doth travail with child. Why do I see every man with his hands on his loins,<sup>a</sup> And all faces turn pale, lose their color?<sup>b</sup>

§ 221 Cf., for notes, § 146.

§ 222 There is a wide difference of opinion among scholars regarding the authorship of this section. It is probable that in <sup>12-16</sup> there is an original Jeremian fragment. Its teaching that there will be a restoration of Jehovah's people is also one of Jeremiah's characteristic doctrines. Cf. §§ 130, 131. The form in which this teaching is clothed, however, bears the mark of later authorship. Its promises of material glory and splendor are very different from the spiritual hopes which Jeremiah himself entertained for his people. Cf. e. g., § 132. The background of the sections, as a whole, is the period of the exile, when the Jews are the prey of their foreign conquerors. Jerusalem is in ruins and the house of David has ceased to reign. The association of Jehovah and David in <sup>9</sup> is characteristic of Ezekiel. Cf. Ezek. 34<sup>23</sup>, <sup>24</sup>, 37<sup>23</sup>, <sup>24</sup>. The section, as a whole, cannot be dated earlier than the exile.

The prediction is introduced by a treble superscription. Vss. <sup>1-3</sup> were clearly intended to introduce the little collection of predictions regarding the future to be found in 30-33. Vs. <sup>4</sup> applies especially to the contents of 31. The original superscription to this prophecy is preserved in the Gk. and reads, simply, Thus saith Jehovah. In their present form these three superscriptions read as follows: <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, saying, <sup>2</sup>Thus speaketh Jehovah, the God of Israel, saying, 'Write thee all the words that I have spoken to thee in a book.' <sup>3</sup>For lo, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will turn back the captivity of my people Israel and Judah,' saith Jehovah, 'and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.' <sup>4</sup>And these are the words that Jehovah spoke concerning Israel and Judah. <sup>5</sup>Thus saith Jehovah.

<sup>a</sup> 30<sup>1</sup> So Gk. A later scribe has added in the Heb., destroying the metre and using a word in its late Heb. sense, the explanatory note, As a woman in travail.

<sup>b</sup> 30<sup>2</sup> Completing the vs., as Cornill suggests, from the analogy of Joel 2<sup>6</sup>, Nah. 2<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>7</sup>Alas! for this day is great, so that none is like it;
It is a time of trouble for Jacob; but he will be saved out of it.

<sup>8</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day,<sup>c</sup> is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts,
That I will break<sup>d</sup> the yoke from off their neck and will burst their bonds;
And they shall no longer serve strangers; <sup>e</sup>but they shall serve Jehovah their
God,
And David their king, whom I will raise up for them.<sup>e</sup>

Deliv-
erance
from
the yoke of
foreigners

<sup>12</sup>Thus<sup>f</sup> saith Jehovah, Thy hurt is incurable, and thy wound grievous;

<sup>13</sup>There<sup>g</sup> is no healing for the festering sore, for thee there is no bandage.

<sup>14</sup>All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not;
For I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with pitiless chas-
tisement.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Why criest thou over thy hurt, that thy pain is incurable?
Because thine iniquity is great and thy sins many, I have done these things to thee.

Present distress
and
the cause

<sup>17</sup>But I will restore health to thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds;<sup>i</sup>
Because they have called thee an outcast [saying], 'She is our quarry,'<sup>j</sup>

Future
healing
and vindi-
cation

<sup>16</sup>Therefore all that devour thee shall be devoured;
And all thine adversaries shall at the same time devour their own flesh,<sup>k</sup>
And they who despoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give as a prey.

<sup>18</sup>Thus saith Jehovah:
Behold, I will turn again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have compassion on his dwelling places;
And the city shall be builded upon its own hill, and the palace shall be inhabited after its own manner.

Restoration
and prosperity

<sup>19</sup>And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry;
And I will multiply them and they shall not be few; I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small.

<sup>20</sup>Their children shall also be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me;
And I will punish all that oppress them.

<sup>c</sup> 30<sup>8</sup> This vs. is taken from Is. 10<sup>27</sup>, 14<sup>25</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 30<sup>8</sup> So Gk. Heb. has, its, but is not supported by the context.

<sup>e</sup> 30<sup>9</sup> Vss. <sup>10</sup>, <sup>11</sup> are not found in the Gk. but both in the Heb. and Gk. of 46<sup>27</sup>, <sup>28</sup>, where they clearly belong.

<sup>f</sup> 30<sup>12</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds, for.

<sup>g</sup> 30<sup>13</sup> A scribe, departing from the figure, has also added an explanatory gloss, to plead thy cause.

<sup>h</sup> 30<sup>14</sup> By the mistake of a scribe the second line of <sup>15</sup> has been introduced also at the end of this vs.

<sup>i</sup> 30<sup>17</sup> Omitting, it is the oracle of Jehovah, which appears to be a later addition. This vs.
clearly belongs before rather than after <sup>16</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 30<sup>17</sup> Restoring the obscure Heb. in accordance with a suggestion found in the Gk. The concluding clause, after whom none seeketh, appears to be a gloss intended to explain the corrupt Heb. text.

<sup>k</sup> 30<sup>16</sup> Following the Gk. in restoring the Heb.

Under
a native
ruler

<sup>21</sup>Their prince shall be of themselves, and their ruler shall proceed from the midst of them;

And I will cause him to draw near, and he shall approach to me;

For who is he that risks<sup>l</sup> his life to approach to me? Is the oracle of Jehovah.

31 <sup>1</sup>At that time, is the oracle of Jehovah, I will be the God Of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.

§ 223. The Davidic Prince, Jer. 23<sup>3-8</sup>

Gathering
the scattered
people

Jer. 23 <sup>3</sup>I indeed will gather the remnant of my flock From all the lands whither I have driven them, And I will restore them again to their pasture, that they may be fruitful and multiply.

<sup>4</sup>I will establish shepherds over them, who shall shepherd them; And they shall not fear any more nor be terrified,<sup>m</sup> is Jehovah's oracle.

Peace
and justice under
the rule of a Da-vidic
king

<sup>5</sup>Behold,<sup>n</sup> the days are coming, is Jehovah's oracle When I will raise up for David a righteous branch,<sup>o</sup> And he shall reign as king and deal wisely; He shall execute justice and righteousness in the land.

<sup>6</sup>In his days Judah shall be delivered, And Israel shall dwell safely; And this is the name by which he shall be called, Jehovah our Righteousness.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>1</sup> 30<sup>21</sup> So Gk. The Heb. adds a vs. addressed to the people in the plural instead of the usual singular, and ye shall be my people and I will be your God. It is not consistent with the prevailing metre and is in all probability secondary. To this a later editor has also added <sup>23, 24</sup>, taking them from 23<sup>19, 20</sup>.

§ 223 This section, with its bright promises, follows Jeremiah's bitter and just denunciation of the false shepherds, the rulers of the house of David, who had betrayed their nation in the hour of peril. Cf. § 122. It presents a very different picture from that of Jeremiah. It is evidently a message of hope akin to the many which the post-exilic prophets appended to the sterner denunciations which came from the pre-exilic prophets. It assumes the conditions of the exile and uses the language of the post-exilic writers.

The connection between the three paragraphs is very loose and it is possible that each represents the work of an independent author. By some recent interpreters vss. <sup>5, 6</sup> are attributed to Jeremiah. This conclusion is not entirely untenable but it is not probable. Its introductory formula is suggestive of a later writer. Its position between two paragraphs, which are generally regarded as secondary, is also suggestive. There is no evidence elsewhere in his writings that he himself anticipated that the ultimate deliverance and regeneration of his people was to come through a scion of the degenerate house of Judah. His interests were fixed, not on the material but on the spiritual future of Israel. Although the figure differs the thought is closely akin to similar appendices found in Isaiah and Micah, which voice the popular hope expressed by Ezekiel.

The concluding vss. <sup>7, 8</sup>, are placed in the Gk. after <sup>40</sup>. They are also found, in slightly variant form, in 16<sup>11-16</sup>, where they are clearly secondary and have no logical connection with their context. Although the connection here is not close, their most natural position is the present context.

<sup>m</sup> 23<sup>4</sup> So Gk. Heb. adds, and there shall be none lacking.

<sup>n</sup> 23<sup>5</sup> Vss. <sup>5, 6</sup> are repeated in the very late supplement to the Heb. text found in 33<sup>15, 16</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 23<sup>5</sup> This figure describes one who should spring up like a sprout from the line of David. Like the similar expression in Is. 11<sup>1</sup>, it suggests that there had been a break in the regular line of succession. The peculiar phrase occurs in Zech. 3<sup>5</sup>, which comes from the same general period.

<sup>p</sup> 23<sup>6</sup> The Gk. and Lat. read, the Lord Josedek.

<sup>7</sup>Therefore, behold, the days are coming, is Jehovah's oracle,
When it shall no longer be said,<sup>q</sup> 'As Jehovah liveth,
Who brought up the Israelites from the land of Egypt';
<sup>8</sup>But, 'As Jehovah liveth,
Who hath brought up<sup>r</sup> the seed of Israel from the north country,'
And from the land whither I have driven them.
And they shall dwell in their own land.

The
new exodus

§ 224. The Second David, Mi. 5<sup>2-4</sup>

Mi. 5 <sup>2</sup>And thou Beth-ephrahath (Bethlehem),<sup>s</sup>
Thou that art smallest among the tribes of Judah,
Out of thee there shall come forth to me
One who shall rule over Israel,
Whose origin is from of old, from everlasting.
<sup>4</sup>And he shall stand and feed<sup>t</sup> in the strength of Jehovah,
In the exalted name of Jehovah his God;
And they shall abide, for now he shall be great,
Even to the ends of the earth.

The mighty ruler
again to rise
from little Bethlehem

§ 225. The Prince of Peace, Is. 9<sup>1-7</sup>

Is. 9 <sup>2</sup>The people<sup>u</sup> who have been walking in darkness see a great light,
Those who dwell in the land of deepest gloom, upon them a light shines.

Rejoicing after a period
of gloom

<sup>q</sup> 23<sup>7</sup> So Syr. and the parallel in 16<sup>14</sup>. Heb., they shall say.

<sup>r</sup> 23<sup>8</sup> Following the superior reading of the parallel passage in 16<sup>15</sup>. Heb. adds, who hath brought in, and after, seed, the word, house. The passage has evidently been expanded by a later scribe.

<sup>s</sup> 224 In later Christian thought this was one of the most significant of the O.T. prophecies. It is difficult, however, to find here a definite prediction that the Messiah would be born in Bethlehem, even were such a detailed prediction in keeping with the spirit and method of O.T. prophecy. The prophet simply expresses the conviction that from the long lineage of the house of David, which sprang from the comparatively insignificant village of Bethlehem, shall again come forth, in the hour of the nation's dire need, a deliverer and ruler who, in Jehovah's strength, will bring peace and security to his people and build up an empire the bounds of which shall surpass that of his illustrious forefather David. The prophecy therefore voices, in dramatic form, the hopes and predictions contained in the preceding sections and developed in still greater detail in those which immediately follow (§§ 223, 224).

A scribe, who had in mind the allusion to the nation, like a woman in travail, in 4<sup>9-10</sup>, has added in <sup>t</sup> a prose note, which breaks the close connection between <sup>2</sup> and <sup>4</sup> and is clearly secondary. Therefore he will give them up until the time that she who travaileth, hath brought forth. Then the rest of his kindred shall return to the Israelites.

<sup>s</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> Following the superior reading of the Gk. in reconstructing the Heb. Bethlehem was evidently added by a later scribe, in order to identify Beth-ephrahath. In the light of I Sam. 17<sup>12</sup>, Gen. 48<sup>7</sup>, and the Gk. note in connection with Josh. 15<sup>59</sup>, which states that Ephratha is Bethlehem, there can be little doubt of the identification.

<sup>t</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> I. e., the flock.

§ 225 There is nothing in this passage which might not have come from the days of Is. or even earlier. The popular hopes here expressed were probably in the minds of the people even at an earlier period, but many difficulties arise, if it is assigned to Is. The entire emphasis of the prophet's teaching was ethical and social. Practical experience with rulers like Ahaz had led him to largely despair of the descendants of David. As Is. plainly states in 8<sup>16-18</sup>, his hope

<sup>u</sup> 9<sup>2</sup> The first vs. of this chapter lacks entirely the poetic structure which characterizes the rest of the passage. Its form and contents indicate that it is an explanatory gloss added by an editor to connect the messianic passage which follows with the historical situation described in 7, 8. In his mind the period of gloom and foreign conquest was Tiglath-Pileser's conquest of the northern territory of Israel. Cf. II Kgs. 15<sup>29</sup> and §§ 35-37. The Heb. text is somewhat uncertain, but it may be rendered, But there shall be no gloom for her that was in anguish. In the former time he brought into contempt the land of Zebulun and Napthali, but in the latter time he brought honor to the way of the sea, the east Jordan land and the territory of the heathen.

<sup>3</sup>Thou multipliest the exultation,<sup>v</sup> thou makest great the rejoicing,
They rejoice before thee as men rejoice at harvest time,
As men are wont to exult when they divide spoil.

<sup>4</sup>For the burdensome yoke and the crossbar on his shoulder,
The rod of<sup>w</sup> his taskmaster, thou breakest as in the day of Midian.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>5</sup>For every boot of the warrior with noisy tread,
And every<sup>y</sup> war-cloak drenched in the blood of the slain
Will be completely burned up as fuel for the flame.

<sup>6</sup>For a child is born, to us a son is given,
And dominion shall rest upon his shoulder;<sup>z</sup>
And his name will be Wonderful Counsellor,<sup>a</sup>
Godlike Hero,<sup>b</sup> Ever-watchful Father,<sup>c</sup> Prince of Peace.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>7</sup>To the increase of his dominion and to the peace there shall be no end,
On the throne of David and throughout his kingdom,
To establish and uphold it by justice and righteousness
Henceforth and forever. The jealousy<sup>e</sup> of Jehovah will accomplish this.

§ 226. The Ideal Ruler, Is. 11<sup>1-10</sup>

Is. 11 <sup>1</sup>A sprout<sup>f</sup> shall spring from the stock of Jesse,
And a shoot from his roots shall bear fruit.
<sup>2</sup>The spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him,

The divine gift of the Davidic scion of the Davidic house for the future was firmly fixed in his faithful disciples, who heeded and treasured his teachings. For him the one supreme King was Jehovah, who had revealed himself to the young patriot at the beginning of his prophetic activity. Furthermore, this portrait of the future messianic king has no genetic connection with Is.'s other addresses, but has evidently been assigned to its present place by a later editor. As has already been noted in the Introd., pp. 44, 45, the introductory vss. imply that Judah had already fallen a prey to foreign conquerors and the house was no longer reigning on the throne. Furthermore, if this kingly idea had been proclaimed by Is., it seems incredible that it has been completely ignored by Ezek. in his allusions to the restoration of the house of David. The most natural setting for this passage is the Baby, exile. It is apparently a product of that strong wave of kingly messianic hopes which then swept over Judaism and culminated in the teaching of Hag. and Zech. Cf. Introd., p. 45. A close parallel to the opening stanzas is found in Jer. 30<sup>1-9</sup>, § 222. Is. 9<sup>1-7</sup> embodies, however, in concrete form the noble social ideals of Is. and for this reason its present position is not inappropriate.

<sup>v</sup> 9<sup>3</sup> Following a corrected text. The Heb. texts vary and the traditional text, the nation not, gives no sense.

<sup>w</sup> 9<sup>4</sup> Lit., staff.

<sup>x</sup> 9<sup>5</sup> A reference to Gideon's great victory, Judg. 6-8.

<sup>y</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Supplying the, every, demanded by the context and metre.

<sup>z</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> I. e., he wears the royal insignia; is born as a member of a royal family.

<sup>a</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Lit., wonder of a counsellor, i. e., the most wonderful of all counsellors.

<sup>b</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Lit., God of a hero, i. e., a very god among the mighty warriors.

<sup>c</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Lit., father of eternity, but the Heb. word translated, eternity, for lack of a more exact

Eng. equivalent, means simply a very long time, and the emphasis is not in the endlessness but upon the unceasing paternal care with which this ideal ruler will guard the interests of the people. Cf., for the same idiom, Is. 47<sup>7</sup>. The translation, Father of Spoil, is very doubtful.

<sup>d</sup> 9<sup>6</sup> Cf. Mi. 5<sup>1</sup>, This one shall be our peace when the Assyrians invade the land. By his wise counsel, his prowess and bravery, and by his devoted, unceasing care, this king will secure peace and prosperity for his people. Cf. 7.

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>7</sup> I. e., Jehovah's jealousy for his people. Cf. Zech. 1<sup>14</sup>, 8<sup>2</sup>. The Heb. adds, of hosts, but, as frequently elsewhere, this seems to be from a later scribe.

<sup>f</sup> 11<sup>1</sup> I. e., a scion of the royal Davidic house.

§ 226 This prophecy is a companion piece to the one found in the preceding section. It embodies in greater detail Is.'s ideals of justice and mercy and trust in Jehovah. It implies, however, even more distinctly than the preceding passage, that the house of David had already fallen when it was written, for out of this fallen and decayed stump was to come a shoot. It is probable that the author had in mind a distinct individual, either Jehoiachin or, as is more

A spirit of wisdom and insight,
 A spirit of counsel and might,
 A spirit of knowledge and the fear of Jehovah.

<sup>3</sup>He<sup>g</sup> will not judge according to what his eyes see,
 Nor decide according to what his ears hear;
<sup>4</sup>But with righteousness will he judge the helpless,
 And with equity will he decide for the needy<sup>h</sup> in the land.
 He will smite an oppressor with the rod of his mouth,
 And with the breath of his lips will he slay the guilty.
<sup>5</sup>Righteousness will be the girdle about his loins,
 And faithfulness the band about his waist.

His
just
rule

<sup>6</sup>Then the wolf will be the guest<sup>i</sup> of the lamb,
 And the leopard will lie down with the kid;
 The calf and the young lion will graze together,
 And a little child shall be their leader.
<sup>7</sup>The cow and the bear shall become friends,<sup>f</sup>
 Their young ones shall lie down together,
 And the lion shall eat straw like the ox;
<sup>8</sup>The suckling will play about the hole of the asp,
 And the weaned child will stretch out his hand toward the viper's nest.

Effects of that rule
upon
the animal
world

<sup>9</sup>Men shall not harm nor destroy
 In all my holy mountain;
 For the earth shall have been filled with knowledge of Jehovah
 As the waters cover the sea.

Upon
all mankind

<sup>10</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day,
 That the root of Jesse who is to stand as a signal to the peoples—
 To him shall the nations resort,
 And his resting-place shall be glorious.<sup>k</sup>

plausible, Zerubbabel, who was the object of the ardent hopes of his contemporaries Hag. and Zech. The prophecy is doubly significant, for it presents the noblest ideal of a ruler found in Heb. literature, and also combines closely with it those popular hopes of the golden era, which were probably drawn from the traditions of Paradise, inherited from the primitive Semitic past. In its portrayal of the fruits that follow, as a result of a just and righteous rule, it possesses a perennial value.

<sup>g</sup> 11<sup>3</sup> The vs. begins in the Heb., and his savor is in the fear of Jehovah. The Gk. suggests that this is a corruption of the scribal variant, he will cause the fear of Jehovah to rest upon him, based on the first and last lines of <sup>i</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>4</sup> Making a slight correction demanded by the context.

<sup>i</sup> 11<sup>5</sup> Lit., be a sojourner with, i. e., although by nature a stranger, will become a permanent resident with.

<sup>j</sup> 11<sup>7</sup> Making a slight change of the text. Heb., graze together, but cf. <sup>6</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> 11<sup>10</sup> By many scholars this vs. is regarded as a later appendix, like the vss. which follow, but, accepting the exilic or post-exilic date of the entire chapter, the reasons urged largely fall to the ground.

§ 227. Zerubbabel, Jehovah's Signet-Ring, Hag. 2<sup>20-23</sup>

Hag. 2 <sup>20</sup>This word of Jehovah came the second time to Haggai in the twenty-fourth day of the month; <sup>21</sup>Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, 'I will shake the heavens and the earth; <sup>22</sup>and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms; and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the nations; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those who ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, each by the sword of his brother.'

<sup>23</sup>In that day, is the oracle of Jehovah of hosts, I will take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, is Jehovah's oracle, and I will make thee as a seal-ring, for I have chosen thee, is the oracle of Jehovah of Hosts.

§ 228. The Attempted Crowning of Zerubbabel, Zech. 3<sup>6-10</sup>, 6<sup>9-15a</sup>

Zech. 3 <sup>6</sup>The angel of Jehovah testified to Joshua, saying, <sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: 'If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, thou also shalt rule my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee a place of access among these that stand by. <sup>8</sup>Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou and thy associates who sit before me; for they are men who are a sign; for, behold, I am about to bring forth my servant the Branch. <sup>9</sup>For, lo, the stone that I have set before Joshua; upon one stone are seven facets; behold, I will engrave it,' saith Jehovah of hosts, 'and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day. <sup>10</sup>In that day,' saith Jehovah of hosts, 'shall ye invite every man his neighbor, under the vine and under the fig-tree.'

6 <sup>9</sup>And this word of Jehovah came to me, <sup>10</sup>Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, Tobijah, Jedaiah, and of Josiah the son of Zephaniah, who have come from Babylon, <sup>11</sup>yea, take of them silver and gold in order to make a crown and set it on the head of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel.

12 And say to them, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, 'Behold, the man whose name is the Branch; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build a temple of Jehovah, <sup>13b</sup>and he shall bear the glory and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and Joshua the son of Jehozadak shall be a priest upon his right, and the counsel of peace shall be between them both. <sup>14</sup>And the crown shall be to Heldai, Tobijah, Jedaiah, and Joshua the son of Zephaniah as a memorial in the temple of Jehovah. <sup>15</sup>And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of Jehovah; and ye shall know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me to you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of Jehovah your God.'

§ 227 For notes, cf. § 153.
§ 228 For notes, cf. §§ 158, 163.

Overthrow
of Israel's heathen
foes

Zerubbabel's important role

Promise of a crown
for Zerubbabel

Preparing his crown

Assurance
that he should reign as king

II

THE DIVINE WARRIOR, JUDGE, AND KING AND THE GLORIES OF HIS RULE

§ 229. Zechariah's Predictions Regarding Israel's Future, Zech. 8<sup>3</sup>, 7, 8, 12, 13, 22

Zech. 8 <sup>3</sup>Thus saith Jehovah; I have returned to Zion,
And will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem;
Jerusalem shall be called, The City of Truth;
The Mountain of Jehovah of Hosts, The Holy Mountain.
<sup>7</sup>Thus saith Jehovah of hosts:
I am about to rescue my people,
From the land of the east and the land of the west,
<sup>8</sup>I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem.
They shall be my people in truth and righteousness,
And I will in turn be their God.

Jehovah to return
and dwell
among his restored
people

The Divine Warrior, Judge, and King and the Glories of His Rule.—The following sections contain ideas which are already found in germ in earlier writings, and especially in Ezekiel. A conception of Jehovah as the Divine King is implied in Is. 6, and probably was as old as the days of the united kingdom, for the theological conceptions of every age and race are largely cast in thought moulds suggested by the prevailing type of political organization. Ezekiel in 34 and elsewhere had proclaimed that Jehovah, like a shepherd, would lead back his people. Ezekiel also, in 38, 39, had announced that there would be a great world-judgment, in which the heathen should be assembled and then suddenly destroyed. This conception was not original with him, but, as has been noted already (Introd., p. 43), was a firmly fixed popular belief in the days of Amos. While there is little doubt that most of the ideals developed in the following sections were thus current in the popular mind, the real question is, when were they so far adopted by the prophets as to find a place in their writings? That they were rejected by the great prophets of the exilic period has been already noted (pp. 43, 44). In the post-exilic period, however, not only did a new type of prophet arise, but conditions were also fundamentally different. In connection with the rebuilding of the second temple (520–516 B.C.), the old popular kingly messianic hope which centred about Zerubbabel had reached its climax and had met with bitter and overwhelming disappointment. The temple, however, had been built and therefore the people felt that their claims upon Jehovah's favor were stronger than ever before. On the other hand, the poor and pious in the community were suffering supreme injustice at the hands both of their arrogant, sceptical rulers and their heathen neighbors. It was also an age when the faithful studied as never before the past records of their nation. The great deliverances from Egypt and from their foes in Palestine were ever fresh in their memory. The logic of the situation seemed to them incontrovertible. If ever there was a moment in their history when Jehovah should arise and perform signal miracles in their behalf, it was at this great crisis. In the earlier prophecies, as, for example, Ezekiel, they always found prophetic authority for this belief. When prophets like Haggai and Zechariah declared that Jehovah was indeed about to perform miracles in behalf of his people, it was most natural that lesser prophets should take up and carry on the refrain. Hence, for general considerations, as well as in the light of detailed internal evidence, it is exceedingly probable that the majority, if not all, of the prophecies included in this group come from the two centuries following the rebuilding of the temple. Many of them reveal the potent influence of the thought of the II Isaiah. It is not impossible that the majority of the supplemental passages in Is. 29–35 were actually written by him, for they abound in his characteristic expressions and ideas. Judging from the book of Joel and later O.T. literature, it seems probable that the idea of a great world-judgment, at which the heathen nations should be destroyed, came to the front more and more during the latter half of the Persian period. Undoubtedly the merciless persecutions of Artaxerxes Ochus and others, about 346 B.C., did much to intensify this feeling.

The nobler and more spiritual side of Israel's messianic hopes is, of course, to be found in the writings of the II Isaiah, and these, together with the genial missionary spirit which breathes through the book of Jonah, should be studied as the noblest exponents of Israel's hopes.

Since the exact chronological order of these prophecies cannot be determined, the method adopted in this general division has been in part logical, so that prophecies dealing with kindred themes may be studied together.

§ 229 For the notes and historic section of this prophecy, cf. § 165.

ZECH. 8<sup>12</sup>] GLORIOUS RULE OF DIVINE KING

To give
peace
and prosperity

To be worshipped by many nations

Gathering the
exiles

Their triun-phant return

Preservation-
of the faithful
and destruk-
tion of
the
guilty

<sup>12</sup>For I will scatter prosperity broadcast;
The vine shall bear its fruit, and the ground shall yield its increase,
And the heavens shall give their dew,
And I will cause the remnant of this people to inherit all these things.
<sup>13</sup>It shall come to pass that as ye were accursed among the nations,
O house of Judah and house of Israel,
So will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing.
Fear not, but let your hand be strong.

<sup>22</sup>And many peoples and strong nations shall come
To seek Jehovah of hosts in Jerusalem,
And to entreat the favor of Jehovah of Hosts.

§ 230. Jehovah Leading Back His Scattered People, Mi. 2<sup>12, 13</sup>

Mi. 2 <sup>12</sup>I will surely assemble all Jacob,<sup>a</sup>
I will surely gather the remnant of Israel,
I will put them together as sheep in a fold,<sup>b</sup>
As a flock in the midst of a pasture;
And<sup>c</sup> they shall resound with the din of men.

<sup>13</sup>The Breaker<sup>d</sup> hath gone up before them;
They have broken forth and passed by the gate,
And through it have they gone forth;
Their King hath passed on before them,
Even Jehovah at their head.

§ 231. The Glories of the Restoration, Am. 9<sup>9-15</sup>

Am. 9 <sup>9</sup>For behold I am about to give command,
And I will shake the house of Israel among all the nations,
Just as one shakes grain in a sieve;

§ 230 This brief section is evidently one of the later appendices added to the stern prophecy of Micah and was intended to adjust the pre-exilic prophecy to the conditions and hopes of a post-exilic period. The exile is not in the future but in the past. It voices the hopes of a general return which was strong in the days following the rebuilding of the temple. It develops the theme and the figure of Jehovah, as a shepherd, gathering his sheep, which was first developed in Ezek. 34<sup>11-18</sup>. It also introduces the conception of Jehovah as King over his people.

<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> So Gk. Heb., O Jacob, all of thee.

<sup>b</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Correcting the mistaken vowel-pointing of the Heb. as the context suggests.

<sup>c</sup> 2<sup>12</sup> Dividing the Heb. letters and restoring the original reading.

<sup>d</sup> 2<sup>13</sup> Jehovah, of course, is one who goes ahead to break the path for the flock.

§ 231 In <sup>9</sup> may possibly be preserved a few of the closing words of Amos, but the vs. as a whole, and those which follow, are intended to present that other side of Amos's conception of Israel's future which only the following centuries made clear. Many expressions and ideas foreign to Amos are found. Among the more significant is the representation that the Israelites would be scattered among all the nations. Amos always declared that they would be carried captive to Assyria. He also predicted consistently that not only the sinners but the entire nation would be destroyed. Special favor for Judah and the whole picture of material restoration and prosperity, without any reference to the moral reformation of the nation, are out of harmony with Amos's message, which was from beginning to end social and ethical. This section, therefore, is now almost universally recognized as a post-exilic appendix intended to adapt the book as a whole to the changed point of view and the very different needs of the later Jewish community. It consists of four strophes of approximately six lines.

But not a kernel shall fall to the ground.

<sup>10</sup>By the sword shall die all the sinners of my people,
Who say, Disaster shall not touch or befall us.

<sup>11</sup>In that time I will raise up the hut of David that is fallen,<sup>e</sup>
I will wall up its breaches and raise up its ruins,
And I will rebuild it as in the days of old,
<sup>12</sup>In order that they may possess the remnant of Edom,<sup>f</sup>
And all the nations which were called by my name,<sup>g</sup>
It is the oracle of Jehovah, who will do this.

Restoration
of the Davidic
kingdom

<sup>13</sup>Behold the days are coming, is the oracle of Jehovah,
When the plowman shall overtake the reaper,<sup>h</sup>
And the treader of grapes him who soweth seed,<sup>i</sup>
The mountains also shall drop sweet wine,
And all the hills shall melt.<sup>j</sup>

The
abounding
prosperity

<sup>14</sup>And I will lead back the captivity of my people<sup>k</sup> Israel,
And they shall rebuild waste cities and inhabit them,
And they shall plant vineyards and drink their wine,
And they shall make gardens and eat their fruit,
<sup>15</sup>And I will plant them upon their own soil,
And they shall never again be torn away from their land,
Which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God.

Restoration
and permanent re-establishment of
the
exiles

§ 232. The Glorious Restoration of Jehovah's People, Is. 11<sup>11-16</sup>

Is. 11 <sup>11</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day,
That the Lord will again put forth his hand
To recover<sup>l</sup> the remnant of his people,
Those which remain in Assyria and Egypt,
Those of Pathros<sup>m</sup> and Ethiopia and Elam,
And those from Shinar and Hamath and the sea countries.
<sup>12</sup>And he will lift up a signal to the nations,
And will gather the outcasts of Israel,
And he will collect the dispersed women of Judah
From the four quarters of the earth.

Gather-
ing the
exiles
from every quarter

<sup>e</sup> 9<sup>11</sup> I. e., restore the ancient glories of David's empire.

<sup>f</sup> 9<sup>12</sup> Evidently the Edom of post-exilic times, already dispossessed by Nabatheans. Cf. Ps. 60<sup>8-12</sup>, Mal. 1<sup>4</sup>, 4.

<sup>g</sup> 9<sup>12</sup> All the nations subjugated by David.

<sup>h</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> I. e., plowing and the trading of the vintage shall follow each other in quick succession.

<sup>i</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> Before the vintage is gathered it will be time to sow again.

<sup>j</sup> 9<sup>13</sup> A reference to the productive, vine-clad hills of Judah.

<sup>k</sup> 9<sup>14</sup> Or, turn the fortune of my people.

§ 232 The exile clearly lies back of this passage. The author lives in the experiences of Israel's past and in his hopes for the complete and glorious restoration of his people. It reveals at every point the influence of the II Is. and of the hopes which he voiced in the days following the rebuilding of the second temple.

<sup>l</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> Lit., to purchase.

<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>11</sup> I. e., upper Egypt.

Union
of Israel
and Judah
in conquering
their neighbors

The
new exodus

<sup>13</sup> And Ephraim's jealousy shall depart,
And the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off.
Ephraim shall not be jealous of Judah,
And Judah shall not be hostile to Ephraim,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>14</sup> But they shall swoop down upon the shoulder of the Philistine on the west;
Together they shall despoil the sons of the East.
Edom and Moab shall be within their grasp,
And the sons of Ammon shall be their subjects.

<sup>15</sup> Jehovah will dry up<sup>o</sup> the tongue of the Egyptian Sea,
He will shake his hand over the River,<sup>p</sup>
And divide it at a stroke into seven streams,
And make men pass over dry shod,

<sup>16</sup> And there shall be a highway for the remnant of his people,
They who remain from Assyria,
Even as there was for Israel
At the time when it came up from the land of Egypt.

§ 233. The Returning Exiles' Song of Thanksgiving, Is. 12

Faith
in Je-
hovah

Is. 12 <sup>1</sup>Thou shalt say in that day,
I thank thee, O Jehovah, though thou hast been wroth with me,
Thine anger hath turned<sup>q</sup> away and thou hast comforted me.

<sup>2</sup>Behold, God is my help,
I will trust and not be fearful;
Jah<sup>r</sup> is my strength and my song,
And he is become my help.

Thanksgiving for his deed of deliv-
erance

<sup>3</sup>With joy shall ye draw water
From the founts of deliverance.

<sup>4</sup>And ye shall say in that day,
Give thanks to Jehovah, call upon his name,
Make known his deeds among the peoples,
Declare that his name is exalted.

<sup>5</sup>Make melody to Jehovah, for he hath done majestically;
Let this be known through all the earth.

<sup>6</sup>Shout with a loud cry, O inhabitants<sup>s</sup> of Zion;
For great in the midst of thee is the Holy One of Israel.

<sup>n</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> Many scholars regard these two lines as secondary but the evidence is not decisive.

<sup>o</sup> 11<sup>15</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk., Targ., and Syr.

<sup>p</sup> 11<sup>16</sup> The Heb. adds, with his scorching wind, but this is probably a gloss. The River, is, of course, the Euphrates.

§ 233 This passage is in reality a psalm rather than a prophecy. It is made up of phrases and passages drawn from post-exilic literature, and especially from the song of Moses in Dt. 32 and the Psalter. It is clearly one of the latest additions to the book of Is. and is intended as a song of triumph on the lips of the returning exiles. It probably comes, at the earliest, from the latter part of the Persian period.

<sup>q</sup> 12<sup>1</sup> Reading the verbs in this line in the past tense.

<sup>r</sup> 12<sup>2</sup> The shorter name of Jehovah. A scribe has added in the Heb., Jehovah, in order to make the identification clear.

<sup>s</sup> 12<sup>8</sup> Lit., inhabitress, i. e., the inhabitants of Jerusalem spoken of collectively.

§ 234. Pictures of Israel's Ultimate Deliverance and Glory, Mi. 4<sup>s-5<sup>t</sup>, 5<sup>s-15</sup></sup>

Mi. 4 <sup>s</sup>But thou tower of the flock,<sup>t</sup> hill of the daughter of Zion,
To thee will come<sup>u</sup> the former rule.

Jeho-
vah still with his
people

<sup>u</sup>Therefore why dost thou now cry aloud, hast thou no king?<sup>v</sup>

Or hath thy counsellor perished, that throes have seized thee, like a woman in travail?<sup>w</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Writhe and bring forth,<sup>x</sup> O daughter of Zion, as one in travail;
For now thou shalt go forth from the city, and abide in the open field,<sup>y</sup>
And thou shalt come to Babylon; there thou shalt be rescued;<sup>z</sup>
There Jehovah will redeem thee from the hands of thy foes.

Out of exile will he lead
them

<sup>11</sup>And now many nations gather against thee,
Who say, Let her be defiled, that our eyes may gaze upon Zion.

And
overthrow
their many
foes

<sup>12</sup>But they know not the thoughts of Jehovah, Nor do they understand his plan, for he hath gathered them as sheaves for the threshing floor.

<sup>13</sup>Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion;
For I will make thine horns iron,
And thy hoofs will I make brass,
That thou mayest beat in pieces many peoples,
And devote<sup>a</sup> to Jehovah their spoil,
And their wealth to the Lord of all the earth.

His
people
the instrument
of punish-
ment

§ 234 This passage presents many difficult problems. The literary unity is not close and it is exceedingly probable that it contains several independent literary units. The same general situation, however, is implied throughout. Jerusalem has been humiliated, the people have been scattered into distant exile. It is also evident that Jerusalem has been, in part, rebuilt and is being constantly menaced by hostile heathen peoples. The prophecies well fit the conditions and hopes of the Judean community in the days following the rebuilding of the second temple. The conception of the chosen people and of Jehovah's threshing instrument, 4<sup>13</sup>, is one of the characteristic teachings of the II Is., e. g., Is. 41<sup>15</sup>. Also that Jehovah's plans are known only to himself, 40<sup>13, 14</sup>. The doctrine of a general destruction of the heathen is also peculiar to this later period. The warlike martial spirit and the confident belief that Israel should ultimately conquer all its heathen foes point possibly to the Maccabean age. The reference to Assyria in 5<sup>5-6</sup> is also best explained in this period, for it was the usual Heb. designation of the Syrian kingdom. It may, however, be simply a designation of the great world-power, which came, as did the ancient conqueror, to subdue with seemingly irresistible might. The latter part of the Persian and the early part of the Gk. periods brought crises to the Judean community which satisfied the situation implied in this section. The references to the putting away of idolatry and heathen cults in 5<sup>10-14</sup> also accord with post-exilic rather than a pre-exilic date. The section, as a whole, voices the strongly national and individualistic hopes which filled the minds of the Jews, who lived under the shadow of the second temple.

<sup>t</sup> 4<sup>s</sup> The reference clearly is to Jerusalem. Even though it has suffered disaster and humiliation, it shall be yet again the place of refuge, to which shall be led the scattered remnants of the nation Israel. The passage recalls the dramatic terms with which Is. frequently addressed Jerusalem.

<sup>u</sup> 4<sup>s</sup> The Heb. adds another synonym of this verb, and also at the end of the vs., dominion of the daughter of Jerusalem. These are probably scribal additions and also contribute nothing to the meaning of the vs.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>s</sup> The reference is clearly to Jehovah, the Divine King, who was ever present to deliver his people.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>s</sup> The clause, as one in travail, may be due to scribal repetition from the next vs.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>t</sup> Possibly the original read, sigh. The Heb. is corrupt.

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>t</sup> Probably a reference to the experiences of the exile.

<sup>z</sup> 4<sup>t</sup> Possibly this line is secondary, being a concrete illustration of the preceding line.

<sup>a</sup> 4<sup>s</sup> Following the reading of the VSS. Heb., I will devote.

Present
humiliation

5 <sup>1</sup>Now cut thyself in bitter grief;<sup>b</sup>
They<sup>c</sup> have set a wall around thee,
They smite with the rod on the cheek,<sup>d</sup>
The ruler of Israel.

The
way of deliver-
ance

<sup>5</sup>This shall be our peace,<sup>e</sup>
When Assyria shall come into our land,
And when he shall tread upon our soil:<sup>f</sup>
Then will we raise up against him<sup>g</sup> seven shepherds,
And eight princes among men.
<sup>h</sup>They shall shepherd Assyria with a sword,
And the land of Nimrod<sup>h</sup> with her own bared blades;
They<sup>i</sup> shall deliver us from Assyria, when he comes into our land,
And treads within our borders.

The invincible
remnant
among
the
nations

<sup>7</sup>And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations,<sup>j</sup>
In the midst of many peoples like dew from Jehovah,
Like showers upon the grass,
Which wait for no man,
Nor tarry for the children of men.
<sup>8</sup>And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations,
It shall be in the midst of many peoples,
Like a lion among the beasts of the forest,
Like a young lion among the sheep-folds,
Who, when he passes through, treads down,
He tears, and none may deliver.
<sup>9</sup>Let thy hand triumph<sup>k</sup> over thine adversaries,
And let all thine enemies be cut off.

Purifi-
cation
of the
nation

<sup>10</sup>And it shall be in that day, is Jehovah's oracle,
That I will cut off thy horses from thy midst, and destroy thy chariots, <sup>11</sup>I will cut off the cities in thy land, and tear down thy fortresses, <sup>12</sup>I will cut off thine enchantments from thy hand, and thou shalt have no soothsayers;
<sup>13</sup>And I will cut off thine images and thy pillars from thy midst,
And thou shalt not worship any more the work of thy hands;

<sup>b</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> Slightly emending the text, which otherwise is unintelligible.

<sup>c</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> So Syr., Targ., and Lat. Heb., lit., he hath put.

<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> Cf., for the same idiom, I Kgs. 22<sup>24</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> I. e., peace shall come to us in the way described in the following lines.

<sup>f</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> So Gk. and Syr. Heb., palaces.

<sup>g</sup> 5<sup>1</sup> It is probable that no definite number is here in the mind of the prophet, but seven and eight represent a complete number. Cf. Am. 1<sup>3</sup>, Prov. 30<sup>18, 21, 29</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> A synonym for Assyria. Cf. Gen. 10<sup>9-11</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 5<sup>6</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. as the context demands. Heb., he shall deliver. The sing. was probably introduced by a scribe through the influence of 2<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>j</sup> 5<sup>7</sup> So Gk. and the parallel in <sup>8</sup>. This reading is also supported by the metre.

<sup>k</sup> 5<sup>9</sup> For the same idiom, lit., lift high, cf. Is. 26<sup>1</sup>, Dt. 32<sup>27</sup>.

<sup>14</sup> And I will uproot thine asherahs from thy midst, and destroy thine idols.<sup>1</sup><sup>15</sup> So will I execute vengeance in my wrath and mine anger upon the nations which have not heard me.§ 235. Zion's Ultimate Vindication and Exaltation, Mi. 7<sup>7-20</sup>

Mi. 7 <sup>7</sup>I, indeed, will look to Jehovah,
 I will wait for the God of my salvation,
 My God will hear me!
<sup>8</sup>Rejoice not over me, O my enemy;
 If I have fallen, I shall rise;
 If I sit in darkness, Jehovah is my light.
<sup>9</sup>The wrath of Jehovah will I bear—
 For against him have I sinned—
 Until he espouse my cause,
 And execute judgment for me.
 He will bring me forth to the light,
 I shall see his righteousness.
<sup>10</sup>So mine enemy shall see, and shame shall cover her,
 She who saith to me, Where<sup>m</sup> is thy God?
 Mine eyes shall look upon her;
 Now, indeed, she is for trampling!<sup>n</sup>

Confidence
that Jeho-
vah will surely deliver

<sup>11</sup>It is a day for rebuilding thy<sup>o</sup> walls,
 This day shall thy<sup>p</sup> border be broad.
<sup>12</sup>This day they<sup>q</sup> shall come to thee,<sup>r</sup>
 From<sup>s</sup> Assyria and the cities of Egypt,
 And from Egypt even to the River Euphrates,
 From sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain.

The time is ripe for a general
restoration<sup>1</sup> 5<sup>14</sup> Restoring what was probably the original reading. Cf. II Chr. 24<sup>18</sup>. Possibly this vs. is secondary.

§ 235 This appendix to the book of Micah, like similar appendices to the earlier prophetic books, presents a message of hope for the afflicted post-exilic community. In its use of the term, Assyria, it assumes the pre-exilic point of view, but all of its allusions, as well as its thought, point to a post-exilic date. Vs. <sup>11</sup> implies that the walls of Jerusalem had not yet been rebuilt and that its inhabitants were few in number. This description is faithful to conditions after the rebuilding of the temple and before the advent of Nehemiah. The weak, struggling community labored still under the sense of sin and Jehovah's consequent disfavor, but longed and hoped for his forgiveness and strong protection. The section is really a psalm akin in thought and structure to many of the collective psalms which come from this period. It voices the same hopes of returning prosperity and restoration and world-wide rule that are found in the prophecies of Zechariah and more gloriously expressed in the immortal poems of the II Isaiah.

<sup>m</sup> 7<sup>10</sup> Correcting a slight error in the Heb. in deleting the word, Jehovah, which destroys the metre of the vs. and is not required by the sense of the context.

<sup>n</sup> 7<sup>10</sup> A scribe, to make the meaning clear, has added, from Ps. 18<sup>42</sup>, as the mire of the street. The metre suggests that the original read as above, and this is confirmed by the parallel passages in Is. 5<sup>5</sup>, 28<sup>18</sup>.

<sup>o</sup> 7<sup>11</sup> Possibly the pronominal suffixes in this paragraph should be changed from the second to the first person to conform to the context. A simpler explanation is that they indicate a change of speaker.

<sup>p</sup> 7<sup>11</sup> Heb., a border.

<sup>q</sup> 7<sup>12</sup> Reading with the Gk. text, the pl. rather than the sing.

<sup>r</sup> 7<sup>12</sup> Possibly the text should be corrected to read, to me.

<sup>s</sup> 7<sup>12</sup> Restoring the text as the context demands.

<sup>13</sup>Though the land has become a desolation
On account of its inhabitants, because of their deeds.<sup>t</sup>

Let
Jeho-
vah impress all by the greatness of the deliv-
erance

<sup>14</sup>Shepherd thy flock with thy staff, the sheep of thy heritage,
Who live alone in the forest, in the midst of Carmel;<sup>u</sup>
That they may pasture in Bashon Gilead as in the days of old, <sup>15</sup>As in the days when thou wentest forth from Egypt,<sup>v</sup> gave us wonders to see.
<sup>16</sup>Nations shall see and be ashamed of all their might;
They shall put their hands to their mouth, their ears shall become deaf.
<sup>17</sup>They shall lick the dust like serpents, like creatures that crawl on the earth;
They shall come trembling<sup>w</sup> and in terror from the hiding places, and shall fear before thee.

He alone is merciful and
forgiving

<sup>18</sup>Who is a God like thee, forgiving iniquity,
And passing by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage?
He retaineth not his anger forever, but is one who delighteth in mercy.
<sup>19</sup>He will tread under foot our iniquity;
Yea, thou wilt cast into the depths of the sea all our<sup>x</sup> iniquities.
<sup>20</sup>Thou wilt show faithfulness to Jacob, and loving kindness to Abraham,
As thou hast sworn to our fathers from the days of old.

§ 236. The Future Vindication and Exultation of Jerusalem, Zeph. 3<sup>8-20</sup>

Judgment
on the heathen
certain

Zeph. 3 <sup>8</sup>Wait<sup>y</sup> for<sup>z</sup> me, is Jehovah's oracle, until the day when I stand up as a witness,<sup>a</sup>
For it is my fixed purpose to gather the nations, to collect<sup>b</sup> the kingdoms,
To pour upon them my wrath, even my hot anger;
For by the fire of my jealousy shall all the earth be consumed.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>t</sup> 7<sup>13</sup> Possibly this vs. is secondary, as it fits very awkwardly in its context.

<sup>u</sup> 7<sup>14</sup> Carmel is ordinarily a synonym for fertility. Cf. Am. 1<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 7<sup>15</sup> So Gk. Heb., from the land of Egypt.

<sup>w</sup> 7<sup>17</sup> Heb. adds, to Jehovah our God.

<sup>x</sup> 7<sup>19</sup> Heb., their.

§ 236 The aim of this appendix to the book of Zephaniah was to present, in contrast to the grim predictions of the pre-exilic prophets, a picture of the future which awaited the afflicted but sanctified city and people. Its vocabulary, its phrases, and its ideas all reflect the post-exilic period in which it was written. The universal judgment upon the heathen, the restoration of the chosen people, and a re-establishment of Jehovah's rule, as Divine King, in Jerusalem are all indices which point to the middle of the Persian period as its probable date. The familiar distinction is also drawn between the proud rulers of the community,<sup>11</sup> and the humble and poor, as in the II Isaiah and Malachi and the Psalms of the period. It is also easy to recognize the potent influence of the II Isaiah in this psalm of faith and hope, which is one of the most beautiful of the many that come from the period characterized by deep shadows and brilliant expectations.

<sup>y</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> The editor who added this appendix has connected it with the preceding by the word, therefore.

<sup>z</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Following the Gk., which has preserved the original sing. form of the verb rather than the pl. Cf. 11. 12.

<sup>a</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> So Gk. and Syr.

<sup>b</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> Again correcting the Heb. with the aid of the superior Gk. and Syr.

<sup>c</sup> 3<sup>8</sup> The following vss. interrupt the close connection between <sup>8</sup> and <sup>11</sup> and introduce a very different conception regarding the fate of the heathen than that already presented in <sup>8</sup>. They are generally regarded as secondary. They read: For then I will give to the peoples a pure lip; that they may, all of them call upon the name of Jehovah, that they may serve him with one consent; from beyond the rivers of Ethiopia shall they bring in my offering.

VINDICATION AND EXULTATION OF JERUSALEM [ZEPH. 3<sup>11</sup>

<sup>11</sup>In that day thou shalt not be ashamed of all thy transgressions which thou hast committed against me;

For then I will put out of the midst of thee thy proudly exulting ones,
And thou shalt never again vaunt thyself in my holy mountain.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>12</sup>But I will leave in thy midst a people humble and poor,
And the remnant of Israel<sup>g</sup> shall trust in the name of Jehovah.

<sup>13</sup>They shall not do evil, nor speak falsehood,
And a deceitful tongue shall not be found in their mouth;
But they shall pasture and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.<sup>h</sup>

Only
the faithful
to be left among Jeho-
vah's
people

<sup>14</sup>Cry out with joy, O daughter of Zion, shout aloud, O Israel!
Rejoice and exult with all thine heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.

Their
divine king to dwell
among
them

<sup>15</sup>Jehovah hath put away thine adversaries,<sup>i</sup> he hath turned away thy foes;<sup>j</sup>
Jehovah is king<sup>k</sup> in thy midst, thou shalt see<sup>l</sup> evil no more.

<sup>16</sup>In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear not;
O Zion, let not thy hands droop.

<sup>17</sup>Jehovah thy God is in thy midst, a victorious hero,
He will rejoice over thee with joy, he will renew his love,<sup>m</sup>
He will exult over thee with singing,<sup>n</sup> as at the time of the festal assembly.

I will take away from thee thy disgrace,<sup>o</sup> and put away from thee thy reproach.

Their
shame
to be changed into
honor

<sup>19</sup>Behold, I will destroy<sup>p</sup> at that time all who afflict thee,
And I will deliver the lame, and gather the outcast;<sup>q</sup>
I will make them an object of renown and fame in all the earth.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>20</sup>I will<sup>s</sup> do good to you, at the time when I gather you,
For I will make you an object of fame and renown among all the peoples of the earth;
When I bring back your captivity<sup>t</sup> before your eyes, saith Jehovah.

<sup>f</sup> 3<sup>11</sup> The last line may be secondary, as it makes an over-full line and is in the nature of an explanatory gloss.

<sup>g</sup> 3<sup>12</sup> Joining the first two words of the next vs. with 1<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>h</sup> 3<sup>13</sup> This same theme is beautifully illustrated in Ps. 23.

<sup>i</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Punctuating the Heb. so as to restore the parallelism of the vs.

<sup>j</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. with the aid of the superior text of the Gk., Syr., and Targ.

<sup>k</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Following the reading of Gk. A. Heb., king of Israel.

<sup>l</sup> 3<sup>15</sup> Certain MSS. read, hear.

<sup>m</sup> 3<sup>17</sup> Following the Gk. and Syr. Heb., he will rest in his love, which makes no sense.

<sup>n</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> So Gk.

<sup>o</sup> 3<sup>18</sup> Following a radical reconstruction of the text suggested by Marti. The Heb. is hopelessly corrupt and makes no sense.

<sup>p</sup> 3<sup>19</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. according to the implication of the context. Heb., I will do.

<sup>q</sup> 3<sup>19</sup> These phrases occur in Mi. 4<sup>6</sup>, 7.

<sup>r</sup> 3<sup>19</sup> Apparently through a scribal error an abbreviated form of the phrase, bring back your captivity, has been added at the end of this vs. In its present form it may be translated, their shame, but it makes little sense in its present context.

<sup>s</sup> 3<sup>20</sup> It is possible that this vs. is secondary, since it does little more than repeat the thought of 1<sup>9</sup>. In the Heb. it is introduced by the phrase, at that time, but this is tautological and is not consistent with the rest of the vs. The initial verb in the Heb. reads, I will bring in. The above reading is based on the Gk.

<sup>t</sup> 3<sup>20</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb. to conform to the reading of the Gk. and Syr. and certain Heb. MSS.

§ 237. The Glorious Destiny of Redeemed Zion, Is. 4<sup>2-6</sup>

Glory
and purity
of the redeemed

Is. 4 <sup>2</sup>In that day shall that which Jehovah causes to spring up<sup>u</sup> be beautiful and glorious,
And the fruit of the land noble and splendid for the escaped of Israel.
<sup>3</sup>And it shall be that he who remains in Zion and is left in Jerusalem
Shall be called holy, yea, every one who is registered for life in Jerusalem, <sup>4</sup>When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion,
And shall have purged Jerusalem's blood stains from her midst,
By the breath of judgment and by the breath of burning.

Jeho-
vah's protecting
presence

<sup>5</sup>He will come<sup>v</sup> and there shall be over all the habitation of Mount Zion and over her assemblies
A cloud by day and smoke with a gleaming flame of fire by night;
For over all his glory is a canopy<sup>w</sup><sup>6</sup> and a covering.
And it shall be a shade<sup>x</sup> by day from the heat,
And a place of refuge and shelter from storm and rain.

Jerusa-
lem's
future
glory

Mi. 4 <sup>1</sup>It shall come to pass in the latter days,
That the mountain of Jehovah will be established,<sup>y</sup>
Even the house of our God on the top of the mountain;
And it shall be lifted above the hills.

§ 237 This short section is the later appendix to Is.'s powerful portrayal of the crimes of Jerusalem and its inhabitants and was intended to be a corrective of the prophet's dark predictions regarding the future of his city and people. It voices the popular but misleading hopes which Isaiah and his contemporaries among the true prophets constantly and vigorously combated. Its language and defective poetical structure, as well as its thought, indicate that it was added by some post-exilic editor of this book rather than by the great prophet himself. Its figures are drawn from the tradition of Jehovah's guidance and protection of his people in the wilderness, by the pillar of fire and the cloud of smoke. Its language implies that the exile has already done its purifying work. The peculiar phrase, inscribed for life, introduces the same peculiar motif as is found in Mal. 3<sup>16</sup>, Dan. 12<sup>1</sup>, and other late Jewish writings. While the popular hopes which it expresses were probably present in the minds of the people as early as the days of Isaiah, the section, in its present form, cannot be dated earlier than the latter part of the Persian or else in the Gk. period.

<sup>u</sup> 4<sup>2</sup> Possibly the author intended by this word, which means lit., shoot, or sprout, to interpret the same term used by the author of Jer. 23<sup>9</sup> in a messianic sense, in the more general impersonal form, which the hopes of Israel had assumed in the later period during which he lived. From the parallelism it is clear that the present term, in this context, means simply the growing fertility of the earth, which was to characterize the messianic age. Cf., e. g., Am. 9<sup>10-12</sup>.

<sup>v</sup> 4<sup>5</sup> So Gk. and O. Lat. Heb., Jehovah will create, is probably due to a corruption of the text.

<sup>w</sup> 4<sup>5</sup> The traditional Heb. text makes no sense and the variations in the MSS. indicate that it is corrupt. The above rendering is based upon a very simple reconstruction, which is strongly supported by the context and the tradition regarding the experiences of the Hebrews during their wilderness wandering.

<sup>x</sup> 4<sup>6</sup> Following the Gk.

§ 238 This is one of the few prophecies which was regarded as so important that it was twice inserted in the O.T. The conception of Jehovah's abode, as exalted above the mountains, was probably derived from old Semitic thought. The Babylonians, e. g., believed that the abode of the gods was on a lofty mountain in the distant north. The Greek belief in Olympus was probably a part of the same ancient tradition. The idea of the nations resorting to Jerusalem was apparently first developed by Zechariah. Cf. § 165. The II Is. also expressed it. Cf. § 185. It had come as a result of that closer contact with the outside world which resulted from the exile. It was a doctrine which was implied, but nowhere distinctly taught, in the

<sup>y</sup> 4<sup>1</sup> Following the superior text of Is. 2<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>2</sup>All<sup>z</sup> the nations shall flow to it,
And many peoples shall go and say,<sup>a</sup>
Come, let us go up to Jehovah's mount,
To the house of the God of Jacob,
That he may instruct us in his ways,
And that we may walk in his paths.
For from Zion proceeds instruction,
And Jehovah's word from Jerusalem;

Seat of divine instruction

<sup>3</sup>He will arbitrate between many peoples,<sup>b</sup>
And render decisions for numerous nations,<sup>c</sup>
They shall beat their swords into ploughshares,
And their spears into pruning hooks;
Nation shall not lift up sword against nation,
Neither shall they learn war any more.

Jeho-
vah's rule of universal
peace

<sup>4</sup>They shall dwell each under his vine,
And under his fig-tree, with none to terrify them;
For the mouth of Jehovah of hosts hath spoken.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>6</sup>In that day, is Jehovah's oracle,
I will assemble that which is lame,
I will gather that which is driven away and which I have afflicted;
<sup>7</sup>I will make that which was lame a remnant,
And that which was cast off<sup>e</sup> a strong nation;
And Jehovah will rule over them
In Mount Zion from now even forever.

Gathering
and restoration of the remnant

§ 239. The Glories of Israel's Future Regeneration, Is. 29<sup>17-24</sup>, 30<sup>18-26</sup>

Is. 29 <sup>17</sup>Surely yet a little while,<sup>f</sup>
And Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful garden,
And a fruitful garden shall be esteemed a forest.

The re-
generation of nature and mankind

---

writings of the pre-exilic prophets. The post-exilic date of this prophecy is further demonstrated by its position in the books of Mi. and Is. In Mi. it stands at the beginning of the group of messianic prophecies which present the hopeful antithesis to Mi.'s grim declaration that Jerusalem should surely be destroyed. In Is. it is also introduced after the prophet's merciless arraignment of the crimes of Jerusalem's leaders and his prediction of the doom which was to overtake the city, and is followed in 2 by a similar message of denunciation and doom.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>42</sup> So Is. 2<sup>2</sup>. The Heb. of Mi. omits the, all, and transposes the words, nations, and, peoples, in this and the succeeding line.

<sup>a</sup> <sup>42</sup> Possibly the words, and say, are secondary.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>43</sup> Is. again transposes the nouns in this and the following line.

<sup>c</sup> <sup>43</sup> So the parallel passage in Is. A scribe has added in Mi., afar off.

<sup>d</sup> <sup>44</sup> Some later editor or scribe has added, for all the people walk each in the name of his god, but we will walk in the name of Jehovah our God forever and ever. This prose note has no close connection with its context and is spoken from an entirely distinct point of view. It also lacks the predictive element which appears in the rest of the chapter.

<sup>e</sup> <sup>47</sup> Possibly this should be revised to read, that which is sick.

<sup>f</sup> 29<sup>17</sup> Lit., is it not yet a very little while, a question expressing definite assurance.

<sup>18</sup>In that day even the deaf shall hear the words of a book,
And out of gloom and darkness the eyes of the blind shall see.
<sup>19</sup>The humble also shall attain fresh joy in Jehovah,
And the poorest of men shall exult in Israel's Holy One.
<sup>20</sup>For the tyrant shall be no more,
And the scoffer shall cease.
All who are zealous for iniquity shall have been cut off;
<sup>21</sup>Who by words make man an offender,
And who lay snares for the arbiter in the gate,
And turn aside the innocent with an empty pretext.

Re-deemed
Israel
will appre-ciate
Jeho-vah's
real charac-ter

<sup>22</sup>Therefore thus saith Jehovah, the God<sup>g</sup> of Jacob,
He who redeemed Abraham:
Henceforth Jacob shall not be put to shame,
Nor shall his face henceforth turn pale.
<sup>23</sup>For when he sees<sup>h</sup> the work of my hands in his midst,
They shall count my name holy;
Yea, they shall count Jacob's Holy One holy,
And they shall regard with dread the God of Israel.
<sup>24</sup>Even those who erred in spirit shall gain insight,
And the murmurers shall receive instruction.

His de-sire to show
mercy

30 <sup>18</sup>Therefore Jehovah longs to be gracious to you, Therefore he rises to show mercy to you,
For Jehovah is a God of justice,
Happy are all who long for him!

His
faithful instruc-tion of his
people

<sup>19</sup>For O ye people in Zion, that dwellest in Jerusalem, thou shalt weep no more;
He will indeed be gracious to thee at the sound of thy cry;
As soon as he heareth it, he hath answered thee:
<sup>20</sup>Though the Lord give to you bread and water in scant measure,
Yet will thy Teacher never again withdraw himself,
But thine eyes shall ever behold thy Teacher,
<sup>21</sup>And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee:
‘This is the way, walk in it:’
Whenever ye swerve to the right or to the left.

Their
rejec-tion of
idols

<sup>22</sup>Then shalt thou defile<sup>i</sup> thy carved images overlaid with silver,
And thy molten images covered with gold;

Psalms. 30<sup>18-25</sup> continues the same theme as 29<sup>17-24</sup>, and the two sections, as Cheyne has suggested, were probably originally a unit. The figure of the Divine Teacher was also first introduced by the II Is. in 50<sup>4, 5</sup>, 54<sup>13</sup>. It is a familiar figure in the later O.T. literature and in the period when the teacher took the place of the earlier prophet. 30<sup>26</sup> has close points of contact with Zech. 14, and the entire passage voices the characteristic hopes of the Jews during the Persian and Gk. periods.

<sup>g</sup> 29<sup>22</sup> So the demands of the context. Heb., to the house of Jacob.

<sup>h</sup> 29<sup>23</sup> Heb. adds the explanatory gloss, his children.

<sup>i</sup> 30<sup>22</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Vulg. and the demands of the context.

Thou shall scatter them as a thing unclean;
 'Begone,' shalt thou say to them.

<sup>23</sup>Then shall he give rain for thy seed, with which thou sowest the ground,
 And the bread, the produce of thy ground,
 It also shall be rich and abundant.
 In that day shall thy cattle feed in a broad pasture;

<sup>24</sup>And the oxen and the young asses that till the ground,
 Salted provender shall they eat,
 That which has been winnowed with shovel and fork.

<sup>25</sup>And there shall be upon every lofty mountain and high hill, Streams of running water,
 In the day of great slaughter, when towers fall.

<sup>26</sup>And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun,
 And the light of the sun shall also be seven fold,<sup>i</sup>
 In the day that Jehovah binds up his people's breach,

Plenty
and prosperity
in the new era

§ 240. The Ideal State of the Future, Is. 32<sup>1-8, 15-20</sup>

Just
rulers

Men to be open to the truth

Fools
to be estimated at their real value

Is. 32 <sup>1</sup>Behold, a king shall reign righteously,
 And princes<sup>k</sup> rule justly.
<sup>2</sup>Each shall be like a hiding-place from the wind,
 Like a covert from the rain storm,
 Like water courses in a parched land,
 Like the shadow of a high rock in a weary land.

<sup>3</sup>The eyes of those who see shall not be closed,
 And the ears of those who hear shall hearken.
<sup>4</sup>The mind of the rash shall discern with judgment,
 The tongues of stammerers shall speak quickly and distinctly,<sup>1</sup>

<sup>5</sup>No more shall the fool be called noble,
 Nor the knave be spoken of as princely.
<sup>6</sup>For the fool speaks folly,

<sup>i</sup> 30<sup>22</sup> So Gk. of Origen. Heb. adds the explanatory note, as the light of seven days. § 240 The emphasis on the ethical character of the rulers reflects the influence of Isaiah's noble teaching. It is clear that the author of this section was at least a spiritual disciple of the great prophet. The style and thought, however, nowhere arises to Isaiah's standards. The section also lacks the concreteness and definiteness which characterized his utterances. Instead, the picture is a general one of the time when those ideals, which Isaiah labored to inculcate, were to be realized. The references to the fool and the knave also suggest the influence of the late wisdom school. It is possible that <sup>6, 7</sup> are a later addition by some sage.

The same ethical idealism appears in 15-20, and in general theme the two passages belong together. It is, of course, impossible to fix a definite date, but it is not probable that they are older than the latter part of the Persian period. More probably they come from the earlier part of the Gk. period, when contact with the courts of Alexandria had revealed the knavery and folly of many of the rulers of the day. The ideal is a nobler one than that which characterizes many of these later prophecies, but the consummation is conceived of as the work of Jehovah, and it lacks the powerful ethical appeal which characterized the writings of the pre-exilic prophets.

<sup>k</sup> 32<sup>1</sup> Heb., to princes, but this form must be due to a scribal error.

<sup>1</sup> 32<sup>4</sup> Lit., make haste to speak distinct. The last word may be a scribal gloss, since it is not necessary for the metre.

Also knives
and noble
men

And his mind contemplates<sup>m</sup> mischief,
To practice impiety,
And to utter error against Jehovah,
To leave the hungry unsatisfied,
And refuse drink to the thirsty.

The
reign of justice

<sup>7</sup>And the knave—his knaveries<sup>n</sup> are evil;
Such a one plans villainies
To ruin the humble with false words,
Even when the plea of the poor is right.
<sup>8</sup>But the noble man plans noble things;
And to noble things shall he attain.

Jeho-
vah's advent
for judgment

<sup>15</sup>The wilderness<sup>o</sup> shall become a fertile garden,<sup>p</sup>
And a fertile garden shall be considered a forest.
<sup>16</sup>Justice shall dwell in the wilderness,
And righteousness shall dwell in the fertile garden.
<sup>17</sup>The fruit of righteousness shall be peace,
And the product of justice<sup>q</sup> confidence.
<sup>18</sup>My people shall dwell in the habitation of peace,
Sure dwellings and quiet resting-places.
<sup>20</sup>Happy are ye who sow beside all waters,
Who speed the feet of the ox and the ass.<sup>r</sup>

§ 241. Jehovah's Judgment upon Israel's Foes, Is. 30<sup>27-33</sup>

Is. 30<sup>27</sup>Behold, the name of Jehovah comes from afar
With burning anger, and with thick rising clouds;
With lips full of rage, and a tongue like a devouring fire;
<sup>28</sup>His breath is like an overflowing torrent which reaches even to the neck,
To sift nations with the sieve of destruction;
And a bridle which leads astray is on the jaws of the people.

<sup>m</sup> 32<sup>6</sup> So Gk., O. Lat., and Targ., supported by the context. Heb., shall do.

<sup>n</sup> 32<sup>7</sup> Lit., his instruments. This word was undoubtedly chosen in order to produce a play on a similar sound in the Heb. word, knave. (kelaw, kelaw.)

<sup>o</sup> 32<sup>15</sup> The first line, which may be translated, until there be poured out upon us a spirit from the height, i. e., from heaven, is either an editorial line, intended to connect the present passage with that which immediately precedes or else it is a fragment from a couplet which has otherwise been lost.

<sup>p</sup> 32<sup>16</sup> Lit., Carmel, the synonym for fertility.

<sup>q</sup> 32<sup>17</sup> Heb., righteousness, but this is simply a synonym of the corresponding word in the parallel couplet.

<sup>r</sup> 32<sup>29</sup> At the close of this vs. there has been introduced a couplet, evidently taken from some other source, which has no connection with the context. It reads:

*And it shall hail when the forest comes down;
And in lowliness shall the city be brought low.*

§ 241 This remarkable passage has the vigorous style but not the ideas of Isaiah. It pictures with powerful realism the great funeral pyre that awaits Israel's foes, here symbolized by Assyria, as often in late Jewish writings. Its picture of the final destruction of the heathen nations is similar to those found in Joel, Dan., and Zech. 14. It is also parallel to Is. 34 and the II Isaiah's picture of Jehovah's invincible warlike might in 63<sup>1-6</sup>. It breathes the spirit of the Maccabean age, but it may come from the middle of the Persian period.

<sup>29</sup>A song shall ye have on your lips as on a night when a feast is celebrated,<sup>s</sup>
And ye shall have gladness of heart like him who sets forth with a flute
To go to the Mount of Jehovah, to the Rock<sup>t</sup> of Israel.

Joy of
his
people

<sup>30</sup>And Jehovah will make his majestic voice heard,
And the descent of his arm to be seen,
In furious anger and the flame of devouring fire,
Cloudburst, and storm, and hailstones.

Final stroke
to fall
upon Israel's
foes

<sup>31</sup>For Assyria at Jehovah's voice shall be stricken<sup>u</sup> with terror, <sup>32</sup>Whenever the appointed stroke falls,

Which Jehovah will cause to fall upon him,
It shall be to the sound of timbrels and lutes;

In battles with brandished arm<sup>v</sup> he shall contend with them.

<sup>33</sup>For already a burning place<sup>w</sup> is prepared;

It had been made ready, deep and wide;

Its pile is blazing wood<sup>x</sup> in abundance;

Jehovah's breath, like a stream of brimstone, kindles it.

§ 242. The Deliverance and Future Blessedness of Zion, Is. 33

Is. 33 <sup>1</sup>Woe, thou spoiler, but thyself not spoiled, Thou robber,<sup>y</sup> whom none has robbed,
When thou hast ceased to despoil, thou shalt be despoiled;
When thou hast made an end<sup>z</sup> of robbing, thou shalt be robbed.

Over-
throw
of the
in-vader

<sup>2</sup>Jehovah, be gracious to us, for we wait for thee;
Be thou our<sup>a</sup> arm of strength every morning,
Yea, our deliverance in time of stress.

Jehovah the deliverer of his
people

<sup>s</sup> 30<sup>29</sup> Lit., the song shall be to you, as on a night when a feast is sanctified.

<sup>t</sup> 30<sup>29</sup> Jehovah is addressed, as a Rock frequently in the Pss., e. g., 31<sup>3</sup>, 71<sup>3</sup>, 89<sup>26</sup>—chiefly in late Jewish literature.

<sup>u</sup> 30<sup>31</sup> Heb. adds, when he smiles with a rod, but this is probably secondary, for it anticipates the thought expressed in the next line.

<sup>v</sup> 30<sup>32</sup> Lit., by battles of swinging. In the light of <sup>30</sup> it would seem that the reference was to the swinging of Jehovah's arm of judgment, although it may refer to the wave offerings.

<sup>w</sup> 30<sup>33</sup> The figure is apparently drawn from the sacrificial pyres anciently reared to the south of Jerusalem. With this thought in mind a scribe has, it would seem, added in the Heb., also to the king, or, to Melek or Milk, a god once worshipped there with human sacrifices.

<sup>x</sup> 30<sup>33</sup> Lit., fire and wood.

<sup>§ 242</sup> The majestic diction and the strong figures in this section suggest Isaiah's vigorous literary style. Many of his characteristic phrases are here found. His conception of Jehovah as the supreme king is also central. It is not impossible that some of these vss. were penned by Isaiah in the closing years of his ministry, and that Sennacherib is the spoiler addressed in the opening vs.

There is much, however, which points to a later date. The spirit of the poem is eschatological and lacks the concreteness of Isaiah's original utterances. The picture of exalted and transformed Jerusalem is characteristic of the later literature. It would seem that the author had before him the cruel, destructive invasion of Artaxerxes Ochus of the later Persian period, or possibly the atrocities of Antiochus Epiphanes, in the earlier part of the second century B.C. Or it may be that he had in mind the historic memory of Sennacherib's invasion, and in imagination projected himself backward into the days of Isaiah. In any case, he proved himself a worthy spiritual disciple of the earlier prophet. Like many of the Psalms the poem begins with a prayer uttered from the point of view of the oppressed community and concludes with a glorious picture of triumph and vindication.

<sup>y</sup> 33<sup>1</sup> So with certain MSS. omitting the, and, of the Heb.

<sup>z</sup> 33<sup>1</sup> Revising the Heb. as the context requires.

<sup>a</sup> 33<sup>2</sup> So Targ., Syr., Lat., and certain Heb. MSS. Heb., their arm.

<sup>3</sup>At the sound of tumult peoples flee,
At thine uplifting nations are scattered, <sup>4</sup>And their<sup>b</sup> booty is gathered as locusts gather,
Like the swarming<sup>c</sup> of grasshoppers the [spoilers] swarm upon it.

The saviour of Zion

<sup>5</sup>Exalted is Jehovah, for he dwelleth on high;
He hath filled Zion with justice and righteousness,
<sup>6</sup>With<sup>d</sup> abundance of salvation, wisdom, and knowledge;
The fear of Jehovah is its treasure.

Ravages of malignant
foes

<sup>7</sup>Behold, the valiant ones<sup>e</sup> cry without,
The messengers of peace weep bitterly.
<sup>8</sup>The highways lie desolate,
Men have ceased to pass along the roads;
He has violated<sup>f</sup> the covenant, despised cities,<sup>g</sup>
Of men he makes no account.
<sup>9</sup>The earth mourns, it languishes;
Lebanon is shamed, it moulders;
Sharon has become like the Arabah;
Bashan and Carmel shake off their leaves.

Jeho-
vah's
rebuke

<sup>10</sup>Now I will arise, saith Jehovah,
Now will I exalt, now will I uplift myself.
<sup>11</sup>Ye conceive hay, ye bring forth stubble,
Your own breath is a fire that shall devour you.
<sup>12</sup>Nations shall be as if burned to lime,
Like thorns cut off, which are set on fire.

Effect
upon
his foes

<sup>13</sup>Those afar off hear<sup>h</sup> what I have done,
And those near by recognize my mighty power.
<sup>14</sup>The sinners in Zion are filled with terror, Shuddering has seized the impious,
Who [of us, they say], can abide with devouring fire?
Who can abide with everlasting burning?

Contrasted
lot of the righteous

<sup>15</sup>He who walks in righteousness, and speaks uprightness,
He who rejects that which is gained through oppression,<sup>i</sup>

<sup>b</sup> 33<sup>4</sup> Heb., your booty.<sup>c</sup> 33<sup>4</sup> Lit., like the gathering of locusts.<sup>d</sup> 33<sup>6</sup> This line is the immediate sequel of the last line in the preceding vs., but the Heb. prefixes to this vs. the line, and there shall be stability in thy times.<sup>e</sup> 33<sup>7</sup> The Heb. is corrupt. The original probably read, ariels, referring to the valiant defenders of Jerusalem. Cf. 29<sup>1</sup>.<sup>f</sup> 33<sup>8</sup> Possibly this last couplet is secondary, for the next two lines appear to voice the occasions for the weeping described in 7.<sup>g</sup> 33<sup>8</sup> Possibly the Heb. should be revised so as to read, proofs, i. e., of the covenant.<sup>h</sup> 33<sup>13</sup> Following the Gk. and O. Lat., instead of the Heb., which has the imperative form of the verb.<sup>i</sup> 33<sup>15</sup> Possibly the last four lines of this vs. are a later scribal expansion after the analogy of Ps. 15, 24.

Who keeps his hand from taking a bribe,<sup>i</sup>
 Who stops his ears from hearing of bloodshed,
 And who shuts his eyes so as not to countenance evil.
<sup>16</sup>He shall dwell in lofty heights,
 The fastnesses of the rock shall be his stronghold,
 His bread is provided, his waters are assured.

<sup>17</sup>The king in his beauty shall thine eyes behold;
 They shall look upon a far-stretching land.
<sup>18</sup>Thy mind shall muse on the terror of the past:
 Where is he that counted, where is he that weighed?
 Where is he who counted the towers?
<sup>19</sup>Thou shalt no more see the insolent people,
 The people of obscure, unintelligible speech,
 Who speak a barbarous meaningless tongue.

Present
woes soon
to be but past memories

<sup>20</sup>Thine<sup>k</sup> eyes shalt see Jerusalem,
 A quiet habitation, a tent that shall not be removed Whose pegs are never drawn out,
 And of its cords, none of them breaks.
<sup>21</sup>But there we have a ‘Glorious One, Jehovah,<sup>l</sup>
 Instead of broad encircling streams;<sup>m</sup>
 In it no fleet of oars can go,
 Neither can stately ship pass by it.

Strength
and security of Jeru-
sa-lem

<sup>22</sup>For Jehovah is our Judge!
 Jehovah is our Commander!
 Jehovah is our King!
 He it is who will deliver us.
<sup>23</sup>Then<sup>n</sup> shall the blind<sup>o</sup> divide booty in abundance;
 The lame shall seize on prey.
<sup>24</sup>And no inhabitant shall say, I am sick;<sup>p</sup>
 The people who dwell therein have had their iniquities forgiven.

Jehovah to give deliverance
and peace
to his loyal
people

<sup>i</sup> 33<sup>15</sup> Lit., shakes his hand free from holding bribes.

<sup>k</sup> 33<sup>20</sup> The Heb. prefixes to this vs., Behold, Zion the city of our festal assembly. This line, however, represents a different point of view and interrupts the sequence of thought. It is probably the exclamation of a later scribe, which has been introduced into the text.

<sup>l</sup> 33<sup>21</sup> By most modern interpreters this line is regarded as corrupt. It has been variously reconstructed so as to read, there have we the river of Jehovah (Cheyne), or, there shall we have a mighty river (Ball), or, for a glorious name shall be ours (Flaup). Each of these interpreters find here an allusion to the river of Paradise, but this is exceedingly abrupt, after the figure of a tent securely fastened in the preceding vs. The above translation is based on the Heb., as it stands, and voices the truth, which is to be anticipated in the present context, namely, that since Jehovah is in the midst of his city there is no need for moats, which would only expose it to the attacks of hostile fleets. This rendering is also in harmony with the meaning in the following vs.

<sup>m</sup> 33<sup>21</sup> A scribe has added in the Heb., stream, a duplicate of the word, rivers.

<sup>n</sup> 33<sup>22</sup> The following words have been prefixed to the vs., thy tacklings hang loose, they do not hold fast the foot of their mast, they have not spread out the sail. It is obvious that these words have no connection with the context. Either it has been introduced here from some other context, or else part of the original Heb. text has been lost.

<sup>o</sup> 33<sup>23</sup> Reconstructing the Heb. as the context suggests.

<sup>p</sup> 33<sup>24</sup> Possibly the original verb read, I have not sinned.

§ 243. Jehovah's Judgment upon the Nations, Is. 34

Is. 34 <sup>1</sup>Draw near, ye nations, to hear,
And give heed, ye peoples,
Let the earth and its inhabitants<sup>q</sup> hear;
The habitable world, and its offspring.
<sup>2</sup>For Jehovah hath indignation against all nations,
And wrath against all their host;
He hath laid a ban upon them, given them up to slaughter.
<sup>3</sup>And their slain shall be cast forth
And their carcasses—a stench from them shall rise.

Slaughter of
the peoplesEffect
upon natureJeho-
vah's day of
judgment
on Edom

Mountains shall melt with their blood.
<sup>4</sup>And all the hills<sup>r</sup> shall dissolve.
The heavens shall roll up like a scroll;
And all their host shall fade away,
As the leaves fade away from the vine,
And as that which fades from the fig-tree.

<sup>5</sup>For drunk with his fury,<sup>s</sup>
Is Jehovah's sword in the heavens;
Behold, it descends upon Edom,
And for judgment upon the people who are under his ban.<sup>t</sup> <sup>6</sup>Jehovah hath a sword gorged with blood,
It is made greasy with fat,
With the blood of lambs and he-goats,
With the fat of the kidneys of rams;
For Jehovah hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,<sup>u</sup>
And a great slaughter in the land of Edom.
<sup>7</sup>Wild oxen shall be struck down with them,
And bullocks together with steers;
Their land shall be drunk with blood,
And their dust made greasy with fat.

§ 243 Chaps. 34 and 35 are counterparts, the one of the other, and their thought is closely interwoven. They are written from the same point of view and in the same style, so that there is little doubt that they are from the same author. They also have many points of contact with the preceding secondary sections in Isaiah, e. g., 30<sup>23</sup>, 31<sup>9</sup>, 32<sup>3</sup>, 4, 33<sup>23</sup>. They are also clearly dependent upon Is. 13, 14. Their contents as well as their points of contact indicate that they are post-exilic, and in style and thought they are so closely related to such passages as 42<sup>13</sup>, 63<sup>1</sup> (cf. § 190) that it is exceedingly probable that they are from the pen of the II Isaiah, or, if not, from some one who closely imitated his literary style and was in full sympathy with his teachings and points of view. In 34 Edom stands clearly as a type of Israel's hostile heathen foes, whose overthrow was necessary before Jehovah's people could be fully re-established in their land and the golden age inaugurated.

<sup>q</sup> 34<sup>1</sup> Lit., its fullness.<sup>r</sup> 34<sup>4</sup> Joining this line to the preceding vs. and reading, hills, instead of, host of heaven, which was probably introduced by the mistake of a scribe, who had in mind the word, host, later in the vs., or who wished to explain the meaning of this word.<sup>s</sup> 34<sup>5</sup> Following the suggestions of Duhm and Cheyne in restoring the defective text. The trad. Heb. reads, for my sword shall be drunken in the heavens, which, of course, makes no sense.<sup>t</sup> 34<sup>5</sup> Heb., my ban, i. e., the people condemned to destruction.<sup>u</sup> 34<sup>6</sup> The chief city of Edom. Cf. Is. 63<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>8</sup>For Jehovah hath a day of vengeance,
A year of reprisal for Zion's feud.

Desola-
tion of
the land of Edom

<sup>9</sup>Edom's streams shall be turned into pitch,
And its dust into brimstone;
Its land shall become pitch,
Burning<sup>v</sup> <sup>10</sup>night and day,
It shall not be quenched forever,
Its smoke shall arise for generations to come;
It shall lie waste to the end of time,
With none passing through it.

<sup>11</sup>The pelican and the bittern shall take possession of it,
The owl and the raven shall dwell in it,
And Jehovah<sup>w</sup> will stretch out upon it
The measuring line of chaos<sup>x</sup> and the plummet of desolation.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Satyrs shall dwell in it,<sup>y</sup>
Its nobles shall cease to be,
There shall be no kingdom there to proclaim,
And all its princes shall be no more.

<sup>13</sup>Its palaces shall grow up to thorns,
Nettles and thistles shall be in its fortresses;
It shall become a haunt of wolves,
A court for ostriches.

Ruins
of its palaces

<sup>14</sup>Wildcats shall join with the howling beasts,<sup>z</sup>
And satyr there shall meet with satyr,<sup>a</sup>
Only the night-monster<sup>b</sup> reposes there,
And finds for herself a place of rest.

<sup>15</sup>There the arrow-snake nests and lays, Broods over and hatches her eggs;<sup>c</sup>
There only the vultures gather,
None is without its mate.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Search it out in the book of Jehovah;<sup>e</sup>
Not one of these is missing;

Jehovah to allot
the land of Edom
to his
people

<sup>v</sup> 34<sup>9</sup> Joining the last word of this sentence with the following vs., as the metre and sense demand.

<sup>w</sup> 34<sup>11</sup> Supplying the, Jehovah, required by the metrical structure of the vs.

<sup>x</sup> 34<sup>11</sup> The Heb. words, thohu, and, bohu, are onomatopoeic and are taken from the opening vss. of Genesis and suggest a return to the primeval state of chaos.

<sup>y</sup> 34<sup>12</sup> Following the Gk. in restoring the first line and the first half of the second line of this vs.

<sup>z</sup> 34<sup>14</sup> The meanings of the nouns in this vs. are doubtful.

<sup>a</sup> 34<sup>14</sup> Lit., to its mate.

<sup>b</sup> 34<sup>14</sup> Lit., lilit, a female night demon, or spirit, which in later Jewish popular belief was supposed to carry away infants and attack people in their sleep. Its prototype in nature was perhaps the vampire.

<sup>c</sup> 34<sup>15</sup> Reversing the order of the verbs as the logic demands, and reading, its eggs, instead of, in its shadow.

<sup>d</sup> 34<sup>15</sup> Transferring the verb from the next vs., where it has been introduced, together with the preceding noun, entirely out of connection with its context. The present disorder of the Heb. text is evidently due to the error of a copyist.

<sup>e</sup> 34<sup>16</sup> A scribe has added, and read, but this destroys the metre of the vs., is unnecessary, and probably secondary.

For the mouth of Jehovah<sup>f</sup>—it hath commanded;
 And his breath—it hath gathered them.
17 He it is who hath cast the lot for them,
 And his hand hath apportioned it to them by line;
 Forever shall they possess it,
 Generation after generation shall they dwell in it.

§ 244. The Golden Age when Jehovah shall have Restored His People, Is. 35

The desert to burst into bloom

Is. 35 <sup>1</sup>Let the wilderness and the parched land rejoice;<sup>g</sup>
 Let the pasture land exult and burst forth, <sup>2</sup>Like the narcissus let it<sup>h</sup> burst into bloom.
 Let it exult with great exultation and shouting.
 The glory of Lebanon is given to it,
 The majesty of Carmel and Sharon;
 These shall see the glory of Jehovah,
 The majesty of our God.

Jehovah to strengthen and deliver
his
people

<sup>3</sup>Strengthen the hands which are relaxed,
 And the tottering knees make firm;
<sup>4</sup>Say to those whose hearts beat fast,
 Be strong, fear not!
 Behold, your God [cometh,
 He will surely<sup>i</sup>] avenge his [people].
 A retribution from God is coming;
 He himself will come to deliver you.

All
physical in-firmiti-es and limitations
to be removed

<sup>5</sup>Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened,
 And the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped;
<sup>6</sup>Then shall the lame leap as a hart,
 And the tongue of the dumb shout with joy.
 For waters break out in the wilderness,
 And torrents in the pasture land.
<sup>7</sup>The parched ground becomes a pool,
 And the thirsty land springs of water;

A highway prepared through
the wilderness
for the purified
people

In the haunt of jackals [and wild-cats]
 Shall be a] resting place [for your flocks and herds,
 And the] court [for ostriches

<sup>f</sup> 34<sup>16</sup> Following five Heb. MSS. in inserting, Jehovah.

<sup>g</sup> 244 For the general introduction to this section, cf. preceding section. Nowhere in the O.T., or in any literature, is there a more beautiful description of that ideal state for which all men long.

<sup>h</sup> 35<sup>1</sup> Slightly correcting the Heb.

<sup>i</sup> 35<sup>2</sup> I. e., the wilderness, the parched land, and the pasture land.

<sup>i</sup> 35<sup>4</sup> This vs. has evidently suffered through errors in transcription. The above rendering is based upon an exceedingly probable restoration by Bickell. The Heb. text, in its present form, is unintelligible.

<sup>j</sup> 35<sup>7</sup> This vs. has evidently suffered very much as <sup>i</sup>. Again the reconstruction of Bickell has been followed. It is largely based on the parallel passage in 34.

Is given up] to reeds and rushes.

<sup>8</sup>And there a pure highway shall arise,<sup>k</sup>

It shall be called, The holy way;

The unclean shall not pass over it,<sup>l</sup>

And no fool shall wander there by mistake.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>9</sup>No lion shall be there,

Nor shall any ravenous beast go up there,

But the redeemed shall walk thereon,<sup>n</sup>

And Jehovah's ransomed ones shall return.

<sup>10</sup>They shall come to Zion with cries of joy,

With rejoicing unceasing upon their heads;

Gladness and joy shall overtake them,

Sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

The re-deemed to return with joy to Zion

§ 245. Jehovah's Universal Judgment, 24, 25<sup>6-12, 1-5</sup>

Is. 24 <sup>1</sup>Behold, Jehovah is about to make the earth deserted and desolate,<sup>o</sup> He turneth it upside down and scattereth its inhabitants. <sup>2</sup>The same fate shall overtake the people and the priest,<sup>p</sup> the servant and his master, the maid and her mistress, the buyer and the seller, the lender and the borrower, the debtor and the creditor. <sup>3</sup>The earth shall be utterly deserted, and completely despoiled,<sup>q</sup> for this is the sentence which Jehovah hath pronounced.

Common
fate awaiting all classes

<sup>k</sup> 35<sup>8</sup> Heb. adds, and way. It is omitted in the Syr. and some Heb. MSS. The superior reading of the Gk. has been followed.

<sup>l</sup> 35<sup>8</sup> Heb. adds the awkward and irrelevant line, And it shall be for those going on a pilgrimage. It apparently represents a marginal comment, added by some scribe.

<sup>m</sup> 35<sup>8</sup> Translating the verb as the parallelism of the vs. requires.

<sup>n</sup> 35<sup>9</sup> Heb. adds, none shall be found, but this destroys the metre and poetic beauty of the vs. and is probably simply a scribal addition.

§ 245 The peculiar style and ideas of 24-27 preclude beyond all shadow of doubt their Isaian authorship. They stand in the book of Isaiah as a preface to the 28-35, which deal chiefly with the deliverance of Jerusalem. It is not entirely clear whether they were written primarily for the position which they now occupy, or whether they were written independently and placed here because they seemed to a later editor to be appropriate. The latter is probably the true explanation.

From internal evidence it is clear that these chapters are not earlier than the Gk. or Maccabean period. The reference in 24<sup>21</sup>, to the punishment of the host of the heavenly height, is an idea which otherwise is not found earlier than the book of Enoch, 18<sup>13-16</sup>; in fact, the entire section is shot through with the apocalyptic and eschatological ideas of later Judaism. The language is vague and symbolic. The heathen are to be gathered together for final judgment and the wicked for destruction. Jehovah's people are to be hidden for a period, 26<sup>20</sup>, and then at the sound of the trumpet, 27<sup>13</sup>, all the dispersed are to be gathered. Jehovah is to be enthroned on Mount Zion, and even the righteous dead are to rise from the dust and be brought back to life under the invigorating influence of the heavenly dew. The atmosphere of these chapters is therefore that of the second half of the books of Daniel and Zechariah and of still later Jewish writings. The historical allusions are so vague that it is impossible to determine the date of these chapters with certainty, and, for the same reason, their exact dating is not important. The earliest probable date is at the beginning of the Gk. period, soon after the merciless persecutions of Artaxerxes Ochus. If this date be correct, the event which stirred the imagination of the author or authors of this passage was the victorious march of Alexander and the rapid overthrow of kingdoms and empires, which resulted from his widely extended conquests. Duhm and Marti would assign them to a later date, between 135-106 B.C., during the reign of John Hyrcanus, and would find in 26 an allusion to the destruction of Samaria by that Maccabean ruler. It is not impossible that these chapters, even at this late date, have been inserted in the book of Isaiah, but, as has already been said, the internal evidence is not sufficient to make any dating absolutely assured. The evidence, as a whole, however, points to a very late date, and the best

<sup>o</sup> 24<sup>1</sup> The above translation aims to bring out the assonance of the two Heb. verbs.

<sup>p</sup> 24<sup>2</sup> Lit., as people, as priest, etc.

<sup>q</sup> 24<sup>3</sup> Again endeavoring to bring out the assonance of the Heb.

Effect
of men's guilt

<sup>4</sup>The earth mourns, it fades away,
The world fails, it fades away,
High heaven, like the earth, fails.<sup>r</sup>
<sup>5</sup>The earth has been defiled by<sup>s</sup> its inhabitants;
For they have transgressed laws, violated a statute,
Broken the everlasting covenant!
<sup>6</sup>Therefore a curse consumes the earth,
And those who dwell upon it pay the penalty of guilt,
Therefore the inhabitants of the earth burn,
But a very few men are left.

The passing of all joy and mirth

<sup>7</sup>The new wine fails, the vine fades,
All the glad of heart do sigh,
<sup>8</sup>The joy of timbrels ceases,
The noise of those who rejoice ends,
The joy of the harp ceases.
<sup>9</sup>They no more drink wine with song,
Strong drink is bitter to those who drink it.
<sup>10</sup>Shattered is the City of Chaos;
Every house is closed so that it cannot be entered.
<sup>11</sup>There is an outcry in the streets for lack of wine,
All gladness has passed away,<sup>t</sup>
Joy is banished from the earth.
<sup>12</sup>Desolation is left in the city,
And the gate is battered into ruins.
<sup>13</sup>For thus shall it be in the midst of the earth,
Among the peoples as at the beating of the olive tree,
As the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is over,

Distant
peoples
honor
Jeho-
vah

<sup>14</sup>Yonder some lift up their voice, they cry aloud;
Because of Jehovah's majesty they shout from the sea.
<sup>15</sup>Therefore in the lands of the east give honor to Jehovah,

explanations of the various allusions contained in these chapters is that the author or authors had in mind the afflictions through which the Jews passed during the early part of the Maccabean period, and the subsequent victories under the Maccabean leaders.

The unity of these chapters is not clear. 25<sup>6-8</sup>, with its reference in <sup>6, 7</sup> to, this mountain, is evidently the immediate sequel to 24<sup>23</sup>. It is not so certain, however, that 26<sup>20, 21</sup> and 27<sup>1, 12, 13</sup> are, as is urged by Duhm and Cheyne, the original sequels to 24<sup>1-22</sup> and 25<sup>6-8</sup>. It is true that they also refer to the coming judgment, but they are message of comfort to the Jews rather than an announcement of the destruction of the heathen. It seems, on the whole, that these chapters have been supplemented by several later songs, but they fall, according to their contents, into two large divisions; 24, 25 contain pictures of the last judgment, while 26, 27 contain messages of encouragement to Jehovah's people.

The song in 25<sup>1-5</sup> has no connection with the context in which it stands and was clearly placed there by a later hand. Its theme, however, is exultation over Jehovah's overthrow of a certain heathen city or of foreign peoples in general, and its theme may well have been suggested by the contents of 24, 25. In any case, its most natural position is at the end, rather than between these chapters.

<sup>r</sup> 24<sup>4</sup> Correcting an obvious error in the Heb., which reads, the height of the people of the earth.

<sup>s</sup> 24<sup>5</sup> Lit., under.

<sup>t</sup> 24<sup>11</sup> Transposing the Heb. letters. The traditional Heb. form is not found outside this context and is probably corrupt.

In the coast-lands of the sea is the name of Jehovah, Israel's God.

<sup>16</sup>From the borders of the earth<sup>u</sup> we have heard songs of praise, honor to the righteous.

But I say, I pine, I pine! woe is me!

Robbers rob! yea, Robbery! Robbers rob!

Present
woe
and terror

<sup>17</sup>Panic, pitfall,<sup>v</sup> and plot are upon thee, O inhabitant of earth!

<sup>18</sup>Whoever flees from the noise of the panic shall fall into the pit,
And whoever escapes from the pit shall be taken in the plot;

For lattices from high heaven are opened,
And the foundations of the earth quake.

Upheavals
in nature

<sup>19</sup>The breaking earth breaks,

The cracking earth cracks,

The shaking earth shakes,

<sup>20</sup>The reeling earth reels like a drunkard,

And it rocks to and fro like a hammock;

Its transgression rests heavily upon it;

It falls and never again will rise.

<sup>21</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day,

That Jehovah will punish the host of the heavenly height,<sup>w</sup>

And the kings of the earth upon the earth.

Punish-
ment
of all rebels
in heaven and on earth

<sup>22</sup>They shall be gathered together as prisoners into a pit,

And they shall be shut up in dungeons,

And after many days they shall be punished.

<sup>23</sup>Then shall the moon be confounded and the sun put to shame,<sup>x</sup>

Because Jehovah of hosts is king in Mount Zion and Jerusalem,

And before his elders there shall be glory.

25 <sup>6</sup>And Jehovah of hosts will make
On this mountain for all the peoples
A feast of fat things, a feast of old wine,<sup>y</sup>
Of fat kine full of marrow, of old wine well refined.

Vindi-
cation
of Jehovah's
people
by the destruction of
the heathen

<sup>7</sup>And on this mountain he will destroy

The surface of the veil that veils all peoples,

And the covering that covers all nations.

<sup>8</sup>He hath destroyed death forever,

And the Lord Jehovah will wipe away tears from all faces;

The reproach of his people will he remove from all the earth,

For Jehovah hath spoken.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>u</sup> 24<sup>16</sup> So Gk. Heb., from the wing of the earth.

<sup>v</sup> 24<sup>17</sup> Lit., snare, or trap. The above translation attempts to bring out the assonance of the Heb. words, which is marked throughout this passage.

<sup>w</sup> 24<sup>21</sup> Lit., host of high heaven on high. Evidently a reference to the angelic beings in contrast to the earthly king.

<sup>x</sup> 24<sup>23</sup> The metre of this passage is exceedingly irregular.

<sup>y</sup> 25<sup>6</sup> Lit., of wine on the lees.

<sup>z</sup> 25<sup>8</sup> The connection of this line with the rest of the context is so loose that it may be secondary.

The signal deliv-
erance

<sup>9</sup> And it shall be said in that day,
Behold, our God,<sup>a</sup> for he will deliver us,
This is Jehovah, for whom we have waited;
Let us exult and rejoice in his deliverance.
<sup>10</sup> For the hand of Jehovah will rest upon this mountain,
But Moab<sup>b</sup> shall be trodden down in its place,
As a straw heap is trodden down in the water of the dung pit.
<sup>11</sup> And though he spread out his hands therein,
As a swimmer spreads out his hands to swim,
His pride shall be brought low, together with his artifices.<sup>c</sup>

Jeho-
vah's invincible
power

<sup>1</sup> Jehovah, thou art my God,
I exalt thee, I will praise thy name,
Thou hast wrought marvelous deeds,
Counsels of old—established sure!
<sup>2</sup> Thou hast reduced a citadel<sup>d</sup> to a mound,
To ruin a fortified city;
A proud<sup>e</sup> palace is a city no more,
Nor shall it ever again be rebuilt.
<sup>3</sup> Therefore a strong people honor thee,<sup>f</sup>
Fierce nations shall fear thee;
<sup>4</sup> For thou hast been a stronghold to the helpless,
A stronghold to the needy in his distress,
A refuge from storm, a shadow from heat,
When the blast of the fierce ones
Is as a rainstorm<sup>g</sup> in winter,<sup>5</sup> as heat in a parched land.
The insolence of the proud ones<sup>h</sup> thou layest low,<sup>i</sup>
The song of the fierce one thou<sup>j</sup> stillest.

<sup>a</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> A scribe has repeated the words, this is the one for whom we wait, from the latter part of the vs. The original place of this clause is not entirely clear.

<sup>b</sup> 25<sup>h</sup> Possibly the original read, enemy. If not, it is possible that Moab here stands as a type of Israel's traditional foes, although it is not improbable that the author had in mind a specific event.

<sup>c</sup> 25<sup>h</sup> The Heb. adds, and thy steep fortified walls, he brings down, lays low, levels with the ground, even with the dust. This prose note is clearly a scribal duplicate of 26<sup>g</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> Correcting the Heb., which reads, from the city.

<sup>e</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> Heb., of strangers, but a slight change gives the above harmonious reading.

<sup>f</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> Heb. adds, city, but the pl. verb indicates that the present text is corrupt. Either some words have been lost or else, as seems more probable, city, has been added by a scribe, who had in mind some specific city. Without this addition the text is complete.

<sup>g</sup> 25<sup>h</sup> Correcting the Heb. according to the demands of the parallelism. Heb., wall. By many this vs. is radically reconstructed, but the result is far from satisfactory. The traditional Heb. text on the whole gives the best rendering.

<sup>h</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> Reading with the Gk., proud ones, instead of the Heb., strangers. Cf. note <sup>e</sup>.

<sup>i</sup> 25<sup>g</sup> Through a scribal repetition of the words beginning the vs., the Heb. adds, heat by the shade of a cloud, but this makes no sense and is clearly secondary

<sup>j</sup> 25<sup>h</sup> Heb., he.

§ 246. Jehovah's Care for His People, Is. 26, 27

Is. 26 <sup>1</sup>In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah:
 A strong city is ours; deliverance he appoints for walls and bulwarks.
<sup>2</sup>Open ye the gates that there may enter a righteous nation that keepest faith.
<sup>3</sup>A steadfast mind thou keepest in peace,<sup>k</sup> for it trusts in thee.
<sup>4</sup>Trust ye in Jehovah forever, for<sup>l</sup> Jehovah is the Rock of Ages.
<sup>5</sup>For he hath cast down those who dwelt on high, the lofty city, Laying it low<sup>m</sup> to the earth, bringing it even to the dust.
<sup>6</sup>The feet<sup>n</sup> of the afflicted trample it, the steps of the helpless.

Protec-tion for those who trust
him

<sup>7</sup>The path for the righteous is straight,<sup>o</sup> the road of the righteous thou makest level.

Guidance
for the righteous

<sup>8</sup>Yea, in the paths of thy judgments, O Jehovah, have we waited for thee;
 Thy name and thy memorial have been the desire of our soul.

<sup>9</sup>With my soul have I desired thee;<sup>p</sup> yea, with my spirit within me I seek thee earnestly;
 When<sup>q</sup> thy judgments are on the earth, the inhabitants of the world learn righteousness.

<sup>10</sup>Though mercy be shown to the wicked, he will not learn righteousness even in the land of rectitude;

Retribu-tion
for the wicked

He goeth on doing mischief and will not see Jehovah's majesty.

<sup>11</sup>Thy<sup>r</sup> hand was lifted up, yet they saw it not; let them see it and be put to shame;
 Let thy jealousy for thy people,<sup>s</sup> yea, the fire intended for thine enemies, devour them, O Jehovah.

§ 246 This section, like the preceding, abounds in obscurities and difficult problems. It evidently comes, however, from the same general period and circle of thought. Chap. 26 may also be from the same author; but the lyrical element is much more prominent. It is indeed a psalm, and its aim is to encourage the Jews in the crisis through which they were passing. It has much in common with many of the later psalms of the Psalter. In the originality of its thought and diction it is one of the striking passages of the O.T. Notwithstanding the many cases of assonance and alliteration which characterize this, in common with the preceding section, it is full of noble spiritual ideals, although at times Israel's narrower nationalistic ideals find expression. It is also unique because, like the closing chapter of Daniel, it voices Israel's new-born faith in the personal immortality of the righteous. As in the book of Daniel, it is apparently a belief in a bodily resurrection, which will enable the pious, who have passed away, to return to earth from the land of the shades and participate in the glories of Jehovah's messianic kingdom.

The unity of 27 is far less obvious. Vss. 2-8 contain a song, apparently based on Isaiah's song of the vineyard in 5<sup>1-7</sup>. 27<sup>6-11</sup> is the most difficult passage in these chapters. It is an exhortation rather than a prediction. The heathen practices of the Judean community are here condemned, very much as in Micah 5<sup>10-13</sup>, and its guilt is the prophet's explanation of the calamity which either had already or then threatened to overtake Jerusalem. The passage would therefore seem to be either an earlier or a later prophecy which has been injected into the present context.

<sup>k</sup> 26<sup>3</sup> A scribe, through an error, has repeated the word, peace.

<sup>l</sup> 26<sup>4</sup> Through a scribal repetition the Heb. adds, in Jah.

<sup>m</sup> 26<sup>5</sup> Again a scribe has repeated the verb by mistake.

<sup>n</sup> 26<sup>6</sup> Through another error of dittoigraphy the word, foot, has been repeated.

<sup>o</sup> 26<sup>7</sup> Through a similar error, upright, or, straight, has been repeated.

<sup>p</sup> 26<sup>9</sup> The Heb. adds, by night. Possibly this is original and the words in the latter part of the vs., translated, within me, should be reconstructed so as to read, in the morning. It is more probable, however, that, by night, was added by a scribe who mistook the translation of the latter clause.

<sup>q</sup> 26<sup>9</sup> Heb. has an unintelligible gloss, which the Gk. translated, as light.

<sup>r</sup> 26<sup>11</sup> Through a scribal error, Jehovah, has been repeated from the end of the preceding vs.

<sup>s</sup> 26<sup>11</sup> Lit., jealousy of people, yea fire of thy foes.

<sup>12</sup>Oh, do thou ordain peace for us, for, indeed, thou hast wrought for us all our work.

O Jehovah,<sup>t</sup> <sup>13</sup>our God, lords other than thyself have had dominion over us; Only of thee [do we make our boast],<sup>u</sup> thy name do we praise.

<sup>14</sup>The dead shall not live again;<sup>v</sup> the shades shall not rise;

To that end thou didst punish and destroy them, and make to perish all memory of them.

Present distress to be followed by future glorifi-
cation

<sup>15</sup>Thou hast increased the nation,<sup>w</sup> glorified thyself, and hast extended all the borders of the land.

<sup>16</sup>In<sup>x</sup> distress we<sup>y</sup> sought after thee, we cried out<sup>z</sup> in anguish, when thy discipline was upon us.

<sup>17</sup>As a pregnant woman who draws near her time,<sup>a</sup> cries out in pain; So have we been crying<sup>b</sup> out before thee, O Jehovah.

<sup>18</sup>We were pregnant, we were in travail, yet we brought nothing forth,<sup>c</sup> We brought not deliverance to the land, nor were the inhabitants of the world born.

<sup>19</sup>Thy dead shall arise; they who dwell in the dust shall awake<sup>d</sup> and shout for joy.<sup>e</sup>

For dew of lights is thy dew, and the earth shall bring the shades to life.

<sup>20</sup>Come, my people, enter into thy chambers and shut thy doors behind thee; Hide thyself for a little time, until the indignation pass over.

<sup>21</sup>For behold, Jehovah is coming forth from his place To punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; Then the earth shall disclose its deeds of bloodshed, And it shall no more cover its slain.

<sup>27</sup> <sup>1</sup>In that day Jehovah will punish with his sword—his hard and great and strong sword—

The Leviathan, the fleeing serpent,<sup>f</sup> and the Leviathan, the coiled serpent, And he will slay the monster, which is in the sea.

<sup>t</sup> 26<sup>12</sup> Joining the first word of this line with the end of the preceding vs., as the metre requires.

<sup>u</sup> 26<sup>13</sup> Slightly reconstructing the corrupt Heb. and with Cheyne and Duhm supplying the Heb. word required to make the sense complete.

<sup>v</sup> 26<sup>14</sup> The reference is apparently to those of Israel's foes, who had died. Otherwise this vs. would be a direct contradiction of <sup>19</sup>.

<sup>w</sup> 26<sup>15</sup> Through a scribal error the Heb. adds, O Jehovah, thou hast increased the nation.

<sup>x</sup> 26<sup>16</sup> The line opens with, O Jehovah, but inasmuch as the line is already over-full, it is probable that this is a later addition.

<sup>y</sup> 26<sup>16</sup> Following certain Gk. MSS., which are supported by the demands of the context. Heb., they sought.

<sup>z</sup> 26<sup>16</sup> Reconstructing, with Cheyne, the corrupt Heb.

<sup>a</sup> 26<sup>17</sup> The Heb. adds, is in travail, but this is probably due to a scribe, who had the next vs. in mind.

<sup>b</sup> 26<sup>17</sup> Lit., so we have been.

<sup>c</sup> 26<sup>18</sup> Lit., we have, as it were, brought forth wind.

<sup>d</sup> 26<sup>19</sup> The Heb. reads, thy dead shall live, my dead body shall rise, but this is probably due to a scribal expansion of the text. The Gk., which apparently has the original reading, has been followed.

<sup>e</sup> 26<sup>19</sup> So Gk., Aquila, Sym., and Theod. The Heb. verbs are in the imperative.

<sup>f</sup> 27<sup>1</sup> The fleeing serpent may symbolize Assyria, that is, as in later Jewish writings, the Syrian kingdom, with its capital at Antioch, and the coiled serpent the kingdom of the Ptolemies in Egypt. Cf. <sup>13</sup>. The monster which is in the sea, in that case, would be Greece, or possibly Rome. The identifications, however, are uncertain because the date of the prophecy is unknown.

<sup>2</sup>And it shall be said<sup>g</sup> in that day: A pleasing<sup>h</sup> vineyard! sing of it,

<sup>3</sup>I, Jehovah, am the one who guards it!

Each moment I water it, lest harm should befall it;

Night and day I guard it, <sup>4</sup>no wrath have I.

Would that before me might appear briars<sup>i</sup> and thorns;

For war would I march against them, all of them would I burn.

<sup>5</sup>Or else let them cling to my stronghold, let them make peace<sup>j</sup> with me.<sup>k</sup>

Promise of tender care
for his
people

<sup>7</sup>Hath he smitten it, as he hath smitten its smiter?

Or was it slain as its slayers<sup>l</sup> have been slain?<sup>m</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Therefore by this means may Jacob's guilt be expiated,

And this is the desired fruit of removing his sins,

That he should make all her altar-stones like crushed chalk-stones,

That the asheras and the sun-pillars stand erect no more.

<sup>10</sup>For the fortified city is solitary,

A habitation bereft<sup>n</sup> of its people, and forsaken like the wilderness;

There calves feed, they lie down, and consume its branches.

<sup>11</sup>When its twigs are dry, they are broken off,

Women come and set them ablaze;

For it is not a people with discernment;

Therefore its Maker hath no pity upon it,

And he who formed it shall show it no favor.

Past
and present
affection for their purifi-
cation

<sup>12</sup>And it shall come to pass in that day that Jehovah will beat off its fruit

From the flood of the River<sup>o</sup> to the Brook of Egypt;

And ye shall be gleaned, one by one, ye children of Israel.

<sup>13</sup>And on that day a blast of a great trumpet shall be blown;

And those who have been lost in the land of Assyria<sup>p</sup> shall come,

And those who were outcasts in the land of Egypt;

And they shall worship Jehovah in the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

Restoration
of all
the widely scattered
exiles

<sup>g</sup> 27<sup>2</sup> Supplying the verb. The Heb. simply reads, in that day.

<sup>h</sup> 27<sup>2</sup> Following the Gk. in correcting the Heb., which reads, a vineyard of wine.

<sup>i</sup> 27<sup>4</sup> Heb., briar thorn. Certain of the Heb. MSS., the Syr., and Lat. have the required conjunction and read the nouns as plurals.

<sup>j</sup> 27<sup>5</sup> Through the mistake of a scribe the words, and make peace with me, have been repeated.

<sup>k</sup> 27<sup>5</sup> To connect <sup>5</sup> and <sup>7</sup> a scribe has apparently added the vs., in days to come, Jacob shall take root, Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the surface of the world with fruit.

<sup>l</sup> 27<sup>7</sup> Restoring the Heb. with the aid of the Gk. and Syr.

<sup>m</sup> 27<sup>7</sup> Vs. <sup>8</sup> is probably a marginal gloss. It reads, *By frightening her away, by driving her forth, thou dost (Heb., he does) contend with them; he hath removed her with his rough blast, in the day of the east wind*. The vs. makes no sense in its present setting.

<sup>n</sup> 27<sup>10</sup> Lit., sent away.

<sup>o</sup> 27<sup>12</sup> I. e., the Euphrates.

<sup>p</sup> 27<sup>13</sup> The common designation, in later Jewish literature, of the Syrian kingdom.

APPENDIX

APPENDIX

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY AND DETAILED REFERENCES

HISTORIES OF ISRAEL, CF. VOL. II, 485-6

---

GENERAL INTRODUCTIONS TO THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

Batten, The Hebrew Prophet, 1905.
Bennett, The Post-exilic Prophets, 1907.
Bennett and Adeney, A Biblical Introduction, 1899.
Cheyne and Volz, Prophetic Literature, in Encyclopædia Biblica, 1902.
Cornill, The Prophets of Israel, 1898.
“ Introduction to the Canonical Books of the Old Testament, 1907.
Davidson, Prophecy and the Prophets, in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, 1901.
“ Old Testament Prophecy, 1904.
Driver, Introduction to the Literature of the Old Testament,<sup>10</sup> 1901.
Duhm, Die Gottgeweihten in der alten Religion, 1905.
Von Franch, Die Prophetie in der Zeit vor Amos, 1905.
Gray, Growth of Prophetic Literature, in New World, March, 1899.
Harper, The Prophetic Element in the Old Testament, 1904.
“ Introduction to Commentary on Amos and Hosea, 1905.
Kent, The Kings and Prophets of Israel and Judah, 1909.
Kittel, Die Berufsbegabung der alttestamentlichen Propheten, 1897.
“ Profetie und Weissagung, 1899.
Kleinert, Die Propheten Israels in socialer Beziehung, 1905.
Köhler, Der Prophetismus der Hebräer und die Mantik der Griechen in ihren gegenseitigen Verhältniss, 1861.
König, Der ältere Prophetismus, 1907.
Kraetzschmar, Prophet und Scher in alten Israel, 1901.
Kuenen, Prophets and Prophecy in Israel, 1877.
Lotz, Geschichte und Offenbahrung in das alten Testament, 1891.
McFadyen, Introduction to the Old Testament, 1905.
Michele, Israels Propheten als Träger der Offenbahrung, 1898.
Oehler, Das Verhältniss der alttestamentlichen Prophetie zur heidenischen Mantik, 1861.
Orelli, Old Testament Prophecy, 1885.
Schwartzkoff, Die Prophetische Offenbahrung, 1896.
Smith, W. R., Prophets of Israel,<sup>2</sup> 1895.
Wellhausen, Reste arabischen Heidenthums, 1897.
Wünche, Die Schönheit der Bibel, I, 1906.

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

INTRODUCTIONS TO SPECIAL PROPHETIC BOOKS

Isaiah

Cheyne, Introduction to the Book of Isaiah, 1895.
Driver, Isaiah, his Life and Times, 1887.
Gates, Fulfilment of Prediction in Isaiah 40–48, in Am. Jour. of Theol., III (1899), pp. 67–83.
Giesbrecht, Beiträge zur Jesaikritik, 1890.
König, The Exiles' Book of Consolation, 1899.
Meinholt, Die Jesaja Erzählungen, 1898.
Roy, Israel und die Welt in Jesaja 40–55, 1903.

Jeremiah

Cheyne, Jeremiah, his Life and Times, 1888.
Davidson, Jeremiah, in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, 1902.
Erbt, Jeremia und seine Zeit, 1900.
Lazarus, Der Prophet Jeremias, 1894.
Schmidt, The Book of Jeremiah, in the Encyclopædia Biblica, 1902.
Streane, The Double Text of Jeremiah, 1896.

Ezekiel

Bertholet, Die Verfassungsentwurf des Hesekiel, 1896.
Gautier, La mission du prophète Ézéchiel, 1891.
Skinner, Ezekiel, in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, 1902.
Toy, The Book of Ezekiel, in Encyclopædia Biblica, 1902.

COMMENTARIES AND TRANSLATIONS

Isaiah

Box, The Book of Isaiah, 1908.
Cheyne, The Prophecies of Isaiah, I, II, 1886.
“ A Critical Edition of the Hebrew Text of Isaiah, in S. B. O. T., 1899.
“ A New English Translation of Isaiah, 1898.
Delitzsch, Biblical Commentary on the Prophecies of Isaiah, 1892.
Dillman, Der Prophet Jesaja erklärt, 1898.
Duhm, Das Buch Jesaja, 1900.
Ewald, Commentary on the Prophets of the Old Testament, 1875–81.
Klostermann, Deuterojesaja, Hebräisch und Deutsch, mit Anmerkungen, 1893.
Marti, Das Buch Jesaja, 1900.

COMMENTARIES AND TRANSLATIONS

Mitchell, Isaiah, 1897.

Orelli, The Prophecies of Isaiah, 1889.

Skinner, Isaiah, I, II, in Cambridge Bible Series.

Smith, George Adam, The Book of Isaiah, I, II, 1899.

Staerk, Die Dichtung Jesaias, 1907.

Jeremiah

Ball, The Prophecies of Jeremiah, 1890.

Bennett, The Book of Jeremiah, Chapters XXI-LII, 1895.

Brown, The Book of the Prophet Jeremiah, 1906.

Cheyne, Jeremiah.

Cornill, Das Buch Jeremia erklärt, 1905.

Driver, The Book of the Prophet Jeremiah, 1906.

Duhm, Das Buch Jeremia, 1901.

Giesebrecht, Das Buch Jeremia,<sup>2</sup> 1907.

“ Jeremias Metrik am Texte dargestellt, 1905.

Orelli, The Prophecies of Jeremiah, 1889.

Workman, The Text of Jeremiah, 1889.

Ezekiel

Bertholet, Das Buch Hesekiel, 1897.

Cornill, Der Prophet Ezechiel, 1882.

“ Das Buch des Propheten Ezechiel, 1896.

Davidson, Ezekiel, 1893.

Gautier, La mission du prophète Ezekiel, 1891.

Jahn, Das Buch Ezechiel auf Grund der Septuaginta hergestellt, übersetzt und kritisch erklärt, 1905.

Kraetzschar, Das Buch Ezechiel, 1900.

Müller, Ezechiel-Studien, 1895.

Orelli, Das Buch Ezechiel, 1896.

Sanders and Kent, Messages of the Later Prophets, 1901.

Skinner, The Book of Ezekiel, 1895.

Smend, Der Prophet Ezechiel, 1880.

Redpath, The Book of the Prophet Ezekiel, 1907.

Daniel

Behrmann, Das Buch Daniel, 1894.

Bevan, A Short Commentary on the Book of Daniel, 1892.

Driver, The Book of Daniel, with Introduction and Notes, 1900.

Farrar, The Book of Daniel, 1895.

Jahn, Das Buch Daniel nach der Septuaginta hergestellt, übersetzt und kritisch erklärt, 1904.

Marti, Das Buch Daniel, 1901.

Meinholt, Daniel ausgelegt, 1889.

Prince, A Critical Commentary on the Book of Daniel, 1899.

Wright, Daniel and his Critics, 1906.

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

Book of the Twelve Minor Prophets

Driver, The Minor Prophets, 1906.
Hitzig, Die zwölf kleinen Propheten erklärt, 1881.
Horton, The Minor Prophets, 1904.
Marti, Dodekapropheton erklärt, 1904.
Nowack, Die kleinen Propheten, 1903.
Orelli, The Twelve Minor Prophets, 1893.
Sanders and Kent, Messages of the Earlier Prophets, 1900.
Smith, George Adam, The Book of the Twelve Prophets, Commonly Called the Minor, I, II, 1896–98.
Wellhausen, Die kleinen Propheten übersetzt und erklärt, 1898.

Hosea, Joel, Amos

Baumann, Der Aufbau der Amosreden, 1903.
Cheyne, Hosea, with Notes and Introduction, 1884.
Driver, The Books of Joel and Amos, with Introduction and Notes, 1901.
Elhorst, De Prophetie van Amos, 1900.
Harper, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on Amos and Hosea, 1905.
Lohr, Untersuchungen zum Buch Amos, 1901.
Meinholt und Leitzmann, Der Prophet Amos hebräisch und griechisch herausgegeben, 1906.
Mitchell, Amos, an Essay in Exegesis, 1900.
Seesemann, Israel und Juda bei Amos und Hosea, nebst einem Exkurs über Hosea 1–3.
Sievers, Amos metrisch bearbeitet, 1907.
Simson, Der Prophet Hosea erklärt und übersetzt, 1851.
Valeton, Amos and Hosea, 1898.
Wünsche, Der Prophet Hosea übersetzt und erklärt mit Benutzung der Targumim und der jüdischen Ausleger Raschi Aben Ezra, und Kimchi, 1898, 1868.

Obadiah and Jonah

Bachmann, Der Prophet Obadja, 1892.
Perowne, Obadiah and Jonah, with Notes and Introduction, 1883.
Peters, Die Prophetie Obadjah's untersucht und erklärt, 1892.
Schmitt, Jona Eine Untersuchung zur vergleichenden Religionsgeschichte, 1907.

Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk

Cheyne, Micah, 1882.
Davidson, Nahum, Habakkuk and Zephaniah, 1896.
Delitzsch, Der Prophet Habakkuk ausgelegt, 1843.
Duhm, Das Buch Habakuk, 1906.
Elhorst, De Prophetie van Micha, 1891.
Happel, Das Buch des Propheten Nahum, 1902.

MESSIANIC PROPHECY

Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi

Andre, Le prophète Aggee, 1895.

Kohler, Die nachexilischen Propheten erklärt, 1860.

Kuiper, Zacharja IX-XIV, eine exegesisch-critische Studie, 1894.

Perowne, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, 1886.

Rubinkam, The Second Part of the Book of Zechariah, 1892.

Wright, Zechariah and His Prophecies, 1879.

RELIGION OF THE PROPHETS

Addis, Hebrew Religion to the Establishment of Judaism under Ezra, 1907.

Barton, A Sketch of Semitic Origins, Social and Religious, 1902.

Baelthgen, Beiträge zur semitischen Religionsgeschichte, 1888.

Baudissin, Studien zur semitischen Religionsgeschichte, 1878.

Budde, Religion of Israel to the Exile, 1899.

Davidson, Theology of the Old Testament, 1904.

Duhm, Theologie der Propheten, 1878.

Kautzsch, Religion of Israel, in Extra Vol. Hastings' D.B.

Kirkpatrick, Doctrine of the Prophets, 1901.

Marti, The Religion of the Old Testament, 1907.

Mitchell, The Theology of Jeremiah, in JBL., XX, 56-76.

Montefiore, Religion of the Ancient Hebrews, 1892.

Ottley, Religion of Israel, 1905.

Schultz, Old Testament Theology, I, II, 1892.

Smend, Lehrbuch der alttestamentlichen Religionsgeschichte, 1893.

Smith, W. R., Religion of the Semites, 1894.

Stade, Biblische Theologie des A.T., 1905.

Toy, The Pre-Prophetic Religion of Israel, in the New World, 1896, pp. 125 ff.

MESSIANIC PROPHECY

Adeney, The Hebrew Utopia, 1879.

Baldensperger, Die messianisch-apokalyptischen Hoffnung des Judenthums, 1903.

Briggs, Messianic Prophecy, 1886.

Bruce, Apologetics, Bk. II, Chaps. iii and vi.

Bousset, Die jüdisch apokalyptik, 1903.

Charles, Eschatology, Hebrew, Jewish and Christian, 1899.

Delitzsch, Messianic Prophecies in Historical Succession, 1891.

Goodspeed, Israel's Messianic Hope, 1900 (Valuable bibliography of earlier books on the subject, pp. 289-299).

Gressman, Der Ursprung des Israelitisch-jüdischen eschatologie, 1905.

Hackmann, Die Zukunftserwartung des Jesaja, 1893.

Hühn, Die Messianischen Weissagungen, 1899.

DETAILED REFERENCES

Lohr, Der Missiongedanke im A.T., 1896.
Matthews, Messianic Prophecy in the New Testament, 1903.
Orelli, The Old Testament Prophecy of the Consummation of God's Kingdom, 1889.
Osterley, Evolution of the Messianic Idea, 1908.
Riehm, Messianic Prophecy, 1900.
Stanton, The Jewish and Christian Messiah, 1886.
Volz, Die Vorexilische Jahwe Prophetie und der Messias, 1897.
“Jüdische Eschatologie von Daniel bis Akiba, 1903.
Woods, The Hope of Israel, 1896.

THE MESSIANIC HOPE IN OTHER RELIGIONS

Breasted, History of Egypt, 1905, pp. 204–5.
Daly, The Mexican Messiah, 1889.
Dollinger, The Gentile and the Jew, Vol. II, pp. 288–9.
Dyer, The Gods in Greece, pp. 138, 139.
Ellinwood, Oriental Religions and Christianity, Lect. VIII, pp. 279 ff.
Pinches, The Messianic Idea among the Early Babylonians and Assyrians, 1888.
Jackson, The Ancient Persian Doctrine of the Future Life, in Bib. World, VIII, pp. 156 ff.
Rhys, Hibbert Lectures, 1881, Lect. IV. (Messianic Ideas in Buddhism).
Taylor, Ancient Ideals; A Study of Intellectual and Spiritual Growth from Early Times to the Establishment of Christianity.

DETAILED REFERENCES

The following detailed references have been prepared especially to meet the needs of college and Bible classes and private readers. They do not aim to give a complete bibliography, but rather to call attention to the more important books and sections dealing with a given topic. Naturally, greater prominence is given to works written in English, but significant chapters or articles in French or German sources are also referred to and are distinguished by printing the names of the authors in italics, and at the end of each section. To economize space the standard works are represented simply by the names of their authors, followed by abbreviations or the initial letters of the chief words in the titles. Whenever there is any doubt regarding the meaning of the abbreviations, they can be readily identified by referring to the Selected Bibliography (pp. 507–512), where each book will be found classified alphabetically according to the name of its author. In the classification of the references the order of the main divisions of this volume has been followed so that they can be used, in connection with the text, as guides in further systematic, comprehensive study.

PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

GENERAL INTRODUCTION TO THE PROPHETS

The Evolution of the Prophet: Hastings DB IV, 107–8; Jastrow, Journ. of Bib. Lit. XXVIII, 42–56; Harper, Am. and Hos. lxxiv–c; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 3–15; Wellhausen, Reste arab. Heidenthums 130–47.

The Prophets in Israel's Early History: Hastings DB IV, 108–16, extra Vol. 672–9; Encyc. Bib. III, 3853–64; Davidson, OT. Proph. 30–158; Smith Bk. of the Twelve I, 11–30; Harper, Am. and Hos. xxxii–lxxiv; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 16–36; Kraetzschmar, Prophe. und Seher in alten Israel.

The Prophets of the Assyrian Period: Hastings, extra Vol. DB 679–95, 697–700; Encyc. Bib. 3864–73; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve I, 31–58; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 37–70.

The Prophet's of Judah's Decline: Hastings DB, extra Vol. 700–1; Encyc. Bib. III, 3873–9; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 3–32; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 71–107.

The Prophets of the Exile and Restoration: Hastings DB, extra Vol. 701–8; Encyc. Bib. III, 3880–2; Smith, Bk. of Twelve II, 187–97; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 108–163.

The Prophets of Later Judaism: Hastings DB, extra Vol. 708–15; Smith, Bk. of Twelve, 439–46; Cornill, Prophs. of Israel 164–179.

The Historical Development of Israel's Messianic Ideals: Hastings DB III, 352–5, IV, 121–7; extra Vol. 296–307, 695–7; Encyc. Bib. III, 3057–64; Davidson, O.T. Proph. 309–467; Matthews, The Messianic Hope in the N.T. 1–10; Osterley, Evol. of the Mess. Idea; Volz, Die vorexil. Jew. Prophetie und der Messias; Gressman, Ursprung der Israelitisch-jüd. Eschatologie 8–300.

The Literary Form of Old Testament Prophecy: Davidson, O.T. Proph. 159–209; Harper, Am. and Hos. clviii–clxxiii; Gardiner, Bib. as Eng. Lit. 208–81; Wünche, Schönheit der Bibel I, 60–82.

THE PROPHETS OF THE ASSYRIAN PERIOD

The Sermons of Amos: Driver, Joel and Am. 93–124; Hastings DB I, 85–7; Encyc. Bib. I, 147–58; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 188–92; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve I, 61–207; Harper, Am. and Hos. c–exl; Marti, Dodekaproph. 144–53.

The Sermons of Hosea: Hastings DB II, 419–25; Encyc. Bib. II, 2119–26; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 178–82; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve I, 211–354; Harper, Am. and Hos. exl.–clvii; Marti, Dodekaproph. 1–11.

History of the Book of Isaiah: Hastings DB II, 486–8; Encyc. Bib. II, 2189–2207; Box, Is. 1–6; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 107–39; Marti, Jesaja, XIII–XIX.

Earlier Prophecies of Isaiah the Son of Amoz: Hastings DB II, 485–6; Encyc. Bib. II, 2180–1; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 107–17; Smith, Is. I, 4–90; Marti, Jesaja, XIX–XX.

DETAILED REFERENCES

Isaiah's Counsels in the Crisis of 735 B.C.: Encyc. Bib. II, 2181-3; Smith, Is. I, 91-130; Box, Is. 46-54.

Isaiah's Sermons between 711 and 701 B.C.: McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 124-6; Smith, Is. I, 196-270; Box, Is. 126-42.

The Sermons of Micah: Hastings DB III, 359-60; Encyc. Bib. III, 3067-74; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 200-5; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve I, 357-438; Marti, Dodekaproph. 258-63.

Isaiah's Later Prophetic Activity: St.O.T. II, § 124; Smith, Jerusalem, II, 165-73; Cornill, Introd. to the Canon. Bks. of the O.T., 282-3; Budge, Hist. of Egypt VI, 141-9; Box, Is. 160-8.

The Prophecy of Nahum: Arnold, Composition of Nah. 1<sup>1-2</sup><sup>3</sup> in Zeitschrift für alttest. Wissenschaft, 1901, 225-65; Hastings DB III, 473-7; Encyc. Bib. III, 3259-64; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 206-9; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 77-112; Marti, Dodekaproph. 303-7.

THE PROPHETS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

Zephaniah's Reform Sermons: Hastings DB IV, 974-7; Encyc. Bib. IV, 5402-8; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 216-8; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 35-74; Marti, Dodekaproph. 357-60.

History of the Book of Jeremiah: Brown, Bk. of Jer. XIX-XXXVI; Hastings DB II, 571-8; Encyc. Bib. II, 2372-94; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 158-61; Duhm, Jer. IX-XXII; Cornill, Jer. XXXVIII-LI.

The Earlier Sermons of Jeremiah: Brown, Bk. of Jer. XI-XIII, XVII-XIX; Hastings DB II, 569-70; Encyc. Bib. II, 2366-72; Cornill, Jer. IX-XXVIII.

Jeremiah's Activity during the Reign of Jehoiakim: Brown, Bk. of Jer. XIII-XIV; Cornill, Jer. XXVIII-XXXIII.

The Sermons of Habakkuk: Hastings DB II, 269-2; Encyc. Bib. II, 1921-8; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 210-5; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 115-147; Marti, Dodekaproph. 326-31.

Jeremiah's Sermons in Connection with the First Captivity: Brown, Bk. of Jer. XIV-XVI; Cornill, Jer. XXIII-XXV.

Ezekiel's Sermons before the Final Destruction of Jerusalem: Hastings DB I, 815-7; Encyc. Bib. II, 1457-63; Toy, Ezek. 90-3; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 162-5.

Jeremiah's Work in Connection with the Fall of Jerusalem: Kraetzschar, Ezek. III-XIV; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 148-52; Cornill, Jer. XXXV-XXXVII.

THE PROPHETS OF THE EXILE

Jeremiah's Sermons to the Exiles in Egypt: Brown, Bk. of Jer. 209-18; Cornill, Jer. XXXVIII-XXXIX.

Ezekiel's Messages of Encouragement to his Scattered Countrymen: Hastings DB I, 817-8; Encyc. Bib. II, 1463-71.

PROPHETS OF THE PERSIAN PERIOD

Songs over Babylon's Fall; Isaiah 13<sup>1</sup>-14<sup>23</sup>: McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 117-8; Marti, Jesaja, 117-27.

PROPHETS OF THE PERSIAN PERIOD

The Addresses of Haggai to the Temple Builders: Hastings DB II, 279-81; Encyc. Bib. II, 1935-6; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve, 225-52; Marti, Dodekaproph. 378-81.

Zechariah's Sermons and Visions: Hastings DB IV, 967-8; Encyc. Bib. IV, 5390-3; McFadyen O.T. Introd. 222-6; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 255-328; Marti, Dodekaproph. 391-5.

Date of Isaiah 40-56: Hastings DB II, 493-5; Cobb in Journ. of Bib. Lit. XXVII, 48-64; Encyc. Bib. II, 2203-8; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 132-9.

The Destiny of the Chosen People; Is. 40-55, 60-62: Hastings DB II, 495-7; Smith, Is. II, 71-406; Gressmann, Ursprung der Israel.-jüd. Eschatologie, 301-28.

Messages of Denunciation, Exhortation, and Promise to the Judean Community; Is. 56-59, 63-66: Smith, Is. II, 406-67.

The Prophecy of Obadiah: Hastings DB III, 577-80; Encyc. Bib. III, 3154-62; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 193-5; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 163-84; Marti, Dodekaproph. 228-31.

The Book of Malachi: Hastings DB III, 218-22; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 234-7; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 331-72; Marti, Dodekaproph. 456-60.

Joel's Prophecy concerning the Coming Day of Jehovah: Driver, Joel and Am. 9-34; Hastings DB II, 672-6; Encyc. Bib. II, 2492-7; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 183-7; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 375-436; Marti, Dodekaproph. 109-14.

PROPHETS OF THE GREEK AND MACCABEAN PERIOD

The Message of the Book of Jonah: Hastings DB II, 744-53; Encyc. Bib. II, 2565-71; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 196-9; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 493-541; Marti, Dodekaproph. 241-48.

The Popular Stories about Daniel and his Fellow-Exiles; Dan. 1-6: Torrey in Conn. Acad. of Arts and Sciences XV; Hastings DB I, 551-4; Encyc. Bib. I, 1002-12; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 316-8; Marti, Dan. VII-XXI.

Visions of the Overthrow of Antiochus and the Establishment of the Kingdom of God; Dan. 7-12: Torrey in DB I, 555-7; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 318-31.

Overthrow of the Heathen and Establishment of Jehovah's Kingdom; Zech. 9-14: Bevan, Bk. of Dan. 11-42; Gressmann, Ursprung der Israel.-jüd. Eschatologie, 334-65; Rubikam, Second Part of Zech.; Hastings DB IV, 968-70; Encyc. Bib. 5393-5; McFadyen, O.T. Introd. 226-33; Smith, Bk. of the Twelve II, 449-90; Marti, Dodekaproph. 396-8.

DETAILED REFERENCES

MESSIANIC AND ESCHATOLOGICAL PROPHECIES

The Messianic King and Kingdom: Cf. for Eng. references under Hist. Devel. of Israel's Mess. Ideals in General Introd.; Volz, Die vorexil. Jahwe Prophetic und der Messias, 2–93; Gressmann, Ursprung der Israel.-jüd. Eschatologie, 250–300.

The Divine Warrior, Judge, and King and the Glories of his Rule: Matthews, The Messianic Hope of the N.T. 1–54; Gressmann, Ursprung der Israel.-jüd., Eschatologie, 12–158.

The Student's Old Testament

*Logically and Chronologically
Arranged and Translated*

BY

CHARLES FOSTER KENT, PH.D.

WOOLSEY PROFESSOR OF BIBLICAL LITERATURE IN YALE UNIVERSITY

---

Announcement

---

The five essentials for Old Testament study:
(1) A systematic classification of its contents.

THE Old Testament is a library containing the writings of Israel's inspired teachers, who lived at periods far removed from each other, wrote from widely different points of view, and expressed their thoughts in the language and literary forms peculiar to the primitive Semitic East. Their modern readers, however, live in the very different western world. The result is that, while the combination of early songs, primitive traditions, ethnological tables, tribal stories, genealogical lists, prophetic exhortations, laws, judicial precedents, and historical narratives found, for example, in such a book as Exodus, seems perfectly natural to the intuitive Oriental, it is a fertile source of confusion to the logical Occidental. The obvious solution of the difficulty is to be found in systematic classification. This work was begun by the Greek translators of the Old Testament, to whom is chiefly due the approximately logical arrangement of the books in the English Bible. The confusion may be still further eliminated by grouping together those writings which have the same general theme, aim, and literary form, and then by rearranging them within each group in the approximate order in which they were written.

(2) A comparative presentation of its original sources. Where there are different versions of the same narrative or where two or more have been combined together—as is often the case in the first twelve books of the Old Testament—it is important that the originally distinct versions be printed side by side, as in a harmony, that they may be studied comparatively and as independent literary units.

(3) A lucid, exact translation. The third essential is a clear, vivid, dignified translation, which will represent not merely the words but also the ideas, the spirit, and the beauty of the original, and which will put the reader, unacquainted with Hebrew, in possession of the latest contributions of philology, exegesis, and theology.

(4) Clear literary analysis. The fourth is a clear literary analysis, which will make it possible readily to trace the logical thought of a story, law, sermon, or poem, and to note the relation of the different parts to each other and to the whole.

(5) Illuminating Introductions and foot-notes. Finally concise, lucid notes are demanded, which will at once present the historical background and the critical, geographical, and archæological data required to illuminate the obscurities of the text, without distracting attention from its beauty and thought.

Aims and plan of the Student's Old Testament. These five absolute essentials the Students' Old Testament aims to supply in the fullest measure and in the most direct and usable form. The general plan is unique in its simplicity and economy of space. By combining a lucid, scholarly translation, a logical and chronological classification, and a critical and a literary analysis of the text with brief introductions and notes at the foot of the page, the reader is at once placed in command of the practical results of modern biblical research, many of which are otherwise found only in cumbersome technical works, intelligible only to the specialist.

Its origin. The sane, careful scholarship and the reverent constructive spirit of the author are already known to a wide circle of Bible students through his History of the Hebrew People and his volumes in the Messages of the Bible. The present extensive work is the result of years of preparation, in which he has also been able to profit by the generous suggestions and criticisms of a large number of biblical scholars and practical teachers. The whole has been prepared to meet not theoretical but practical needs and has been tested at each point in university and Bible classes.

Its point of view and method. The work embodies the positive conclusions of the many hundreds of earnest critical scholars, who have during the past two centuries been grappling with the intricate problems of the Old Testament. For the first time in its history the various versions of its more important stories and historical records are printed throughout in parallel columns so that they can be readily studied in approximately their original form. In the introductions and foot-notes the biblical data upon which these results are based are cogently presented so that the ordinary Bible reader can readily understand and estimate their significance. Where the positions are established the fact is indicated, and where there is still uncertainty this is also frankly stated. When at times the author's conclusions differ from those of the majority of scholars the reasons for the departure are fully outlined.

Its practical value. To the ordinary conservative biblical student, who rejects or views with alarm the critical positions of modern Old Testament teachers, an opportunity is offered, for the first time, of ascertaining just what those positions are and the chief reasons therefor. To many it will be a genuine relief to find that the foundations of Christian faith, instead of being destroyed, are simply being laid on a deeper and broader historical basis, and that the newer methods of interpretation are supremely helpful in gaining a true knowledge of the eternal messages of the Bible. To the rapidly increasing body of progressive Bible readers, who accept the principles and in general appreciate the practical value of critical biblical research, this clear, definite presentation of its more important fruits cannot fail to be most welcome. It furnishes to the historian the data for the easy reconstruction of biblical history, to the literary student the basis for a new understanding and appreciation of the wonderful literature of the Old Testament, and to the pastor, the Sunday-school teacher, the parent, and the individual reader positive religious facts and teachings, the want of which is being strongly felt in this age, when destructive conclusions are much in evidence. Above all the Student's Old Testament presents those foundations—laid bare through the untiring labors of generations of Christian scholars and by the faithful application of scientific method—upon which Old Testament interpretation and doctrine promise in the future to rest.

No effort or expense has been spared to make this work a complete manual for class-room study, for reading, and for reference. Each volume is complete in itself, embodying all the cognate Old Testament and apocryphal literature in its given field. A detailed table of contents, index, page-headings, and cross-references facilitate its use by primary as well as advanced readers.

Each volume is also fully equipped with thoroughly modern topographical and historical maps, which are introduced in connection with the literature of each period. Comparative chronological charts make it possible to trace readily the growth and approximate dates of the Old Testament and apocryphal writings in connection with the events and movements which determined their form and which in turn they record. Tables of weights and measures and carefully selected and detailed bibliographies, introduced in connection with each epoch, supply both elementary and advanced students with a complete equipment for intelligent reading and fruitful study.

Terms of Subscription

SINGLE VOLUMES. The publishers will supply any single volume of the series for $2.75 net (postage, 15 cents).

ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTIONS. As an inducement to advance subscribers, the publishers will accept subscriptions for the complete set of six volumes for $13.50, payable in instalments on the publication of each volume.

DELIVERY. Each volume will be sent to subscribers as soon as published. Books will be sent by mail or express as requested.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
153-157 Fifth Avenue NEW YORK

DATE DUE

~~MAY 21 1976~~

~~DEC 21 '76~~

GAYLORD

PRINTED IN U.S.A.

BS195.2 .K37 v.3
The student's Old Testament ...

Princeton Theological Seminary-Speer Library

1 1012 00049 2027

